THE LATEST FROM DAMASCUS. A letter from Beirut, of July 19th, says that "not a single house belonging to a Christian has been left in Damascus. Four thousand Christians there have been mercilessly butchered. Rev. Mr. Graham, an Irish missionary in Damascus, was among the number of the killed, together with all the Franciscan monks and thirty-six of the native clergy."—Boston Journal.

Notices, &c.

Editorial Notices.

The thirtieth anniversary of the pastoral labors of the Rev. Joshua V. Himes, in Boston, took place Sabbath, Aug. 19th, in the Advent Chapel, Hudson street, at three o'clock, P. M. An appropriate discourse was given by Mr. Himes, with other exercises, that were of much interest to the friends of the pastor. A large number of the old parishioners and friends of Mr. H., from the neighboring towns, were in attendance, and the occasion was one of very great interest.

Mr. Himes gave a history of his labors for the last thirty years, and placed himself in his true position before the public. We preached for Bro. H. in the evening, and had a good season. We wish him and his people prosperity.

☞ Bro. John Billings wishes us to say that he shall not be able to attend the campmeeting at Savoy, Mass.

Campmeeting.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting at Lanesville, Conn., near the line of the Housatonic R. R., thirty-two miles north of Bridgeport, on the old ground, a few rods from the depot, commencing Monday, Sept. 3d., and continuing over the following Sunday. Arrangements for board and horse keeping will be made to accommodate all who may attend. All who can will please bring bedding for their convenience during the meeting. We expect those preachers present to preach the word, who feel sent of God for that purpose, and invite all who can, to come from valley and hill, and once more unite to worship the living God in Lanesville grove. Come one and all, ye tried and tempted ones, armed with the spirit and love of God.

Those who have tents will please bring them. Those who come by way of Bridgeport will call for trip tickets to Lanesville and return. The fare is reduced to $1.50 for both ways. Passenger trains leave Bridgeport daily at 10.30 A. M., and 5.30 P. M. Arrive at Lanesville at 11 50 A. M., and 6.50 P. M. From the north leave Pittsfield at 9.15 A. M., and 4.30 P. M. Arrive at Lanesville at 1, and 7.45 P. M.

D. COGSWELL, M. GOSSON, L. MILLS, } Committee.

Notice.

The fare to the Westford campmeeting from Boston will be reduced one half. It will be one dollar there and back. Tickets will be had at the store of George T. Adams, 167 Hanover St. J. S. WHITE.

I propose to publish soon a Tract on the Parable of the Rich man and Lazarus. It is known by some that I have taken a different view of this instruction of our Savior from any that has been published. Like others, I, of course, suppose that I have a correct view of it. It will be put into as small a compass as the subject will admit, so that it may have a more general circulation. J. S. WHITE.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a conference in Buchanan, Mich., to commence on the evening of the 19th of Sept. and continue over Lord's day. Bro. F. H. Berick will be present to preach the word. We trust our brethren will take advantage of this opportunity. In behalf of the church,

D. R. MANSFIELD.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses. We shall have a goodly assortment at the Wilbraham campmeeting, if the Lord will.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a conference in Reading, Hillsdale Co., Mich., to commence the 5th of September, and continue over Lord's day. Bro. F. H. Berick will preach. He will also tarry in that section over two Lord's days, and preach as Bro. A. N. Seymore may arrange. Come, brethren, and sisters, lay aside your farms and merchandise for a few days, and listen to the word. In behalf of the Church.

D. R. MANSFIELD.

Savoy Campmeeting.

This meeting will commence Aug. 27th, and continue one week. The object of this meeting is to persuade men to accept of the gospel, and be saved in the kingdom of God. Then come, brethren and sisters, one and all, in the spirit of labor and love, and let us have a feast of fat things on the mountain top. Efficient laborers in the gospel will be present to preach the word of life. The committee wish to say, that no pains will be spared in trying to supply the wants of the brethren and public generally; and are confident from last year's experience that we can meet them more acceptably. Board and horse keeping will be furnished on reasonable terms.

E. M'CULLOCK, RUFUS STARKS, J. E. HEALY, } Committee.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a campmeeting in Levant, Me., commencing Sept. 17th and continue one week.

The cause of truth demands that the church should make an effort to give new impetus to the cause, by a general gathering of the brethren and sisters to comfort and strengthen one another with the words of truth. We expect this meeting will result in good to the church and exert a salutary influence upon community. The people want to hear the reasons of our hope. Let all come that can. Begin now to plan your business so that you can come. Begin to pray about it, talk about it, and get your tents ready for the camp. Above all, do not forget that you will need on the armor, so that you may be ready for the work as soon as you get on the field of battle. Brethren, make your business bend to this meeting. Get your Lamb, and come up to sacrifice to the Lord. If you have not a lamb, take a kid, or a pair of doves, only let your heart be in the work and God will bless you. J. HEMENWAY, for the brethren.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Fairhaven, Ct., the last Sabbath in August. S. G. MATHEWSON.

Providence permitting, there will be preaching on the camp ground, near Unionville, Ct., on Bro. Johnson's land, Sept. 2d, by R. Williams. No meeting if stormy. SETH WOODRUFF.

Bro. D. M. Hanscome will preach in Beeman Hall, Hallowell, Sept. 2d. SAMUEL SWIFT.

I expect to preach at the following times and places:—

Aug 25th, at Pike River, at 7 o'clock, P. M.
Aug. 26th, Stone Settlement, at 10 A.M. and 2 P.M.
Aug. 27th, Peaceville, at 7 P. M.
Aug. 28th, Gilbert School House, at 7 P. M.
Aug. 29th, Hyattville, at 7 P. M.
Aug. 30th, Savage School-house in Shefford, as Bro. Gilbert Sawyer may arrange, at 7 P. M.
Aug. 31st, preach and baptize at the same place.
Sept. 2d, at Stanbridge Burrough, at 10 and 2.

Note to those concerned. The state of my health and other unforeseen and unavoidable circumstances, occurring at the time, prevented my meeting my last monthly engagements. This is only the second failure on my part during four years. C. P. DOW.

With God's permission I will attend meetings as follows:—

Lincolnville, Me., (Young Town) ....Sept. 2d
Augusta, (Annual Conference,) Sept. 6th and over the Sabbath.
Round Pond, Me.......................Sept. 16th
Surry, Me...............................Sept. 23d
Carmel, Me., (Union Meeting-house) ...Sept. 30th

THOMAS SMITH.

I wil preach as follows:—

Goshen, Mass.................Sunday, Aug. 26th

I shall be at the Savoy campmeeting.

My appointment at Palmer is withdrawn. S. W. BISHOP.

I will preach at Ashford, Conn., at the First Baptist Meeting-house, Sunday, Sept. 1st, at 10 o'clock, A. M. At Axe Factory, on the same day, at 3 P.M. R. V. LYON.

N. F. Nason appoints to be at Westford campmeeting.

Worcester, (Warren Hall) second Sunday in Sept.

The protracted meeting in Windsor will not come off in October, on account of other engagements. Notice of the time soon in the Crisis.

R. V. Lyon appoints to preach at the first Baptist Church in Ashford, Ct., Sunday, Sept. 2d, at 10 A. M. and 1 P. M. On the same day at the Axe Factory, at 5 P. M.

On the second Sunday in September I will meet with Dr. Huntington and his people, and preach.

On Wednesday evening, Aug. 29th, will preach in Southbridge, at the Pratt School-house, at 7 P.M.

Eld. L. S. Ladington appoints to preach in Plymouth Hollow..........................Aug. 19th

Wallingford, Ct...........................Aug. 26th
New York City, (corner of Grand and Elizabeth Streets)....................................Sept. 2d

J. K. Bellows will preach in

Pawling, N. Y...........................Aug. 26th
Newark, N. J.............................Sept. 2d

For the Crisis.

A Chronicle of Years, from Creation to the Present Time.

A great diversity of opinion has existed, since the era of the birth of Christ, on the subject of the age of the world at that time. The Hebrew version does not harmonize with the Septuagint—Greek—and each have their advocates, and thus the discord has been kept up; but each new chronology gives some new light; especially respecting the superiority of the inspired Hebrew over that of the Greek numbers; and though they all differ on some points, they all agree on others; and where the strongest Scriptural arguments are given, and the best historians cited, there, we think, is the safest ground for us to occupy. But there is a record in 1 Kings 6: 1, which purports to be the four hundred and eightieth year after the Israelites left Egypt, being the fourth year of the reign of Solomon. The dates of the sacred volume cannot be harmonized with it. It does not appear to be a corruption, but a mistake; it is a dead passage, being on both sides pierced with a sword; on one side by the number of years given by inspiration in the book of Judges and Solomon; and on the other by Paul's declarations, Acts 13: 18–22. No one can give a true chronology of the Bible who fixes his computations in accordance with it; nor did any one ever mend it, by assuming that it should read thus or so. The safest way is to leave it as a dead record, and take those that are in harmony with each other, that we may come to some conclusion what latitude we are in, as we are nearing the great crisis of the world.

There are a few facts relative to the darkest places in the chronology of the Old Testament, which I have not seen presented to the public, and which may be beneficial to be known; and as the age of the world is a subject of great interest, it is important that every thing bearing on the subject should be known; "for if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?" Hoping that it may not be useless to give a brief view of the chronology of the world, from the creation to the present time, I have come to the conclusion to adopt the Hebrew numbers, and the most reliable history, and give it in as concise a manner as possible.

I shall first present the inspired Hebrew numbers for more than two thousand years, with Scripture quotations and references.

	A. M.
CREATION.—"In the beginning."		Genesis 1 and 2.
To the five hundredth year of Noah's life,	1556	" 5 : 3–32.
Building of the Ark,	100	" 7 : 6.
To the Call of Abraham,	427	" 11 : 10–32.
Sojourn in Egypt,	430	Exod. 12 : 40, 41.
	2513

Here is the date of Paul's chronology, Acts 13.18; and here, also, Josephus begins a period of 592 years, which reaches to the Temple; but that of Paul, being inspiration, will be given first. "And about the time of forty years, suffered he their manners in the wilderness,"	40	Acts 13 : 18.
"And when he had destroyed seven nations, in the land of Canaan, he divided their land to them by lot." Paul gives no limit here, but it is proved by the age of Caleb to be six years,	6	" v. 19. Joshua 14 : 10.
"And after that he gave unto them judges, about the space of four hundred and fifty years, until Samuel the prophet,"	450	Acts 13 : 20.
Samuel judged Israel from year to year, and went in circuit to Bethel, Gilgal, Mizpeh, and Ramah; and when old made his sons judges. But Paul does not say how long he reigned before Saul. "And afterward they desired a king, and God gave unto them Saul, the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years."	40	" v. 21.
"And when he had removed him, he raised up unto them David to be their king;" who reigned forty years.	40	" v. 22.
To the Temple, in the fourth year of the reign of Solomon,	4
	580
Now it is very evident that several years must have passed away in the time of Samuel, that are not given by Paul, and if we allow him twelve years,	12
the whole number would correspond with Josephus,	592

I will now give Josephus' view of the same period. In book 8, chap. 3, sec. 1, he says: "Solomon began to build the temple in the fourth year of his reign . . . five hundred and ninety-two years after the Exodus out of Egypt." Though he has often been accused of contradicting himself, he has given all these years at the head of his books.

Books 3d and 4th give the forty years in the Wilderness,	40
Books 5th and 6th give five hundred and eight years from the death of Moses to the death of Saul,	508
Book 7th gives forty years from the death of Saul to the death of David,	40
And if we add four to Solomon,	4
we arrive at the five hundred and ninety second year from the time they left Egypt, to the time Solomon began to build the Temple	592

And of these years he gives twenty-five to Joshua, and twelve to Samuel, and after deducting these, together with the given Scripture numbers, from the whole number, 592, we have a remainder of twenty for the time of the Elders that outlived Joshua, and the Anarchy which followed their death.

Thus, 592 —	Years.
Wilderness,	40
Joshua,	25
Elders and Anarchy,
Judges and Servitudes, to the restoration of the Ark of God,	391
To the gathering at Mizpeh,	20
Samuel the Prophet,	12
Saul 40, David 40, Solomon 4,	84
	572

Take 572 from 592, and it leaves 20 years for Elders and Anarchy.

The time of the Elders and Anarchy is not definitely given in the Bible, nor in Josephus; but by the foregoing process we can determine, in accordance with Scripture and Josephus both, that it lasted twenty years.* There is no assumption here; all these numbers are recorded for the special benefit of those who have any taste for chronology; but lest some should not understand that these computations are in harmony with the numbers contained in the book of Judges, I will give another table, with Scripture references, of the years of the Judges; after their passage of forty years; and the division of their land by lot, which the age of Caleb proves to have been six years.—Josh: 14 : 10.

Taking six from Joshua's 25, and it leaves to Joshua nineteen years.	19
Elders and Anarchy,	20
Chusan,	8	Judges 3 : 8.
Othniel,	40	" " 11.
Eglon,	18	" " 14.
Ehud,	80	" " 30.
Shamgar,	1	" " 31.
Jabin,	20	" 4 : 3.
Barak,	40	" 5 : 31.
Midian,	7	" 6 : 1.
Gideon,	40	" 8 : 28.
Abimelech,	3	" 9 : 22.
Tola,	23	" 10 : 2.
Jair,	22	" " 3.
Philistines,	18	" 10 : 8.
Jepthah,	6	" 12 : 7.
Ibzan,	7	" " 9.
Elon,	10	" " 11.
Abdon,	8	" " 14.
Philistines,	40	" 13 : 1.
To the assembly at Mizpeh,	20	1 Samuel 7 : 2.
	450 years.

Here again are Paul's "four hundred and fifty years," reaching from the division of their land to Samuel the prophet, proved by the inspired text, which I think cannot now fail to be understood; and this 450 years from the division of land until Samuel, proves that Josephus was right in assigning twenty-five years to Joshua; and from it we learn that the time of Elders and Anarchy was just twenty years. This view ends the forty years of Philistine Servitude, with the end of the captivity of the ark of God; makes Samson cotemporary with Eli, in his last twenty years, or in some of his latter years.

That Samuel reigned twelve years, we have the authority of Josephus; and as we have proved, by the inspired text, that he rightly assigned twenty-five years to Joshua, we cannot doubt that he gave a true record of twelve to Samuel. Nothing is said of Samuel from the death of Eli, till he called them to turn to the Lord, and gather themselves together at Mizpeh, (1 Sam. 2: 3,) and he would pray for them; which was "twenty years;" he was a prophet sometime before Eli died; but it is probable that he never had exercised the office of civil magistrate, or been a leader of their armies, till the gathering of the assembly at Mizpeh.

	Years.
And here is undoubtedly the utmost limit of Paul's	450
After this the Philistines were subdued before them and came no more into the coast of Israel, all the days of Samuel. Samuel judged Israel, and went from year to year to Bethel and Gilgal and Mizpeh; and his return was to Ramah, for there was his house; he judged Israel in all those places. "And when Samuel was old he made his sons judges; but they walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, took bribes and perverted judgment." This provoked Israel to ask a king. How long his sons were suffered to plunder the Israelites, before they became so enraged as to demand a king, we are not informed, but it was probably several years, and all this was before the election of Saul, and after the Ark had been at Kirjath-jearim twenty years, so that I feel warranted by Josephus, and the 7th of 1 Samuel, to assign to Samuel the prophet, twelve years.	12
He was an old man when he died, but his age is not given in the Bible nor Josephus; though the latter says he was twelve years old when the Lord called him, and foretold the destruction of Eli's house; which is supposed to have been in the 31st year of Eli's reign; and if so, he would be 22 years old at Eli's death, 42 at Mizpeh, 54 at the anointing of Saul, and 89 at his death, in the 35th year of Saul; for it seems evident that Samuel lived till within five years of Saul's death. Now if we bring up the 46 years for Wilderness and Div.	46
and add Saul 40, David 40, 1 Kings 2 : 11, and Solomon 4,	84
we again have the five hundred and ninety-second year from the Exode to the building of the Temple, in the 4th of Solomon.	592

Here is no gap left unfulfilled, and all the darkness and confusion of this period is removed, and one unbroken chain of years opened to view. There is no jar in the computation of these years in this way; they all come together in a natural way; and each number seems to occupy its own legitimate place, and be at home in it, without dividing the years of any king or judge to fill the periods, till we arrive at the fourth year of the reign of Solomon.

There has been a great variety of views about Samson and Eli, and the forty years of Philistine oppression; but according to the 13th chapter of Judges, Samson was not born when the forty years servitude commenced; and as he judged Israel twenty years in the days of the Philistines, he must have begun his judgeship as soon as he was eighteen years old, and lived till near the death of Eli, with whom he must have been cotemporary. Eli probably began his administration a short time before the forty years bondage began; for it appears that it ended when the Philistines sent back the ark of God to its place; for there was a deadly destruction among them till they sent it back, which was about seven months after Eli's death. So Eli having begun to reign at the time this servitude begun, and Samson not being born at that time, his twenty years must have been cotemporaneous with the latter years of Eli; so that it seems that Samson was a governor and judge in one part of the land, while Eli was high priest and judge in the other.—1 Sam. 5: 11 and 6 : 1. The ten years of Naomi's absence from her own country is said to have been "in the time when the judges ruled," (Ruth 1 : 1) without any definite allusion to any one judge; but Josephus says: "Under Eli's government of the Israelites Boas married Ruth; that when the country was afflicted with a famine, Elimelech took his family and removed into the land of Moab." (Antiq. B. 6, C. 9, S. 1.)

Some think the forty years of Saul included all the years of Samuel, or that Saul could not have reigned forty years, from and after his election to the throne of Israel; and their reason is, that Jonathan his son was a warrior of note in his father's third year; though his father was called "a choice young man," when spoken of as candidate for king. But Rehoboam was born the year before his father Solomon came to the throne; for he was forty-one years old when he succeeded him; and as Solomon was but sixty at his death, according to Usher, he would be but nineteen at his son's birth. Now if Jonathan was born when his father was nineteen years old, and his father came to the throne when he was thirty-two, Jonathan would be thirteen years old when his father began to reign; and in his father's third year he would be about sixteen; and if he was like Charles XII, king of Sweden, he would be a warrior, indeed at that age; for he (Charles) routed and conquered armies at the point of the bayonet; others laid down their arms to the king of Sweden, and made their submission to him with heads uncovered; and all this when he was but sixteen years old. (Butler's Univ. Hist., p. 282.)

David was born when Saul had reigned ten years; and consequently Jonathan must have been twenty-three years older than David. Samuel anointed David probably when he was at most sixteen years old, (Sam. 16 : 13,) which would be the 26th year of Saul's reign. This would give time for David to become his musician and armor-bearer, (verses 21, 22,) and afterward to return to his father, and feed his sheep, (chap. 17 : 15) till he was twenty-one years old, and had grown out of Saul's knowledge, (as he seems to have done,) about which time he killed Goliah; soon after which he became son-in-law to the king. David was afterwards an object of Saul's bitter hatred and persecution, who hunted him like a wild beast for probably eight long years. David was thirty years old at Saul's death; and on the foregoing hypothesis, Saul was seventy-two years old at his death, and Jonathan fifty-three, which all looks reasonable, and these are probably very nearly the facts of the case. And besides all these circumstances which go to prove the length of Saul's reign, we have the express inspired text,—"God gave them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years." This gives Saul as good a title to forty full years as David or Solomon can have.

We now bring up the inspired number of years from Creation to the Exodus out of Egypt, which reach to	A. M., 2513
And as I think it is clearly proved, not only by Josephus, but by inspiration, that Solomon began to build the Temple in the five hundred and ninety-second year, after the Exodus out of Egypt, I feel justified in adding these to the foregoing computations,	592
	3105

I shall now give a table of the kings of Judah and the years that each reigned, as far as the Babylonian Captivity.

From the beginning of the Temple	Years.
To the death of Solomon,	36	1 Kings 11 : 42.
Rehoboam,	17	" 14 : 21.
Abijam,	3	" 15 : 2.
Asa,	41	" " 10.
Jehosaphat,	25	2 Chron. 20 : 31.
Jehoram,	8	" 21 : 5.
Ahaziah,	1	2 Kings 8 : 26.
Athaliah,	6	" 11 : 3.
Joash,	40	" 12 : 1.
Amaziah,	29	" 14 : 2.
Interregnum,	11	" 15 : 1.
Azariah,	52	" " 2.
Jotham,	16	2 Chron. 27 : 1.
Ahaz,	16	" 28 : 1.
Hezekiah,	29	" 29 : 1.
Manasseh,	55	2 Kings 21 : 1.
Amon,	2	2 Chron. 33 : 2.
Josiah,	31	" 34 : 1.
Jehoiakim,	3	Dan. 1 : 1.
Captivity,	70	Jeremiah 25 : 11.
	491

We have come to the first year of Cyrus, when the captivity terminated,	Ezra 1 : 1–3.
and if these years be added together, they amount to three thousand five hundred and ninety-six, and all given by inspiration, but the twelve years of Samuel; and these are sustained by the seventh chapter of 1st Samuel, though they are not defined there.
And as we have come to the Persian kingdom, it is sufficiently clear to all, that Cyrus began to reign over Babylon five hundred and thirty-six years before the birth of Christ, which added		536
makes the Era of the birth of Christ to be,		A. M., 4132
since which time there has passed, one thousand eight hundred and sixty years, not full till the coming Autumn		1860
		5992

It will be seen that all the years are given by inspiration, but those of Samuel, up to the reign of the kingdom of Persia, which shows that we are now within a short space of the end of six thousand years, for the age of the world; which I think cannot be far out of the way, for the most reliable historians and chronologers concur in giving these years, which are not covered by inspiration, i. e., since the first year of Cyrus.

How good has God been to us, in giving us a chronology that is reliable, by which we may know our proximity to the day of final judgment. But the words of God must be fulfilled; and that day will come as a snare on the world; and as we are not in darkness, that that day should overtake us as a thief, let us rise with renewed strength, and with patience run the race, strive to glorify God in all things, and save as many as possible of our fellow men.

Westford, 1860. B. P. HILDRETH.

* In the "Book of Jasher" it is expressly declared—"The time which Joshua judged Israel was twenty-eight years."—Chap. 90: ver. 47. "And the Elders judged Israel after the death of Joshua for seventeen years."—Chap. 91: ver. 12. This gives the same result, only it gives three years more to Joshua, and three less to the Elders.—[Ed.

Campmeeting.

There will be a Second Advent Campmeeting in Harmony Grove, Westford, Mass., to commence Tuesday, Aug. 28th, 1860, and continue over the following Sunday. This is a delightful location, convenient, within five minutes' walk of the depot, and near the village, where any can get lodging who do not wish to sleep in tents. This meeting is for no sect or party purposes; our object is infinitely higher,—the saving of men by the preaching of the Gospel in its happy adaptation to the present times.

Come, all ye lovers of Jesus, from hill and vale, from city and town, to the grove this year. Make the sacrifice, lay aside the means, help the poor, and all come to this feast. Pray over it, and come with a mind to work by faith, expecting the salvation of men. Those who wish can provide their own board, and bring the whole family with little expense. Bring tents and bedding. Tents and board will be provided on the ground for all who wish on reasonable terms.

L. BOUTELL, Groton; M. H. CORLISS, Lowell; E. HEATH, Lynn; S. AYERS, Worcester; M. M. YOUNG, East Boston, Committee.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruah and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts—postage 9 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Bacon, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

For the Crisis.

Day Dawn.

Heart oppressed with grief and broken,
Vainly longing for a rest,
So to you the Lord hath spoken,
He hath said the sad are blest.
Thou hast prayed and longed in sadness,
And hast wept to see his face,
O! lift up thy heart with gladness,
For thy tears are of his grace.

All thy longings and thy pleadings
Are the voice of God within—
By his Spirit's interceedings,
Breaking off thy bonds of sin.
All thy seeking for thy Savior
Is the Savior seeking thee,
All my longings for his favor,
Are his yearnings over me.

Then take courage, sad and mourning,
Though thy hope is long delayed,
'Tis God's Spirit gives thy longing,
In this trust be undismayed;
To his throne thy sighings gather,
For in thee his Spirit mild,
As thy heart sobs, "O my Father!"
Echoes back the words—"my child."

H. L. H.

"Our Home," Sunday, P. M., June 24th, 1860.

For the Crisis.

Godly Sorrow.

To the natural heart sorrow in any form is repulsive; the mind shrinks from coming in contact with any thing that is languishing or depressive. Hence the repeated and various efforts made by the human family to repel this invader of their happiness. But however ardent the desire, or earnest the labor, to resist this unwelcome guest, 'tis all in vain, for come it does, and come it will, being a part of the legacy entailed upon our first parents for their transgression of God's holy law; and their posterity have ever since shared largely in the mournful bestowment.

There are, however, two kinds of sorrow placed before us, of which we may make a choice, viz: the sorrow of the world, which worketh death; or godly sorrow, which worketh salvation. And we should be exceedingly careful how we choose in this important matter, as life or death depend upon it. The sorrow of the world, in its regrets for earthly losses, its desire for human ambition, fame or grandeur, have nothing in them which constitute the elements of true happiness; for, if one or all of these could be obtained by those who so ardently pursue after them, they would be found unsatisfying in their nature, and, after a little while, perish with the using, leaving the blinded votary as far from happiness as when he first embraced them. Disappointment and decay are written upon all earthly things. The corroding tooth of time overtakes our most splendid achievement; and no marble structure or gilded fabric which we can rear, may resist its mildew touch; but fallen and prostrate, with our most sanguine hopes of earthly happiness, must sooner or later terminate in gloom and dismay.

Not so with godly sorrow, which consists in genuine grief and true repentance for sin, a strong and fervent desire to forsake it, to resist the evil and choose the good. There is a necessary abhorring of self, because of its inbred corruption, and unlikeness to Christ. The soul, on discovering its immense distance from holiness and God, becomes aware of its true condition, and consequently is alarmed at its danger; and now begins the work of sorrow in the heart, and the cry of earnest, humble prayer ascends to God for mercy. Nothing now is so much desired, and ardently labored for, as the forgiveness of sin; and though down in the inmost recess of the soul abiding grief is found, yet as the work proceeds, it becomes solemnly pleasant, and affords a mournful joy, that the world, in its brightest treasures, cannot impart.

See the glorious results of true and genuine sorrow in the heart,—but let the Apostle define it, as he understood it better than we do: "For behold this self-same thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you; yea, what clearing of yourselves; yea, what indignation; yea, what fear; yea, what vehement desire; yea, what zeal; yea, what revenge. In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter."

And just the same effect that true godly sorrow had upon the humble penitent in the Apostle's day, is the result now. Hatred to sin, love to God, and a desire to labor in his service, to be decided and clear in the whole matter, are the unmistakable characteristics of those who feel and realize godly sorrow for sin. And as light continues to break in upon the renewed heart, the understanding is enlightened, the affections purified, and that which before was hard to perform, has now become easy of accomplishment; that which was laborious and difficult, relishing and delightful. The sorrow that first broke down the stubbornness of the will, that exchanged the heart of stone for one of flesh, that could be melted into tenderness and penitence before God, is remembered and treasured up as the soul's best friend. And as the pilgrim proceeds in his journey to mansions in the skies, though his pathway, like his divine Master's, be checkered and thorny, yet the longing of his soul is,

"Nearer, my God, to thee, nearer to thee,
E'en though it be a cross that raiseth me
Nearer to thee."

M. A. T.

Neal's Creek, Ind.

☞ The criminal neglect of one religious opportunity, will most probably indispose and unfit you for the next.

Universalist Tract.

"WILL YOU ANSWER" THIS TRACT?

Yes, with pleasure, my Universalist friend.

1. "As we are required to love our enemies, may we not safely infer that God loves his enemies?" Yes. "If God loves his enemies, will he punish them more than will be for their good?" No; but after rendering themselves unfit for the kingdom, destruction is the next thing for their good. "Would endless punishment be for the good of any being?" Endless torment would not be good, either emphatically or comparatively.

2. "If God hates his enemies, why should we love our enemies?" He does not "hate" them in a malicious sense. "Are we required to be better than our God?" No. "If God loves those only who love him, in what respect is he better than the sinner?" Paul says, "God commendeth his love toward us," and again we read, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," (John 3: 16,) and "he that believeth on the son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the son, shall not see life."—John 3: 36.

3. "As we are forbidden to be overcome of evil, can we safely suppose that He will be overcome of evil?" No. "Would not the infliction of endless punishment prove that God had been overcome of evil?" No, but simply that his enemies had.

4. "If man does wrong in returning evil for evil, would not God do wrong were he to return evil for evil?" Yes; but God will do the sinner no injustice in reducing him to his original non-existence, seeing he spurns proffered immortality, and persists in obstinate rebellion. "Would not the infliction of endless punishment be proof positive that God was returning evil for evil?" The infliction of endless misery would look like it.

5. "Will not an infinitely good God do the best he possibly can for the whole human family?" Yes; the best that can be done in harmony with his just denunciations against the finally impenitent; but "the soul that sinneth it shall die," and it is "impossible for God to lie."—Ezek. 18: 4. "Would not the infliction of endless punishment be the very worst that God can do for any being in the universe?" Endless misery would.

6. "As we are commanded to overcome evil with good, may we not safely infer that God will do the same?" Yes, in the same sense that we are commanded to do it—not in a compulsive sense, and to the extent that the endeavor is yielded to, but some "will not come unto (Christ), that (they) might have life."—Rom. 6: 16. "Would the infliction of never-ending punishment be overcoming evil with good?" Endless torment would not be a "good."

7. "Is God 'without variableness or even the shadow of turning?'" Certainly; therefore "the soul that sinneth, it shall die"; "sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." "If God loves his enemies now, will he not always love them?" "If God will always love his enemies, will he not always seek their good?" Seeing they refuse the offer of the highest good, rather than inflict upon them the greatest evil, God will exhibit his goodness in letting them die, and be "as though they had not been."

8. "Is it not for God to love his enemies, and be 'kind to the evil and unthankful' in the present life?" Yes; but that did not prevent his overthrowing Sodom and Gomorrah, which are "set forth for an example" to evil-doers. "Would it be unjust for him to exercise the same love and kindness toward them in a future state?" It would not be unjust for him to overthrow them as he did the Sodomites, seeing they have obstinately trampled upon his mercies.

9. "Would it be merciful in God to inflict endless punishment? that is, would it be merciful to the sufferer?" Endless misery would not. "Can that be just which is not merciful? Can that be merciful which is not just?" It was not unjust in God to destroy the Sodomites, nor will it be unjust to destroy sinners at the judgment.

10. "Does Divine justice demand the infliction of pain from which mercy recoils?" No; it did not in the case of the Sodomites, nor will it in the destruction of the ungodly at the judgment day. "Does the mercy of God require anything which his justice refuses to grant?" No; nor does it require anything in opposition to justice. Justice says the sinners should die if he refuses the offer of life, and mercy is not in opposition. When mercy's offer is spurned, justice takes the field.

11. "Does not mercy plead for the salvation of all mankind?" Yes; and while it pleads, justice will not interfere; but when its plea is spurned, justice lays claim. "If any other attribute of Deity pleads for a different result, why should the pleadings of mercy be set aside?" Justice will make its effectual plea after mercy's plea is finished.—W. Sheldon.—Bible Expositor.

☞ Is not every face that habitually turns towards us with affectionate, guileless smiles, beautiful in our eyes? And will not an habitual frown distort the noblest features, and render them hideous?

☞ Prosperity is a blessing to the good, but a curse to the evil.

For the Crisis.

"I desire to be a Christian."

So thousands have said who now are with the lost. So you have said an hundred times; and what nearer are you the attainment than you were years ago, when you first expressed the same desire?

Suppose you enter a store to look at some garments. You feel that you need one very much, and, as you look them over, you find one that fits you admirably, and suits you in form and color exactly. You tell the trader you desire that garment, and, upon enquiry, find the price adapted to your means, and you may have it for your own at once by complying with the reasonable terms.

Now if you went no further than the mere desire; if you do not choose to have the garment, and pay the price thereof, will it ever become yours? You see then the difference between desiring and choosing.

Christ desires to bestow upon you the garment of salvation and the robe of righteousness; he offers them on fair and easy terms; and if you will not merely desire, but actually choose to receive them, and clothe thyself with them, they may be thine this hour.

M. L. W.

Not Mine, but Thine.

BY H. BONAR.

Thy way, not mine, O Lord,
However dark it be;
O lead me by thine own right hand,
Choose out the path for me.

Smooth let it be or rough,
It will be still the best;
Winding or straight it matters not,
It leads me to Thy rest.

I dare not choose my lot,
I would not if I might;
But choose Thou for me, O my God,
So I shall walk aright.

The kingdom that I seek
Is Thine; so let the way
That leads to it, O Lord, be Thine,
Else I must surely stray.

Take Thou my cup, and it
With joy or sorrow fill;
As ever best to Thee may seem,
Choose Thou my good and ill.

Choose Thou for me my friends,
My sickness or my health;
Choose Thou my joys and cares for me,
My poverty or wealth.

Not mine, but Thine the choice
In things or great or small,
Be Thou my Guide, my Guard, my Strength,
My Wisdom and my All.

For the Crisis.

One Word to You.

I say, brother, you stand a good chance to be put off at the next depot. Why, you hav'nt paid the fare yet! Don't you know it costs something to take you over this long, rough road from time to time? The worse the road the more we need help. We can't afford to take in free passengers. Come, man, pay your ticket! Here you've been aboard these twenty years, and a good memory don't know how much longer,—and, brother, you hav'nt paid the refreshment bill yet. No, no; that good old man who led you down the "liquid wave," and showed you into that room where the steam and strength are enlivened, has never got more than "thank you" for it. Your "God bless you's" don't go; for our Father answers prayers when they come from the heart; and when this is the case, christians begin getting an answer by hauling out some of their gold.

My brother, my sister, wont you just render to God these reasonable services? O, do be men and women! Only pay your ticket, and our road company will be more honorable. I can see several right able fellows out yonder who would step aboard too, if we only acted better.

Well, the bell rings, and I think we are most through. Look! the City of Cities appears to view! Just a moment longer, and it will be said, "Sleep on," "Thy money perish with thee." A few more toils, and we'll be out of the reach of want. The car rushes on, and yet you will not heed us. Go ahead! Read away there, Herald, Crisis, Messenger,—Books, Tracts, and all, —never mind. Your brother author and editor, publishers and printers, "trust in Providence." Never mind paying them. But oh, man! see those dark souls around you,–those weak lambs,–those fainting "little ones;" will you not help them? Don't let these perish. Just throw them a paper or a book. But no, you're not the man to do even this. We call in vain for stingy men to give anything.

But hark! I hear the shouts of shining angels on the other shore. I see the Judge of all the earth seated on the great white throne. I see in his hands crowns of resplendent glory. He waits a moment to say "Well done," to you and to me. See! he cometh nearer yet, and now plants his footsteps on earth once more. Mountains flee; earth totters; sinners shrink from his presence, but saints gather near him. Yet a moment for you, man. Now, wont you pay up? "What will it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Answer this, ye who borrow hymn books and papers. Answer this, ye who fill up your upper rooms, and curtain them up so stingily that even the sun's rays can't be admitted. Answer, ye who build, who plough, who buy lands and sprinkle them over with herds of sheep and oxen. What will all these profit you when your neighbor rises up in judgment, and says—"I was hungry, and ye fed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not."

"To be, or not to be"—which is the most solemn? Ah! reader, it is a solemn thing to live. We may be placed in the heart of earth's pleasure, yet there is a dark solemnity. Life is a desert. Truly—

"Out on an ocean all boundless we ride."

God give us wisdom to steer for the blissful Haven. Thanks to Heaven

"We have pass'd the coasts of Babylon," and soon

"Into the haven of rest we will glide."

And now, brother and sister, will you say to-day, "I'll try to prove faithful," so that we may all meet "Safe at home." God bless you, reader, whoever you are, black or white, rich or poor. Meet me in the Kingdom.

M. Mathews.

For the Crisis.

Suggestions.

"Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6: 1, 2.

This scripture is but little heeded in this our day. But few practice it; by some it is not considered essential. Paul thought it quite essential. In all his writings he makes this subject important. Some christians now-a-days seem to have gotten above it. I say christians, because I have known true-hearted christians go contrary to this scripture, who did not intend to do anything wrong. Often have I seen them turn aside and shun one who has done something out of the way, and who feel really sorry for it and repent of it in their heart, but, on account of the coldness manifested toward them on the part of christians, become hardened, and refuse to confess and forsake. What is still worse, some will shun one who has become a little cold, and does not engage so much in religious exercises as formerly; or perhaps dresses or appears a little different, for some reason; or does not believe just as they do on some points of doctrine.

I do not say these things censuring any one, for I presume they do it, or some at least, conscientiously. Yet such ones, I think, should think to restore those who are in fault, in the spirit of meekness, considering themselves, lest they also be tempted; then, if they persist in wickedness, it will be time enough to withdraw from their association.

I speak of these things because I have seen so much of it, and because, to many, it has caused many sorrowful hours, who have been in trial about some duty, or have some temptation, who need encouragement from christians instead of frowns. As the day of God is nearing, it is important that we give heed to the commandments.

B. D.

Selections.

The Prayer Meeting.

I love the prayer meeting. 1. Because, after the toils and perplexities of the day, my mind finds a sweet relief from the burdens that have oppressed it. The privilege of praying for others relieves my own anxieties for them. "When I went into the sanctuary, then understood I their end."

2. There I often obtain new views of truth. A spark is struck from the Word of God that kindles a flame in my heart. A vein hitherto hidden, is opened. My soul bows down to drink the reviving element, and is refreshed.

3. It brings me near to God. It is the place of special promise:—"Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." If many are absent, God is always there. I am never disappointed in this. He never stays away. If but "two or three" meet, he condescends to make "one." And what a "one" he is! We see him not, but something seems to say,—"Lo I am in the midst of you."

4. It brings me near heaven. Like Jacob, we are often constrained to say, "This is the gate of heaven." Here I come to look upon my Savior, and the glories of my future eternal home.

The Church Thermometer.

Well, what is that? Ask any veteran pastor who has weathered the storms, and rejoiced in the sunshines of long ministerial life, and he will tell you that it is the social prayer meeting. The true thermometer of a church, to indicate its spiritual temperature, is the weekly gathering around the mercy-seat. A cold prayer meeting makes a cold church. It is at once the cause and effect of spiritual declension.

And as a church has no surer symptom of decay than a decaying prayer meeting, so nothing feels the approach of a revival so palpably as the place of prayer. A revival begins there commonly. The deserted seats are filled. Those who "could not leave their business," now find but little difficulty in closing the doors of their shops or their counting-rooms. The absent Thomases are once more with the deserted flock of disciples, and wonder to find their Savior there too, speaking Peace be unto you! Those who seldom prayed, are ready to pour out their souls in supplication. A latent power is developed in the church, which astounds both pastor and people.

The prayer meeting, too, becomes a place for communion with God. Old differences are forgotten. Old wounds are healed. Church members will grasp each other's hands, and inquire about their neighbor's spiritual health.

The experienced mariner constantly "consults the glass." Brethren! If we are wise, we too will keep a lookout upon the thermometer of the church. A prayer meeting below freezing point is a fatal indication.

Sanctuary Sins.

1. Irregular attendance.—Occasional absence from church, or even regular half-day hearing, is counted a small thing by many. A wet Sabbath, or even a shower will keep them away. A headache, a little extra fatigue on the Saturday, or perhaps the prospect of hard work on Monday, are counted good reasons for absence by many. And if there be any slight ailment through the week, Sabbath is selected as the day for taking medicine, as it can be spared without any pecuniary loss.

2. Late attendance. There are some people who make a point of being late. They get up late on Sunday morning; they breakfast late; so that the bells are ringing ere they have finished their last cup of coffee. They hurry out, and they hurry along, and they hurry into church after service is begun. They see no sin in losing part of divine worship themselves, nor in disturbing the worship of others.

3. Sleeping in church. There was some excuse for Eutychus falling asleep; for "Paul was long preaching," and it was midnight. But there is no excuse for our modern sleepers; especially as most of these are not occasional, but regular sleepers, who seem not to feel the shame or the sin of the practice. Few things are more unpleasant to a minister, than to see eyes closed and heads nodding, in this pew or in that other pew. If he were to stop and name the individuals before the congregation, he would do well. But what offence it would give! What a noise it would make. Sleepers in church, beware! it is Satan who is sitting next you.

4. Staring in church. One does not like to mention smiling or laughing in church, for it seems such an outrage on decency and a mockery of devotion. But there are many who won't laugh in church, who do not hesitate to turn this or the other way, staring at strangers, or occupied with their neighbor's dresses. If a person happen to come in late, they turn round to see who he is. If, as sometimes happens, a bird finds its way in, how many eyes wander! Starers in church! learn to keep your eyes as well as your mind from wandering.

5. Fidgeting in church. Some people seem to sit on nails or nettles, their body is so constantly in motion. Others take out their watches, and count the length of sentences in the sermon, twirling or twitching their watch chain or ribbon all the while. Others seem as if taking the census of the congregation, or counting the number of panes in the window, or watching the movement of the flies. They are drinking in everything but the sermon, and seem as if relieved from the stocks when the service is over.

Hints to Mothers and Daughters.

"Whatever dims thy sense of truth,
Or stains thy purity,
Though slight as breath of summer air,
Count it as sin to thee."

NAKED BOSOMS—NAKED ARMS.

Friends, is this modest? is it becoming? is it decent? Mothers, do you allow it? Daughters, will you consent to it? What! tempt Satan to tempt you? How many, once amiable, lovely, virtuous females have fallen to rise no more, by following the fashions of the ungodly, by putting on the attire of an harlot! Modesty is a quality infinitely lovely and fascinating! Female delicacy is a priceless jewel, more precious than rubies.

"Innocent maid and snow-white flower,
Well are ye paired in your opening hour;
Thus should the pure and lovely meet,
Stainless with stainless, and sweet with sweet."

What more shocking to the virtuous and pure-minded than to behold professedly pious females with naked necks, naked bosoms and naked arms? What is this but hanging out the sign for the lustful and the libidinous! No marvel, sisters, that God hides his lovely face and you grope in darkness at noon-day! No marvel your harps are hung on the willows and you cry out: "O my leanness, my leanness." "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" "Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therfore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God."

What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, which is in in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?

For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirits which are God's."

How many beloved sisters in the Lord, once in the enjoyment of full salvation, are now dumb and mum? who never open their lips in personal testimony, save in doubtings, fearings and despairings! What's the matter? why is the Holy Spirit grieved? why has he taken his flight? Alas!—"murder will out." Look at the worldly conformity, the gay and fashionable adornments, the jewelry, the ear-rings, finger-rings, and breast-pins, the gaudy artificials, the naked bosoms, arms and necks! These are the little foxes that "spoil the vines." Can. 2: 15. Sisters, beloved, Christ says; "no man can serve two masters."—"If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him."

"All earthly charms, however dear,
Howe'er they please the eye or ear,
Will quickly fade and fly:
Of earthly glory faint the blaze,
And soon the transitory rays
In endless darkness die.

The nobler beauties of the just
Shall never moulder in the dust,
Or know a sad decay;
Their honors time and death defy,
And round the throne of heaven on high Beam everlasting day."

"Little children, keep yourselves from idols." 1 John 5: 21.—Golden Rule.

The Secret of Success.—A christian merchant, who from being a very poor boy had risen to wealth and renown, was once asked by an intimate friend to what, under God, he attributed his success in life. "To prompt and steady obedience to my parents," was his reply. "In the midst of many bad examples from youths of my own age, I was always enabled to yield a ready submission to the will of my father and mother, and I firmly believe that a blessing has, in consequence, rested upon me and upon all my efforts."

Anecdote.—A Universalist asked Rev. Mr. W. "If God was willing all men should be saved?" Mr. W. replied, "Do you believe God is willing all men should live moral and virtuous lives in this world?" The man answered, "Yes." "Then," said Mr. W., "do all men live thus?" After a little hesitancy, he answered, "No." Mr. W. then proceeded: "According to your own reasoning, the will of God is not accomplished. But to answer your question more fully—God is as willing that all men should be saved, as that all men should live virtuously; but if you mean by will a design or determination, then I would say that God has not determined that all men should maintain good, moral lives, for if he had, they would; nor has he determined to save all; if he had, all would be saved."

"At Evening Time it shall be Light."

Age oft has a loveliness youth may not wear;
The impress of thought and of calm, chastened feeling;
The light of the past shed by memory there,
Life's long, varied story serenely revealing.

Traces of tears that have long ceased their flow;
Footprints of cares now departed forever;
Reflections of clouds in the sunset aglow,
Clouds that shall lower again never—oh! never.

For heaven's own light has earth's dimness dispelled;
The pure flame of love in that worn heart is burning;
The spirit of peace has all bitterness quelled,
And calm is the eye that is heavenward turning.

Oh! thrice happy soul, by affliction made strong,
From sorrow new joy, hope from suffering gaining;
Coming forth from the furnace with praise on thy tongue,
Nor a smell of the fire on thy garments remaining.

All bright gleams thy pathway now, hence to the skies,
The fair bow of promise thy future adorning;
Soon glories celestial shall burst on thine eyes,
On the evening of time breaks eternity's morning.

Neglect Family Worship?—Morning or evening? Never. Better dispense with your breakfast, your dinner, your supper. Never omit this solemn, important, heaven-ordained duty. Read your Bible, tune your harps in praise, bow the knee. John Howard, the philanthropist, is said never to have neglected family prayer, even though there was but one, and that one his domestic, to join in it; always declaring that where he had a tent, God should have an altar.—Golden Rule.

The Moustache in the Pulpit.—Nearly all the English clergymen living between two and three hundred years ago, wore the moustache. In the list of those who wore the beard on the lip, we find the well-known names of John Donne, George Herbert, Robert Herrick, Jeremy Taylor, Thomas Fuller, Robert South, the famous John Knox, and a host of others.

Reading for Youth.

"I don't love you now, Mother."

A great many years ago, I knew a lady who had been sick for two years, as you have seen many a one, all the while slowly dying of consumption. She had but one child—a little boy.

One afternoon I was sitting by her bedside, for dearly I loved her, watching her with an aching heart; it seemed as though she would cough her life away. Her little boy Henry, sat too, at the post of the bed, his blue eyes, so like hers, filling with tears to see her suffer so. By-and-by the terrible cough ceased. Henry came, put his arms round his mother's neck—nestled his head in his mother's bosom, and said, "Mother, I do love you; I wish you wa'n't sick."

An hour later, the same loving, blue-eyed boy came in, all a-glow, stamping the snow off his feet, "O, mother, may I go skating, it is so nice—Ed and Charlie are going."

"No, Henry," feebly said the mother, "the ice is not hard enough yet."

"But, mother," very pettishly said the boy, "you are sick all the time, how do you know?"

"My child, you must obey me," gently said the mother.

"It is too bad," angrily sobbed the boy, who, an hour ago, had so loved his mother.

"I would like to have my little boy go," said his mother, looking sadly at the little boy's face, all covered with frowns; "you said you loved me; be good."

"No, I don't love you now, mother," said the boy, going out and slamming the door.

Again the frightful coughing came upon her, and we thought no more of the boy after the cough commenced. I noticed tears falling thick upon her pillow, but she sank from exhaustion into a light sleep.

In a little while muffled steps of men's feet were heard coming into the house, as though carrying something; and they were carrying the almost lifeless body of Henry.

Angrily had he left his mother, then gone to skate, disobeyed her, and then broken through the thin ice, sank under the water, and now saved by a great effort, was brought home barely alive to his sick mother.

I closed the doors, feeling more danger for her life than the child's, and coming softly in, drew back the curtains from the bed. "I heard them—it is Henry; O, I know he went—is he dead?" But she never seemed to hear the answer I gave, telling her, "O, no." She commenced coughing—she died in agony—strangled to death. The poor mother! the boy's disobedience killed her.

After a couple of hours I sought the boy's room. "O, I wish I had not told mother I did not love her. To-morrow I'll tell her now I do," said the child, sobbing pitifully. My heart ached; to-morrow I knew we must tell him she was dead. We did not, till the child came fully in the room, crying, "mother, I do love you." O, may I never see agony like that child's, as the lips he kissed gave back no kiss—as the hand he took fell lifelessly from his hand, instead of shaking his hand as it always had, and the boy knew she was dead.

"Mother, I do love you now," all the day long he sobbed and cried. "O, mother, mother, forgive me." Then he would not leave his mother. "Speak to me, mother," but she could never speak again, and he—the last words she had ever heard him say, were,—"mother, I don't love you now."

That boy's whole life was changed; sober and sad he was ever after. He is now a grey-haired old man, with one sorrow ever his, one act of disobedience, one wrong word, embittering all his life, with those words ever ringing in his ears, "Mother, I don't love you now."

Will the little ones who read this, remember if they disobey their mother, if they are cross and naughty, they say every single time they do so, to a tender mother's heart, by their actions, if not in the words of Henry, the very same thing, "I don't love you now, mother."

Forgiveness.

Little Nelly Palmer was a sweet little girl of about five years of age, and every night she loved to kneel down by her mother's side to pray. One of the prayers which she was in the habit of using was "The Lord's Prayer." One night, after being undressed, she knelt down as usual, and began to say, "Our Father who art in heaven," but when she got as far as "forgive us our debts as we forgive—" she stopped short and burst into tears.

"What is the matter, my child?" said her mother.

"O, ma, I did not pray it at all, and I can't pray it, I mustn't pray it," she added.

"And why not, Nelly?"

"Because, ma, I haven't forgiven Susy Flanders for spoiling my doll's face this morning."

"But I thought you had forgiven her, Nelly, when you saved the orange for her to-day, from dinner."

"I thought so too, ma, but you know I haven't seen her yet, and when I think of that great ink spot all soaked into the wax, and think how wicked Susy looked, my heart feels real wicked too, and I'm afraid if she should look so again at me, I couldn't give her the orange, or forgive her either."

"Not if you remember that it is just such as she that Christ told you to forgive!"

"Oh dear, ma, I don't know," said Nelly, still sobbing, "poor Dolly's face will never be clean again, and Susy needn't have done it; it would be easier to bear if it had been an accident."

"Yes, I know, Nelly, and there would be less to forgive; but if you can do it now, it will be easier for you to forgive greater wrongs when you get older."

"Why, ma, what could be greater? Dolly's face is spoiled."

"It would be greater, when you are grown up, to have somebody put a great black spot on your character by some slander. It is done to somebody every day, Nelly, and you may not escape; and if you can not forgive a wrong to Dolly, will you be able to do better towards one against yourself?"

But, ma, how can I make forgiveness when it won't come of itself into my heart?"

"You can pray Christ to send it, can't you?"

"Ye-s," she answered slowly, "but I'd rather you would ask for me first, please do, won't you, ma?"

So the mother besought the grace of forgiveness for her little girl, who then prayed for herself, and to her mother's surprise, added also "The Lord's Prayer." And she whispered, as she rose up, "I wasn't afraid to say that then, ma, for I felt forgiveness coming into my heart when we were praying; and I shan't be afraid to give the orange to-morrow."—The Child at Home.

Coming to Jesus.

Young reader, Jesus says: "Come unto me, all ye that are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." What does coming to Jesus mean? Can you tell?

Little Emma asked her mother this same question: "In Jesus' words," said Emma, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not,' does 'come unto me' mean dying, mamma? dying, leaving you, and going away?"

"Don't you love and think about your papa when he is away?" asked her mother.

"Yes, mamma; I feel full of papa sometimes," answered Emma, "I love him so dearly."

"It is not necessary to see him and be with him to love him."

"No, mamma, for he is in my heart really," said the little girl.

"That is what the Lord Jesus means when he asks you to come to him. It is not to go where he is, in body; but it is to love him, to have your heart full of him, that makes him near to you and you near to him. And it is so sweet to come to him, for he forgives our sins, and takes away our naughty willfulness, and helps us to correct our faults, and makes us love to do right, and love each other and everybody."—Golden Rule.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to pre-pay the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i.e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 259. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1860. | VOL. XI. NO. 26.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Evening Prayer.

Silent be the hum of life,
Hushed its tumult and its strife,
Gladly we retire from care,
'T is the hour of evening prayer.

Heavenly Father, at thy throne
Thanks we give for mercies shown;
Bowing low, we still implore
Grace and mercy as before.

Keep us all in peace to-night,
Guard us till the dawning light;
Sleeping, waking, still may we
Ever in thy favor be.

While we live, or when we die,
May we still behold thee nigh;
Then our flesh shall rest in hope,
Till thou com'st to raise me up.

So at last, when on the sky
Breaks the light that speaks thee nigh,
Then when night shall flee away,
Bid us share eternal day. H. L. H.

Dansville, N. Y., May, 1860.

What is True Religion?

Covetousness—Reason not consistent with Bible truth—The preserving power of the Bible—Blessedness and efficacy of the atonement of Christ.

This is one of the easiest questions to answer in the world. Suppose yourself to awake for the first time to life on some lone island in the midst of the ocean. In the first place, you consider that your existence is joyful and satisfying to you, and your reason and gratitude lead you to thank the being who is your Creator. As your wants manifest themselves, you find them supplied and provided for. For all this you thank and praise your God. This is true religion.

Suppose, further, that you get communication with another island, which is thickly populated. You and yours then have the enjoyment of neighborly society. You are all well provided for, and hence you all thank and praise your Creator. This is true religion.

But there is a higher or more extended religion than this. With this additional religion, you not only feel thankful to God for life and its blessings, but you rejoice in a sociable affinity with God in resisting and rejecting evil. God has the power to do evil, but is too righteous to do it. He desires you to be like minded. He knows what you are and would be, without the test or trial; yet he would know it by the trial. And there is a kind of necessity, also in this plan, but this is not a part of my present purpose to discuss. He tries you in various respects. There is, for instance, the various classes of beauty in others. He tries you whether you will be content with your own family. If you are, and covet not your neighbors, then, in this respect, you are religious or God-like, in the higher or more extended sense.

We might give many illustrations, but will mention but one or two. It happens that your land—land you have freely chosen, or fairly and honestly obtained—requires more labor to cultivate it than does your neighbors. Can you be content without coveting his land? If you can or will be, in this respect also you are religious or God-like in the higher sense.

Again, you find that some of your neighbors are less gifted in reasoning capacities than yourself; and you find that you can entice or induce them to become your permanent servants, for a trifling remuneration, which will enable you to live without laboring yourself. Do you covet this service? or are you willing for their sakes to do your own work, and seek by advice and otherwise to build them up in their own homestead? If so, you are also in this sense religious and God-like, in the higher sense spoken of. This is true religion, and the comprehension of it is within the capacity of all, whether through reason, nature, or Bible presentation. We find ourselves in a world and under circumstances of numerous tests and trials, so diversified in the wisdom of God, as to be adapted to the development of mind of every capacity; and by this plan God is pleased to know our character, both in its beginning and maturity. We see God to be good and reasonable in this, and are therefore willing to endure during the brief time of our probation the loss of such ease and blessings as this trial subjects us to; for we believe that God will reward us with a proportionate increase of happiness, both of body and mind, in the age which is to succeed this. We are convinced of this by the reasonableness of the whole matter. And if we need additional proof, we have it in the atoning sufferings we every where behold. Deprivation, to a more or less degree, is necessarily a connected contingency in the plan; hence knowing or believing God to be all-good, we see that said deprivations are for our good—that they are necessary to the satisfaction we shall enjoy in the consciousness of the God-like character we shall possess. The religion of true reason, and the religion of the Bible, are alike.

In truth, (and we should be duly humble in view of the fact,) man would have nearly, if not quite, degenerated to madness without the Bible, through sheer covetousness. Hence the Bible is our preservation from destruction; for God's plan requires as sure a penalty for a failure to serve him, as it secures a reward for success. Without it we would blindly covet, murder, and do all other sins. But through God's mercy, in Christ, we have this blessed book, even unto the present moment, together with the Holy Spirit. H. B.

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Anointed.—No. 4.

"Stand up for Jesus."

It is by some objected to the fact that Christ was "in the beginning with God," that God "calleth things that are not as though they were," and hence the Scripture speaks of Christ as pre-existing, when in fact he did not thus exist. This is simply admitting that the plain letter of Scripture does teach his pre-existence, and hence it must be explained away to avoid that conclusion.

But one principle may well be noted. God "calleth things that are not as though they were" only with respect to future events. He speaks of that which will certainly occur, as though it had already transpired; as the making of Abraham "the father of many nations," or the quickening of the dead. But this rule does not work both ways, by any means. For in no case does inspiration, in referring to the past, say that events occurred which did not really occur. Because if Christ was not "in the beginning with God," the words not only were not true, but they never can be true. If he did not actually have glory with the father "before the world was," then it was not true when he said it, nor can it ever be true, because the time is an essential element in the statement; and "in the beginning," or "before the world was," are periods long past, and no possible figure of speech can throw back the roll of ages, and make Christ's future glory or exaltation to be "in the beginning," or "before the world was." These expressions are not prophetic, having no date assigned to them, and so regarded as present because of their sureness; but they are historic expressions, and refer to a period in the past, and if the statement was not true at the period referred to, then it never could be true, because its truth is limited to that period. If I say this second day of August, that it snowed the first day of this month, no future snow storm can save my veracity, because I speak of a past event, and assign the time of its occurrence. So Christ had glory "before the world was," and no future glory can be the glory that he had with the Father "before the world was," if he had no existence then and there. The language is historical, not prophetical, and the reference is to the beginning—not to the end. It is "impossible for God to lie."

So "all things were made (di) by or through HIM, and without HIM was not any thing made that was made."—John 1: 3. Here the reference is purely historic. It is to "the beginning"—the creation. If not true of that, it is not true of any thing. History can have but one application. This agrees with the fact that "he is the first born of every creature." Why? What is the proof? For (en) BY or through him were all things CREATED, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions, or principalities or powers; all things were created (di) BY him, and FOR him: and he is BEFORE all things, and BY HIM all things consist." Col. 1: 15, 16. Now to say all things were created through him, does not alter the sense, for through is not "on account of," by any means, but "by means of," by the agency of; noting instrumentality, and implies, necessarily, the existence of that through which the thing is done. "En auto" is not merely "with respect to him," it is IN him or BY HIM, and any other rendering is simply saying it may mean so and so, without authority; but the question in Scripture is not what it MAY mean, but what it DOES mean. Single words dislocated, may mean any thing; words collected in intelligible sentences MUST mean, and DO mean, what they say, if they mean any thing. Nor will any other translation make sense with the apostle's argument. First, he states that Christ is the first born of every creature, and proves it by the fact that all else, including angels, or "principalities and powers," were "created by him." Second, he draws the conclusion that he is "before all things, and (en) by, in, or through him, all things consist." This clinches the nail, and shows that Christ is BEFORE all things, and hence we know how all things could be and are created by him.

I know that by an alteration and mystification of various passages, it may be said, in conclusion, this being true, Christ did not create all things. But Christ DID create all things, and the Bible says so. "All things were made by him," "by whom also He (God) made the worlds," "for BY HIM were ALL THINGS created;" and hence it follows, that as this conclusion is flatly contradicted by Scripture, the premises are also unscriptural. God created all things by Jesus Christ. Solomon built a temple, but he did it BY others, so there is no difficulty there.

The Scriptures that declare Christ's pre-existent riches and glory, are neither poetical, nor symbolical, nor allegorical, nor prophetical. They are plain, simple, historic statements, or allusions, and there is no instance where God calleth things that are not as though they were, unless it is with reference to FUTURE events. It does not say he calleth things that are as though they had been, but those that are not yet, but are certain he speaks of as though they already existed.

I am here met with the only seeming example of such an usage as is alleged, in Rev. 13: 8,—"And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." This passage is a fitting illustration of the imperfection of punctuation in our common Bibles. In some Greek copies, as in the received English version, there is no punctuation in the whole verse except a comma after the words "worship him." This leaves the reader to place his own construction on the passage, and as the translation is equivocal, a wrong idea is commonly received, namely, that Christ was slain from the foundation of the world; which is not asserted in Scripture, nor warranted by the facts in the case.

In Bagster's Greek Testament, in the reprint of the ancient Vatican copy, and in the critical Greek Testaments of Knapp, Griesbach, Muralto, Scholtz, and others, there is a comma after the word esphagmenou, slain, or slaughtered, showing that the slaying is to be connected with the word Lamb, and separated from "the foundation of the world." Their names "were WRITTEN from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the slain lamb." So we read in Rev. 17: 8, "They that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life, from the foundation of the world." It is the writing, not the slaying, that is from the world's foundation. So by comparing Scripture with Scripture, the difficulty is solved.

This is no new solution either, and to show this, I give a few translations and authorities, omitting several others which are in agreement with them:

GILBERT WAKEFIELD'S translation: "And all the inhabitants of the earth will worship him, whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the Lamb that was slaughtered."

ISAAC ASHE—compendious notes on Revelations: "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names have not been been written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain."

Professor N. N. WHITING'S translation: "Whose names are not written in the book of life of the slain Lamb, from the foundation of the world."

Professor MOSES STUART'S commentary: "Whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the life-book of the Lamb which was slain."

Dr. S. T. BLOOMFIELD'S New Testament: "Whose names are not written (as those) from the creation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb slain," or "in the book of life of the slain Lamb."

E. HARWOOD'S translation: "To it all those inhabitants of the world paid divine honors, whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the Lamb's book of life, who surrendered up himself a victim."

Dr. H. HAMMOND'S notes on New Testament: "That the words should not be read thus,—The Lamb slain from the beginning of the world; but thus,—whose names were not written from the foundation of the world, (that is, were never written) in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain, may sufficiently appear by comparing this expression here with chap. 17: 8," etc.

SIR NORTON KNATCHBULL'S Annotations: After speaking of Abel's lamb as a type of Christ, he remarks; "But perhaps we may better say with the Greek scholiast, it is an Hyperbaton,* as if we were to read, 'Whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain,' as were theirs who did not worship the dragon, etc., Luke 10: 20. And for confirmation of this Hyperbaton read Rev. 17: 8, where no mention at all is made of the Lamb that was slain, which is a kind of demonstration that the words are to be understood as they are before rendered according to the scholiast."

I might quote others, but I think I have given authorities and reasons enough to settle the question as to the meaning of Rev. 13: 8, if even the mere suggestion was not sufficient for every inquiring mind. The Lamb was not slain from the world's foundation, but on Calvary, in the end of the Jewish age. So this passage is a very poor proof of the position that while God calleth future things which are certain as if they were present, he at the same time calls present things past, and says that things occurred in the beginning which never did occur, and which never can occur as they are described, because the time designated in which they were accomplished has rolled away into the eternal past, never to return again.

But though Christ was not slain from the foundation of the world, yet he was "before all things, and by him all things do consist"—he "was in the beginning with God"—"he was rich and became poor" for us. And it is no idle compliment when by "the inspiration of the Almighty" it is said "his NAME shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Isa. 9: 6. To deny the propriety of one title is to deny the validity of all. If he is not properly "the mighty God" neither is he "the Prince of Peace," or the "Wonderful, Counsellor," or the second Adam, the everlasting Father of "the children whom God hath given" him. When God declares his name shall be called "MIGHTY GOD," I have no more right to question the propriety of the title, than I have to deny that he is "the Son of the Highest," when it is said, "He shall be great and shall be CALLED the Son of the Highest." God's names are sacred, and not idle titles.

Since Jesus knew "that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was COME FROM GOD, and WENT TO GOD,"—John 13: 3,—let us, while we wait for him to come from heaven again, give to him such honor that at his revelation in glory we can say from devout and loyal hearts, "Lo this OUR GOD, we have waited for him and he will save us; this is JEHOVAH, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."—Isa. 25: 9. H. L. HASTINGS.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 2d, '60.

* "In grammar, a figurative construction inverting the natural and proper order of words and sentences."

For the Crisis.

Wycliffe.

John de Wycliffe was born A. D. 1324. He wrote a treatise "Of the last age of the Church" in 1356, in which, assailing the papacy, he enumerated twelve classes of persons, beginning with the pope, and ending with the mendicant friars, whom he calls "antichrists, and proctors of Satan." He translated both the Old and New Testaments. The Old was never printed, but his New Testament was printed twice, first in folio, in London, 1731. The second edition at the same place, in 1810, successively, by Rev. J. Lewis and H. H. Baber.

Wycliffe labored much to enforce the authority of the Scriptures among all classes, both the rulers and the common people. The following, taken from the MSS. in the British Museum, will serve as a specimen of his translation:

"At ye bigyning was ye word and ye word was at god. and god was ye word. this was in ye bigyning at god. alle things weren made by him: and withouten him was maad no thing that thig that was maad in him was lyf and ye lyf was ye lyt of men and lyt schineth in derknesHs and derknesHs comphendith not it."—John 1: 1–5.

The above is a faithful copy as regards orthography and punctuation; but the "hand writing" of the MSS. (of which I have seen an engraved fac simile,) resembles a complicated German text. The Lollards and ancient sect of christians are said to have followed the teachings of Wycliffe; who in his day, like Luther, was countenanced and supported by, and associated with, the highest classes of his time, whether of royalty or knowledge. It will be seen, by comparing the above extract with the English language of our time, that five centuries have wrought great changes in its orthography. EDWIN C. STILES.

THE BIBLE.—The following lines were written by a sailor on the blank leaf of his Bible:—

"While down the stream of life I sail,
Christ be my ship, and grace my gale;
Hope be my anchor while I ride;
This book my compass o'er the tide."

Universalist Tract.

"WILL YOU ANSWER" THIS TRACT?

12. "If the demands of the justice of God are opposed to the requirements of his mercy, is he not divided against himself? If the requirements of his mercy are opposed to the demands of his justice, how can his kingdom stand?"—Mark 3: 24. They are in harmony, as we have plainly seen.

13. "If the justice and mercy of God are in any way opposed, do they 'keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace?' If divine justice and mercy are opposite in their requirements, can Deity be 'a just God AND a Savior?'" Isaiah 45: 21. They are not in opposition, as before shown.

14. "If 'a God all mercy is a God unjust,' would not a God all justice be a God all unmerciful? Is there any such thing in Deity as unjust mercy, or unmerciful justice? Is there any such principle in Deity as just cruelty, or merciful injustice?" Our God is a God of mercy and justice, and these attributes are not at war; MERCY does not crowd justice out of existence. There is no such thing as "unjust mercy," or "unmerciful justice," or "just cruelty," or "merciful injustice." The execution of Jehovah's threats are not "unjust." Was he "cruel" or "unjust" when he overthrew Sodom?

15. "If you had the requisite power, would you not deliver the whole family of man from sin and misery? If you were the final judge of all, would you doom a single soul to endless woe? Are you more merciful than the God who made you?" What I would do is nothing to the question as to what God will do: he will do as he has said. God will be just.

16. "'Can a woman forget her infant child?' Is the Creator of human sympathy less benevolent than the creature? Is a spark more glorious than the flame?" Our "benevolence" and "sympathy" cannot counteract God's justice.

17. "If God would save all mankind, but cannot, is he infinite in power? If God can save all mankind, but will not, is he infinite in goodness?" God does not save upon the principle of physical power; that power is not limited. It is morally "impossible for God to lie," or to "save men in their sins."

18. "Did God design universal salvation when he created man? Will he carry his original design into execution? If he fails in one of his plans, what evidence is there that he will not be defeated in them all?" There was nothing to save man from when God created Adam. He was free from sin. In turn I might ask, did God "design" the fall of man?

19. "Is every individual under obligation to be thankful for existence? Will this obligation always continue? Is it possible to be thankful for that which is not, on the whole, a blessing? If any one be rendered interminably wretched, will he still be under obligation to thank God for existence?" Life is a blessing for which we should be thankful under ordinary circumstances, yet Job said, "O that I had died from the womb!" Was he then thankful?

20. "Would endless misery benefit the Almighty as the inflictor? Would it benefit the saints and angels as spectators? Would it benefit the sinner as the sufferer? If it would not, who would be benefited by it?" No, no, no! No one.

21. "Can God be glorified by that which gives him no pleasure? Would the ceaseless agonies of millions of our race afford any pleasure to the Deity? Could any but perfectly evil beings, if there be any such, rejoice in, or be glorified by, the infliction of unending torment?" No! No!! NO!!!

22. "Can the determinate will of Deity be contrary to his pleasure? If God declares 'the end from the beginning,' can the final destiny of mankind be contrary to his will?" The compulsive will of God is not exercised: he exercised no will that will interfere with man's choice between life and death.

23. "Did God know, when he created man, that a part of his creatures would be endlessly miserable?" No, for they are not to be: but "all the wicked will God destroy."

24. "As Jesus 'gave himself a ransom for all,' can he ever 'see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied,' if endless misery be true?" It is not true; but when those who will consent to be saved, are gathered into Paradise, and "evil doers are cut off," he will be "satisfied."

25. "As Jesus 'tasted death for every man,' can it be true that 'the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand,' if a part are never saved?" Yes; he saves all who will accept the proffers of the gospel, and it would not be his "pleasure" to save others.

26. "Can Jesus be the Savior of any more than he actually saves? Can he be the Savior of the world if the world be not actually saved by him?" He is the proffered Savior of all.

27. "If Jesus be in no sense the Savior of unbelievers, why are unbelievers called upon to believe in him as their Savior?" While he is their proffered Savior, they are invited to accept him as their actual Savior, which would be useless if he were already such.

28. "Must not the thing to be believed be true before it is believed?" Yes; and it is true that Christ came to save men upon the conditions of the gospel, and not upon any other conditions. "And must it not continue to be true whether it be believed or not?" Certainly. "Can faith create any truth? or unbelief destroy it?" No. Christ is able and willing to save, whether men believe it or not."

29. "Is it true that God hath concluded all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all?" Yes; upon the gospel principle.

30. "Can God be especially the Savior of them that believe, unless he is actually the Savior of all?" He can be the special Savior of believers, and the proffered Savior of unbelievers, in which sense he is styled, "the Savior of all men."

31. "Is faith the substance of things hoped for?" Yes. "Do you hope for the truth of the doctrine of endless misery?" No. "If endless misery is not a thing hoped for, can it form any part of the Christian faith?" It does not; but "faith" is also the "evidence of things not seen," therefore destruction is an item of Christian faith.

32. "Do you pray for the salvation of all men?" Yes; with the understanding that they must be saved in the appointed way, if at all. "Do you pray in faith?" Yes; with the above understanding. "Are you aware that whatsoever is not of faith is sin?" Yes.

33. "Would God require us to pray for all men, unless he will have all men to be saved?" It is his will that all may be saved in harmony with the stipulated conditions of the gospel. "If you believe that endless woe is an item of the truth of God, why should you desire and pray that it may prove false?" I do not so believe; but I pray that sinners may escape destruction, for their own good.

34. "Do the righteous desire the salvation of all mankind?" Yes, if they will accept offered pardon, but in no other sense. "Is it true that the desire of the righteous shall be granted?" Yes; "if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." 1 John 5: 14.

35. "If 'whoso offereth praise glorifieth God,' (Ps. 1: 23,) can he be glorified by those who cannot praise him? If any one be rendered endlessly miserable, will it be possible for him to praise God?" No, no.

36. "Do you believe that endless punishment would, in any sense, redound to the glory of God? If yea, can you 'rejoice in hope of the glory of God?' Rom. 5: 2. If nay, should not the doctrine of endless woe be blotted from your creed?" Endless misery is not in my creed—the Bible—and it could not redound to the glory of God.

37. "Would not the salvation of three-fourths of mankind glorify God more than the salvation of one-half? Can you heartily join the angelic host in singing 'Glory to God in the highest,' without believing in the salvation of the whole family of man?" The salvation of three-fourths of the whole, would be more for God's glory than the salvation of one-half; it could be brought about through a compliance with the requirements of the gospel, but not otherwise. I can sing glory to God, for the salvation of those who will submit to "enter through the door into the sheepfold."

38. "Is endless misery embraced in the message of 'good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people?' Luke 2: 10. If not, has that doctrine any part or lot in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ?" No, no; but there is a "broad way that leadeth to destruction."

39. "Is it certain that all who are now alive, or yet to be born, will not be doomed to endless woe? If faith, or good works, or both, be essential to the happiness of a future life, can it be certain that any of our race will enter that happy state, inasmuch as it is not certain that any one will continue faithful and obedient unto death?" None are doomed to endless woe. "He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved," but "many shall seek to enter in, but shall not be able."

40. "If Christianity does not teach a certainty in relation to the future destiny of any soul of our race, is it not properly a system of chance? What better is chance than Atheism?" Our certainty and safety lie in obedience and faithfulness.

41. "Is not the goodness of God co-extensive and coeternal with his wisdom and [illegible] power? As the wisdom of God can never change to folly, nor his power to weakness, will his goodness ever change to hatred? Can Deity be universally and eternally good, if endless misery be true for a single soul?" His goodness will never change to hatred, but, while he loves his enemies, and offers to save them, there is still a sense in which he is "angry with the wicked every day," but he will cease his anger to them in their destruction, unless they repent; but "endless misery" would compel him to keep his anger forever.

42. "Is it true that the tender mercies of the Lord are over all his works?"—Ps. 145: 9. Will not his tender mercies be always over all his works? If endless misery be true for any of our race, in what respect are the tender mercies of the Lord different from the tender mercies of the wicked?" Were not his tender mercies over his works when he destroyed Sodom? Will they not also be over them when sinners are "punished with everlasting destruction?"

43. "If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' why should it be supposed that repentance leadeth to the goodness of God? If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' are not the impenitent the objects of his goodness?" While "the goodness of God leadeth to repentance," repentance leadeth to pardon. Why lead sinners to repentance if they are sure of salvation without it?

44. "Can he be a christian who affirms, that if he believed in the certain salvation of all mankind, he would neither worship God, nor obey the precepts of his heavenly law?" No matter whether he can be a christian or not, if he is sure of salvation, for his christianity has nothing to do with saving him. But our opinion is, that fear is not the prominent inducement to serve the Lord; it is only tributary. Men who serve God through fear alone, are not acting from the right principle.—W. SHELDON.
—Bible Expositor.

The Papacy.

The Pope trembles in the Vatican. He has a presentiment of the nearness of his doom. What office in Europe would insure his Pontifical life for five years? Now just think what this power was in ancient days: a power that made kings tremble on their thrones; a power that could force a German Emperor to remain doing penance amid the snows in the trenches around the imperial city, till the Pope gave him absolution; a power that could dispose of Britain's crown to whomsoever he pleased; the great power that reigned over the kings of the earth. "How are the mighty now fallen! Is this the man that shook kingdoms, that made the earth to tremble? Is he become as one of us?" And what do recent events indicate? The decadence of the system to the very verge, when like the thief in the night, He comes, whose right it is to reign; and the whole is struck down; and that great city is literally swallowed up and destroyed by fire; and the smoke of its torments begins to rise for ever and for ever.

I am speaking not of persons, but of the system; and if you knew it as I know it, if you knew what an awful mystery of wickedness it is, instead of being sorrowful, or when you hear of her judgments, letting your sympathies go out with her, and tears begin to be wept over the spectacle; those sympathies of yours would rush back to Smithfield, or travel to the Cottian Alps, or to the dungeons at Rome, or to the Inquisition of Spain; and witnessing the scenes that have been transacted there, they would come back armed with indignation; and instead of weeping over the ruin, you should, as angels bid you, rejoice that great Babylon is fallen—is fallen—is fallen.—"Great Tribulation," by Dr. Cumming.

VOLTAIRE.—Nearly a hundred years ago Voltaire resided at Geneva. One day he said to some friends, in a boastful, sneering tone: "Before the beginning of the nineteenth century, christianity will have disappeared from the earth!" Well! in that same house, in that same room where those impious words were spoken, what think you there is to-day? A large depository of Bibles! The sacred books fill the rooms from the floor to the ceiling. So much for Voltaire's prediction.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST.—As you would honor Christ, who has taught us the lesson of divine charity, "let this mind be in you that was in him," be moved by the same benevolent spirit, and "let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt." "If any man offend not in word the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."

☞ When in reading we meet with any maxim that may be of use, we should take it for our own, and make an immediate application of it, [illegible] of a friend whom we have purposely [illegible] [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 259. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1860. | VOL. XI. NO. 26.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Evening Prayer.

Silent be the hum of life,
Hushed its tumult and its strife,
Gladly we retire from care,
'T is the hour of evening prayer.

Heavenly Father, at thy throne
Thanks we give for mercies shown;
Bowing low, we still implore
Grace and mercy as before.

Keep us all in peace to-night,
Guard us till the dawning light;
Sleeping, waking, still may we
Ever in thy favor be.

While we live, or when we die,
May we still behold thee nigh;
Then our flesh shall rest in hope,
Till thou com'st to raise me up.

So at last, when on the sky
Breaks the light that speaks thee nigh,
Then when night shall flee away,
Bid us share eternal day. H. L. H.

Dansville, N. Y., May, 1860.

What is True Religion?

Covetousness—Reason not consistent with Bible truth—The preserving power of the Bible—Blessedness and efficacy of the atonement of Christ.

This is one of the easiest questions to answer in the world. Suppose yourself to awake for the first time to life on some lone island in the midst of the ocean. In the first place, you consider that your existence is joyful and satisfying to you, and your reason and gratitude lead you to thank the being who is your Creator. As your wants manifest themselves, you find them supplied and provided for. For all this you thank and praise your God. This is true religion.

Suppose, further, that you get communication with another island, which is thickly populated. You and yours then have the enjoyment of neighborly society. You are all well provided for, and hence you all thank and praise your Creator. This is true religion.

But there is a higher or more extended religion than this. With this additional religion, you not only feel thankful to God for life and its blessings, but you rejoice in a sociable affinity with God in resisting and rejecting evil. God has the power to do evil, but is too righteous to do it. He desires you to be like minded. He knows what you are and would be, without the test or trial; yet he would know it by the trial. And there is a kind of necessity, also in this plan, but this is not a part of my present purpose to discuss. He tries you in various respects. There is, for instance, the various classes of beauty in others. He tries you whether you will be content with your own family. If you are, and covet not your neighbors, then, in this respect, you are religious or God-like, in the higher or more extended sense.

We might give many illustrations, but will mention but one or two. It happens that your land—land you have freely chosen, or fairly and honestly obtained—requires more labor to cultivate it than does your neighbors. Can you be content without coveting his land? If you can or will be, in this respect also you are religious or God-like in the higher sense.

Again, you find that some of your neighbors are less gifted in reasoning capacities than yourself; and you find that you can entice or induce them to become your permanent servants, for a trifling remuneration, which will enable you to live without laboring yourself. Do you covet this service? or are you willing for their sakes to do your own work, and seek by advice and otherwise to build them up in their own homestead? If so, you are also in this sense religious and God-like, in the higher sense spoken of. This is true religion, and the comprehension of it is within the capacity of all, whether through reason, nature, or Bible presentation. We find ourselves in a world and under circumstances of numerous tests and trials, so diversified in the wisdom of God, as to be adapted to the development of mind of every capacity; and by this plan God is pleased to know our character, both in its beginning and maturity. We see God to be good and reasonable in this, and are therefore willing to endure during the brief time of our probation the loss of such ease and blessings as this trial subjects us to; for we believe that God will reward us with a proportionate increase of happiness, both of body and mind, in the age which is to succeed this. We are convinced of this by the reasonableness of the whole matter. And if we need additional proof, we have it in the atoning sufferings we every where behold. Deprivation, to a more or less degree, is necessarily a connected contingency in the plan; hence knowing or believing God to be all-good, we see that said deprivations are for our good—that they are necessary to the satisfaction we shall enjoy in the consciousness of the God-like character we shall possess. The religion of true reason, and the religion of the Bible, are alike.

In truth, (and we should be duly humble in view of the fact,) man would have nearly, if not quite, degenerated to madness without the Bible, through sheer covetousness. Hence the Bible is our preservation from destruction; for God's plan requires as sure a penalty for a failure to serve him, as it secures a reward for success. Without it we would blindly covet, murder, and do all other sins. But through God's mercy, in Christ, we have this blessed book, even unto the present moment, together with the Holy Spirit. H. B.

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Anointed.—No. 4.

"Stand up for Jesus."

It is by some objected to the fact that Christ was "in the beginning with God," that God "calleth things that are not as though they were," and hence the Scripture speaks of Christ as pre-existing, when in fact he did not thus exist. This is simply admitting that the plain letter of Scripture does teach his pre-existence, and hence it must be explained away to avoid that conclusion.

But one principle may well be noted. God "calleth things that are not as though they were" only with respect to future events. He speaks of that which will certainly occur, as though it had already transpired; as the making of Abraham "the father of many nations," or the quickening of the dead. But this rule does not work both ways, by any means. For in no case does inspiration, in referring to the past, say that events occurred which did not really occur. Because if Christ was not "in the beginning with God," the words not only were not true, but they never can be true. If he did not actually have glory with the father "before the world was," then it was not true when he said it, nor can it ever be true, because the time is an essential element in the statement; and "in the beginning," or "before the world was," are periods long past, and no possible figure of speech can throw back the roll of ages, and make Christ's future glory or exaltation to be "in the beginning," or "before the world was." These expressions are not prophetic, having no date assigned to them, and so regarded as present because of their sureness; but they are historic expressions, and refer to a period in the past, and if the statement was not true at the period referred to, then it never could be true, because its truth is limited to that period. If I say this second day of August, that it snowed the first day of this month, no future snow storm can save my veracity, because I speak of a past event, and assign the time of its occurrence. So Christ had glory "before the world was," and no future glory can be the glory that he had with the Father "before the world was," if he had no existence then and there. The language is historical, not prophetical, and the reference is to the beginning—not to the end. It is "impossible for God to lie."

So "all things were made (di) by or through HIM, and without HIM was not any thing made that was made."—John 1: 3. Here the reference is purely historic. It is to "the beginning"—the creation. If not true of that, it is not true of any thing. History can have but one application. This agrees with the fact that "he is the first born of every creature." Why? What is the proof? "For (en) BY or through him were all things CREATED, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions, or principalities or powers; all things were created (di) BY him, and FOR him: and he is BEFORE all things, and BY HIM all things consist." Col. 1: 15, 16. Now to say all things were created through him, does not alter the sense, for through is not "on account of," by any means, but "by means of," by the agency of; noting instrumentality, and implies, necessarily, the existence of that through which the thing is done. "Eis auto" is not merely "with respect to him," it is in him or BY HIM, and any other rendering is simply saying it may mean so and so, without authority; but the question in Scripture is not what it MAY mean, but what it DOES mean. Single words, dislocated, may mean any thing; words collocated in intelligible sentences MUST mean, and DO mean, what they say, if they mean any thing. Nor will any other translation make sense with the apostle's argument. First, he states that Christ is the first born of every creature, and proves it by the fact that all else, including angels, or "principalities and powers," were "created by him." Second, he draws the conclusion that he is "before all things, and (en) by, in, or through him, all things consist." This clinches the nail, and shows that Christ is BEFORE all things, and hence we know how all things could be and are created by him.

I know that by an alteration and mystification of various passages, it may be said, in conclusion, this being true, Christ did not create all things. But Christ DID create all things, and the Bible says so. "All things were made by him," "by whom also He (God) made the worlds," "for BY HIM were ALL THINGS created;" and hence it follows, that as this conclusion is flatly contradicted by Scripture, the premises are also unscriptural. God created all things by Jesus Christ. Solomon built a temple, but he did it BY others, so there is no difficulty there.

The Scriptures that declare Christ's pre-existent riches and glory, are neither poetical, nor symbolical, nor allegorical, nor prophetical. They are plain, simple, historic statements, or allusions, and there is no instance where God calleth things that are not as though they were, unless it is with reference to FUTURE events. It does not say he calleth things that are as though they had been, but those that are not yet, but are certain he speaks of as though they already existed.

I am here met with the only seeming example of such an usage as is alleged, in Rev. 13: 8,—"And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." This passage is a fitting illustration of the imperfection of punctuation in our common Bibles. In some Greek copies, as in the received English version, there is no punctuation in the whole verse except a comma after the words "worship him." This leaves the reader to place his own construction on the passage, and as the translation is equivocal, a wrong idea is commonly received, namely, that Christ was slain from the foundation of the world; which is not asserted in Scripture, nor warranted by the facts in the case.

In Bagster's Greek Testament, in the reprint of the ancient Vatican copy, and in the critical Greek Testaments of Knapp, Griesbach, Muralto, Scholtz, and others, there is a comma after the word esphagmenou, slain, or slaughtered, showing that the slaying is to be connected with the word Lamb, and separated from "the foundation of the world." Their names "were WRITTEN from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the slain lamb." So we read in Rev. 17: 8, "They that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life, from the foundation of the world." It is the writing, not the slaying, that is from the world's foundation. So by comparing Scripture with Scripture, the difficulty is solved.

This is no new solution either, and to show this, I give a few translations and authorities, omitting several others which are in agreement with them:

GILBERT WAKEFIELD's translation: "And all the inhabitants of the earth will worship him, whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the Lamb that was slaughtered."

ISAAC ASHE—compendious notes on Revelations: "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names have not been been written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain."

Professor N. N. WHITING's translation: "Whose names are not written in the book of life of the slain Lamb, from the foundation of the world."

Professor MOSES STUART's commentary: "Whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the life-book of the Lamb which was slain."

Dr. S. T. BLOOMFIELD's New Testament: "Whose names are not written (as those) from the creation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb slain," or "in the book of life of the slain Lamb."

E. HARWOOD's translation: "To it all those inhabitants of the world paid divine honors, whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the Lamb's book of life, who surrendered up himself a victim."

Dr. H. HAMMOND's notes on New Testament: "That the words should not be read thus,—The Lamb slain from the beginning of the world; but thus,—whose names were not written from the foundation of the world, (that is, were never written) in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain, may sufficiently appear by comparing this expression here with chap. 17: 8," etc.

SIR NORTON KNATCHBULL's Annotations: After speaking of Abel's lamb as a type of Christ, he remarks; "But perhaps we may better say with the Greek scholiast, it is an Hyperbaton,* as if we were to read, 'Whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain,' as were theirs who did not worship the dragon, etc., Luke 10: 20. And for confirmation of this Hyperbaton read Rev. 17: 8, where no mention at all is made of the Lamb that was slain, which is a kind of demonstration that the words are to be understood as they are before rendered according to the scholiast."

I might quote others, but I think I have given authorities and reasons enough to settle the question as to the meaning of Rev. 13: 8, if even the mere suggestion was not sufficient for every inquiring mind. The Lamb was not slain from the world's foundation, but on Calvary, in the end of the Jewish age. So this passage is a very poor proof of the position that while God calleth future things which are certain as if they were present, he at the same time calls present things past, and says that things occurred in the beginning which never did occur, and which never can occur as they are described, because the time designated in which they were accomplished has rolled away into the eternal past, never to return again.

But though Christ was not slain from the foundation of the world, yet he was "before all things, and by him all things do consist"—he "was in the beginning with God"—"he was rich and became poor" for us. And it is no idle compliment when by "the inspiration of the Almighty" it is said "his NAME shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Isa. 9: 6. To deny the propriety of one title is to deny the validity of all. If he is not properly "the mighty God" neither is he "the Prince of Peace," or the "Wonderful, Counsellor," or the second Adam, the everlasting Father of "the children whom God hath given" him. When God declares his name shall be called "MIGHTY GOD," I have no more right to question the propriety of the title, than I have to deny that he is "the Son of the Highest," when it is said, "He shall be great and shall be CALLED the Son of the Highest." God's names are sacred, and not idle titles.

Since Jesus knew "that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was COME FROM GOD, and WENT TO GOD,"—John 13: 3,—let us, while we wait for him to come from heaven again, give to him such honor that at his revelation in glory we can say from devout and loyal hearts, "Lo this OUR GOD, we have waited for him and he will save us; this is JEHOVAH, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."—Isa. 25: 9. H. L. HASTINGS.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 2d, '60.

* "In grammar, a figurative construction inverting the natural and proper order of words and sentences."

For the Crisis.

Wycliffe.

John de Wycliffe was born A. D. 1324. He wrote a treatise "Of the last age of the Church" in 1356, in which, assailing the papacy, he enumerated twelve classes of persons, beginning with the pope, and ending with the mendicant friars, whom he calls "antichrists, and proctors of Satan." He translated both the Old and New Testaments. The Old was never printed, but his New Testament was printed twice, first in folio, in London, 1731. The second edition at the same place, in 1810, successively, by Rev. J. Lewis and H. H. Baber.

Wycliffe labored much to enforce the authority of the Scriptures among all classes, both the rulers and the common people. The following, taken from the MSS. in the British Museum, will serve as a specimen of his translation:

"At ye bigyning was ye word and ye word was at god. and god was ye word. this was in ye bigyning at god. alle things weren made by him: and withouten him was maad no thing that thig that was maad in him was lyf and ye lyf was ye lyt of men and lyt schineth in derknesse and derknesse comprehendith not it."—John 1: 1–5.

The above is a faithful copy as regards orthography and punctuation; but the "hand writing" of the MSS. (of which I have seen an engraved fac simile,) resembles a complicated German text. The Lollards and ancient sect of christians are said to have followed the teachings of Wycliffe; who in his day, like Luther, was countenanced and supported by, and associated with, the highest classes of his time, whether of royalty or knowledge. It will be seen, by comparing the above extract with the English language of our time, that five centuries have wrought great changes in its orthography. EDWIN C. STILES.

THE BIBLE.—The following lines were written by a sailor on the blank leaf of his Bible:—

"While down the stream of life I sail,
Christ be my ship, and grace my gale;
Hope be my anchor while I ride;
This book my compass o'er the tide."

Universalist Tract.

"WILL YOU ANSWER" THIS TRACT?

12. "If the demands of the justice of God are opposed to the requirements of his mercy, is he not divided against himself? If the requirements of his mercy are opposed to the demands of his justice, how can his kingdom stand?"—Mark 3: 24. They are in harmony, as we have plainly seen.

13. "If the justice and mercy of God are in any way opposed, do they 'keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace?' If divine justice and mercy are opposite in their requirements, can Deity be 'a just God AND a Savior?'" Isaiah 45: 21. They are not in opposition, as before shown.

14. "If 'a God all mercy is a God unjust,' would not a God all justice be a God all unmerciful? Is there any such thing in Deity as unjust mercy, or unmerciful justice? Is there any such principle in Deity as just cruelty, or merciful injustice?" Our God is a God of mercy and justice, and these attributes are not at war; MERCY does not crowd justice out of existence. There is no such thing as "unjust mercy," or "unmerciful justice," or "just cruelty," or "merciful injustice." The execution of Jehovah's threats are not "unjust." Was he "cruel" or "unjust" when he overthrew Sodom?

15. "If you had the requisite power, would you not deliver the whole family of man from sin and misery? If you were the final judge of all, would you doom a single soul to endless woe? Are you more merciful than the God who made you?" What I would do is nothing to the question as to what God will do: he will do as he has said. God will be just.

16. "'Can a woman forget her infant child?' Is the Creator of human sympathy less benevolent than the creature? Is a spark more glorious than the flame?" Our "benevolence" and "sympathy" cannot counteract God's justice.

17. "If God would save all mankind, but cannot, is he infinite in power? If God can save all mankind, but will not, is he infinite in goodness?" God does not save upon the principle of physical power; that power is not limited. It is morally "impossible for God to lie," or to "save men in their sins."

18. "Did God design universal salvation when he created man? Will he carry his original design into execution? If he fails in one of his plans, what evidence is there that he will not be defeated in them all?" There was nothing to save man from when God created Adam. He was free from sin. In turn I might ask, did God "design" the fall of man?

19. "Is every individual under obligation to be thankful for existence? Will this obligation always continue? Is it possible to be thankful for that which is not, on the whole, a blessing? If any one be rendered interminably wretched, will he still be under obligation to thank God for existence?" Life is a blessing for which we should be thankful under ordinary circumstances, yet Job said, "O that I had died from the womb!" Was he then thankful?

20. "Would endless misery benefit the Almighty as the inflictor? Would it benefit the saints and angels as spectators? Would it benefit the sinner as the sufferer? If it would not, who would be benefitted by it?" No, no, no! No one.

21. "Can God be glorified by that which gives him no pleasure? Would the ceaseless agonies of millions of our race afford any pleasure to the Deity? Could any but perfectly evil beings, if there be any such, rejoice in, or be glorified by, the infliction of unending torment?" No! No!! NO!!!

22. "Can the determinate will of Deity be contrary to his pleasure? If God declares 'the end from the beginning,' can the final destiny of mankind be contrary to his will?" The compulsive will of God is not exercised: he exercised no will that will interfere with man's choice between life and death.

23. "Did God know, when he created man, that a part of his creatures would be endlessly miserable?" No, for they are not to be: but "all the wicked will God destroy."

24. "As Jesus 'gave himself a ransom for all,' can he ever 'see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied,' if endless misery be true?" It is not true; but when those who will consent to be saved, are gathered into Paradise, and "evil doers are cut off," he will be "satisfied."

25. "As Jesus 'tasted death for every man,' can it be true that 'the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand,' if a part are never saved?" Yes; he saves all who will accept the proffers of the gospel, and it would not be his "pleasure" to save others.

26. "Can Jesus be the Savior of any, [illegible] more than he actually saves? Can he be the Savior of the world if the world be not actually saved by him?" He is the proffered Savior of all.

27. "If Jesus be in no sense the Savior of unbelievers, why are unbelievers called upon to believe in him as their Savior?" While he is their proffered Savior, they are invited to accept him as their actual Savior, which would be useless if he were already such.

28. "Must not the thing to be believed be true before it is believed?" Yes; and it is true that Christ came to save men upon the conditions of the gospel, and not upon any other conditions. "And must it not continue to be true whether it be believed or not?" Certainly. "Can faith create any truth? or unbelief destroy it?" No. Christ is able and willing to save, whether men believe it or not."

29. "Is it true that God hath concluded all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all?' Yes; upon the gospel principle.

30. "Can God be especially the Savior of them that believe, unless he is actually the Savior of all?" He can be the special Savior of believers, and the proffered Savior of unbelievers, in which sense he is styled, "the Savior of all men."

31. "Is faith the substance of things hoped for?" Yes. "Do you hope for the truth of the doctrine of endless misery?" No. "If endless misery is not a thing hoped for, can it form any part of the Christian faith?" It does not; but "faith" is also the "evidence of things not seen," therefore destruction is an item of Christian faith.

32. "Do you pray for the salvation of all men?" Yes; with the understanding that they must be saved in the appointed way, if at all. "Do you pray in faith?" Yes; with the above understanding. "Are you aware that whatsoever is not of faith is sin?" Yes.

33. "Would God require us to pray for all men, unless he will have all men to be saved?" It is his will that all may be saved in harmony with the stipulated conditions of the gospel. "If you believe that endless woe is an item of the truth of God, why should you desire and pray that it may prove false?" I do not so believe; but I pray that sinners may escape destruction, for their own good.

34. "Do the righteous desire the salvation of all mankind?" Yes, if they will accept offered pardon, but in no other sense. "Is it true that the desire of the righteous shall be granted?" Yes; "if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." 1 John 5: 14.

35. "If 'whoso offereth praise glorifieth God,' (Ps. 1: 23,) can he be glorified by those who cannot praise him? If any one be rendered endlessly miserable, will it be possible for him to praise God?" No, no.

36. "Do you believe that endless punishment would, in any sense, redound to the glory of God? If yea, can you 'rejoice in hope of the glory of God?' Rom. 5: 2. If nay, should not the doctrine of endless woe be blotted from your creed?" Endless misery is not in my creed—the Bible—and it could not redound to the glory of God.

37. "Would not the salvation of three-fourths of mankind glorify God more than the salvation of one-half? Can you heartily join the angelic host in singing 'Glory to God in the highest,' without believing in the salvation of the whole family of man?" The salvation of three-fourths of the whole, would be more for God's glory than the salvation of one-half; it could be brought about through a compliance with the requirements of the gospel, but not otherwise. I can sing glory to God, for the salvation of those who will submit to "enter through the door into the sheepfold."

38. "Is endless misery embraced in the message of 'good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people?' Luke 2: 10. If not, has that doctrine any part or lot in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ?" No, no; but there is a "broad way that leadeth to destruction."

39. "Is it certain that all who are now alive, or yet to be born, will not be doomed to endless woe? If faith, or good works, or both, be essential to the happiness of a future life, can it be certain that any of our race will enter that happy state, inasmuch as it is not certain that any one will continue faithful and obedient unto death?" None are doomed to endless woe. "He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved," but "many shall seek to enter in, but shall not be able."

40. "If Christianity does not teach a certainty in relation to the future destiny of any soul of our race, is it not properly a system of chance? What better in chance than Atheism?" Our certainty and safety lie in obedience and faithfulness.

41. "Is not the goodness of God co-extensive and co-eternal with his wisdom and power? As the wisdom of God can never change to folly, nor his power to weakness, will his goodness ever change to hatred? Can Deity be universally and eternally good, if endless misery be true for a single soul?" His goodness will never change to hatred, but, while he loves his enemies, and offers to save them, there is still a [illegible] in which he is "angry with the wicked every day," but he will cease his anger [illegible] in their destruction, unless they repent; but "endless misery" would compel him to keep his anger forever.

42. "Is it true that the tender mercies of the Lord are over all his works?—Ps. 145: 9. Will not his tender mercies be always over all his works? If endless misery be true for any of our race, in what respect are the tender mercies of the Lord different from the tender mercies of the wicked?" Were not his tender mercies over his works when he destroyed Sodom? Will they not also be over them when sinners are "punished with everlasting destruction?"

43. "If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' why should it be supposed that repentance leadeth to the goodness of God? If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' are not the impenitent the objects of his goodness?" While "the goodness of God leadeth to repentance," repentance leadeth to pardon. Why lead sinners to repentance if they are sure of salvation without it?

44. "Can he be a christian who affirms, that if he believed in the certain salvation of all mankind, he would neither worship God, nor obey the precepts of his heavenly law?" No matter whether he can be a christian or not, if he is sure of salvation, for his christianity has nothing to do with saving him. But our opinion is, that fear is not the prominent inducement to serve the Lord; it is only tributary. Men who serve God through fear alone, are not acting from the right principle.—W. SHELDON.

—Bible Expositor.

The Papacy.

The Pope trembles in the Vatican. He has a presentiment of the nearness of his doom. What office in Europe would insure his Pontifical life for five years? Now just think what this power was in ancient days: a power that made kings tremble on their thrones; a power that could force a German Emperor to remain doing penance amid the snows in the trenches around the imperial city, till the Pope gave him absolution; a power that could dispose of Britain's crown to whomsoever he pleased; the great power that reigned over the kings of the earth. "How are the mighty now fallen! Is this the man that shook kingdoms, that made the earth to tremble? Is he become as one of us?" And what do recent events indicate? The decadence of the system to the very verge, when like the thief in the night, He comes, whose right it is to reign; and the whole is struck down; and that great city is literally swallowed up and destroyed by fire; and the smoke of its torments begins to rise for ever and for ever.

I am speaking not of persons, but of the system; and if you know it as I know it, if you knew what an awful mystery of wickedness it is, instead of being sorrowful, or when you hear of her judgments, letting your sympathies go out with her, and tears begin to be wept over the spectacle; those sympathies of yours would rush back to Smithfield, or travel to the Cottian Alps, or to the dungeons at Rome, or to the Inquisition of Spain; and witnessing the scenes that have been transacted there, they would come back armed with indignation; and instead of weeping over the ruin, you should, as angels bid you, rejoice that great Babylon is fallen—is fallen.—"Great Tribulation," by Dr. Cumming.

VOLTAIRE.—Nearly a hundred years ago Voltaire resided at Geneva. One day he said to some friends, in a boastful [illegible] tone: "Before the beginning of the nineteenth century, christianity will have disappeared from the earth!" Well! in that same house, in that same room where those impious words were spoken, what think you there is to-day? A depository of Bibles! The sacred books fill the room from the floor to the ceiling. [illegible] Voltaire's prophecy [illegible]

[illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 259. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1860. VOL. XI. NO. 26.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Evening Prayer.

Silent be the hum of life,
Hushed its tumult and its strife,
Gladly we retire from care,
'T is the hour of evening prayer.

Heavenly Father, at thy throne
Thanks we give for mercies shown;
Bowing low, we still implore
Grace and mercy as before.

Keep us all in peace to-night,
Guard us till the dawning light;
Sleeping, waking, still may we
Ever in thy favor be.

While we live, or when we die,
May we still behold thee nigh,
Then our flesh shall rest in hope,
Till thou com'st to raise me up.

So at last, when on the sky
Breaks the light that speaks thee nigh,
Then when night shall flee away,
Bid us share eternal day. H. L. H.

Dansville, N. Y., May, 1860.

What is True Religion?

Covetousness—Reason not consistent with Bible truth—The preserving power of the Bible—Blessedness and efficacy of the atonement of Christ.

This is one of the easiest questions to answer in the world. Suppose yourself to awake for the first time to life on some lone island in the midst of the ocean. In the first place, you consider that your existence is joyful and satisfying to you, and your reason and gratitude lead you to thank the being who is your Creator. As your wants manifest themselves, you find them supplied and provided for. For all this you thank and praise your God. This is true religion.

Suppose, further, that you get communication with another island, which is thickly populated. You and yours then have the enjoyment of neighborly society. You are all well provided for, and hence you all thank and praise your Creator. This is true religion.

But there is a higher or more extended religion than this. With this additional religion, you not only feel thankful to God for life and its blessings, but you rejoice in a sociable affinity with God in resisting and rejecting evil. God has the power to do evil, but is too righteous to do it. He desires you to be like minded. He knows what you are and would be, without the test or trial; yet he would know it by the trial. And there is a kind of necessity, also in this plan, but this is not a part of my present purpose to discuss. He tries you in various respects. There is, for instance, the various classes of beauty in others. He tries you whether you will be content with your own family. If you are, and covet not your neighbors, then, in this respect, you are religious or God-like, in the higher or more extended sense.

We might give many illustrations, but will mention but one or two. It happens that your land—land you have freely chosen, or fairly and honestly obtained—requires more labor to cultivate it than does your neighbors. Can you be content without coveting his land? If you can or will be, in this respect also you are religious or God-like in the higher sense.

Again, you find that some of your neighbors are less gifted in reasoning capacities than yourself; and you find that you can entice or induce them to become your permanent servants, for a trifling remuneration, which will enable you to live without laboring yourself. Do you covet this service? or are you willing for their sakes to do your own work, and seek by advice and otherwise to build them up in their own homestead? If so, you are also in this sense religious and God-like, in the higher sense spoken of. This is true religion, and the comprehension of it is within the capacity of all, whether through reason, nature, or Bible presentation. We find ourselves in a world and under circumstances of numerous tests and trials, so diversified in the wisdom of God, as to be adapted to the development of mind of every capacity; and by this plan God is pleased to know our character, both in its beginning and maturity. We see God to be good and reasonable in this, and are therefore willing to endure during the brief time of our probation the loss of such ease and blessings as this trial subjects us to; for we believe that God will reward us with a proportionate increase of happiness, both of body and mind, in the age which is to succeed this. We are convinced of this by the reasonableness of the whole matter. And if we need additional proof, we have it in the atoning sufferings we every where behold. Deprivation, to a more or less degree, is necessarily a connected contingency in the plan; hence knowing or believing God to be all-good, we see that said deprivations are for our good—that they are necessary to the satisfaction we shall enjoy in the consciousness of the God-like character we shall possess. The religion of true reason, and the religion of the Bible, are alike.

In truth, (and we should be duly humble in view of the fact,) man would have nearly, if not quite, degenerated to madness without the Bible, through sheer covetousness. Hence the Bible is our preservation from destruction; for God's plan requires as sure a penalty for a failure to serve him, as it secures a reward for success. Without it we would blindly covet, murder, and do all other sins. But through God's mercy, in Christ, we have this blessed book, even unto the present moment, together with the Holy Spirit. H. B.

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Anointed.—No. 4.

"Stand up for Jesus."

It is by some objected to the fact that Christ was "in the beginning with God," that God "calleth things that are not as though they were," and hence the Scripture speaks of Christ as pre-existing, when in fact he did not thus exist. This is simply admitting that the plain letter of Scripture does teach his pre-existence, and hence it must be explained away to avoid that conclusion.

But one principle may well be noted. God "calleth things that are not as though they were" only with respect to future events. He speaks of that which will certainly occur, as though it had already transpired; as the making of Abraham "the father of many nations," or the quickening of the dead. But this rule does not work both ways, by any means. For in no case does inspiration, in referring to the past, say that events occurred which did not really occur. Because if Christ was not "in the beginning with God," the words not only were not true, but they never can be true. If he did not actually have glory with the father "before the world was," then it was not true when he said it, nor can it ever be true, because the time is an essential element in the statement; and "in the beginning," or "before the world was," are periods long past, and no possible figure of speech can throw back the roll of ages, and make Christ's future glory or exaltation to be "in the beginning," or "before the world was." These expressions are not prophetic, having no date assigned to them, and so regarded as present because of their sureness; but they are historic expressions, and refer to a period in the past, and if the statement was not true at the period referred to, then it never could be true, because its truth is limited to that period. If I say this second day of August, that it snowed the first day of this month, no future snow storm can save my veracity, because I speak of a past event, and assign the time of its occurrence. So Christ had glory "before the world was," and no future glory can be the glory that he had with the Father "before the world was," if he had no existence then and there. The language is historical, not prophetical, and the reference is to the beginning—not to the end. It is "impossible for God to lie."

So "all things were made (di) by or through HIM, and without HIM was not any thing made that was made."—John 1: 3. Here the reference is purely historic. It is to "the beginning"—the creation. If not true of that, it is not true of any thing. History can have but one application. This agrees with the fact that "he is the first born of every creature." Why? What is the proof?" For (en) BY or through him were all things CREATED, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions, or principalities or powers; all things were created (di) BY him, and FOR him: and he is BEFORE all things, and BY HIM all things consist." Col. 1: 15, 16. Now to say all things were created through him does not alter the sense, for through is not "on account of," by any means, but "by means of," by the agency of; noting instrumentality, and implies, necessarily, the existence of that through which the thing is done. "En auto" is not merely "with respect to him," it is in him, OR BY HIM, and any other rendering is simply saying it may mean so and so, without authority; but the question in Scripture is not what it MAY mean, but what it DOES mean. Single words dislocated may mean any thing; words collocated in intelligible sentences MUST mean, and DO mean, what they say, if they mean any thing. Nor will any other translation make sense with the apostle's argument. First, he states that Christ is the first born of every creature, and proves it by the fact that all else, including angels, or "principalities and powers," were "created by him." Second, he draws the conclusion that he is "before all things, and (en) by, in, or through him, all things consist." This clinches the nail, and shows that Christ is BEFORE all things, and hence we know how all things could be and are created by him.

I know that by an alteration and mystification of various passages, it may be said, in conclusion, this being true, Christ did not create all things. But Christ DID create all things, and the Bible says so. "All things were made by him," "by whom also He (God) made the worlds," "for BY HIM were ALL THINGS created;" and hence it follows, that as this conclusion is flatly contradicted by Scripture, the premises are also unscriptural. God created all things by Jesus Christ. Solomon built a temple, but he did it BY others, so there is no difficulty there.

The Scriptures that declare Christ's pre-existent riches and glory, are neither poetical, nor symbolical, nor allegorical, nor prophetical. They are plain, simple, historic statements, or allusions, and there is no instance where God calleth things that are not as though they were, unless it is with reference to FUTURE events. It does not say he calleth things that are as though they had been, but those that are not yet, but are certain he speaks of as though they already existed.

I am here met with the only seeming example of such an usage as is alleged, in Rev. 13: 8,—"And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." This passage is a fitting illustration of the imperfection of punctuation in our common Bibles. In some Greek copies, as in the received English version, there is no punctuation in the whole verse except a comma after the words "worship him." This leaves the reader to place his own construction on the passage, and as the translation is equivocal, a wrong idea is commonly received, namely, that Christ was slain from the foundation of the world; which is not asserted in Scripture, nor warranted by the facts in the case.

In Bagster's Greek Testament, in the reprint of the ancient Vatican copy, and in the critical Greek Testaments of Knapp, Griesbach, Muralto, Scholtz, and others, there is a comma after the word esphagmenou, slain, or slaughtered, showing that the slaying is to be connected with the word Lamb, and separated from "the foundation of the world." Their names "were WRITTEN from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the slain lamb." So we read in Rev. 17: 8, "They that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life, from the foundation of the world." It is the writing, not the slaying, that is from the world's foundation. So by comparing Scripture with Scripture, the difficulty is solved.

This is no new solution either, and to show this, I give a few translations and authorities, omitting several others which are in agreement with them:

GILBERT WAKEFIELD'S translation: "And all the inhabitants of the earth will worship him, whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the Lamb that was slaughtered."

ISAAC ASHE—compendious notes on Revelations: "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names have not been been written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain."

Professor N. N. WHITING'S translation: "Whose names are not written in the book of life of the slain Lamb, from the foundation of the world."

Professor MOSES STUART'S commentary: "Whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the life-book of the Lamb which was slain."

Dr. S. T. BLOOMFIELD'S New Testament: "Whose names are not written (as those) from the creation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb slain," or "in the book of life of the slain Lamb."

E. HARWOOD'S translation: "To it all those inhabitants of the world paid divine honors, whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the Lamb's book of life, who surrendered up himself a victim."

Dr. H. HAMMOND'S notes on New Testament: "That the words should not be read thus,—The Lamb slain from the beginning of the world; but thus,—whose names were not written from the foundation of the world, (that is, were never written) in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain, may sufficiently appear by comparing this expression here with chap. 17: 8," etc.

SIR NORTON KNATCHBULL'S Annotations: After speaking of Abel's lamb as a type of Christ, he remarks; "But perhaps we may better say with the Greek scholiast, it is an Hyperbaton,* as if we were to read, 'Whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain,' as were theirs who did not worship the dragon, etc., Luke 10: 20. And for confirmation of this Hyperbaton read Rev. 17: 8, where no mention at all is made of the Lamb that was slain, which is a kind of demonstration that the words are to be understood as they are before rendered according to the scholiast."

I might quote others, but I think I have given authorities and reasons enough to settle the question as to the meaning of Rev. 13: 8, if even the mere suggestion was not sufficient for every inquiring mind. The Lamb was not slain from the world's foundation, but on Calvary, in the end of the Jewish age. So this passage is a very poor proof of the position that while God calleth future things which are certain as if they were present, he at the same time calls present things past, and says that things occurred in the beginning which never did occur, and which never can occur as they are described, because the time designated in which they were accomplished has rolled away into the eternal past, never to return again.

But though Christ was not slain from the foundation of the world, yet he was "before all things, and by him all things do consist"—he "was in the beginning with God"—"he was rich and became poor" for us. And it is no idle compliment when by "the inspiration of the Almighty" it is said "his NAME shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Isa. 9: 6. To deny the propriety of one title is to deny the validity of all. If he is not properly "the mighty God" neither is he "the Prince of Peace," or the "Wonderful, Counsellor," or the second Adam, the everlasting Father of "the children whom God hath given" him. When God declares his name shall be called "MIGHTY GOD," I have no more right to question the propriety of the title, than I have to deny that he is "the Son of the Highest," when it is said, "He shall be great and shall be CALLED the Son of the Highest." God's names are sacred, and not idle titles.

Since Jesus knew "that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was COME FROM GOD, and WENT TO GOD,"—John 13: 3,—let us, while we wait for him to come from heaven again, give to him such honor that at his revelation in glory we can say from devout and loyal hearts, "Lo this OUR GOD, we have waited for him and he will save us; this is JEHOVAH, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."—Isa. 25: 9. H. L. HASTINGS.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 2d, '60.

* "In grammar, a figurative construction inverting the natural and proper order of words and sentences."

For the Crisis.

Wycliffe.

John de Wycliffe was born A. D. 1324. He wrote a treatise "Of the last age of the Church" in 1356, in which, assailing the papacy, he enumerated twelve classes of persons, beginning with the pope, and ending with the mendicant friars, whom he calls "antichrists, and proctors of Satan." He translated both the Old and New Testaments. The Old was never printed, but his New Testament was printed twice, first in folio, in London, 1731. The second edition at the same place, in 1810, successively, by Rev. J. Lewis and H. H. Baber.

Wycliffe labored much to enforce the authority of the Scriptures among all classes, both the rulers and the common people. The following, taken from the MSS. in the British Museum, will serve as a specimen of his translation:

"At ye bigyning was ye word and ye word was at god. and god was ye word. this was in ye bigyning at god. alle things weren made by him: and withouten him was maad no thing that thig that was maad in him was lyf and ye lyf was ye lyt of men and lyt schineth in derknesbs and derknesbs comphendith not it."—John 1: 1–5.

The above is a faithful copy as regards orthography and punctuation; but the "hand writing" of the MSS. (of which I have seen an engraved fac simile,) resembles a complicated German text. The Lollards and ancient sect of christians are said to have followed the teachings of Wycliffe; who in his day, like Luther, was countenanced and supported by, and associated with, the highest classes of his time, whether of royalty or knowledge. It will be seen, by comparing the above extract with the English language of our time, that five centuries have wrought great changes in its orthography. EDWIN C. STILES.

THE BIBLE.—The following lines were written by a sailor on the blank leaf of his Bible:—

"While down the stream of life I sail,
Christ be my ship, and grace my gale;
Hope be my anchor while I ride;
This book my compass o'er the tide."

Universalist Tract.

"WILL YOU ANSWER" THIS TRACT?

12. "If the demands of the justice of God are opposed to the requirements of his mercy, is he not divided against himself? If the requirements of his mercy are opposed to the demands of his justice, how can his kingdom stand?"—Mark 3: 24. They are in harmony, as we have plainly seen.

13. "If the justice and mercy of God are in any way opposed, do they 'keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace?' If divine justice and mercy are opposite in their requirements, can Deity be 'a just God AND a Savior?'" Isaiah 45: 21. They are not in opposition, as before shown.

14. "If 'a God all mercy is a God unjust,' would not a God all justice be a God all unmerciful? Is there any such thing in Deity as unjust mercy, or unmerciful justice? Is there any such principle in Deity as just cruelty, or merciful injustice?" Our God is a God of mercy and justice, and these attributes are not at war; MERCY does not crowd justice out of existence. There is no such thing as "unjust mercy," or "unmerciful justice," or "just cruelty," or "merciful injustice." The execution of Jehovah's threats are not "unjust." Was he "cruel" or "unjust" when he overthrew Sodom?

15. "If you had the requisite power, would you not deliver the whole family of man from sin and misery? If you were the final judge of all, would you doom a single soul to endless woe? Are you more merciful than the God who made you?" What I would do is nothing to the question as to what God will do: he will do as he has said. God will be just.

16. "'Can a woman forget her infant child?' Is the Creator of human sympathy less benevolent than the creature? Is a spark more glorious than the flame?" Our "benevolence" and "sympathy" cannot counteract God's justice.

17. "If God would save all mankind, but cannot, is he infinite in power? If God can save all mankind, but will not, is he infinite in goodness?" God does not save upon the principle of physical power; that power is not limited. It is morally "impossible for God to lie," or to "save men in their sins."

18. "Did God design universal salvation when he created man? Will he carry his original design into execution? If he fails in one of his plans, what evidence is there that he will not be defeated in them all?" There was nothing to save man from when God created Adam. He was free from sin. In turn I might ask, did God "design" the fall of man?

19. "Is every individual under obligation to be thankful for existence? Will this obligation always continue? Is it possible to be thankful for that which is not, on the whole, a blessing? If any one be rendered interminably wretched, will he still be under obligation to thank God for existence?" Life is a blessing for which we should be thankful under ordinary circumstances, yet Job said, "O that I had died from the womb!" Was he then thankful?

20. "Would endless misery benefit the Almighty as the inflictor? Would it benefit the saints and angels as spectators? Would it benefit the sinner as the sufferer? If it would not, who would be benefitted by it?" No, no, no! No one.

21. "Can God be glorified by that which gives him no pleasure? Would the ceaseless agonies of millions of our race afford any pleasure to the Deity? Could any but perfectly evil beings, if there be any such, rejoice in, or be glorified by, the infliction of unending torment?" No! No!! NO!!!

22. "Can the determinate will of Deity be contrary to his pleasure? If God declares 'the end from the beginning,' can the final destiny of mankind be contrary to his will?" The compulsive will of God is not exercised: he exercised no will that will interfere with man's choice between life and death.

23. "Did God know, when he created man, that a part of his creatures would be endlessly miserable?" No, for they are not to be: but "all the wicked will God destroy."

24. "As Jesus 'gave himself a ransom for all,' can he ever 'see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied,' if endless misery be true?" It is not true; but when those who will consent to be saved, are gathered into Paradise, and "evil doers are cut off," he will be "satisfied."

25. "As Jesus 'tasted death for every man,' can it be true that 'the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand,' if a part are never saved?" Yes; he saves all who will accept the proffers of the gospel, and it would not be his "pleasure" to save others.

26. "Can Jesus be the Savior of any more than he actually saves? Can he be the Savior of the world if the world be not actually saved by him?" He is the proffered Savior of all.

27. "If Jesus be in no sense the Savior of unbelievers, why are unbelievers called upon to believe in him as their Savior?" While he is their proffered Savior, they are invited to accept him as their actual Savior, which would be useless if he were already such.

28. "Must not the thing to be believed be true before it is believed?" Yes; and it is true that Christ came to save men upon the conditions of the gospel, and not upon any other conditions. "And must it not continue to be true whether it be believed or not?" Certainly. "Can faith create any truth? or unbelief destroy it?" No. Christ is able and willing to save, whether men believe it or not."

29. "Is it true that God hath concluded all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all?" Yes; upon the gospel principle.

30. "Can God be especially the Savior of them that believe, unless he is actually the Savior of all?" He can be the special Savior of believers, and the proffered Savior of unbelievers, in which sense he is styled, "the Savior of all men."

31. "Is faith the substance of things hoped for?" Yes. "Do you hope for the truth of the doctrine of endless misery?" No. "If endless misery is not a thing hoped for, can it form any part of the Christian faith?" It does not; but "faith" is also the "evidence of things not seen," therefore destruction is an item of Christian faith.

32. "Do you pray for the salvation of all men?" Yes; with the understanding that they must be saved in the appointed way, if at all. "Do you pray in faith?" Yes; with the above understanding. "Are you aware that whatsoever is not of faith is sin?" Yes.

33. "Would God require us to pray for all men, unless he will have all men to be saved?" It is his will that all may be saved in harmony with the stipulated conditions of the gospel. "If you believe that endless woe is an item of the truth of God, why should you desire and pray that it may prove false?" I do not so believe; but I pray that sinners may escape destruction, for their own good.

34. "Do the righteous desire the salvation of all mankind?" Yes, if they will accept offered pardon, but in no other sense. "Is it true that the desire of the righteous shall be granted?" Yes; "if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." 1 John 5: 14.

35. "If 'whoso offereth praise glorifieth God,' (Ps. 1: 23,) can he be glorified by those who cannot praise him? If any one be rendered endlessly miserable, will it be possible for him to praise God?" No, no.

36. "Do you believe that endless punishment would, in any sense, redound to the glory of God? If yea, can you 'rejoice in hope of the glory of God?' Rom. 5: 2. If nay, should not the doctrine of endless woe be blotted from your creed?" Endless misery is not in my creed—the Bible—and it could not redound to the glory of God.

37. "Would not the salvation of three-fourths of mankind glorify God more than the salvation of one-half? Can you heartily join the angelic host in singing 'Glory to God in the highest,' without believing in the salvation of the whole family of man?" The salvation of three-fourths of the whole, would be more for God's glory than the salvation of one-half; it could be brought about through a compliance with the requirements of the gospel, but not otherwise. I can sing glory to God, for the salvation of those who will submit to "enter through the door into the sheepfold."

38. "Is endless misery embraced in the message of 'good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people?' Luke 2: 10. If not, has that doctrine any part or lot in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ?" No, no; but there is a "broad way that leadeth to destruction."

39. "Is it certain that all who are now alive, or yet to be born, will not be doomed to endless woe? If faith, or good works, or both, be essential to the happiness of a future life, can it be certain that any of our race will enter that happy state, inasmuch as it is not certain that any one will continue faithful and obedient unto death?" None are doomed to endless woe. "He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved," but "many shall seek to enter in, but shall not be able."

40. "If Christianity does not teach a certainty in relation to the future destiny of any soul of our race, is it not properly a system of chance? What better is chance than Atheism?" Our certainty and safety lie in obedience and faithfulness.

41. "Is not the goodness of God co-extensive and co-eternal with his wisdom and power? As the wisdom of God can never change to folly, nor his power to weakness, will his goodness ever change to hatred? Can Deity be universally and eternally good, if endless misery be true for a single soul?" His goodness will never change to hatred, but, while he loves his enemies, and offers to save them, there is still a sense in which he is "angry with the wicked every day," but he will cause his anger to cease in their destruction, unless they repent; but "endless misery" would compel him to keep his anger forever.

42. "Is it true that the tender mercies of the Lord are over all his works?"—Ps. 145: 9. Will not his tender mercies be always over all his works? If endless misery be true for any of our race, in what respect are the tender mercies of the Lord different from the tender mercies of the wicked?" Were not his tender mercies over his works when he destroyed Sodom? Will they not also be over them when sinners are "punished with everlasting destruction?"

43. "If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' why should it be supposed that repentance leadeth to the goodness of God? If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' are not the impenitent the objects of his goodness?" While "the goodness of God leadeth to repentance," repentance leadeth to pardon. Why lead sinners to repentance if they are sure of salvation without it?

44. "Can he be a christian who affirms, that if he believed in the certain salvation of all mankind, he would neither worship God, nor obey the precepts of his heavenly law?" No matter whether he can be a christian or not, if he is sure of salvation, for his christianity has nothing to do with saving him. But our opinion is, that fear is not the prominent inducement to serve the Lord; it is only tributary. Men who serve God through fear alone, are not acting from the right principle.—W. SIMPSON.—Bible Expositor.

The Papacy.

The Pope trembles in the Vatican. He has a presentiment of the nearness of his doom. What office in Europe would insure his Pontifical life for five years? Now just think what this power was in ancient days: a power that made kings tremble on their thrones; a power that could force a German Emperor to remain doing penance amid the snows in the trenches around the imperial city, till the Pope gave him absolution; a power that could dispose of Britain's crown to whomsoever he pleased; the great power that reigned over the kings of the earth. "How are the mighty now fallen! Is this the man that shook kingdoms, that made the earth to tremble? Is he become as one of us?" And what do recent events indicate? The decadence of the system to the very verge, when like the thief in the night, He comes, whose right it is to reign; and the whole is struck down; and that great city is literally swallowed up and destroyed by fire; and the smoke of its torments begins to rise for ever and for ever.

I am speaking not of persons, but of the system; and if you knew it as I know it, if you knew what an awful mystery of wickedness it is, instead of being sorrowful, or when you hear of her judgments, letting your sympathies go out with her, and tears begin to be wept over the spectacle; those sympathies of yours would rush back to Smithfield, or travel to the Cottian Alps, or to the dungeons at Rome, or to the Inquisition of Spain; and witnessing the scenes that have been transacted there, they would come back armed with indignation; and instead of weeping over the ruin, you should, as angels bid you, rejoice that great Babylon is fallen—is fallen—is fallen.—"Great Tribulation," by Dr. Cumming.

VOLTAIRE.—Nearly a hundred years ago Voltaire resided at Geneva. One day he said to some friends, in a boastful, sneering tone: "Before the beginning of the nineteenth century, christianity will have disappeared from the earth!" Well! in that same house, in that same room where those impious words were spoken, what think you there is to-day? A large depository of Bibles! The sacred books fill the space from the floor to the ceiling. So much for Voltaire's prediction.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST.—As you would honor Christ, who has taught us the lesson of divine charity, "let this mind be in you that was in him;" be moved by the same benevolent spirit, and "let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt." "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."

☞ When in reading we meet with any maxim that may be of use, we should take it for our own, and make an immediate application of it, as we would of the advice of a friend whom we have purposely consulted. [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 259. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1860. VOL. XI. NO. 26.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

AT

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Evening Prayer.

Silent be the hum of life,
Hushed its tumult and its strife,
Gladly we retire from care,
'T is the hour of evening prayer.

Heavenly Father, at thy throne
Thanks we give for mercies shown;
Bowing low, we still implore
Grace and mercy as before.

Keep us all in peace to-night,
Guard us till the dawning light;
Sleeping, waking, still may we
Ever in thy favor be.

While we live, or when we die,
May we still behold thee nigh;
Then our flesh shall rest in hope,
Till thou com'st to raise me up.

So at last, when on the sky
Breaks the light that speaks thee nigh,
Then when night shall flee away,
Bid us share eternal day. H. L. H.

Dansville, N. Y., May, 1860.

What is True Religion?

Covetousness—Reason not consistent with Bible truth—The preserving power of the Bible—Blessedness and efficacy of the atonement of Christ.

This is one of the easiest questions to answer in the world. Suppose yourself to awake for the first time to life on some lone island in the midst of the ocean. In the first place, you consider that your existence is joyful and satisfying to you, and your reason and gratitude lead you to thank the being who is your Creator. As your wants manifest themselves, you find them supplied and provided for. For all this you thank and praise your God. This is true religion.

Suppose, further, that you get communication with another island, which is thickly populated. You and yours then have the enjoyment of neighborly society. You are all well provided for, and hence you all thank and praise your Creator. This is true religion.

But there is a higher or more extended religion than this. With this additional religion, you not only feel thankful to God for life and its blessings, but you rejoice in a sociable affinity with God in resisting and rejecting evil. God has the power to do evil, but is too righteous to do it. He desires you to be like minded. He knows what you are and would be, without the test or trial; yet he would know it by the trial. And there is a kind of necessity, also in this plan, but this is not a part of my present purpose to discuss. He tries you in various respects. There is, for instance, the various classes of beauty in others. He tries you whether you will be content with your own family. If you are, and covet not your neighbors, then, in this respect, you are religious or God-like, in the higher or more extended sense.

We might give many illustrations, but will mention but one or two. It happens that your land—land you have freely chosen, or fairly and honestly obtained—requires more labor to cultivate it than does your neighbors. Can you be content without coveting his land? If you can or will be, in this respect also you are religious or God-like in the higher sense.

Again, you find that some of your neighbors are less gifted in reasoning capacities than yourself; and you find that you can entice or induce them to become your permanent servants, for a trifling remuneration, which will enable you to live without laboring yourself. Do you covet this service? or are you willing for their sakes to do your own work, and seek by advice and otherwise to build them up in their own homestead? If so, you are also in this sense religious and God-like, in the higher sense spoken of. This is true religion, and the comprehension of it is within the capacity of all, whether through reason, nature, or Bible presentation. We find ourselves in a world and under circumstances of numerous tests and trials, so diversified in the wisdom of God, as to be adapted to the development of mind of every capacity; and by this plan God is pleased to know our character, both in its beginning and maturity. We see God to be good and reasonable in this, and are therefore willing to endure during the brief time of our probation the loss of such ease and blessings as this trial subjects us to; for we believe that God will reward us with a proportionate increase of happiness, both of body and mind, in the age which is to succeed this. We are convinced of this by the reasonableness of the whole matter. And if we need additional proof, we have it in the atoning sufferings we every where behold. Deprivation, to a more or less degree, is necessarily a connected contingency in the plan; hence knowing or believing God to be all-good, we see that said deprivations are for our good—that they are necessary to the satisfaction we shall enjoy in the consciousness of the God-like character we shall possess. The religion of true reason, and the religion of the Bible, are alike.

In truth, (and we should be duly humble in view of the fact,) man would have nearly, if not quite, degenerated to madness without the Bible, through sheer covetousness. Hence the Bible is our preservation from destruction; for God's plan requires as sure a penalty for a failure to serve him, as it secures a reward for success. Without it we would blindly covet, murder, and do all other sins. But through God's mercy, in Christ, we have this blessed book, even unto the present moment, together with the Holy Spirit. H. B.

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Anointed.—No. 4.

"Stand up for Jesus."

It is by some objected to the fact that Christ was "in the beginning with God," that God "calleth things that are not as though they were," and hence the Scripture speaks of Christ as pre-existing, when in fact he did not thus exist. This is simply admitting that the plain letter of Scripture does teach his pre-existence, and hence it must be explained away to avoid that conclusion.

But one principle may well be noted. God "calleth things that are not as though they were" only with respect to future events. He speaks of that which will certainly occur, as though it had already transpired; as the making of Abraham "the father of many nations," or the quickening of the dead. But this rule does not work both ways, by any means. For in no case does inspiration, in referring to the past, say that events occurred which did not really occur. Because if Christ was not "in the beginning with God," the words not only were not true, but they never can be true. If he did not actually have glory with the father "before the world was," then it was not true when he said it, nor can it ever be true, because the time is an essential element in the statement; and "in the beginning," or "before the world was," are periods long past, and no possible figure of speech can throw back the roll of ages, and make Christ's future glory or exaltation to be "in the beginning," or "before the world was." These expressions are not prophetic, having no date assigned to them, and so regarded as present because of their sureness; but they are historic expressions, and refer to a period in the past, and if the statement was not true at the period referred to, then it never could be true, because its truth is limited to that period. If I say this second day of August, that it snowed the first day of this month, no future snow storm can save my veracity, because I speak of a past event, and assign the time of its occurrence. So Christ had glory "before the world was," and no future glory can be the glory that he had with the Father "before the world was," if he had no existence then and there. The language is historical, not prophetical, and the reference is to the beginning—not to the end. It is "impossible for God to lie."

So "all things were made (di) by or through Him, and without Him was not any thing made that was made."—John 1: 3. Here the reference is purely historic. It is to "the beginning"—the creation. If not true of that, it is not true of any thing. History can have but one application. This agrees with the fact that "he is the first born of every creature." Why? What is the proof?" For (en) BY or through him were all things CREATED, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions, or principalities or powers; all things were created (di) BY him, and FOR him: and he is BEFORE all things, and BY HIM all things consist." Col. 1: 15, 16. Now to say all things were created through him does not alter the sense, for through is not "on account of," by any means, but "by means of," by the agency of; noting instrumentality, and implies, necessarily, the existence of that through which the thing is done. "En auto" is not merely "with respect to him," it is in him, or BY HIM, and any other rendering is simply saying it may mean so and so, without authority; but the question in Scripture is not what it MAY mean, but what it DOES mean. Single words dislocated may mean any thing; words collocated in intelligible sentences MUST mean, and DO mean, what they say, if they mean any thing. Nor will any other translation make sense with the apostle's argument. First, he states that Christ is the first born of every creature, and proves it by the fact that all else, including angels, or "principalities and powers," were "created by him." Second, he draws the conclusion that he is "before all things, and (en) by, in, or through him, all things consist." This clinches the nail, and shows that Christ is BEFORE all things, and hence we know how all things could be and are created by him.

I know that by an alteration and mystification of various passages, it may be said, in conclusion, this being true, Christ did not create all things. But Christ DID create all things, and the Bible says so. "All things were made by him," "by whom also He (God) made the worlds," "for BY HIM were ALL THINGS created;" and hence it follows, that as this conclusion is flatly contradicted by Scripture, the premises are also unscriptural. God created all things by Jesus Christ. Solomon built a temple, but he did it BY others, so there is no difficulty there.

The Scriptures that declare Christ's pre-existent riches and glory, are neither poetical, nor symbolical, nor allegorical, nor prophetical. They are plain, simple, historic statements, or allusions, and there is no instance where God calleth things that are not as though they were, unless it is with reference to FUTURE events. It does not say he calleth things that are as though they had been, but those that are not yet, but are certain he speaks of as though they already existed.

I am here met with the only seeming example of such an usage as is alleged, in Rev. 13: 8,—"And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." This passage is a fitting illustration of the imperfection of punctuation in our common Bibles. In some Greek copies, as in the received English version, there is no punctuation in the whole verse except a comma after the words "worship him." This leaves the reader to place his own construction on the passage, and as the translation is equivocal, a wrong idea is commonly received, namely, that Christ was slain from the foundation of the world; which is not asserted in Scripture, nor warranted by the facts in the case.

In Bagster's Greek Testament, in the reprint of the ancient Vatican copy, and in the critical Greek Testaments of Knapp, Griesbach, Muralto, Scholtz, and others, there is a comma after the word esphagmenou, slain, or slaughtered, showing that the slaying is to be connected with the word Lamb, and separated from "the foundation of the world." Their names "were WRITTEN from the foundation of the world, in the book of life of the slain lamb." So we read in Rev. 17: 8, "They that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life, from the foundation of the world." It is the writing, not the slaying, that is from the world's foundation. So by comparing Scripture with Scripture, the difficulty is solved.

This is no new solution either, and to show this, I give a few translations and authorities, omitting several others which are in agreement with them:

GILBERT WAKEFIELD's translation: "And all the inhabitants of the earth will worship him, whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the book of life, of the Lamb that was slaughtered."

ISAAC ASHE—compendious notes on Revelations: "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names have not been been written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain."

Professor N. N. WHITING's translation: "Whose names are not written in the book of life of the slain Lamb, from the foundation of the world."

Professor MOSES STUART's commentary: "Whose names are not written, from the foundation of the world, in the life-book of the Lamb which was slain."

Dr. S. T. BLOOMFIELD's New Testament: "Whose names are not written (as those) from the creation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb slain," or "in the book of life of the slain Lamb."

E. HARWOOD's translation: "To it all those inhabitants of the world paid divine honors, whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the Lamb's book of life, who surrendered up himself a victim."

Dr. H. HAMMOND's notes on New Testament: "That the words should not be read thus,—The Lamb slain from the beginning of the world; but thus,—whose names were not written from the foundation of the world, (that is, were never written) in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain, may sufficiently appear by comparing this expression here with chap. 17: 8," etc.

SIR NORTON KNATCHBULL's Annotations: After speaking of Abel's lamb as a type of Christ, he remarks: "But perhaps we may better say with the Greek scholiast, it is an Hyperbaton,* as if we were to read, 'Whose names were not written from the foundation of the world in the book of life of the Lamb that was slain,' as were theirs who did not worship the dragon, etc., Luke 10: 20. And for confirmation of this Hyperbaton read Rev. 17: 8, where no mention at all is made of the Lamb that was slain, which is a kind of demonstration that the words are to be understood as they are before rendered according to the scholiast."

I might quote others, but I think I have given authorities and reasons enough to settle the question as to the meaning of Rev. 13: 8, if even the mere suggestion was not sufficient for every inquiring mind. The Lamb was not slain from the world's foundation, but on Calvary, in the end of the Jewish age. So this passage is a very poor proof of the position that while God calleth future things which are certain as if they were present, he at the same time calls present things past, and says that things occurred in the beginning which never did occur, and which never can occur as they are described, because the time designated in which they were accomplished has rolled away into the eternal past, never to return again.

But though Christ was not slain from the foundation of the world, yet he was "before all things, and by him all things do consist"—he "was in the beginning with God"—"he was rich and became poor" for us. And it is no idle compliment when by "the inspiration of the Almighty" it is said "his NAME shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Isa. 9: 6. To deny the propriety of one title is to deny the validity of all. If he is not properly "the mighty God" neither is he "the Prince of Peace," or the "Wonderful, Counsellor," or the second Adam, the everlasting Father of "the children whom God hath given" him. When God declares his name shall be called "MIGHTY GOD," I have no more right to question the propriety of the title, than I have to deny that he is "the Son of the Highest," when it is said, "He shall be great and shall be CALLED the Son of the Highest." God's names are sacred, and not idle titles.

Since Jesus knew "that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was COME FROM GOD, and WENT TO GOD,"—John 13: 3,—let us, while we wait for him to come from heaven again, give to him such honor that at his revelation in glory we can say from devout and loyal hearts, "Lo this OUR GOD, we have waited for him and he will save us; this is JEHOVAH, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."—Isa. 25: 9. H. L. HASTINGS.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 2d, '60.

* "In grammar, a figurative construction inverting the natural and proper order of words and sentences."

For the Crisis.

Wycliffe.

John de Wycliffe was born A. D. 1324. He wrote a treatise "Of the last age of the Church" in 1356, in which, assailing the papacy, he enumerated twelve classes of persons, beginning with the pope, and ending with the mendicant friars, whom he calls "antichrists, and proctors of Satan." He translated both the Old and New Testaments. The Old was never printed, but his New Testament was printed twice, first in folio, in London, 1731. The second edition at the same place, in 1810, successively, by Rev. J. Lewis and H. H. Baber.

Wycliffe labored much to enforce the authority of the Scriptures among all classes, both the rulers and the common people. The following, taken from the MSS. in the British Museum, will serve as a specimen of his translation:

"At ye bigyning was ye word and ye word was at god. and god was ye word. this was in ye bigyning at god. alle things weren made by him: and withouten him was maad no thing that thig that was maad in him was lyf and ye lyf was ye lyt of men and lyt schineth in derknesbs and derknesbs comphendith not it."—John 1: 1–5.

The above is a faithful copy as regards orthography and punctuation; but the "hand writing" of the MSS. (of which I have seen an engraved fac simile,) resembles a complicated German text. The Lollards and ancient sect of christians are said to have followed the teachings of Wycliffe; who in his day, like Luther, was countenanced and supported by, and associated with, the highest classes of his time, whether of royalty or knowledge. It will be seen, by comparing the above extract with the English language of our time, that five centuries have wrought great changes in its orthography. EDWIN C. STILES.

THE BIBLE.—The following lines were written by a sailor on the blank leaf of his Bible:—

"While down the stream of life I sail,
Christ be my ship, and grace my gale;
Hope be my anchor while I ride;
This book my compass o'er the tide."

Universalist Tract.

"WILL YOU ANSWER" THIS TRACT?

12. "If the demands of the justice of God are opposed to the requirements of his mercy, is he not divided against himself? If the requirements of his mercy are opposed to the demands of his justice, how can his kingdom stand?"—Mark 3: 24. They are in harmony, as we have plainly seen.

13. "If the justice and mercy of God are in any way opposed, do they 'keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace?' If divine justice and mercy are opposite in their requirements, can Deity be 'a just God AND a Savior?'" Isaiah 45: 21. They are not in opposition, as before shown.

14. "If 'a God all mercy is a God unjust,' would not a God all justice be a God all unmerciful? Is there any such thing in Deity as unjust mercy, or unmerciful justice? Is there any such principle in Deity as just cruelty, or merciful injustice?" Our God is a God of mercy and justice, and these attributes are not at war; MERCY does not crowd justice out of existence. There is no such thing as "unjust mercy," or "unmerciful justice," or "just cruelty," or "merciful injustice." The execution of Jehovah's threats are not "unjust." Was he "cruel" or "unjust" when he overthrew Sodom?

15. "If you had the requisite power, would you not deliver the whole family of man from sin and misery? If you were the final judge of all, would you doom a single soul to endless woe? Are you more merciful than the God who made you?" What I would do is nothing to the question as to what God will do: he will do as he has said. God will be just.

16. "'Can a woman forget her infant child?' Is the Creator of human sympathy less benevolent than the creature? Is a spark more glorious than the flame?" Our "benevolence" and "sympathy" cannot counteract God's justice.

17. "If God would save all mankind, but cannot, is he infinite in power? If God can save all mankind, but will not, is he infinite in goodness?" God does not save upon the principle of physical power; that power is not limited. It is morally "impossible for God to lie," or to "save men in their sins."

18. "Did God design universal salvation when he created man? Will he carry his original design into execution? If he fails in one of his plans, what evidence is there that he will not be defeated in them all?" There was nothing to save man from when God created Adam. He was free from sin. In turn I might ask, did God "design" the fall of man?

19. "Is every individual under obligation to be thankful for existence? Will this obligation always continue? Is it possible to be thankful for that which is not, on the whole, a blessing? If any one be rendered interminably wretched, will he still be under obligation to thank God for existence?" Life is a blessing for which we should be thankful under ordinary circumstances, yet Job said, "O that I had died from the womb!" Was he then thankful?

20. "Would endless misery benefit the Almighty as the inflictor? Would it benefit the saints and angels as spectators? Would it benefit the sinner as the sufferer? If it would not, who would be benefitted by it?" No, no, no! No one.

21. "Can God be glorified by that which gives him no pleasure? Would the ceaseless agonies of millions of our race afford any pleasure to the Deity? Could any but perfectly evil beings, if there be any such, rejoice in, or be glorified by, the infliction of unending torment?" No! No!! NO!!!

22. "Can the determinate will of Deity be contrary to his pleasure? If God declares 'the end from the beginning,' can the final destiny of mankind be contrary to his will?" The compulsive will of God is not exercised: he exercised no will that will interfere with man's choice between life and death.

23. "Did God know, when he created man, that a part of his creatures would be endlessly miserable?" No, for they are not to be: but "all the wicked will God destroy."

24. "As Jesus 'gave himself a ransom for all,' can he ever 'see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied,' if endless misery be true?" It is not true; but when those who will consent to be saved, are gathered into Paradise, and "evil doers are cut off," he will be "satisfied."

25. "As Jesus 'tasted death for every man,' can it be true that 'the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand,' if a part are never saved?" Yes; he saves all who will accept the proffers of the gospel, and it would not be his "pleasure" to save others.

26. "Can Jesus be the Savior of any, [illegible] more than he actually saves? Can he be the Savior of the world if the world be not actually saved by him?" He is the proffered Savior of all.

27. "If Jesus be in no sense the Savior of unbelievers, why are unbelievers called upon to believe in him as their Savior?" While he is their proffered Savior, they are invited to accept him as their actual Savior, which would be useless if he were already such.

28. "Must not the thing to be believed be true before it is believed?" Yes; and it is true that Christ came to save men upon the conditions of the gospel, and not upon any other conditions. "And must it not continue to be true whether it be believed or not?" Certainly. "Can faith create any truth? or unbelief destroy it?" No. Christ is able and willing to save, whether men believe it or not."

29. "Is it true that God hath concluded all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all?' Yes; upon the gospel principle.

30. "Can God be especially the Savior of them that believe, unless he is actually the Savior of all?" He can be the special Savior of believers, and the proffered Savior of unbelievers, in which sense he is styled, "the Savior of all men."

31. "Is faith the substance of things hoped for?" Yes. "Do you hope for the truth of the doctrine of endless misery?" No. "If endless misery is not a thing hoped for, can it form any part of the Christian faith?" It does not; but "faith" is also the "evidence of things not seen," therefore destruction is an item of Christian faith.

32. "Do you pray for the salvation of all men?" Yes; with the understanding that they must be saved in the appointed way, if at all. "Do you pray in faith?" Yes; with the above understanding. "Are you aware that whatsoever is not of faith is sin?" Yes.

33. "Would God require us to pray for all men, unless he will have all men to be saved?" It is his will that all may be saved in harmony with the stipulated conditions of the gospel. "If you believe that endless woe is an item of the truth of God, why should you desire and pray that it may prove false?" I do not so believe; but I pray that sinners may escape destruction, for their own good.

34. "Do the righteous desire the salvation of all mankind?" Yes, if they will accept offered pardon, but in no other sense. "Is it true that the desire of the righteous shall be granted?" Yes; "if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us." 1 John 5: 14.

35. "If 'whoso offereth praise glorifieth God,' (Ps. 1: 23,) can he be glorified by those who cannot praise him? If any one be rendered endlessly miserable, will it be possible for him to praise God?" No, no.

36. "Do you believe that endless punishment would, in any sense, redound to the glory of God? If yea, can you 'rejoice in hope of the glory of God?' Rom. 5: 2. If nay, should not the doctrine of endless woe be blotted from your creed?" Endless misery is not in my creed—the Bible—and it could not redound to the glory of God.

37. "Would not the salvation of three-fourths of mankind glorify God more than the salvation of one-half? Can you heartily join the angelic host in singing 'Glory to God in the highest,' without believing in the salvation of the whole family of man?" The salvation of three-fourths of the whole, would be more for God's glory than the salvation of one-half; it could be brought about through a compliance with the requirements of the gospel, but not otherwise. I can sing glory to God, for the salvation of those who will submit to "enter through the door into the sheepfold."

38. "Is endless misery embraced in the message of 'good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people?' Luke 2: 10. If not, has that doctrine any part or lot in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ?" No, no; but there is a "broad way that leadeth to destruction."

39. "Is it certain that all who are now alive, or yet to be born, will not be doomed to endless woe? If faith, or good works, or both, be essential to the happiness of a future life, can it be certain that any of our race will enter that happy state, inasmuch as it is not certain that any one will continue faithful and obedient unto death?" None are doomed to endless woe. "He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved," but "many shall seek to enter in, but shall not be able."

40. "If Christianity does not teach a certainty in relation to the future destiny of any soul of our race, is it not properly a system of chance? What better is chance than Atheism?" Our certainty and safety lie in obedience and faithfulness.

41. "Is not the goodness of God co-extensive and coeternal with his wisdom and power? As the wisdom of God can never change to folly, nor his power to weakness, will his goodness ever change to hatred? Can Deity be universally and eternally good, if endless misery be true for a single soul?" His goodness will never change to hatred, but, while he loves his enemies, and offers to save them, there is still a sense in which he is "angry with the wicked every day," but he will cease his anger to them in their destruction, unless they repent; but "endless misery" would compel him to keep his anger forever.

42. "Is it true that the tender mercies of the Lord are over all his works?—Ps. 145: 9. Will not his tender mercies be always over all his works? If endless misery be true for any of our race, in what respect are the tender mercies of the Lord different from the tender mercies of the wicked?" Were not his tender mercies over his works when he destroyed Sodom? Will they not also be over them when sinners are "punished with everlasting destruction?"

43. "If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' why should it be supposed that repentance leadeth to the goodness of God? If 'the goodness of God leadeth to repentance,' are not the impenitent the objects of his goodness?" While "the goodness of God leadeth to repentance," repentance leadeth to pardon. Why lead sinners to repentance if they are sure of salvation without it?

44. "Can he be a christian who affirms, that if he believed in the certain salvation of all mankind, he would neither worship God, nor obey the precepts of his heavenly law?" No matter whether he can be a christian or not, if he is sure of salvation, for his christianity has nothing to do with saving him. But our opinion is, that fear is not the prominent inducement to serve the Lord; it is only tributary. Men who serve God through fear alone, are not acting from the right principle.—W. SIMPSON.
—Bible Expositor.

The Papacy.

The Pope trembles in the Vatican. He has a presentiment of the nearness of his doom. What office in Europe would insure his Pontifical life for five years? Now just think what this power was in ancient days: a power that made kings tremble on their thrones; a power that could force a German Emperor to remain doing penance amid the snows in the trenches around the imperial city, till the Pope gave him absolution; a power that could dispose of Britain's crown to whomsoever he pleased; the great power that reigned over the kings of the earth. "How are the mighty now fallen! Is this the man that shook kingdoms, that made the earth to tremble? Is he become as one of us?" And what do recent events indicate? The decadence of the system to the very verge, when like the thief in the night, He comes, whose right it is to reign; and the whole is struck down; and that great city is literally swallowed up and destroyed by fire; and the smoke of its torments begins to rise for ever and for ever.

I am speaking not of persons, but of the system; and if you knew it as I know it, if you knew what an awful mystery of wickedness it is, instead of being sorrowful, or when you hear of her judgments, letting your sympathies go out with her, and tears begin to be wept over the spectacle; those sympathies of yours would rush back to Smithfield, or travel to the Cottian Alps, or to the dungeons at Rome, or to the Inquisition of Spain; and witnessing the scenes that have been transacted there, they would come back armed with indignation; and instead of weeping over the ruin, you should, as angels bid you, rejoice that great Babylon is fallen—is fallen—is fallen.—"Great Tribulation," by Dr. Cumming.

VOLTAIRE.—Nearly a hundred years ago Voltaire resided at Geneva. One day he said to some friends, in a boastful, sneering tone: "Before the beginning of the nineteenth century, christianity will have disappeared from the earth!" Well! in that same house, in that same room where those impious words were spoken, what think you there is to-day? A large depository of Bibles! The sacred books fill the space from the floor to the ceiling. So much for Voltaire's prediction.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST.—As you would honor Christ, who has taught us the lesson of divine charity, "let this mind be in you" that was in him; be moved by the same benevolent spirit, and "let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt." "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."

☞ When in reading we meet with any maxim that may be of use, we should take it for our own, and make an immediate application of it, as we would of the advice of a friend whom we have purposely consulted. [illegible]

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. F. Servis.

Bro. Grant:—There are a few lovers of truth in this section, who, we believe, are beginning to let their light shine. That which has been too much neglected among us, namely prayer meetings, are being enjoyed by some of the brethren; and the result is, that they are strengthened thereby, and are growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth.

Our meeting the 15th August, held upon the same ground occupied last year, was one of interest to the church, and to all in attendance. Although, by the notice, the meeting was generally understood to be held in a school-house, until a few days previous, yet there was quite a large turn-out to hear the truth, and to witness the ordinance of baptism. Seven intelligent believers, who have been coming into the truth for a year or more, and some more recently concluding to obey the gospel, were baptized into Christ, professing their faith in the one Lord, one faith and one baptism. It was manifest at this, as well as at similar gatherings of the saints, that the more intelligent and unbiassed part of community are satisfied that we have the truth, and can give a reason of the hope we cherish, being founded upon "the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." And since we believe from the Scriptures that the wicked will do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand, we have reason to rejoice that occasionally a few honest ones are embracing the gospel, and proving its power which will result in the salvation of every one that believeth. And oh, what a salvation! to be saved from sin, and all the effects of sin; yea more, to receive eternal life, hence eternal joy in the kingdom which shall never end.

O brethren and sisters in Christ, will you be faithful? Will you wake up and catch one more glimpse of the soon coming kingdom? Your day of probation is almost closed, and what you do must be done quickly. Break loose from the world, and be not unnecessarily encumbered with the earthly manna, and you will save yourselves from a thousand perplexities, and have more time to serve God, to serve his cause, to fit yourselves and be instrumental in fitting others to share that life which to all earthly pleasures can bear no comparison.

Holly, Mich.

From Bro. P. Alling.

Bro. Grant:—I am much gratified with the spirit of a communication in a late Crisis from Bro. Himes, and I see no good reason why the same spirit of kindness and christian forbearance should not pervade the hearts and lives of all who are looking for that blessed hope—the coming of Christ. If all could thus feel and act in harmony, I see not why something may not yet be accomplished by way of arousing a slumbering church to the great truth that "the end of all things is at hand." Certain it is that all who may imbibe and cherish such a spirit, will be greatly benefitted by being brought into communion with the great Head of the church, and thereby prepare themselves more perfectly to stand approved in the final day.

O, how long and ardently have I desired to witness such a unity amongst the brethren,—without it I see not how we can stand accepted in that day. I hope all will take this matter home, and commence honestly and earnestly an examination of our own hearts and lives, and eradicate at once all bitterness and sectarianism, and cherish only that spirit of love and forbearance, so prominent in all the acts and teachings of our blessed Savior. If we will be like him, we must do like him, and then he will not be ashamed of us when he shall come in the glory of his Father, with all his holy angels.

I am heartily glad to perceive the subject of time can again be agitated, without giving offence to the household of faith. If God was wise in giving the periods a prominent place in his word, it does appear to me to be wisdom on the part of his people to seek an understanding of them. It has ever appeared to me, those who assume an opposite course virtually charge him with the folly of making an unimportant revelation to his people. But, as Christ said, "of that day and hour knoweth no man," I am of the opinion that all attempts to define the day and hour are unprofitable. It is because we "know not when the time is," that the command to "watch" was given.

Norwalk, O.

From Bro. Geo. Dillsbaugh.

Bro. Grant:—Since reading the objections of those wandering about in the dark and gloomy departments of "Doubting Castle," respecting man's entire mortality and unconsciousness in death, I feel to praise the Lord more and more that I am not in those dark old heathenish and papal "castles," whose foundation was laid by heathen philosophers and papal priestcraft; but am now enjoying the light of heaven, which is shining upon my pathway. There is not a doubt resting upon my mind that man, is mortal throughout, and when he dies is unconscious until he, the man that dies, is raised by the power of God in the resurrection. Hence the necessity of Christ's coming to raise the dead and change the living, and give them immortality—a never dying nature. This is the christian's hope. See Thess. 4: 13–18.

And I have not a doubt but we are very near the time when our Life-giver will consummate the work that his Father has appointed him to do. How carefully, then, ought christians to live. Our lives should be conformed to the example of our Life-giver. How many professed christians are indulging in some filthy, unholy practice; and a great many little sins, or weights, which hinder them from running in the race. Let us lay aside every weight and every sin, and run with PATIENCE the race set before us.

Seneca Falls, N. Y.

From Bro. R. V. Lyon.

Bro. Grant:—Truth is on the advance in this region of country. Since my last, I have had the honor of baptizing five obedient souls, upon the profession of their faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of his Anointed; making in all 18 since the middle of June. Others will soon go forward in this glorious ordinance. Amen. Yours for a whole gospel.

Spencerville, C. W.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 5, 1860.

The Close of the Volume.

As this is the last number of the present volume, now is a good time to subscribe for the Crisis. We purpose to spare no pains to make it just such a paper as every christian will love to read and lend to his neighbor; one calculated to cheer up the lone pilgrims to Zion's happy land, while we herald the signs of the speedy coming of our Savior, the resurrection of the dead, and the establishment of the kingdom of heaven. "The end of all things is at hand."

We intend, by the help of the Lord, that our paper shall truly "feed the flock of God," and affect its readers like a good prayer meeting, or a pleasant interview with a devoted christian friend. Pray for us, that we may meet with happy success in this direction.

We are very thankful to our dear brethren and sisters who have taken so much pains to enrich our columns with their interesting articles. They have shown a spirit of sacrifice worthy of the noble cause in which we are unitedly engaged. We should be glad, were we able, to pay them for their labors; but we are rejoiced to know that they love the Lord so well that they are willing to wait till he comes before they receive their reward. It is a great privilege to be associated, in these last days, with those who are the true followers of Christ, in a work so blessed and glorious as the one in which they are engaged at the present time, that of proclaiming his second advent. Let every one stand firm, "unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Queries.

Mr. Miles Grant:—Would you have the kindness to answer the following questions:—

1st. Does not Malachi 4: 1, refer to the destruction of the Jews in Jerusalem, when over 1,100,000 Jews were destroyed, and the righteous escaped? If this verse really refers to the end of time, it stands as an unanswerable argument in favor of the total destruction of the wicked.

2d. When God appeared to Moses in the burning bush, he said, I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; and in the New Testament he says, "I am not the God of the dead, but of the living." If he was the God of the living only, and Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were dead, how could he be their God also, unless they were alive in heaven, or rather their spirits were in heaven? It also says, Gen. 25: 8, that "Abraham gave up the ghost, and was gathered to his people." Does not this signify that he was "gathered to those congenial spirits, eminent for their piety, who had passed before him into the invisible world?"

3d. If the word destroy signifies annihilation, were not those at the time of the flood, also the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah, annihilated? and if so, will they be raised at the judgment, and annihilated again? Can the material part of man be annihilated, or was it merely their form that was destroyed?

4th. In Jude, 7th verse, it says that the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah are "set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." Does not this mean that they are now confined in some place, and suffering there for their crimes?

5th. How do you explain the passage,—"The wicked shall go away into everlasting punishment"? also the passages where it says, "their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched"? Does this not signify that there is something about the wicked that will never die, but be in everlasting punishment?

If the above questions do not intrude too much upon your time, I should be much obliged by your answering them, not out of mere curiosity, but to arrive at the truth.

Yours most respectfully,
James H. Cross.

Harrison, N. Y.

I. In answer to the first inquiry, we would say, if Mal. 4: 1, refers to the destruction of the Jews at the overthrow of Jerusalem, then it appears certain that it was not then and there fulfilled, for all the proud, ... and all that do wickedly were not burned up, root and branch, at that time. Only a small portion of the wicked Jews, then living, were burned up when Jerusalem was overthrown.

Peter speaks of a similar event with the one mentioned in Malachi, when he says, "The heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire; ... the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." This corresponds with Malachi,—"For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven." This is the time when the proud and wicked are to be burned up; or, as Peter expresses it, "The day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."—2 Pet. 3: 7. This great event is most certainly in the future.

II. If the declaration, "I am the God of Abraham," etc., proves that "their spirits were in heaven," then we can see no point in the Savior's argument. He is talking with the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection of the dead. The Sadducees believed the writings of Moses, but had overlooked the fact that the resurrection of the dead was taught him at the bush, when the Lord said, "I am the God of Abraham," etc.

Let us look at the Savior's argument, by which he silenced the Sadducees, and proved to them, from the writings of Moses, that the dead will rise. When the Lord made the declaration to Moses, saying, "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob," these men were dead and in their graves. But "he is not a God of the dead, but of the living, for all live unto him;" or, as Thompson renders this passage, "to him they are all alive," or, as Paul explains it in Rom. 4: 17, "God ... quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things that be not as though they were." Now the whole mystery appears to be solved. When these men were dead, the Lord says, "As touching the resurrection of the DEAD ... I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob."—Matt. 22: 31, 32. But if they were never to live again, then this declaration would not have been made; as he does not become their God till they rise from the grave.

Observe, the Savior is not trying to prove that they, or their spirits, are alive in heaven, or elsewhere; but that they, themselves, will rise from the dead. If the view that some take of this passage is correct, instead of establishing the doctrine of the resurrection, he overthrows it, and confirms the position of the Sadducees; for the popular view assumes that God is not the God of the bodies of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, because they are dead, and if their souls are not dead, a resurrection of them is impossible, for the reason, that what is not dead cannot rise from the dead.

It does not say, Abraham's spirit was gathered to his fathers' spirits; but it reads, "Abraham gave up the ghost [literally, expired—died] and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years, and was gathered to his people. And his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah," in his family burying ground, where his wife was buried.

The record of Isaac's death reads: "And Isaac gave up the ghost, and died, and was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days: and his sons Esau and Jacob buried him."—Gen. 35: 29. We read the following concerning the last sayings and death of Jacob: "And the time drew nigh that Israel must die: and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, 'If now I have found grace in thy sight, ... bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt: but I will lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying place.' And he said, I will do as thou hast said." Gen. 47: 29, 30. After Jacob had blessed his sons, "He charged them, and said unto them, I am to be gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite, in the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre in the land of Canaan, which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite for a possession of a burying place. There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah. The purchase of the field and of the cave that is therein was from the children of Heth. And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people."—Gen. 49: 29–33. Here is no intimation that their spirits were carried off to the spirits of their fathers, but they were buried together, and when in that cave of Machpelah, their resurrection is declared, when God says to Moses, I am their God.

The argument of Christ may be briefly summed up as follows:

1. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are dead.
2. When dead, God says, I am their God.
3. "He is not a God of the dead; but" "calleth those things that be not as though they were."
4. Therefore, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob must be raised from the dead.

III. Those who were destroyed in the flood, and at the time of the overthrow of Sodom, were no more annihilated than the martyrs who were burnt at the stake, or every other one who has mouldered back to dust in the grave. As such they are destroyed; but the matter of which they were composed is not annihilated, and, therefore, can be re-organized. Mr. Webster defines destruction as follows:—"Destruction consists in the annihilation of the form of anything, that form of parts which constitutes it what it is." Hence it follows, if there is no resurrection of the dead, "Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—1 Cor. 15: 18.

According to the Scriptures, and all known physiological laws, the first death kills a man just as totally as the second; the only difference being in the resurrection of all from the first death, and of none from the second. We know of no reason why God could not raise man from the second death, as easily as from the first; but we find no promise that he will. The second death is "the wages of sin," which constitutes the punishment of the wicked; and as this is eternal, they never rise again, but remain in death's endless embrace.

When the Lord destroys wicked men, he destroys that part which has sinned, whether it be the body, soul, spirit, or all three combined. It is the man himself, as an organized being, made of the dust of the ground, that is accountable, and punishable, not a house in which he lived. Man as a whole, a unit, dies, is raised, and, if wicked, dies again, to live no more forever. This seems to be the plain teaching of the Scriptures.

IV. "Suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." In relation to this passage in Jude, we see no difficulty. In 2 Pet. 2: 6, where the same event is mentioned, Peter says, God turned "the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an example unto those that after should live ungodly." Hence we find in Rev. 21: 8, where we find the last mention of punishment, the various wicked classes of men "have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." These are destroyed after the "example" of Sodom; i. e., by fire and brimstone.

The word rendered eternal in Jude, 7th ver., is the same in the original that is translated ever in Philemon, ver. 15. When speaking of Onesimus' departure and return, Paul says to Philemon, "For perhaps he therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldst receive him for ever."

Sibanius, an eloquent writer of the 4th century, when speaking of the ancient city of Troy, that was burnt B. C. 1184, says, "It lies an example of the calamity of an eternal fire." Does he mean that the fire was there burning, and that Troy would continue to burn eternally? Certainly not. It is among the things that were. The same is true of Sodom and Gomorrah. The dead sea now stands where the fire once burned till it had consumed the inhabitants of those wicked cities of the plain.

V. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment." "The fire is not quenched." These expressions are thought to prove the unending misery of the wicked. The first passage shows, we think, that the punishment of the wicked will be eternal, without defining its nature; hence we must turn to other scriptures to find the character of the punishment.

Paul tells us, "The wages of sin is death." As all must admit that death is a punishment, then it follows that eternal death would be ETERNAL PUNISHMENT. As eternal life is the highest possible reward, so eternal death is the highest possible punishment. The wicked lose all that the righteous gain. When life is lost eternally, all is gone.

Fire and brimstone are named as the agents for the destruction of the lives of the wicked, according to the "ensample" given at Sodom. If the fire is unquenchable, what will be its effects upon objects cast into it? Why, of course, they must be burnt up, or else produce no effect. But the Scriptures affirm that "all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Again, says John, Christ will "gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." The fact that the fire is unquenchable, is positive proof that the wicked will be burnt up. The palace at Jerusalem was destroyed by an unquenchable fire, (see Jer. 17: 27) but it is not burning now.

Eusebius says of the martyrs Cronion and Julian, that they were scourged, and afterwards "consumed in an unquenchable fire." We see no proof of the doctrine of eternal misery in the expression, "everlasting punishment" and "unquenchable fire."

Rom. 4: 17.

The following is Thompson's translation of Rom. 4: 17.—"Abraham ... is the father of us all in the sight of him in whom he believed—namely God, who re-animateth the dead, and calleth up things not yet in existence as if actually existing.

The following reading of Ps. 146: 4, is from "A new version fitted to the terms used in churches," by M. Montague.

"In Princes put not ye your trust,
Nor in the son of man,
In whom's no help; his breath goes forth;
He backs, returns him to his earth;
His thoughts—himself—that day are lost;
He ends where he began."

The following is from Clement to the Corinthians, chap. 7: 10.—"For it is written, 'The merciful shall inherit the earth, and they that are without evil shall be left upon it; but the transgressors shall perish from the face of it.'"

Indulgences.

The following shows that the doctrine of indulgences is still held by the Roman Catholic Church:—"The Catholic doctrine of indulgences ... is ... a fixed article, and not lately introduced in our creed, nor subject to doubt or uncertainty, nor a thing about which we may innocently differ in belief, and reject at pleasure. No; there is no discretion left to the true believer. He must believe it, as a revealed truth, or lose the integrity of his faith."—From Peter Havermans, pastor of St. Peter's Church.—Troy, Oct. 18th, 1842.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

In consequence of a press of duties, we have not found time this week to report the blessed results of our deeply interesting meeting at Wilbraham; but will give a few extracts from some of the daily papers, hoping to be able to give a full report in our next, which will be the first number of the new volume. The following is from the Springfield Republican:—

THE SECOND ADVENT CAMPMEETING.
(From our own Correspondent.)

North Wilbraham, Aug. 22.

The Second Advent campmeeting this season bids fair to be one of the largest and most interesting of those which have been held annually here for some years past. The arrangements are under the management of R. E. Ladd of Springfield and H. Munger of Chicopee Falls. Tents are yet going up rapidly, and the sound of the axe and hammer has mingled with the songs and prayers of those who had previously perfected their arrangements for meetings. Among the tents now standing I notice the following:—The large tent of the Springfield Second Advent society, which will accommodate about fifty individuals, and the family tents of Mr. Ladd, Mrs. Bogardus and Mr. Swetland; also tents from Portsmouth, N. H., with a company of sixty, Hartford, Blandford, North Adams, South Reading, South Wilbraham, New Bedford, Worcester, Three Rivers, Palmer Depot, Thorndike, Boston, Salem, Thompsonville, Scitico, Warehouse Point, Danielsonville, Ellington, Ct., Peacedale, Spaulding, Providence, River Point, R. I., and several large victualing tents. H. D. King of Springfield has two large ovens on the ground, and is supplying all kinds of pies, cakes and biscuits in first rate style.

Yesterday afternoon the first discourse was delivered from the stand by Elder Ludington from Luke 22: 35. His theme was the providential care of God over his servants. In the evening, Elder C. Goodrich delivered a discourse from 1 Cor. 15: 58, upon christian steadfastness.

The heavy shower of last night did not seem to dampen the religious zeal, the tents being impervious to the rain; and to-day about noon the sun came out and dried and cheered this temporary city encamped on the banks of the Chicopee. There were three sermons this morning. Henry Pratt spoke in the Springfield tent, Prof. Hudson in the Boston tent, and Dr. Fox in the Warehouse Point tent. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon, three or four hundred occupied the seats in the front of the speaker's stand, and were addressed by Elder J. S. White of East Boston, from 1 Cor. 15: 24–25. A large number of weary pilgrims to this modern shrine of Second Adventism were seen reclining in the open tents during the services.

The arrivals by the trains are quite numerous and there is a good deal of friendly greeting. There are twenty or thirty preachers now on the ground, among whom I notice a powerfully built Narraganset Indian,—Peter Noka, from Rhode Island, who once stood at the helm of a vessel bound for California, while rounding Cape Horn, for four nights and five days in succession, only leaving his post once for a few minutes, and saving the ship by his herculean efforts, when no other man on board could guide the vessel through the furious storm. He makes the woods ring with shouts that would have astonished his ancestors.

The meeting, though called a Second Advent campmeeting, does not appear to be so much as formerly of that class which are famous for figuring in prophetic dates and fixing with definiteness the time of the end of the world. Though nearly all the Adventists think the end is at hand, most of them seem disposed to learn wisdom from the experience of the past, and so enter with more caution where "angels fear to tread," and thus avoid some of the errors and excesses which have heretofore characterized their course. J. V. Himes, editor of the Boston Quarterly, called the "Voice of the Prophets," is here, however, with books and papers, and fixes the end of the world between the years 1866 and 1868.

There seems to be a large preponderance of the fair sex on the ground, some of whom wear a sort of cross between the ordinary dress and the Bloomer costume. The women trip about in their pantalets with as much freedom as a school-girl does in hers. One of them gives the following reasons for her dress: "1st, It is healthy; 2d, It is convenient; 3d, It's nobody's business." Everything has been very orderly thus far; whenever a drunken man comes on the ground, he is immediately warned off.

Thursday Morning.

One elder, who arrived last evening from a distance, met with an extraordinary reception. He was caught in the stalwart arms of Indians and negroes, embraced, and then handed over to the sisters, who kissed him in turn as fondly as though he had been a darling child. At 7 o'clock Eld. S. S. Brewer preached from the stand for an hour, from 1 Peter 2: 19. From 2 to 10 o'clock the woods rang with the sound of prayer and singing, when the bell was rung and all retired to the tents, and quiet reigned till 5 o'clock this morning, when the bell sounded the note for getting up.

Friday, at 2 o'clock, Elder F. H. Berick will preach on the fulfillment of the prophecies, from Daniel 11, and after services a number will be baptized in the Chicopee river.

All the barns, sheds and old houses in this vicinity are nightly taken possession of by an amalgam of white and black, of both sexes. At [illegible], a morning or two since, had occasion to go to his barn early to feed his horses. While in the act of lifting a fork-full of hay, he was suddenly startled by the cries of a huge negro, who rolled out of the hay, having been pricked in the foot by the fork."

The following is their closing notice of it:—

"The Millerite campmeeting which opened with such dampened zeal at North Wilbraham last week, closed brilliantly and under favoring skies on Sunday. Fifty-three tents were erected before the close of the week, many of the western states and eastern cities being represented, and on Sunday several thousand visitors were upon the grounds. Every horse and vehicle in Springfield and other places surrounding were engaged on Saturday, and on Sunday the roads to and from the encampment were lined with visitors. Friday night and Saturday morning the sharpest rains of the week poured down, which confined the folks and preaching inside the tents, and drove home a large delegation of delicate probationists on the Saturday morning train east. But at noon the sun poured down its warmest rays, the woods rang with prayer and song, and all seemed thankful for the cloudless skies which had at length favored their encampment. At a love feast, on Thursday, a hundred and forty professed their faith in forty-five minutes, and on Friday a hundred and twenty-nine spoke in half an hour, and seven were baptized in the Chicopee river. While there was no preaching at the stand, prominent elders from different places delivered impromptu discourses in the neighboring tents, and the younger ones joined in singing and prayers about the grove. This was the largest meeting ever held by the Adventists, and considering the unfavorable weather throughout the week, it has been remarkably successful and gratifying. The tents will be taken down to-day, and the masses leave for their respective homes, to meet again at the same place one year from date."

The following is from the Boston Daily Traveller:—

Wilbraham, Aug. 21st.

The stillness of this pleasant grove is again broken by the exercises and busy stir usually attending a campmeeting. This meeting is held in a delightful spot, shaded by tall forest trees, on an eminence overlooking the Chickopee river, and a large extent of country. This denomination have held meetings here, and in this vicinity, for fifteen years, with two exceptions.

The attendance has been gradually increasing, and the meeting this year bids fair to be larger than any one ever held on this ground. There are now erected thirty tents, and ten preachers are present, among whom are many of the pioneers of this faith:—Eld. Miles Grant, editor of the "World's Crisis," Boston, H. L. Hastings, J. Couch, F. A. Berick, J. V. Himes, M. Batchelor, S. G. Mathewson, and many others from the New England, Middle and Western States.

The preaching relates to the prophecies, more than is usually heard at the Methodist meetings.

They appear to be very well satisfied with their views of Scripture; and their social meetings are characterized by simplicity and earnestness. They speak with much confidence relative to the second coming of Christ, as an event near at hand. We have heard nothing said as to any definite time for the event; but judge from their mode of expression, that they consider the present political movements in Europe, especially in Italy, Turkey, and Syria, as fulfilling the last features in prophecy that are to transpire before the end of the Christian dispensation.

Thus far the order of the meeting has been excellent. We learn that these meetings are not disturbed by the disorderly, as many such gatherings have been in former days. They have no police or watchmen, because they find no use for their services. We were somewhat surprised to learn this fact. Hiram Munger, a man of noted experience in the management of camp meetings, has the general superintendence of the ground.

Monday evening they held their first religious services, which consisted in a lively prayer meeting. They appeared to be quite animated with the idea that their earthly pilgrimage was nearly ended. The meeting is to continue till next Monday; a daily report of which we will endeavor to forward. The Methodists will also commence their campmeeting a short distance from here next week."

Wilbraham, Aug. 22.

"We have watched the progress of this meeting with considerable interest, from the fact that this is the general campmeeting of this people. On this account, we hope to be able to give your readers a tolerably correct view of the sentiments and character of the Second Advent denomination, which now seems to be a permanent sect. We learn that they number some fifty thousand in their membership, including about six hundred preachers, in the United States and Canadas, and they claim that their numbers are continually increasing.

We have not yet heard any preaching on their peculiar views, but hope to be able to present something of this kind in our next. Their conference and prayer meetings are quite lively and interesting; not differing materially from the Methodist meetings of a similar kind, excepting that they very frequently speak of the second coming of Christ. We judged from what we heard that some had been recently converted.

The singing really sounded very sweetly in this pleasant tented grove. Their preaching thus far has been of a practical nature, urging a pure life as absolutely essential to salvation.

There are now between twenty and thirty preachers on the ground, and others are expected.

Several of the African and American races are present who are very earnest in their devotional exercises. Most of them are good singers and sing their own peculiar songs with great animation.

The encampment was visited with a heavy rain last night, which kept many from sleep, besides wetting their camp furniture; but they seem to sing the sweeter for it this morning. They are certainly a "peculiar people," and apparently "zealous of good works." We are anticipating scenes of greater interest before the close of the encampment."

Wilbraham, Aug 23.

"The meeting is progressing finely, we should think, judging from what we have seen and heard. On account of the rain Tuesday night, the seats were so damp yesterday morning that the preaching was in three different tents. We listened to an interesting discourse from Prof. C. F. Hudson, in the Boston tent. He is known to the public as the author of "Debt and Grace," or "Life only through Christ," which is creating considerable sensation in the theological world.

He remarked that there are two classes of men, one who endeavor to point out the amount of differences between denominations, and another which shows their resemblances. He chose to take the latter course, and try to promote a harmony of action among all the followers of Christ, though they might differ on some points of doctrine.

In the Springfield tent, Elder H. Pratt preached on the signs of the times, showing that they indicate the second coming of Christ as an event near at hand. He was followed by interesting remarks from Elder J. V. Himes of Boston.

We learned that the preaching in the other tent was on the love of Christ and was well calculated to lead men to the Savior.

In the afternoon, Elder J. S. White, pastor of the church in East Boston, delivered an able discourse, showing the work of Christ in the plan of redemption. At its close we could not help admitting that this people are emphatically Bible men. They assume the doctrine of the Scriptures is expressed in literal language, and hence easy to be understood. Taking that stand-point, their position appears to be well sustained. Indeed, they always seem to have a text of Scripture always at hand to answer all inquiries.

Elder White claimed that Adam was mortal, and consequently so were all his posterity; and that Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel, and that it is put on at the resurrection of the dead, and that all are perished if there is no resurrection. In proof of this he quoted 1st Cor. 15: 12, 18. He also claimed that the Bible teaches the total destruction of the wicked subsequent to the judgment. We find that this people generally believe in the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked. They speak with great confidence relative to these points. Whoever attempts to controvert them should be well posted in the Scriptures.

Mere opinions of men, commentaries, and decisions of councils, produce but little effect upon their minds. They demand a 'Thus saith the Lord,' before they will yield. It is evident that the doctrine they preach is being believed by many good men and women. We were pleased in finding so much christian courtesy among this people toward those who do not agree with them in all their views. If the truth has been spoken of this people in former times, touching the denunciatory spirit they have manifested toward other denominations, we think they have made a decided improvement.

Quite a number of the sisters are dressed in the "American costume," which appears very appropriate for the camp ground. They have quite a modest look, and are certainly more convenient for walking in the woods. Thus far, everything has passed pleasantly, and most excellent order prevails."

For the Crisis.

Lost and Found.

The Wilbraham meeting this year was the best ever held on that spot, all things considered. Much former prejudice was lost that will never be found. Many of those little one-side issues were lost, or thrown away. Good so far—no mourning for the loss of those things. But when I found myself alone on the ground, at four o'clock, looking at the deserted little city, I felt greatly the loss of the saints that had for the week past made the woods ring with their songs of praise to God. Now they were all gone in different directions, never to come together again until summoned to judgment. These reflections wrought up the foundations of a living soul.

After getting composed, I commenced looking up the little things our brethren in their hurry forgot to take, which were as follows: a box of wet clothes; a green shawl; two bed quilts; two pairs of spectacles; a box of strengthening plaster; some dozen other little articles, such as cheap veils, cotton handkerchiefs, etc. The owners of the above can have them by calling on my wife at Chicopee Falls in my absence.

Hiram Munger.

For the Crisis.

"Reasons for my Hope."

Through the kindness of Bro. Hastings, I have been enabled to circulate one hundred copies of the above work. Canada is at all times a hard field to work, but I have not found much difficulty in getting people to read the book of which I speak. As an encouragement to the Bro. who penned it, I would say, that every reader, as far as I know, is delighted with "Reasons." Some who held opposite views, were led to consider and study prophecy, and one infidel remarked that it was "a good book." Two of my copies went in the ship "Melita" to London, England, and the rest are pretty generally distributed in different parts of the province. They will all go on speaking words of warning and encouragement, till the great day come, and then may Bro. H. and every reader meet in glory.

Jas. Byrne.

Hamilton, C. W.

For the Crisis.

Harmony Wanted.—If God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost are three in one, will some one, through the Crisis, reconcile this fact with Jude 12: 10; also with Heb. 2d chapter?

C. G. Carter.

Our passions are like convulsion fits, which, though they make us stronger for the time, leave us the weaker after.

INDEX TO VOLUME XI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A request....10
Above, before, etc....12
A handful of gleanings....10
Asbestos....12
Answer to prayer....17
Awake....17
A demonstration, etc....21
A sermon on hell....24
Asbestos again....24
A new tract....26
A sermon....33
Acknowledgment....34
A happy family....43
Art of being polite....46
A few historical facts....57
A glorious prospect....60
A correction....63
A whirlwind....64
All but the last....64
A few questions....73
A changed island....73
An inquiry....74
A dialogue....76
And then....76
A desideratum....78, 84, 88, 92
Actions speak, etc....84
Answer to an inquiry....85
A few more thoughts, etc....89
A brief dialogue....92
An appeal to the brethren east....93
A picture of the times....98
A chronicle of years, from creation, etc....99
A word of W....104
Artificial flowers....104
All for dignity....104
A bad habit for a mother....104
Born again....13
Be careful....18
But they are not graved, etc....53
Brethren....5
Baptism of the Holy Ghost....66
Bible clerks....72
Bible vs. poetry....88
Brief sayings....92
Conference at Earlville....10
Curious etymologies....16
Common experience....16
Correction....18
Conference in Augusta....30
Christ our life....30, 47
Counting the cost....34
Christian growth....36
Christian treasury....44
Co-operation....60
Contentedness....60
Circumspection....60
Controversy, etc....62
Confidence in God....64
Christian honor....85
Convention at Providence....86
Controlling the inclination....89
Condition in Utah....92
Contrast, etc....74
Campmeeting in Maine....90
Controversial....96
Christians, are you led by the Spirit of Christ?....93
Come and see....94
Come to Jesus....96
"Come" and "go," or Preaching, etc....97
Can you believe....97
Dying words....16
Dunning for credit....37
Doing good....40, 58
Defining my position....41
Dialogue....45
Divine goodness....53
Does death kill?....54, 69
Difference....60
Do the Scriptures recognize social prayer?....73
Decline of Judaism....80
Did Christ create all things?....88
Effect of faith....6
Eld. Grant's tour in C. E....7
Eternity....14
Existing powers....14
Extracts from "preachings"....16
Example....25
Epistle....40
Extracts from Bothe....68
Extract from Beecher....84
Faithful unto death....2
Faint, yet pursuing....20
Facts....48
Further expenses....69
For the men....66
Franklin's sermon....64
Family worship....64
Forbear....71
Family prayer....76
Fate of the Apostles....88
First things....93
Golden bits....13
God a spirit....14
Go, work....18
God never perplexed....22
Good tidings....36
Give me light....48
God's power....64
Gentility....88
Garibaldi....89
Go to the campmeeting....90
"Go, work in my vineyard"....97
Godly sorrow....100
Highways and hedges....3
Harmony wanted....31
Helps and hindrances to faith....33
Holy Spirit....68
Hindoo literature....68
Honor due to Messiah....61
Hudson and Cobb's discussion....82
He died rich....78
He went away sorrowful....81
Hints to mothers and daughters....19
Harmony wanted....102
Immortality....4, 8
Interesting conversation....12
In Rochester again....12
I would not live alway....22
It is only his way....24
In the day....32
Immateriality....6, 33
I am weary....41
Idem Fact....44
Inspiration of the Bible....56
Irrepressible conflict....57
If a man die....61
Is God's will our will?....64
Idleness....69
It is only a prayer meeting....73
Is Sunday a Sabbath?....74
Inquiry answered....76
Important to sick ministers....84
Immortality triumphant....88
"I desire to be a christian"....10[illegible]
Journal paragraphs....13
Journey west....64
Jerusalem by moonlight....36
Living testimony....22
Leaves from note book....4, 8
Light ahead....18
Links of truth....37
Live for life....40
Looking glass....41
Losses by religion....52
Loss of ocean steamers....58
Letter to the church....61
Love supreme....70
Living devotion....72
Let us reason together....89
Long sermons....18
Letter....26
Letter from E. B....39
Lost and found....102
Man in death unconscious....3
Moral worth....17
Maine missionary fund....46
My longing heart, etc....72
Matt. 10: 28....8
Man and his savior....92
Moral measurement....25
My new book....46
Materiality....53
Maine conference....90
Making every day happy....76
Modern preachers....48
Maxims of Washington....104
Notes by the way....19
Nearing deliverance....20
Notes by the way....24, 29, 82, 57
Notice....34
New book....41
New Hampshire conference....42, 72
None but Christ....64
Nature....76
Notice of J. V. H....90
" to brethren in Levant....90
" books, etc....90
Night and morning....67
Odd place for larks' nest....13
Our thoughts....24
Open the pew door....36
On the Son of God....41
One dollar....51
Our paper....67
One word to you....100
Perseverance....13
Pre-existence....18
Praying and living....26
Perseverance in piety....18
Philosophical miscellany....28
Proved the strong arm....23
Prayer....37
Planting, etc....40
Position on the advent....41
Prayer authorized....60
Profanity....53
[illegible]....56
Pity for your pastor....56
Passages supposed to imply immortality of the lost....61, 65, 69, 73, 80, 81
Peace in Christ....[illegible]
[illegible]
Peace....77
Preparation for the judgment....77
Parable of the ten virgins....81
Pastoral visiting....84
Pre-existence....86
Preach Christ....88
Prayer....90
Promised grace....20
Procrastination....93
Peculiarities of early preachers....104
Report of discussion at W....1
Reasons for my hope....2, 10, 14, 18, 27, 30, 42
Rich man and Lazarus....9, 13, 17, 21, 25, 29
Retraction....25
Reminiscence....29
Recipe for spiritual health....44
Report of R. I. conference....46
Revival in Scotland....52
Reasons....54, 74
Richard Baxter....57
Resurrection....89
Report of the R. I. State Conference, etc....98
Reasons for my hope....102
Singular recovery, etc....4
Spiritualism abandoned....6
Saving faith....10
Sketch of labors....16
Sketch of travels....43
Sleep of the dead....29
Silence in nature....40
Spring....43
Singular coincidence....50
Short sermons....53
Sweet conversation....56
Subduing of passions....60
Signs of the times....60
Silence at home....60
Satan....64
Shower of stones....65
Spiritualism....72
Sovereignty of God....73
Swine's flesh....76
Second thoughts....88
Stray thoughts arrested....89
Sword of the Spirit....25
Shimeall's chronology....40
Swearing....96
Sympathy....97
Sanctuary [illegible]....100
Suggestions....100
The nature of Jesus....1, 5, 9
The last witness....4, 6
" anointed of God....6
" christian's hope....12, 16
" return of our Lord....13, 20
" need of reformation....15
" past illustrated....16
Two kinds of eternal life....18
Time of the end....19, 21
Trust in God....20
Testimony of a christian life....21
The sleeping church....21
" creeds of the world....22
Tract Fund for the West....24, 26, 42, 62, 94
The essential oneness....24
" escape....26
" seventh day....29
" kingdom at hand....29
" man for the times....40
" dead and the heart....31
Thoughts on my birthday....32
The glory-filled earth....31
" stumbling of Israel....33, 37
" great High Priest....36
" London merchant....36
" kindred of Christ....37
" Lord cometh....39
" Grant and Loveland discussion....42, 45, 50, 54, 58, 62, 66, 70
" angels that sinned....44
" night watch....45
" lady and robber....48
" men we need....48
" Lord's anointed....49, 101
" anointed of God....50
To the friends of truth....50
The dangerous tendency of a bad heart....52
" new birth....52
" preparation....52
" seventh trumpet....53
" blessed life....54
Theology of the day....53
The Light Ship....54, 74, 90
Thoughts on Rev. 7: 9....56
Turkish empire....56
The burning boat....60
" seventh vial....60
" resurrection of the body....60
" day of trouble....62
Theodore Parker's library....62
The World's Crisis....64
There is another man....64
The religion of sentiment....65
" word spoken by angels....69
" book of Job....72
" new birth....72
" Israelite indeed....74
" Babylonish garment....76
" wife's fidelity....76
" wilful king....77
" modern history of Universalism....79
" boy preacher of La....80
" doom of the world....89
" new birth....85
" Lord's anointed....85
" grant of Justinian....86
To-morrow....87
The political christian....89
To a number....89
The great controversy....91
Twilight musings....92
The tenth commandment....92
Trial of our faith....92
The great chart....15
Travels and labors....93
The trial of faith....93
" prayer of faith....96
" great heresy....96
1866-68....18
1867....41
The Light Ship....98
" prayer meeting....100
" church thermometer....100
To preachers' wives....104
The papacy....101
The art of not quarrelling....104
Useful knowledge....66
Uncertain what to do....88
Universalist tract....100, 101
Voice of the Church....28
When at Amboy....4
Waiting for Christ....10
" the Lord....15
We pass for what we are....24
Who said all that?....24
Wesley and his preachers....36
Words....40
Why so sad?....57
Why don't God make it morning?....68
What makes a man?....68
Words on fire....68
Words to the winners of souls....80
Warm up prayer meetings....88
Walk with Jesus....92
Wickedness in the world....96
What is true religion?....101
Wycliffe....101
"What must be done?"....104
What is truth?....104
1 Tim. 5: 24....25

HYGIENE.

A few suggestions....16
Art of taking breath....16
Attention to the feet....24
A valuable secret....32
Bread made of unbolted meal....8
Beecher on health....80
Beards....104
Cleanliness....24, 80
Costume for children....40
Cure for the lockjaw....56
Cold feet....82
Cure for ingrowing nails....96
Directions to restore the drowned....64
Eating....32
Early breakfast....40
Health....56
Influence of dietetic habits....16
Living on excitement....96
Memory as affected by disease....88
Night air....72
Panacea....40
Poisonous rooms....64
Reform....96
Scalds....32
Salt eating....48
Specific for the suffering....72
Sleeping under the clothes....80
Sunlight in houses....88
Saleratus and soda....104
Smoking a cause of insanity....104
The beard....24
" best hair wash....24
To cure hoarseness....56
To invalids....64
Too bad!....64
Throat and lungs....68
Take time to sleep....72
To prevent sunstroke....88
The daily baptism....96
Tobacco....104
To avoid the danger of lightning....104
Unhealthy positions....80
Value of fresh air....104
Why children die....8

READING FOR YOUTH.

A christian boy's influence....44
A word to the little folks....68
A pig for a school....[illegible]
[illegible]
Coming to Jesus....100
Drowning the squirrel....76
Evil company....68
Fine clothes....76
Forgiveness....100
Good for nothing....4
Give us this day, etc....84
Hold on, boys....84
It is only a cent....92
I did as the rest did....93
"I don't love you now, mother"....100
Love conquers....28
Little Frank....60
Our order book....68
Praying with little children....68
Speak to the stranger....20
Saying prayer....28
The struggle and victory....4
" mother's faith....12
" Bible....20
" first deception....32
" holy child Jesus....44
" child's prayer meeting....52
" boy that would not get mad....76
" idle christian....84
Valuable secret....4
What Emily did....36
Wild flowers....60

POETRY.

Act well your part....5
At evening time, etc....13
A mother's love....20
All we like sheep....24
All in all....36
A hymn....36
A poetical sermon....65, 69
A little longer....76
Adieu....49
"At evening time it shall be light"....100
Be good....63
Babe of Bethlehem....44
Borne with every breeze....60
Come to Jesus....28
Cometh a blessing down....48
Child's hymn....53
Contemplation....68
Christian forgiveness....92
Dedicated to believers....4
Dies iræ....64
Day dawn....100
Evening devotion....89
Evening prayer....101
Friendship....56
Farewell....17
Faint, yet pursuing....44
Give me Jesus....25
God unchangeable....84
Hymn....93
Hope and despondency....77
I'm weary....16
I would be there....29
Influence....24
I've trodden, etc....52
I am weary....68
Joyful....5
Little spots....1
Lines....8
Light and darkness....28
Little child's prayer....34
Look on the bright side....56
Lines of gladness....60
Lord, be thou my helper....64
Lines....72
Look to Jesus....92
Lines of truth....76
"Let us help one another"....104
My Shepherd....4
Morning worship....80
My peace....96
Not very far....12
Not mine, but thine....100
Our Father....53
Pray without ceasing....21
Preludes by the way....33
Praise to God acceptable....37
Resolutions....61
Reminiscence of '54....85
Submission....40
Speak kindly....41
Song....48
Sweet thoughts....81
The city of gold....1
That beautiful land....9
The swiftness of time....17
" mother....25
To the christian female....32
The Lord's prayer....32
" prayer of the church....37
" Bridegroom cometh....40
Time of life....44
Twilight musings....48
The world for sale....52
" true rule....53
" resurrection....56
" promise claimed....57
" sinner's inquiry....61
" heir of the crown....73
" watcher....76
" eternal God....88
" Morning Call....97
Truth will triumph at the last....104
Unity....88
We'll sing....73
What do the birds say?....53
What of the night?....52
We shall meet....45
Waking thoughts....44
What shall I do?....96
We would see Jesus....104

EDITORIAL.

A chance to do good....6
A fast....14, 94
A discussion....14
Acceptance of a challenge....14
Anti-tobacco Journal....14
Are all men immortal?....38
American anti-tobacco society....54
Answers....70
Another letter from abroad....78
Anti-tobacco publications....82
A fast....90
Aurora Borealis....98
A new christology....98
Barbarism of slavery....62
Behold, I come as a thief....78
Boston....82
Castleton....6, 50, 66, 70, 98
Cassell's Bible....30
Christ our life....54, 62
Convalescent....46
Choice of pearls....58
Conversation and reading....66
Campmeeting items....90
Change times and laws....90
Circus ministers....90
Castleton and Hydeville....38
Campmeetings....98
Discussion at Plymouth....22
Destruction of the wicked....30, 34
Discussion at Bridgeport....34
Dying words of J. Randolph....34
Discussion with Dr. Lyon....42
Diary notes....54
Earthly gods....18
Evil spirits....42
Eternal consciousness....50
Editorial....54, 62
Errata....66
Great trouble....30
Given up....34
Hard times....86
Important discussion....34
Italy....38
Indulgencies....102
Jesus is here already....42
Light advancing....26
Lovest thou me?....38
Man his own judge....62
New volume....2
Notes of travel....46
Napoleon III....70
New Bedford....82
Napoleon and the Pope....94
Our conference....22
Pilgrim notes....18
Political spiritualism....42
Preachers' Aid Society....90
Pre-existence....26
Plainfield meeting....74
Queries....36, 82, 46, 102
Questions....70
Relief for the distressed....2, 6, 10, 14, 18, 22, 26, 30, 34, 38, 42
Revival in Castleton....30
Railroads to campmeeting....34
Reasons for my hope....34
Revival in Hydeville....38
Rom. 4: 17....102
State of Europe....30, 58
Sayings of spirits....66
Sunday schools....62
Stirring events....66
Sandy Hill....74
Sectarian theology....78
Strip him....86
Signs of the times....90
Shimeall's chronology....98
Truth's triumph....2, 14, 18
The revival in Castleton....10
" Boston conference....22
" opposition....26
" [illegible]....30
" battle summer....38
Temptation....50
The age of fraud....50
" destruction of the wicked....54, 58, 62, 66
Theodore Parker....62
The kingdom of heaven....70
" fourth of July....74
" state of Europe....74
" age of corruption....78
" war in Syria....78, 90
To our subscribers....82
The law of conscience....82
" personal epoch....86
" pope's troubles....90
" Scripture cannot be broken....94
" end is come....94
" Pharisees....94
" second death....94
" state of Europe....98
" close of the volume....102
Voice of the Prophets....34, 50, 78
Visit to the Indians....58
Welcome's Treatise....18
Wine drinking....64
Wayside Notes....90
Wilbraham campmeeting....94, 102

LETTERS.

Wm. McCulloch 7, C E Gierlow 11, L A Wheeler, 11, E S Fenn 11, A N Seymour 11, L G—— 11, M Mathews 11, M R Phettepiace 14, I Damman 14, J H Bartlett 14, Methodist preacher 19, J A Sober 19, H J Brown 19, L Reimer 19, J A Sober 23, J M Stephenson 23, Benj. Spaulding 26, 35, 46, 51, 59, 71, 90, Wm. Sheldon 27, Wm. Ongley 26, E Grant 26, R V Lyon 27, 31, 74, J Morrison 27, M Batchelor 31, Eld. Boutell 31, J Wilson 31, C H Sutton 31, F M Berry 31, M A B 31, M Mathews 34, L P Judson 35, W W Boyden 35, E R Southwick 35, C Tuller 38, H H Janes 38, Jno. McKee 38, S Clark 43, J A Sober 43, R Willard 46, R York 47, F Douglas 47, W H Hull 47, Bro. George 51, M C—— 51, L Boutell 55, B P Manning 59, J T Ongley 59, J Blain 63, M Chandler 63, A Sober 63, S A Elmore 63, R H Clark 66, M A Pote 66, R Chown 71, R Bush 74, C C Stevens 74, B L Clark 74, J C Gilman 75, P Perham 75, B P Manning 79, S N Kent 79, L James 79, N S Latimer 79, S S Brewer 82, F Burr 82, M Lamprey 82, N M Henry 82, L A Wheeler 83, J Parry 83, W A Fenn 86, S S Brewer 86, J Blain 87, R E Ladd 90, W Sheldon 91, L N C 91, J B Fitch 91, P Axe 91, L P Judson 94, A E 94, I W Smith 94, S M Janes 95, Eld. M Batchelor 96, S G Mathewson 98, Eld. L Boutell 99, A S Servis 102, P Alling 102, Geo. Dillabaugh 102, R V Lyon 102.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Taylor 3, D Longstaff 7, H W Yoger 11, C A Sisser 15, C M Young 19, J Boutell 19, B Dammon 19, H D Sargent 19, J Clark 19, P Farnham 23, L A Hill 23, Geo. Welch 23, J W Butler 27, F J Shepherd 27, Geo. Warren 27, J P Garland 27, J W Heath 31, W A Armstrong 31, H L Goodrich 31, L Parker 35, H E Janes 35, W Wilton 35, W D Tuller 35, D Tyler 35, F Wait 43, R B Davis 43, D Prophet 43, E F Steele 47, R Rich 47, L Vaugh 47, V Russel 47, W G Miller 51, W W B Dixon 51, E E Dixon 51, P West 55, S Munger 55, E Potter 59, A W Wetherell 59, M A Brooks 67, I Gates 75, N Shumway 79, E B Grant 79, C A Chase 79, E Young 83, H S Taylor 95, Sr. Powell 95, A Sage 103, G Bacon 103, S N Streeter 103.

Married.

At Wallingford, Ct., Aug. 25th, by Elder L. S Ludington, Mr EDWARD HILL and Mrs. MARY A. IVES, both of Wallingford.

Obituary Notices.

Died suddenly, in Southbridge, Mass., July 29th, 1860, SCOTTO N. STREETER, son of Nathan Streeter and wife, aged one year and three months.

Thus in an unexpected hour these parents, grandparents and friends, were called to bitter weeping on account of the loss of their promising little one. Monday, 30th, we attended the funeral service. A large assemblage of relatives and friends came together to sympathize with the afflicted family.

We took occasion to comfort the mourners with the fact that there would be a resurrection from the dead, when Scotto would live again. May this sad bereavement be so improved by the afflicted, that they may be fully prepared to meet where there will be no more death. L. BOUTELL.

Died, in Charlton, Worcester Co., Mass., July 9th, 1860, Mr. GEORGE BACON, aged ninety-nine.

He was confined to his bed several weeks entirely helpless, and most of the time was speechless. Sometimes could speak in a low whisper so as to be understood. He has been inclined to consumptive habits for several years. He professed to be a lover of Christ some forty or fifty years ago, and joined the Congregationalists. He had never removed his relation in the church, but has been a firm believer in the soon coming kingdom ever since '43. He has since taken great interest in reading advent papers, as well as the Bible, and especially the words of Christ concerning his coming, and what should take place before his coming. But he has gone to rest till the last loud trump shall sound. He left two daughters and two sons-in-law to mourn his absence. JOHN MITCHEL.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in the city of Hartford, Ct., our beloved Bro. ALVAN SAGE, aged sixty seven years.

He has left an affectionate companion and family to mourn the loss of one of the kindest of husbands and best of fathers. He died the 7th of July, and was laid in his resting place the 9th of July, where he awaits the return of the Life-giver, when that body, sown in weakness, shall be raised in power, and that mortal shall put on immortality. Our brother attended public worship the last Sunday in Oct., 1859; since that period, he gradually became enfeebled, until paralysis terminated his existence. A few weeks before his death he remarked to his wife, "I have been passing through a struggle. But now, through grace, I have gained the victory. I can now give you and my dear family into the hands of Him who has promised to be the widow's God. I can say farewell to my christian association—my dear brethren and sisters whom I dearly love."

For some weeks before his death he lost the power of articulation, and could only signify his assent by a gentle pressure of the hand. The day previous to his death, when questioned whether he was conscious of his approaching death, and whether the Savior was precious, signified the same with a sweet, serene expression of his countenance, and thus calmly fell asleep in Jesus. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

He attended the last campmeeting at Collinsville, and there experienced a rich manifestation of the Comforter. He often referred to that time and place. Some who read this will doubtless remember that aged disciple with smiling face and tremulous voice, pouring forth his praise to God through our Lord Jesus, for grace abounding to the chief of sinners.

Our Bro. was a firm believer in the unconscious state of the dead, and died in the faith that he should not awake, nor be raised out of his sleep, until the heavens be no more. The funeral services were attended by Bro. M. Grant. O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus. S. S. BREWER.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Austria is said to have abandoned the idea of retaining Venetia, as guaranteed by Germany. Garibaldi is expected to attack Venice. Austria will maintain the conflict alone against all Italy. Prussia will remain neutral while the other powers don't interfere.

Latest Genoa papers publish dispatches announcing the unopposed disembarkation of Garibaldi, with 8000 men, near Reggio, on the night of the 10th. The same dispatches report the evacuation of the fortress of Scylla by the Neapolitans, but both are doubtful.

A dispatch from Trieste says it was believed there that Garibaldi intends to attack Austria, not on the Venetian but on the Croatian coast, by attempting a disembarkation at Fiume. The Austrian authorities will first endeavor to prepare for revolution in Crotia and Hungary before proceeding to Venetia. All the coasts are rigorously watched by imperial cruisers.

Garibaldi is reported to have had a conference with the revolutionary Neapolitan leaders. Naples is proclaimed to be in a state of siege.

According to a communication from Vienna, active negotiations are going on between the Courts of Vienna and Rome on the subject of the eventuality of an invasion of the Pontifical States by Garibaldi. The Duke of Modena has promised in that case to unite his troops to the Papal army.

Volunteers to the standard of Garibaldi are so numerous as to seriously embarass him, and he has requested that no more be sent at present.

A recent interview between the Kings of Denmark and Sweden gave rise to the report that the two Scandinavian Kingdoms intended to form an alliance against Germany.

Constantinople advices confirm the discovery of a conspiracy against the life of the Grand Vizier. Several individuals of high standing are compromised. The sale of gunpowder is prohibited at Constantinople.

Garibaldi, according to a correspondent writing from Milan, June 27th, contemplates a feat which will throw all his previous exploits in the shade. This is no more than a sudden invasion of the States of the Church by sea, and a march upon Rome. It is thought that, in such an event, the Pope will have to seek refuge in Austria. A French armorer has sent to Garibaldi a gift of a coat of mail, dagger proof and bullet proof. Its workmanship is perfect, and it is valued at upwards of five thousand francs. It may be worn under the uniform like a shirt, for it is extremely flexible, light and portable.

Baron Rothschild, the great Jew banker, is very intimate with Napoleon, is seen arm in arm with him almost every day, and sits at his right hand at public dinners. The political gossips say that the baron is to be made king of Jerusalem, under the protection of France, "for a consideration." A Jew ruling in Palestine would be a notable event, and would answer for a fulfillment of several prophetic texts.

NAPLES AND SICILY.

The Compt of Syracuse, uncle of the King of Naples, has written a letter to Prince Carignan, in which he announces his adhesion to the principle of Italian unity, and closes it with the words, "Hail, Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy."

Garibaldi continued his preparations for a descent on the main land.

The ambassadors at Naples were transferring their families to the steamers in the harbor.

Garibaldi volunteers in Calabria were organizing a revolution in the mountains.

Pending fresh events in Italy, and especially renewed action on the part of Garibaldi, rumors are circulated and conjectures indulged in. Of the former the latest that has reached me is that Col. Franconniere, aide-de-camp to Prince Napoleon, who is now in Turin, was bearer of an autograph letter from the French Emperor to Victor Emmanuel, warning him to be careful what he did, for that if he provoked a collision with Austria, he must not reckon on assistance from France, which Power, bound by the treaty of Zurich, would not interfere on his behalf.

The Paris correspondent of the Allemeine Zeitung of the 10th, says that the Pope has written a most melancholy letter to the Cardinal in France. He looks upon all as lost, and although convinced that he shall die by the bullet of an assassin, he declares he will not quit Rome under any condition or at any price.

The Fugitive Christians of Syria.

The following account of the removal of the surviving women and children of Deir-el-Kamar to Beirut, on board a British steamer, is from a letter of one of the officers, and gives a vivid picture of the bereavement and distress of the poor creatures:—

"When we got to the place pointed out, we saw on some hills, about two miles off the beach, crowds of women and children huddled together, apparently in great distress, and we could not make out how it was they did not come down to the beach to be taken off. So the captain sent me ashore with all the boats to bring them off. I made all the boats lay off the surf, and then landed myself, with an interpreter. I met an armed party of Druses on landing, and told them I wished to see the chief, as it appeared it was he who would not allow the people to depart. I went about two miles to a village where the chief lived. On my way up I met crowds of women and children in a fearful state of distress, but no men; they had all been killed. If I had been an angel, I could not have been more blessed; for, poor creatures, no sooner did they catch sight of my uniform, than they fell down at my feet and kissed my hands, and implored me to save them. I was quite astonished to see the number of them; instead of 200 to 300, as we heard there were, there were at least 1500, and the most horrible part was, there was hardly a man to be seen, nor a boy over 12 years old; they had all been massacred—husbands, brothers, and fathers, every one. Poor things, they seemed overjoyed to get away, and when they got to the beach I had the greatest difficulty in preventing them throwing themselves into the sea, and had to drag one or two of them out of the surf myself.

"We only had about eight boats, but these we began to load with all dispatch, every poor woman and child having to be carried through a tremendous surf to the boats. However, our blue jackets worked well and cheerfully. Some of the women and children were badly wounded. They had been wounded while clinging to their husbands and fathers when they were killed. As soon as a boat was loaded she was sent off to the ship, and the poor creatures stowed as close as they would lie on board, and then the boat was sent back. After two hours' hard work our decks were packed as close as possible, and we had room for no more. The gunboat, I must tell you, was full of fugitives from Sidon, so that she could not hold any. The sun had set, the surf was increasing fast, and two or three of our boats had been pitched bottom up on the beach, and there were still seven hundred unfortunate women and children on the beach, all footsore, and some of them had not touched any food for two or three days."

Jerusalem is now in danger, being menaced from without by three thousand Bedouin Arabs, and from within by the fanatical Moslems. The Missionaries have fled to Jaffa, and unless the Governor proves to be a better man than his colleagues, Jerusalem will be laid low. The streets of Beirut were almost deserted, and the town become as silent as a grave yard. Every trunk is packed ready to embark at a moment's notice, whenever their respective Consuls shall bid them go. Business ceased long ago, and shopping is at an end for the present.

It is generally believed that the French will insist upon occupying Syria immediately, and many think that the last hours of the "sick man" have come. One thing, and only one thing, is certain. Great changes of some kind are at hand in the East.

Thirty thousand Christian women had been sold at twenty-five piastres each, and detained in harems. The number of Christians killed in Syria is 15,000, at least. In Damascus, 8000 were slain.

Napoleon III. has given twenty-thousand Napoleons to help the Syrian Christians, who will be delighted to look upon his picture in gold.

Notices, &c.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.—The cash receipts and a portion of our book notices are unavoidably crowded out this week, owing to the index being inserted.

☞ The conference at Danielsonville, Ct., will be holden on the 26th of Sept. instead of the 6th, as noticed in a previous number.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.—Have just received of Eld H. L. Hastings from the tract fund, $33.60 of tracts. These are to be scattered free where I travel. Also a few works for sale. Thanks to the donors, and publisher. W. SHELDON.

Iowa, Minn. and Wisconsin Christian Conference.

Our fourth annual conference will be holden at Springville, Badax Co., Wis., commencing Oct. 4th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over Lord's day. Springville is about thirty miles from La Crosse (on the Mississippi river,) from which the stage runs every Tuesday and Friday, and about thirty-five from Sparta (on the Milwaukee and Lacrosse R. R.,) from which place a stage runs every Wednesday to Viroqua, only three or four miles from Springville. Strangers can inquire for Wm. A. Morse, or W. Sheldon.

P. S. W. DEYO, } Evangelists.
W. SHELDON, }

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a campmeeting in Exeter, Me., commencing Monday, Sept. 17th, and continue one week. The meeting will be holden on the old ground, near the Chamberlain meeting-house, and twenty-two miles from Bangor. As there is no stage that runs within four miles of the place, if the brethren will inform us what day or days they will be in Bangor, we will have a team there to take them to the meeting for about one half the fare in the stage.

Arrangements will be made for boarding and horse keeping on reasonable terms. We hope all who can will bring their tents and bedding with them. We expect our preaching brethren, Billings and Hemenway, and all others whom the Lord shall send. As this meeting is not designed to build up any party or sect, we hope our brethren and sisters will come with hearts full of love and zeal for God and his truth, praying that truth may prevail and good order and quietness pervade the encampment.

Circumstances are such, it is thought best to change the location of this meeting from Levant, as was noticed by Bro. Hemenway, to Exeter, Me.

D. E. IRELAND, }
H. N. PATTEN, } Committee.
H. COLE, }

Notice.

There will be a barn or grove meeting in South Pittsfield, N. H., about three miles from the village, commencing Sept. 7th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Sabbath. Elder Hiram Munger will attend and preach the word. Come, brethren, at the commencement of the meeting. Do not wait until Sunday. There will be provision made for man and beast. Brethren coming from Portsmouth will take the stage at Newmarket, Friday morning, and stop at Warren Yeattons, in Epsom. Inquire for C. S. Emerson. C. S. EMERSON.

Notice.

The Advent Chapel at West Hoosick, N. Y., will be dedicated Thursday, the 27th of Sept. Meeting to continue over the following Sunday. I and Bro. J. S. White are expected to attend, and preach the word. By request of the church. M. BATCHELOR.

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

Also, a tent meeting in Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill., near Bro. Larken Scott's, to commence Sept. 27th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday. We hope to see a general rally. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be there to preach the word.

Also, there is to be two tent meetings in Brown Co., Ill.; one at Mt. Pleasant, or Mt. Stirling, as Brn. Raymond and others may arrange, to commence Oct. 12th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday

The other at Ripley, to commence Oct. 3d, (Wednesday) at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be in attendance at all of the above named meetings and preach the word. I expect God will bless his word to the salvation of souls. I hope the brethren in the different localities will make the meetings a special subject of prayer, that there may be much good done in the name of Jesus.

MOSES CHANDLER, for the Church.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a conference in Buchanan, Mich., to commence on the evening of the 19th of Sept. and continue over Lord's day. Bro. F. H. Berick will be present to preach the word. We trust our brethren will take advantage of this opportunity. In behalf of the church,

D. R. MANSFIELD.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses. We shall have a goodly assortment at the Wilbraham campmeeting, if the Lord will.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the Grove near the Anderson School-house, 2 1-2 miles south-west of Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, Sept. 23d, commencing at 10 o'clock.

Sept. 24th, 25th, 26th, in Unity, near the Centre Road Depot, on the Pittsburgh and Erie Rail Road.

Sept. 27th and 28th in the Simmon's neighborhood, one mile and a half from Jefferson, Ashtabula Co., Ohio.

Saturday evening and over Sunday, at Ashtabula, Ohio. Monday eve., Oct. 1st, at Girard, near Bro. Alton's. JOHN T. [illegible], Evangelist.

Bro. J. W. Crabtree will preach at
Sandisfield, Mass....Sept. 9th
New Britain, Ct....Sept. 16th
W. A. FENN.

I will be at Yarmouth, Me., with Bro. R. R. York, Sept. 14th, and will preach for him that evening if he desires. Also, I expect to be in West Poland, Me., Sabbath, Sept. 16th, and preach in the Free Chapel if there is no other appointment. If there should be, will Bro. Jesse Partridge make appointment for me in that section. O. R. FASSETT.

Providence permitting, I will preach from Sept. 6th to 10th in the vicinity of Barnstead, N. H.

☞ Cannot attend the grove meeting in Chichester. HIRAM MUNGER.

Bro. W. Sutherland appoints to preach at
River Point....Sept. 9th
Warwick Plains....Sept. 16th

I purpose to preach at Massena, N. Y., the second and third Sundays of Sept. M. BATCHELOR.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Portland, Me....Sunday, Sept. 9th
Frankfort Mills....Sunday, Sept. 16th

Commence a series of meetings at Dover, Me., where Bro. Lougee may appoint, Wednesday, Sept. 26th, to continue over the following Sabbath.
J. HEMENWAY.

APPOINTMENTS FOR DANIELSONVILLE, CT.
Eld. Geo. Champlin....Sept. 9th
Eld. H. F. Carpenter....Sept. 16th and 23d

The R. I. State Quarterly Conference will meet at this place Sept. 26th. We purpose continuing the public services over the following Sunday. Friends from abroad are invited to attend.
H. F. CARPENTER, Pastor.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Newfield, Ct....Sept. 9th
Litchfield Station....Sept. 11th
Camps Mills (Bro. Gunn's)....Sept. 12th
Plymouth Hollow....Sept. 16th
Wallingford....Sept. 23d
L. S. LUDINGTON.

On the second Sunday in September I will meet with Dr. Huntington and his people, and preach.
R. V LYON.

G. A. Otis and J. Pinkham, providence permitting, will be at Warner, N. H., where J. Morgan may appoint, Sept. 12th, 7 o'clock. At Bradford the 13th, and Newbury the 14th, each at 7 o'clock in the evening.

I will be with them Saturday evening, Sept. 15th, and Sunday the 16th. At Grantham, where H. Ford shall appoint. J. G. SMITH.

Sarah Higgins will preach at the New Chapel W. H. Point, Sept. 9th.
B. BANCROFT, Cor. Sec.

With God's permission I will attend meetings as follows:—
Round Pond, Me....Sept. 16th
Surry, Me....Sept. 23d
Carmel, Me., (Union Meeting-house)....Sept. 30th
THOMAS SMITH.

To Correspondents.

Eld. Jonathan Wilson's P. O. address is Shawnee, Niagara Co., N. Y.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked, between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 3-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy [illegible] per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Spotless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John P. [illegible] [illegible]

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; [illegible] per hundred.

Death not Life; or the Destruction of [illegible] postage 3 cts.

INDEX TO VOLUME XI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A request 10
Above, before, etc. 12
A handful of gleanings 10
Arbestos 12
Answer to prayer 17
Awake 17
A demonstration, etc 21
A sermon on hell 24
Asbestos gain 24
A new tract 22
A sermon 32
Acknowledgment 34
A happy family 48
Art of being polite 56
A few historical facts 57
A glorious prospect 60
A correction 62
A whirlwind 64
All but the tail 64
A few questions 73
A changed island 74
An inquiry 74
A dialogue 76
And then 76
A desideratum 78, 84, 88, 92
Across space, etc 84
Answer to an inquiry 85
A few more thoughts, etc 89
A brief dialogue 92
An appeal to the brethren east 93
A picture of the times 98
A chronicle of years, from creation, etc. 99
A word of Wo... 104
Artificial flowers 104
All for dignity 104
A bad habit for a mother 104
Born again 13
Be careful 15
But they are not graved, etc 53
Brothers 5
Baptism of the Holy Ghost 66
Bible clerks 72
Bible vs. poetry 88
Brief sayings 92
Conference at Earlville 10
Curious etymologies 15
Common experience 15
Correction 15
Conference in Augusta 30
Christ our life 30, 47
Counting the cost 33
Christian growth 36
Christian treasury 44
Co-operation 60
Contentedness 60
Circumspection 60
Controversy, etc 62
Confidence in God 64
Christian honor 85
Convention at Providence 86
Controlling the inclination 89
Condition in Utah 93
Contrast, etc. 74
Campmeeting in Maine 90
Controversies 96
Christians, are you led by the Spirit of Christ? 93
Come and see 94
Come to Jesus 96
"Come" and "go," or Preaching, etc. 97
Can you believe 97
Dying words 16
Dunning for credit 37
Doing good 40, 58
Defining my position 41
Dialogue 48
Divine goodness 53
Does death kill? 54, 69
Diffidence 60
Do the Scriptures recognize social prayer? 73
Decline of Judaism 80
Did Christ create all things? 85
Effect of faith 6
Eld. Grant's tour in C. E. 7
Eternity 13
Existing powers 14
Extracts from "preachings" 16
Example 25
Epistle 40
Extracts from Rothe 68
Extract from Beecher 84
Faithful unto death 2
Faint, yet pursuing 20
Facts 45
Further expenses 69
For the rich 66
Franklin's sermon 64
Family worship 69
Forbear 71
Family prayer 76
Fate of the Apostles 88
First things 93
Golden bits 12
God a spirit 14
Go, work 15
God never perplexed 22
Good tidings 36
Give me light 46
God's power 64
Gentility 88
Garibaldi 89
Go to the campmeeting 90
"Go, work in my vineyard" 97
Godly sorrow 100
Highways and hedges 3
Harmony wanted 31
Helps and hindrances to faith 33
Holy Spirit 58
Hindoo literature 68
Honor due to Messiah 81
Hudson and Cobb's discussion 82
He died rich 78
He went away sorrowful 81
Hints to mothers and daughters 1[illegible]
Harmony wanted 102
Immortality 4, 8
Interesting conversation 12
In Rochester again 14
I would not live always 22
It is only his way 24
In the day 32
Immateriality 6, 32
I am weary 41
Idum Fuit 44
Inspiration of the Bible 55
Irrepressible conflict 57
If a man die 61
Is God's will our will? 64
Idleness 69
It is only a prayer meeting 73
Is Sunday a Sabbath? 74
Inquiry answered 76
Important to sick ministers 84
Immortality triumphant 84
"I desire to be a christian" 10[illegible]
Journal paragraphs 12
Journey west 64
Jerusalem by moonlight 36
Living testimony 22
Leaves from note book 4, 8
Light ahead 8
Links of truth 37
Live for life 40
Looking glass 47
Losses by religion 52
Loss of ocean steamers 58
Letter to the church 61
Love supreme 70
Living devotion 72
Let us reason together 89
Long sermons 89
Letter 26
Letter from E. B. 39
Lost and found 102
Man in death unconscious 3
Moral worth 17
Maine missionary fund 46
My longing heart, etc. 72
Matt. 10: 28 8
Man and his Savior 92
Moral measurement 25
My new book 46
Materiality 68
Maine conference 90
Making every day happy 76
Modern preachers 44
Maxims of Washington 104
Notes by the way 19
Nearing deliverance 20
Notes by the way 24, 39, 82, 87
Notice 34
New book 42
New Hampshire conference 42, 72
None but Christ 64
Nature 76
Notice of J. V. H. 90
" to brethren in Levant 90
" books, etc. 43
Night and morning 57
Odd place for larks' nest 12
Our thoughts 24
Open the pew door 36
On the Son of God 65
One dollar 61
Our paper 67
One word to you 100
Perseverance 12
Pre-existence 13
Praying and living 16
Perseverance in piety 18
Philosophical miscellany 23
Proved the strong arm 26
Prayer 37
Planting, etc 40
Position on the advent 44
Prayer authorized 45
Profanity 53
Poor Jack 56
Pity for your pastor 56
Passages supposed to imply immortality of the lost 61, 65, 69, 73, 80, 81
Peace in Christ 61
Physical value of the Sabbath 64
Perfection 65
[illegible]
Peace 77
Preparation for the judgment 77
Parable of the ten virgins 81
Pastoral visiting 84
Pre-existence 86
Preach Christ 88
Prayer 90
Promised grace 20
Procrastination 93
Peculiarities of early preachers 104
Report of discussion at W 1
Reasons for my hope 2, 10, 14, 18, 27, 30, 42
Rich man and Lazarus 9, 13, 17, 21, 25, 29
Retraction 25
Reminiscence 29
Recipe for spiritual health 44
Report of R. I. conference 46
Revival in Scotland 52
Reasons 54, 74
Richard Rothe 57
Resurrection 59
Report of the R. I. St. te Conference, etc. 95
Reasons for my hope 102
Singular recovery, etc. 1
Spiritualism abandoned 6
Saving faith 10
Sketch of labors 16
Sketch of travels 42
Sleep of the dead 29
Silence in nature 40
Spring 49
Singular coincidence 50
Short sermons 53
Sweet conversation 56
Subduing of passions 60
Signs of the times 60
Silence at home 60
Selah 64
Shower of stones 65
Spiritualism 72
Sovereignty of God 73
Swine's flesh 76
Second thoughts 88
Stray thoughts arrested 89
Sword of the Spirit 40
Shimeall's chronology 45
Swearing 96
Sympathy 97
Sanctuary sins 100
Suggestions 100
The nature of Jesus 1, 5, 9
The last witness 4, 8
" anointed of God 6
" christian's hope 12, 16
" return of our Lord 13, 20
" need of reformation 15
" past illustrated 16
Two kinds of eternal life 18
Time of the end 19, 21
Trust in God 20
Testimony of a christian life 21
The sleeping church 21
" creeds of the world 23
Tract Fund for the West 24, 26, 42, 62, 94
The essential oneness 24
" escape 25
" seventh day 29
" kingdom at hand 29
" man for the times 40
" head and the heart 31
Thoughts on my birthday 32
The glory-filled earth 33
" stumbling of Israel 33, 37
" great High Priest 36
" London merchant 36
" kindred of Christ 37
" Lord cometh 39
" Grant and Loveland discussion 42, 46, 50, 54, 58, 62, 66, 70
" angels that sinned 44
" night watch 45
" lady and robber 48
" men we need 48
" Lord's anointed 49, 101
" anointed of God 50
To the friends of truth 50
The dangerous tendency of a bad heart 52
" new birth 52
" preparation 52
" seventh trumpet 53
" blessed life 53
Theology of the day 53
The Light Ship 54, 74, 90
Thoughts on Rev. 7: 9 56
Turkish empire 56
The burning boat 60
" seventh vial 60
" resurrection of the body 60
" day of trouble 62
Theodore Parker's library 62
The World's Crisis 64
There is another man 64
The religion of sentiment 65
" word spoken by angels 69
" book of Job 72
" new birth 73
" Israelite indeed 74
" Babylonish garment 76
" wife's fidelity 76
" wilful king 77
" modern history of Universalism 79
" boy preacher of La 80
" doom of the world 89
" new birth 85
" Lord's anointed 86
" grant of Justinian 86
To-morrow 87
The political christian 89
To a number 89
The great controversy 91
Twilight musings 92
The tenth command 92
Trial of our faith 92
The great chart 15
Travels and labors 93
The trial of faith 93
" prayer of faith 96
" great heresy 96
1866–68 18
1867 41
The Light Ship 98
" prayer meeting 100
" church thermometer 100
To preachers' wives 104
The papacy 101
The art of not quarrelling 104
Useful knowledge 56
Uncertain what to do 88
Universalist tract 100, 101
Voice of the Church 36
When at Amboy 2
Waiting for Christ 10
" " the Lord 16
We pass for what we are 24
Who said all that? 25
Wesley and his preachers 36
Words 40
Why so sad? 57
Why don't God make it morning? 68
What makes a man? 68
Words on fire 68
Words to the winners of souls 80
Warm up prayer meetings 88
Walk with Jesus 92
Wickedness in the world 96
What is true religion? 101
Wycliffe 101
"What must be done?" 104
What is truth?" 104
1 Tim. 5: 24. 25

HYGIENE.

A few suggestions 16
Art of taking breath 16
Attention to the feet 24
A valuable secret 32
Bread made of unbolted meal 8
Beecher on health 80
Beards 104
Cleanliness 24, 80
Costume for children 56
Cure for the lockjaw 56
Cold feet 82
Cure for ingrowing nails 96
Directions to restore the drowned 56
Eating 32
Early breakfast 40
Health 56
Influence of dietetic habits 16
Living on excitement 96
Memory as affected by disease 88
Night air 72
Panacea 40
Poisonous rooms 64
Reform 96
Scalds 8
Salt eating 48
Specific for the suffering 72
Sleeping under the clothes 80
Sunlight in houses 88
Saleratus and soda 104
Smoking a cause of insanity 104
The beard 24
" best hair wash 24
To cure hoarseness 64
To invalids 64
Too bad! 64
Throat and lungs 88
Take time to sleep 88
To prevent sunstroke 88
The daily baptism 96
Tobacco 104
To avoid the danger of lightning 104
Unhealthy positions 80
Value of fresh air 104
Why children die 8

READING FOR YOUTH.

A christian boy's influence 44
A word to the little folks 52
A pig for a school 60
[illegible]
Drowning the squirrel 76
Evil company 68
Fine clothes 78
Forgiveness 100
Good for nothing 4
Give us this day, etc. 84
Hold on, boys 84
It is only a cent 92
I did as the rest did 92
"I don't love you now, mother" 100
Love conquers 20
Little Frank 60
Our order book 68
Praying with little children 68
Speak to the stranger 20
Saying prayer 28
The struggle and victory 4
" mother's faith 16
" Bible 20
" first deception 28
" holy child Jesus 44
" child's prayer meeting 52
" boy that would not get mad 76
" idle christian 64
Valuable secret 4
What Emily did 86
Wild flowers 60

POETRY.

Act well your part 5
At evening time, etc 13
A mother's love 20
All we like sheep 28
All in all 36
A hymn 44
A poetical sermon 65, 69
A little longer 77
Adieu 85
"At evening time it shall be light" 97
Be good 4
Babe of Bethlehem 44
Borne with every breeze 64
Come to Jesus 78
Cometh a blessing down 84
Child's hymn 92
Contemplation 65
Christian forgiveness 93
Dedicated to believers 4
Dies irae 64
Day dawn 100
Evening devotion 89
Evening prayer 101
Friendship 56
Farewell 17
Faint, yet pursuing 44
Give me Jesus 25
God unchangeable 84
Hymn 85
Hope and despondency 16
I'm weary 29
I would be there 45
Influence 48
I've trodden, etc 53
I am weary 68
Joyful 1
Little spots 5
Lines 8
Light and darkness 36
Little child's prayer 56
Look on the bright side 60
Lines of gladness 68
Lord, be thou my helper 61
Lines 76
Look to Jesus 92
Lines of truth 96
"Let us help one another" 104
My Shepherd 4
Morning worship 96
My peace 80
Not very far 12
Not mine, but thine 100
Our Father 52
Pray without ceasing 29
Preludes by the way 33
Praise to God acceptable 37
Resolutions 61
Reminiscence of '54 65
Submission 40
Speak kindly 41
Song 48
Sweet thoughts 51
The city of gold 1
That beautiful land 9
The swiftness of time 17
" mother 25
To the christian female 28
The Lord's prayer 21
" prayer of the church 32
" Bridegroom cometh 40
Time of life 49
Twilight musings 52
The world for sale 53
" true rule 56
" resurrection 57
" promise claimed 60
" sinner's inquiry 61
" heir of the crown 73
" watcher 76
" eternal God 84
" Morning Call 97
Truth will triumph at the last 100
Unity 88
We'll sing 73
What do the birds say? 80
What of the night? 92
We shall meet 93
Waking thoughts 96
What shall I do? 97
We would see Jesus 104

EDITORIAL.

A chance to do good 6
A fast 14, 94
A discussion 14
Acceptance of a challenge 28
Anti-tobacco Journal 34
Are all men immortal? 38
American anti-tobacco society 46
Answers 56
Another letter from abroad 78
Anti-tobacco publications 86
A fast 94
Aurora Borealis 98
A new chronology 98
Barbarism of slavery 62
Behold, I come as a thief 66
Boston 2
Castleton 6, 50, 66, 70, 98
Cassell's Bible 54, 62
Christ our life 16
Convalescent 46
Choice of pearls 58
Conversation and reading 94
Campmeeting items 90
Change times and laws 90
Circus ministers 94
Castleton and Hydeville 98
Campmeeting [illegible]
Discussion at Plymouth 22
Destruction of the wicked 30, 34
Discussion at Bridgeport 34
Dying words of J. Randolph 34
Discussion with Dr. Lyon 36
Diary notes [illegible]
Earthly gods 2
Evil spirits 18
Eternal consciousness 26
Editorial 54, 62
Errata 54
Great trouble 50
Given up 36
Hard times 98
Important discussion 26
Italy 102
Indulgencies 42
Jesus is here already 2
Light advancing 42
Lovest thou me? 66
Man his own judge 54
New volume 2
Notes of travel 46
Napoleon III 70
New Bedford 82
Napoleon and the Pope 94
Our conference 26
Pilgrim notes 18
Political spiritualism 42
Preachers' Aid Society 26
Pre-existence 98
Plainfield meeting 98
Queries 86, 82, 46, 102
Questions 2
Relief for the distressed 2, 6, 10, 14, 18, 22, 26, 30, 34, 38, 42
Revival in Castleton 50
Railroads to campmeeting 62
Reasons for my hope 70
Revival in Hydeville 102
Rom. 8: 17 [illegible]
State of Europe 50, 58
Sayings of spirits [illegible]
Sunday schools [illegible]
Stirring events [illegible]
Sandy Hill [illegible]
Sectarian theology [illegible]
Strip him [illegible]
Signs of the times [illegible]
Shimeall's chronology [illegible]
Truth [illegible]
The revival in Castleton 2, 14, 18
[illegible]
The age of fraud 50
" destruction of the wicked 54, 58, 62, 66
Theodore Parker 62
The kingdom of heaven 70
" fourth of July 74
" state of Europe 74
" age of corruption 78
" war in Syria 78, 90
To our subscribers 82
The law of conscience 82
" personal epoch 86
" pope's troubles 90
" Scripture cannot be broken 94
" end is come 94
" Pharisees 94
" second death 94
" state of Europe 98
" close of the volume 102
Voice of the Prophets 34, 50, 78
Visit to the Indians 58
Welcome's Treatise 18
Wine drinking 64
Wayside Notes 90
Wilbraham campmeeting 94, 102

LETTERS.

Wm. McCulloch 7, C E Gierlow 11, L A Wheeler, 11, E S Fenn 11, A N Seymour 11, L G—— 11, M Mathews 11, M R Phetteplace 14, I Damman 14, J H Bartlett 14, Methodist preacher 19, J A Sober 19, H J Brown 19, L Reimer 19, J A Sober 23, J M Stephenson 23, Benj. Spaulding 26, 35, 46, 51, 59, 71, 90, Wm. Sheldon 27, Wm. Ougley 26, E Grant 26, R V Lyon 27, 31, 74, J Morrison 27, M Batchelor 31, Eld. Boutell 31, J Wilson 31, C H Sutton 31, F M Berry 31, M A B 31, M Mathews 34, L P Judson 35, W W Boyden 35, E R Southwick 35, C Fuller 35, H H James 38, Jno. McKee 38, S Clark 43, J A Sober 43, R Willard 46, R York 47, F Douglas 47, W H Hull 47, Bro. George 51, M C—— 51, L Boutell 55, B P Manning 59, J T Ougley 59, J Blain 63, M Chandler 63, A Sober 63, S A Elmore 63, R H Clark 66, M A Pote 66, R Chown 71, R Bush 74, C C Stevens 74, B L Clark 74, J C Gilman 75, P Perham 75, B P Manning 79, S N Kent 79, L James 79, N S Latimer 79, S S Brewer 82, F Burr 82, M Lamprey 84, N M Henry 82, L A Wheeler 83, J Parry 83, W A Fenn 86, S S Brewer 86, J Blain 87, R E Ladd 90, W Sheldon 91, L N C 91, J B Fitch 91, P Axe 91, L P Judson 94, A E 94, W Smith 94, S M James 95, Eld. M Batchelor 96, S G Mathewson 98, Eld. L Boutell 99, A S Servi 102, P Alling 102, Geo. Dillabaugh 102, R V Lyon 102.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Taylor 3, D Longstaff 7, H W Yoger 11, C A Sister 15, C M Young 19, J Boutell 19, B Dammon 19, H D Sargent 19, J Clark 19, P Farnham 23, L A Hill 23, Geo. Welch 23, J W Butler 27, F J Shepherd 27, Geo. Warren 27, J P Garland 27, J W Heath 31, W A Armstrong 31, H L Goodrich 31, L Parker 35, H E James 35, W Wilson 35, W D Fuller 35, D Tyler 35, F Wait 43, R B Davis 43, D Prophet 43, E F Steefe 47, R Rich 47, L Vaugh 47, V Russel 47, W G Miller 51, W W B Dixon 51, E E Dixon 51, P West 55, S Munger 55, E Potter 59, A W Wetherell 59, M A Brooks 67, I Gates 75, N Shumway 79, E B Grant 79, C A Chase 79, E Young 83, H S Taylor 95, Sr. Powell 95, A Sage 103, G Bacon 103, S N Streeter 103.

Married.

At Wallingford, Ct., Aug. 25th, by Elder L. S. Ludington, Mr Edward Hill and Mrs. Mary A. Ives, both of Wallingford.

Obituary Notices.

Died suddenly, in Southbridge, Mass., July 29th, 1860, Scotto N. Streeter, son of Nathan Streeter and wife, aged one year and three months.

Thus in an unexpected hour these parents, grandparents and friends, were called to bitter weeping on account of the loss of their promising little one. Monday, 30th, we attended the funeral service. A large assemblage of relatives and friends came together to sympathize with the afflicted family.

We took occasion to comfort the mourners with the fact that there would be a resurrection from the dead, when Scotto would live again. May this sad bereavement be so improved by the afflicted, that they may be fully prepared to meet where there will be no more death. L. Boutell.

Died, in Charlton, Worcester Co., Mass., July 9th, 1860, Mr. George Bacon, aged ninety-nine.

He was confined to his bed several weeks entirely helpless, and most of the time was speechless. Sometimes could speak in a low whisper so as to be understood. He has been inclined to consumptive habits for several years. He professed to be a lover of Christ some forty or fifty years ago, and joined the Congregationalists. He had never removed his relation in the church, but has been a firm believer in the soon coming kingdom ever since '43. He has since taken great interest in reading advent papers, as well as the Bible, and especially the words of Christ concerning his coming, and what should take place before his coming. But he has gone to rest till the last loud trump shall sound. He left two daughters and two sons-in-law to mourn his absence. John Mitchel.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in the city of Hartford, Ct., our beloved Bro. Alvan Sage, aged sixty seven years.

He has left an affectionate companion and family to mourn the loss of one of the kindest of husbands and best of fathers. He died the 7th of July, and was laid in his resting place the 9th of July, where he awaits the return of the Life-giver, when that body, sown in weakness, shall be raised in power, and that mortal shall put on immortality. Our brother attended public worship the last Sunday in Oct., 1859, since that period, he gradually became enfeebled, until paralysis terminated his existence. A few weeks before his death he remarked to his wife, "I have been passing through a struggle. But now, through grace, I have gained the victory. I can now give you and my dear family into the hands of Him who has promised to be the widow's God. I can say farewell to my christian association—my dear brethren and sisters whom I dearly love."

For some weeks before his death he lost the power of articulation, and could only signify his assent by a gentle pressure of the hand. The day previous to his death, when questioned whether he was conscious of his approaching death, and whether the Savior was precious, signified the same with a sweet, serene expression of his countenance, and thus calmly fell asleep in Jesus. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

He attended the last campmeeting at Collinsville, and there experienced a rich manifestation of the Comforter. He often referred to that time and place. Some who read this will doubtless remember that aged disciple with smiling face and tremulous voice, pouring forth his praise to God through our Lord Jesus, for grace abounding to the chief of sinners.

Our Bro. was a firm believer in the unconscious state of the dead, and died in the faith that he should not awake, nor be raised out of his sleep, until the heavens be no more. The funeral services were attended by Bro. M. Grant. O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus. S. S. Brewer.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Austria is said to have abandoned the idea of retaining Venetia, as guaranteed by Germany. Garibaldi is expected to attack Venice. Austria will maintain the conflict alone against all Italy. Prussia will remain neutral while the other powers don't interfere.

Latest Genoa papers publish dispatches announcing the unopposed disembarkation of Garibaldi, with 8000 men, near Reggio, on the night of the 10th. The same dispatches report the evacuation of the fortress of Scylla by the Neapolitans, but both are doubtful.

A dispatch from Trieste says it was believed there that Garibaldi intends to attack Austria, not on the Venetian but on the Croatian coast, by attempting a disembarkation at Fiume. The Austrian authorities will first endeavor to prepare for revolution in Crotia and Hungary before proceeding to Venetia. All the coasts are rigorously watched by imperial cruisers.

Garibaldi is reported to have had a conference with the revolutionary Neapolitan leaders. Naples is proclaimed to be in a state of siege.

According to a communication from Vienna, active negotiations are going on between the Courts of Vienna and Rome on the subject of the eventuality of an invasion of the Pontifical States by Garibaldi. The Duke of Modena has promised in that case to unite his troops to the Papal army.

Volunteers to the standard of Garibaldi are so numerous as to seriously embarass him, and he has requested that no more be sent at present.

A recent interview between the Kings of Denmark and Sweden gave rise to the report that the two Scandinavian Kingdoms intended to form an alliance against Germany.

Constantinople advices confirm the discovery of a conspiracy against the life of the Grand Vizier. Several individuals of high standing are compromised. The sale of gunpowder is prohibited at Constantinople.

Garibaldi, according to a correspondent writing from Milan, June 27th, contemplates a feat which will throw all his previous exploits in the shade. This is no more than a sudden invasion of the States of the Church by sea, and a march upon Rome. It is thought that, in such an event, the Pope will have to seek refuge in Austria. A French armorer has sent to Garibaldi a gift of a coat of mail, dagger proof and bullet proof. Its workmanship is perfect, and it is valued at upwards of five thousand francs. It may be worn under the uniform like a shirt, for it is extremely flexible, light and portable.

Baron Rothschild, the great Jew banker, is very intimate with Napoleon, is seen arm in arm with him almost every day, and sits at his right hand at public dinners. The political gossips say that the baron is to be made king of Jerusalem, under the protection of France, "for a consideration." A Jew ruling in Palestine would be a notable event, and would answer for a fulfillment of several prophetic texts.

NAPLES AND SICILY.

The Compt of Syracuse, uncle of the King of Naples, has written a letter to Prince Carignan, in which he announces his adhesion to the principle of Italian unity, and closes it with the words, "Hail, Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy."

Garibaldi continued his preparations for a descent on the main land.

The ambassadors at Naples were transferring their families to the steamers in the harbor.

Garibaldi volunteers in Calabria were organizing a revolution in the mountains.

Pending fresh events in Italy, and especially renewed action on the part of Garibaldi, rumors are circulated and conjectures indulged in. Of the former the latest that has reached me is that Col. Franconniere, aide-de-camp to Prince Napoleon, who is now in Turin, was bearer of an autograph letter from the French Emperor to Victor Emmanuel, warning him to be careful what he did, for that if he provoked a collision with Austria, he must not reckon on assistance from France, which Power, bound by the treaty of Zurich, would not interfere on his behalf.

The Paris correspondent of the Allemeine Zeitung of the 10th, says that the Pope has written a most melancholy letter to the Cardinal in France. He looks upon all as lost, and although convinced that he shall die by the bullet of an assassin, he declares he will not quit Rome under any condition or at any price.

The Fugitive Christians of Syria.

The following account of the removal of the surviving women and children of Deir-el-Kamar to Beirut, on board a British steamer, is from a letter of one of the officers, and gives a vivid picture of the bereavement and distress of the poor creatures:—

"When we got to the place pointed out, we saw on some hills, about two miles off the beach, crowds of women and children huddled together, apparently in great distress, and we could not make out how it was they did not come down to the beach to be taken off. So the captain sent me ashore with all the boats to bring them off. I made all the boats lay off the surf, and then landed myself, with an interpreter. I met an armed party of Druses on landing, and told them I wished to see the chief, as it appeared it was he who would not allow the people to depart. I went about two miles to a village where the chief lived. On my way up I met crowds of women and children in a fearful state of distress, but no men, they had all been killed. If I had been an angel, I could not have been more blessed; for, poor creatures, no sooner did they catch sight of my uniform, than they fell down at my feet and kissed my hands, and implored me to save them. I was quite astonished to see the number of them; instead of 200 to 300, as we heard there were, there were at least 1500, and the most horrible part was, there was hardly a man to be seen, nor a boy over 12 years old; they had all been massacred—husbands, brothers, and fathers, every one. Poor things, they seemed overjoyed to get away, and when they got to the beach I had the greatest difficulty in preventing them throwing themselves into the sea, and had to drag one or two of them out of the surf myself.

"We only had about eight boats, but these we began to load with all dispatch, every poor woman and child having to be carried through a tremendous surf to the boats. However, our blue jackets worked well and cheerfully. Some of the women and children were badly wounded. They had been wounded while clinging to their husbands and fathers when they were killed. As soon as a boat was loaded she was sent off to the ship, and the poor creatures stowed as close as they would lie on board, and then the boat was sent back. After two hours' hard work our decks were packed as close as possible, and we had room for no more. The gunboat, I must tell you, was full of fugitives from Sidon, so that she could not hold any. The sun had set, the surf was increasing fast, and two or three of our boats had been pitched bottom up on the beach, and there were still seven hundred unfortunate women and children on the beach, all footsore, and some of them had not touched any food for two or three days."

Jerusalem is now in danger, being menaced from without by three thousand Bedouin Arabs, and from within by the fanatical Moslems. The Missionaries have fled to Jaffa, and unless the Governor proves to be a better man than he is thought to be, ... deserted, and the town become as silent as a grave yard. Every trunk is packed ready to embark at a moment's notice, whenever their respective Consuls shall bid them go. Business ceased long ago, and shopping is at an end for the present.

It is generally believed that the French will insist upon occupying Syria immediately, and many think that the last hours of the "sick man" have come. One thing, and only one thing, is certain. Great changes of some kind are at hand in the East.

Thirty thousand Christian women had been sold at twenty-five piastres each, and detained in harems. The number of Christians killed in Syria is 15,000, at least. In Damascus, 8000 were slain.

Napoleon III. has given twenty thousand Napoleons to help the Syrian Christians, who will be delighted to look upon his picture in gold.

Notices, &c.

To Subscribers.—The cash receipts and a portion of our book notices are unavoidably crowded out this week, owing to the index being inserted.

☞ The conference at Danielsonville, Ct., will be holden on the 26th of Sept. instead of the 6th, as noticed in a previous number.

Acknowledgment.—Have just received of Eld H. L. Hastings from the tract fund, $33.60 of tracts. These are to be scattered free where I travel. Also a few works for sale. Thanks to the donors, and publisher. W. Sheldon.

Iowa, Minn. and Wisconsin Christian Conference.

Our fourth annual conference will be holden at Springville, Badax Co., Wis., commencing Oct. 4th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over Lord's day. Springville is about thirty miles from La Crosse (on the Mississippi river,) from which the stage runs every Tuesday and Friday, and about thirty-five from Sparta (on the Milwaukee and Lacrosse R. R.,) from which place a stage runs every Wednesday to Viroqua, only three or four miles from Springville. Strangers can inquire for Wm. A. Morse, or W. Sheldon.

P. S. W. Dexo,
W. Sheldon, } Evangelists.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a campmeeting in Exeter, Me., commencing Monday, Sept. 17th, and continue one week. The meeting will be holden on the old ground, near the Chamberlain meeting-house, and twenty-two miles from Bangor. As there is no stage that runs within four miles of the place, if the brethren will inform us what day or days they will be in Bangor, we will have a team there to take them to the meeting for about one half the fare in the stage.

Arrangements will be made for boarding and horse keeping on reasonable terms. We hope all who can will bring their tents and bedding with them. We expect our preaching brethren, Billings and Hemenway, and all others whom the Lord shall send. As this meeting is not designed to build up any party or sect, we hope our brethren and sisters will come with hearts full of love and zeal for God and his truth, praying that truth may prevail and good order and quietness pervade the encampment.

Circumstances are such, it is thought best to change the location of this meeting from Levant, as was noticed by Bro. Hemenway, to Exeter, Me.

D. E. Ireland,
H. N. Patten,
H. Cole, } Committee.

Notice.

There will be a barn or grove meeting in South Pittsfield, N. H., about three miles from the village, commencing Sept 7th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Sabbath. Elder Hiram Munger will attend and preach the word. Come, brethren, at the commencement of the meeting. Do not wait until Sunday. There will be provision made for man and beast. Brethren coming from Portsmouth will take the stage at Newmarket, Friday morning, and stop at Warren Yeattons, in Epsom. Inquire for C. S. Emerson. C. S. Emerson.

Notice.

The Advent Chapel at West Hoosick, N. Y., will be dedicated Thursday, the 27th of Sept. Meeting to continue over the following Sunday. I and Bro. J. S. White are expected to attend, and preach the word. By request of the church. M. Batchelor.

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

Also, a tent meeting in Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill., near Bro. Larken Scott's, to commence Sept. 27th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday. We hope to see a general rally. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be there to preach the word.

Also, there is to be two tent meetings in Brown Co., Ill.; one at Mt. Pleasant, or Mt. Sterling, as Brn. Raymond and others may arrange, to commence Oct. 12th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday.

The other at Ripley, to commence Oct. 3d, (Wednesday) at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be in attendance at all of the above named meetings and preach the word. I expect God will bless his word to the salvation of souls. I hope the brethren in the different localities will make the meetings a special subject of prayer, that there may be much good done in the name of Jesus.

Moses Chandler, for the Church.

Notice.

The Lord willing, there will be a conference in Buchanan, Mich., to commence on the evening of the 19th of Sept. and continue over Lord's day. Bro. F. H. Berick will be present to preach the word. We trust our brethren will take advantage of this opportunity. In behalf of the church,

D. R. Mansfield.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses. We shall have a goodly assortment at the Wilbraham campmeeting, if the Lord will.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Mr. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlet on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort a thousand names may be added to our list ... [illegible]

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the Grove near the Anderson School-house, 2 1-2 miles south-west of Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, Sept. 23d, commencing at 10 o'clock.

Sept. 24th, 25th, 26th, in Unity, near the Centre Road Depot, on the Pittsburgh and Erie Rail Road.

Sept. 27th and 28th in the Simmon's neighborhood, one mile and a half from Jefferson, Ashtabula Co., Ohio.

Saturday evening and over Sunday, at Ashtabula, Ohio. Monday eve., Oct. 1st, at Girard, near Bro. Alton's. John T. Cummey, Evangelist.

Bro. J. W. Crabtree will preach at
Sandisfield, Mass. ......Sept. 9th
New Britain, Ct. ......Sept. 16th
W. A. Fenn.

I will be at Yarmouth, Me., with Bro. R. R. York, Sept. 14th, and will preach for him that evening if he desires. Also, I expect to be in West Poland, Me., Sabbath, Sept. 16th, and preach in the Free Chapel if there is no other appointment. If there should be, will Bro. Jesse Partridge make appointment for me in that section. O. R. Fassett.

Providence permitting, I will preach from Sept. 6th to 10th in the vicinity of Barnsted, N. H.

☞ Cannot attend the grove meeting in Chichester. Hiram Munger.

Bro. W. Sutherland appoints to preach at
River Point ......Sept. 9th
Warwick Plains ......Sept. 16th

I purpose to preach at Massena, N. Y., the second and third Sundays of Sept. M. Batchelor.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Portland, Me. ......Sunday, Sept. 9th
Frankfort Mills ......Sunday, Sept. 16th

Commence a series of meetings at Dover, Me., where Bro. Lougee may appoint, Wednesday, Sept. 26th, to continue over the following Sabbath.
J. Hemenway.

APPOINTMENTS for DANIELSONVILLE, CT.
Eld. Geo. Champlin ......Sept. 9th
Eld. H. F. Carpenter ......Sept. 16th and 23d

The R. I. State Quarterly Conference will meet at this place Sept. 26th. We purpose continuing the public services over the following Sunday. Friends from abroad are invited to attend.
H. F. Carpenter, Pastor.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Newfield, Ct ......Sept. 9th
Litchfield Station ......Sept. 11th
Camps Mills (Bro. Gunn's) ......Sept. 12th
Plymouth Hollow ......Sept. 16th
Wallingford ......Sept. 23d
L. S. Ludington.

On the second Sunday in September I will meet with Dr. Huntington and his people, and preach.
R. V. Lyon.

G. A. Otis and J. Pinkham, providence permitting, will be at Warner, N. H., where J. Morgan may appoint, Sept. 12th, 7 o'clock. At Bradford the 13th, and Newbury the 14th, each at 7 o'clock in the evening.

I will be with them Saturday evening, Sept. 15th, and Sunday the 16th. At Grantham where H. Ford shall appoint. J. G. Smith.

Sarah Higgins will preach at the New Chapel W. H. Point, Sept. 9th.
B. Bancroft, Cor. Sec.

With God's permission I will attend meetings as follows:—
Round Pond, Me. ......Sept. 16th
Surry, Me. ......Sept. 23d
Carmel, Me., (Union Meeting-house) ......Sept. 30th
Thomas Smith.

To Correspondents.

Eld. Jonathan Wilson's P. O. address is Shawnee, Niagara Co., N. Y.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-3 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-3 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his condition. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts. [illegible] per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speedily Coming of the Marriage Feast," by John P. Cowles, ... [illegible]

Bible meaning of the word Hell. ... [illegible]

Death and Life; or the Doctrine of ... [illegible]

INDEX TO VOLUME XI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A reproof....10
Above, before, etc....79
A handful of gleanings....16
Arbestos....[illegible]
Answer to prayer....31
Awake....21
A demonstration, etc....22
A sermon on hell....26
Arbestos grain....30
A new tract....34
A sermon....34
Acknowledgment....34
A happy family....43
Art of being polite....48
A few historical facts....57
A glorious prospect....60
A correction....64
A whirlwind....64
All but the last....66
A few questions....72
A changed island....74
An inquiry....74
A disguise....74
A ... them....75
A declaration....73, 84, 88, 92
Across space, etc....84
Answer to an inquiry....86
A few more thoughts, etc....86
A brief dialogue....92
An appeal to the brethren east....92
A picture of the times....96
A chronicle of years, from creation, etc....96
A word of warning....102
Artificial flowers....104
All for dignity....104
A bad omen for a mother....104
Born again....16
Be careful....52
But they are not graved, etc....56
Brethren....66
Beginning of the Yellow dispensation....80
Bible clerks....[illegible]
Bible no poetry....85
Brief sayings....[illegible]
Conference at Earlville....10
Curious asymmetries....15
Common experience....16
Correction....16
Conference in Augusta....30
Christ our life....30, 47
Counting the cost....34
Christian growth....36
Christian insanity....44
Co-operation....56
Contentedness....58
Circumspection....60
Controversy, etc....64
Confidence in God....64
Canadian honor....65
Convention at Providence....66
Confounding the inclination....69
Condition in Utah....72
Contrast, etc....74
Campmeeting in Maine....74
Controversia....96
Christians, are you led by the Spirit of Christ?....96
Come and see....96
Come to Jesus....96
"Come" and "go," or Preaching, etc....97
Can you believe....97
Dying words....16
Dunning for credit....28
Doing good....40, 88
Defining my position....41
Disagree....44
Divine goodness....48
Does death kill?....64, 69
Diffidence....68
Do the Scriptures recognize social prayer?....73
Decline of Judaism....80
Did Christ create all things?....[illegible]
Effect of faith....8
Eld. Grant's tour in C. E....7
Eternity....16
Existing powers....24
Extracts from "preachings"....24
Example....24
Epistle....56
Extracts from Bottle....68
Extract from Beecher....86
Faithful unto death....2
Faint, yet pursuing....12
Facts....18
Further exposure....48
For the rest....64
Franklin's sermon....64
Family worship....69
Farewell....71
Family prayer....74
Fate of the Apostles....88
First things....93
Golden bits....12
God a spirit....14
Go, work....14
God never perplexed....22
Good tidings....24
Give me light....36
God's power....48
Gentility....58
Garibaldi....58
Go to the campmeeting....74
"Go, work in my vineyard"....97
Godly sorrow....100
Highways and hedges....3
Harmony wanted....10
Helps and hindrances to faith....12
Holy Spirit....38
Hindoo literature....38
Honor due to Messiah....56
Hudson and Cobb's discussion....62
He died rich....70
He went away sorrowful....78
Hints to mother and daughters....88
Harmony wanted....102
Immortality....4, 8
Interesting conversation....12
In Rochester again....14
I would not live alway....22
It is only his way....24
In the day....32
Immateriality....8, 22
I am weary....32
Idaho Fair....44
Inspiration of the Bible....56
Irrepressible conflict....57
If a man die....61
Is God's will our will?....62
Idleness....68
It is only a prayer meeting....72
Is Sunday a Sabbath?....74
Inquiry answered....76
Important to sick ministers....84
Immortality triumphant....88
"I desire to be a Christian"....94
Journal paragraphs....18
Journey west....24
Jerusalem by moonlight....36
Living testimony....22
Leaves from note book....23
Light ahead....27
Links of truth....37
Live for life....46
Looking glass....48
Losses by religion....52
Loss of ocean steamers....66
Letter to the church....68
Love supreme....72
Living devotion....72
Let us reason together....88
Long sermons....88
Letter....88
Letter from E. B....90
Lost and found....102
Man in death unconscious....3
Moral worth....17
Maine missionary fund....24
My longing heart, etc....44
Matt. 10: 28....44
Man and his barrow....46
Moral measurement....64
My new books....68
Materiality....70
Make confession....74
Making every day happy....76
Modern preachers....84
Maxims of Washington....[illegible]
Notes by the way....12
Nothing deliverance....14
Notes by the way....24, 32, 52, 67
Notice....8
New books....44
New Hampshire conference....64, 72
None but Christ....84
Nature....104
Notice of J. V. H....76
" to brethren in Levant....[illegible]
" books, etc....[illegible]
Night and morning....[illegible]
Odd place for birds' nest....10
Our thoughts....12
Open the pew door....16
On the Son of God....26
One dollar....36
Our paper....36
One word to you....104
Perseverance....4
Pre-existence....12
Praying and living....14
Perseverance to the body....14
Philosophical inconsistency....16
Proved the strong arm....[illegible]
Prayer....[illegible]
Position of the advent....[illegible]
Prayer answered....[illegible]
Poor Jacob....[illegible]
Pity the poor....[illegible]
Peace....72
Preparation for the judgment....72
Parable of the ten virgins....74
Pastoral visiting....76
Pre-existence....76
Preach Christ....80
Prayer....84
Promised grace....86
Procrastination....88
Peculiarities of early preachers....90
Report of discussion at W....4
Reasons for my hope....2, 10, 14, 18, 27, 36, 42
Rich man and Lazarus....9, 13, 17, 21, 25, 28
Retraction....32
Reminiscences....36
Recipe for spiritual health....40
Report of M. L. conference....44
Revival in Scotland....52
Reasons....54, 74
Richard Roche....57
Resurrection....80
Report of the R. I. State conference, etc....92
Reasons for my hope....102
Singular recovery, etc....8
Spiritualism abandoned....10
Saving faith....10
Sketch of labors....16
Sketch of travels....16
Sleep of the dead....24
Silence in nature....24
Spring....24
Singular coincidence....30
Short sermons....32
Sweet conversation....40
Subduing of passions....40
Signs of the times....46
Stand at home....48
Satan....48
Shower of stones....52
Spiritualism....60
Sovereignty of God....72
Swine's flesh....76
Second thought, etc....76
Stay thoughts wrestled....80
Sword of the Spirit....84
Shimeath's chronology....84
Swearing....94
Sympathy....97
Sanctuary ... .100
Suggestions....104
The nature of Jesus....1, 5, 9
" last witness....4, 8
" anointed of God....8
" christian's hope....12, 16
" return of our Lord....18, 20
" need of reformation....16
" past illustrated....18
Two kinds of eternal life....20
" the end....19, 31
Trust in God....20
Testimony of a christian life....21
The sleeping church....21
" creeds of the world....22
Tract Fund for the West....24, 28, 42, 62, 84
The essential oneness....24
" escape....24
" seventh day....28
" kingdom at hand....28
" man for the times....29
" head and the heart....31
Thoughts on my birthday....34
The gayly-filled earth....34
" stumbling of Israel....33, 37
" great High Priest....36
" London merchant....36
" kindred of Christ....38
" Lord cometh....39
" Grant and Loveland discussion....42, 45, 50, 54, 58, 62, 66, 70
" angels that sinned....44
" night watch....46
" lady and robber....48
" man we need....49
" Lord's anointed....49, 101
" anointed of God....50
To the friends of truth....50
The dangerous tendency of a bad heart....52
" new birth....52
" preparation....52
" seventh trumpet....52
" beloved life....52
Theology of the day....53
The Light Ship....54, 74, 90
Thoughts on Rev. 7: 9....56
Turkish empire....56
The burning bush....56
" seventh vial....60
" resurrection of the body....62
" day of trouble....63
Theodore Parker's library....64
The World's Crisis....64
There is another man....64
The religious sentiment....64
" word spoken by angels....69
" book of Job....72
" new birth....72
" Israelite indeed....72
" Babylonish garment....76
" wife's fidelity....76
" willful king....80
" modern history of Universalism....80
" boy preacher of L....82
" doom of the world....89
" new birth....88
" Lord's anointed....89
" grant of Justinian....89
To-morrow....87
The political christian....90
To a number....91
The great controversy....92
Twilight musings....93
The tenth commandment....93
Trial of our faith....96
The great chart....15
Travels and labors....93
The trial of faith....96
" prayer of faith....98
" great heresy....98
1866-68....11
1867....41
The Light Ship....100
" prayer meeting....100
" church thermometer....100
To preachers' wives....101
The papacy....101
The art of not quarrelling....104
Useful knowledge....56
Uncertain what to do....56
Universalist tract....100, 101
Voice of the Church....28
When at Amboy....2
Waiting for Christ....6
" the Lord....6
We pass for what we are....8
Who said all that?....12
Wesley and his preachers....20
Words....57
Why so sad?....60
Why don't God make it morning?....68
What makes a man?....72
Words on fire....76
Words to the winners of souls....80
Warm up prayer meetings....88
Walk with Jesus....92
Wickedness in the world....96
Which is true religion?....100
Wycliffe....101
"What must be done?"....101
What is truth?....104
1 Tim. 5: 24....25

HYGIENE.

A few suggestions....16
Art of taking breath....16
Attention to the feet....24
A valuable secret....24
Bread made of unbolted meal....8
Beecher on health....68
Beards....88
Cleanliness....24, 80
Costume for children....24
Cure for the lockjaw....34
Cold feet....52
Cure for ingrowing nails....60
Directions to restore the drowned....64
Eating....32
Early breakfast....32
Health....40
Influence of dietetic habits....52
Living on excitement....64
Memory as affected by disease....88
Night air....72
Panacea....88
Poisonous rooms....64
Reform....96
Scalds....12
Salt eating....16
Specific for the suffering....20
Sleeping under the clothes....20
Sunlight in houses....24
Saleratus and soda....104
Smoking a cause of insanity....104
The beard....24
" best hair wash....24
To cure hoarseness....32
To invalids....56
Too bad....64
Throat and lungs....68
Take time to sleep....72
To prevent sunstroke....88
The daily baptism....100
Tobacco....100
To avoid the danger of lightning....104
Unhealthy positions....104
Value of fresh air....104
Why children die....[illegible]

READING FOR YOUTH.

A word to the little folks....[illegible]
A plea for the hands....[illegible]
Drowning the squirrel....76
Evil company....68
Fine clothes....76
Forgiveness....100
Good for nothing....4
Give us this day, etc....84
Hold on, boys....92
It is only a cent....92
I did as the rest did....60
"I don't love you now, mother"....32
Love conquers....92
Little Frank....60
Our order book....68
Praying with little children....60
Speak to the stranger....20
Saying prayer....24
The struggle and victory....4
" mother's faith....12
" Bible....20
" first deception....28
" holy child Jesus....48
" child's prayer meeting....64
" boy that would not get mad....76
" idle christian....84
Valuable secret....4
What Emily did....64
Wild flowers....60

POETRY.

Act well your part....5
At evening time, etc....13
A mother's love....20
All we like sheep....49
All in all....64
A hymn....72
A poetical sermon....65, 69
A little longer....77
Adieu....49
"At evening time it shall be light"....97
Be good....65
Babe of Bethlehem....88
Borne with every breeze....60
Come to Jesus....29
Cometh a blessing down....33
Child's hymn....65
Contemplation....65
Christian forgiveness....85
Dedicated to believers....4
Dies irae....64
Day dawn....100
Evening devotion....20
Evening prayer....101
Friendship....56
Farewell....17
Faint, yet pursuing....56
Give me Jesus....25
God unchangeable....84
Hymn....93
Hope and despondency....77
I'm weary....29
I would be there....16
Influence....29
I've trodden, etc....52
I am weary....4
Joyful....65
Little spots....1
Lines....8
Light and darkness....20
Little child's prayer....36
Look on the bright side....56
Lord, be thou my helper....64
Lines....72
Look to Jesus....76
Lines of truth....85
"Let us help one another"....104
My Shepherd....4
Morning worship....28
My peace....36
Not very far....41
Not mine, but thine....100
Our Father....52
Pray without ceasing....21
Prelude by the way....64
Praise to God acceptable....37
Resolutions....61
Reminiscence of '54....85
Submission....41
Speak kindly....48
Song....81
Sweet thoughts....1
The city of gold....9
That beautiful land....17
The swiftness of time....25
" mother....33
To the christian female....32
The Lord's prayer....37
" prayer of the church....37
" bridegroom cometh....40
Time of life....44
Twilight musings....48
The world for sale....52
" true rule....53
" resurrection....56
" promise claimed....57
" sinner's inquiry....61
" heir of the crown....73
" watcher....76
" eternal God....88
" Morning Call....97
Truth will triumph at the last....104
Unity....8
We'll sing....12
What do the birds say?....32
What of the night?....33
We shall meet....45
Waking thoughts....45
What shall I do?....96
We would see Jesus....104

EDITORIAL.

A chance to do good....6
A fact....14, 94
A discussion....14
Acceptance of a challenge....14
Anti-tobacco Journal....30
Are all men immortal?....34
American anti-tobacco society....54
Another letter from abroad....74
Anti-tobacco publications....82
A fast....90
Aurora Borealis....94
A new christology....98
Barbarism of slavery....62
Beh old, I come as a thief....78
Boston....82
Castleton....6, 50, 66, 70, 98
Cassell's Bible....30
Christ our life....54, 62
Convalescent....46
Choice of pearls....58
Conversation and reading....66
Campmeeting items....90
Change times and laws....90
Circus ministers....90
Castleton and Hydeville....98
Campmeeting....98
Discussion at Plymouth....22
Destruction of the wicked....30, 34
Discussion at Bridgeport....34
Dying words of J. Randolph....42
Discussion with Dr. Lyon....42
Dairy notes....86
Earthly gods....18
Evil spirits....42
Eternal consciousness....50
Editorial....54, 62
Errata....66
Great trouble....66
Given up....34
Hard times....26
Important discussion....30
Italy....42
Indulgencies....102
Jesus is here already....42
Light advancing....26
Lovest thou me?....38
Man his own judge....62
New volume....2
Notes of travel....46
Napoleon III....70
New Bedford....82
Napoleon and the Pope....94
Our conference....22
Pilgrim notes....18
Political spiritualism....42
Preachers' Aid Society....90
Pre-existence....26
Plainfield meeting....74
Queries....86, 82, 46, 102
Questions....2
Relief for the distressed....2, 6, 10, 14, 18, 22, 26, 30, 34, 38, 42
Revival in Castleton....74
Railroads to campmeeting....86
Reasons for my hope....90
Revival in Hydeville....98
Rom. 6: 17....102
State of Europe....30, 58
Sayings of spirits....62
Sunday schools....66
Stirring events....74
Sandy Hill....78
Sectarian theology....74
Ship him....78
Signs of the times....[illegible]
Sanctify ... .[illegible]
Truth 2, 14, 18
The revival in Castleton....[illegible]
" Boston conference....[illegible]
The age of fraud....50
" destruction of the wicked....56, 58, 62, 66
Theodore Parker....62
The kingdom of heaven....70
" fourth of July....74
" state of Europe....74
" age of corruption....78
" war in Syria....78, 90
To our subscribers....82
The law of conscience....82
" personal epoch....86
" pope's troubles....90
" Scripture cannot be broken....94
" end is come....94
" Pharisees....94
" second death....94
" state of Europe....98
" close of the volume....102
Voice of the Prophets....34, 50, 78
Visit to the Indians....58
Welcome's Treatise....18
Wine drinking....66
Wayside Notes....90
Wilbraham campmeeting....94, 102

LETTERS.

Wm. McCulloch 7, C E Gierlow 11, L A Wheeler, 11, E S Fenn 11, A N Seymour 11, L G—— 11, M Mathews 11, M R Phettepiace 14, I Damman 14, J H Bartlett 14, Methodist preacher 19, J A Sober 19, H J Brown 19, L Reimer 19, J A Sober 23, J M Stephenson 23, Benj. Spaulding 26, 35, 46, 51, 59, 71, 90, Wm. Sheldon 27, Wm. Oagley 26, E Grant 26, R V Lyon 27, 31, 74, J Morrison 27, M Batchelor 31, Eld. Boutell 31, J Wilson 31, C H Sutton 31, F M Berry 31, M A B 31, M Mathews 34, L P Judson 35, W W Boyden 35, E R Southwick 35, C Tuller 38, H H Janes 38, Jno. McKee 38, S Clark 43, J A Sober 43, R Willard 46, R York 47, F Douglas 47, W H Hull 47, Bro. George 51, M C—— 51, L Boutell 55, B P Manning 59, J T Oagley 59, J Blain 63, M Chandler 63, A Sober 63, S A Elmore 63, R H Clark 66, M A Pote 66, R Chown 71, R Bush 74, C C Stevens 74, B L Clark 74, J C Gilman 75, P Perham 75, B P Manning 79, S N Kent 79, L James 79, N S Latimer 79, S S Brewer 82, F Burr 83, M Lamprey 83, N M Henry 83, L A Wheeler 83, J Parry 83, W A Fenn 86, S S Brewer 86, J Blain 87, E E Ladd 90, W Sheldon 91, L N C 91, J S Fitch 91, P Axe 91, L P Judson 94, A E 94, I W Smith 94, S M Janes 95, Eld. M Batchelor 95, S G Mathewson 98, Eld. L Boutell 99, A S Servis 102, P Alling 102, Geo. Dillabaugh 102, R V Lyon 102.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Taylor 3, D Longstaff 7, H W Yoger 11, C A Sisser 15, C M Young 19, J Boutell 19, B Dammon 19, H D Sargent 19, J Clark 19, P Farnham 23, L A Hill 23, Geo. Welch 23, J W Butler 27, F J Shepherd 27, Geo. Warren 27, J P Garland 27, J W Heath 31, W A Armstrong 31, H L Goodrich 31, L Parker 35, H E Janes 35, W Wilson 35, W D Tuller 35, D Tyler 35, F Wait 43, R B Davis 43, D Prophet 43, E F Sheafe 47, R Rich 47, L Vaugh 47, V Russel 47, W G Miller 51, W W B Dixon 51, E Dixon 51, P West 55, S Munger 55, E Potter 59, A W Wetherell 59, M A Brooks 67, I Gates 75, N Shumway 79, E B Grant 79, C A Chase 79, E Young 83, H S Taylor 95, Sr. Powell 95, A Sage 103, G Bacon 103, S N Streeter 103.

Married.

At Wallingford, Ct., Aug. 25th, by Elder L. S Ludington, Mr Edward Hill and Mrs. Mary A. Ives, both of Wallingford.

Obituary Notices.

Died suddenly, in Southbridge, Mass., July 29th, 1860, Scotto N. Streeter, son of Nathan Streeter and wife, aged one year and three months.

Thus in an unexpected hour these parents, grandparents and friends, were called to bitter weeping on account of the loss of their promising little one. Monday, 30th, we attended the funeral service. A large assemblage of relatives and friends came together to sympathize with the afflicted family.

We took occasion to comfort the mourners with the fact that there would be a resurrection from the dead, when Scotto would live again. May this sad bereavement be so improved by the afflicted, that they may be fully prepared to meet where there will be no more death.
L. Boutell.

Died, in Charlton, Worcester Co, Mass, July 9th, 1860, Mr. George Bacon, aged ninety-nine.

He was confined to his bed several weeks entirely helpless, and most of the time was speechless. Sometimes could speak in a low whisper so as to be understood. He has been inclined to consumptive habits for several years. He professed to be a lover of Christ some forty or fifty years ago, and joined the Congregationalists. He had never removed his relation in the church, but has been a firm believer in the soon coming kingdom ever since '43. He has since taken great interest in reading advent papers, as well as the Bible, and especially the words of Christ concerning his coming, and what should take place before his coming. But he has gone to rest till the last loud trump shall sound. He left two daughters and two sons-in-law to mourn his absence.
John Mitchel.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in the city of Hartford, Ct, our beloved Bro. Alvan Sage, aged sixty seven years.

He has left an affectionate companion and family to mourn the loss of one of the kindest of husbands and best of fathers. He died the 7th of July, and was laid in his resting place the 9th of July, where he awaits the return of the Life-giver, when that body, sown in weakness, shall be raised in power, and that mortal shall put on immortality. Our brother attended public worship the last Sunday in Oct., 1859; since that period, he gradually became enfeebled, until paralysis terminated his existence. A few weeks before his death he remarked to his wife, "I have been passing through a struggle. But now, through grace, I have gained the victory. I can now give you and my dear family into the hands of Him who has promised to be the widow's God. I can say farewell to my christian association—my dear brethren and sisters whom I dearly love."

For some weeks before his death he lost the power of articulation, and could only signify his assent by a gentle pressure of the hand. The day previous to his death, when questioned whether he was conscious of his approaching death, and whether the Savior was precious, signified the same with a sweet, serene expression of his countenance, and thus calmly fell asleep in Jesus. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

He attended the last campmeeting at Collinsville, and there experienced a rich manifestation of the Comforter. He often referred to that time and place. Some who read this will doubtless remember that aged disciple with smiling face and tremulous voice, pouring forth his praise to God through our Lord Jesus, for grace abounding to the chief of sinners.

Our Bro. was a firm believer in the unconscious state of the dead, and died in the faith that he should not awake, nor be raised out of his sleep, until the heavens be no more. The funeral services were attended by Bro. M. Grant. O come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen, even so, come Lord Jesus.
S. S. Brewer.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Austria is said to have abandoned the idea of retaining Venetia, as guaranteed by Germany. Garibaldi is expected to attack Venice. Austria will maintain the conflict alone against all Italy. Prussia will remain neutral while the other powers don't interfere.

Latest Genoa papers publish dispatches announcing the unopposed disembarkation of Garibaldi, with 8000 men, near Reggio, on the night of the 10th. The same dispatches report the evacuation of the fortress of Scylla by the Neapolitans, but both are doubtful.

A dispatch from Trieste says it was believed there that Garibaldi intends to attack Austria, not on the Venetian but on the Croatian coast, by attempting a disembarkation at Fiume. The Austrian authorities will first endeavor to prepare for revolution in Crotia and Hungary before proceeding to Venetia. All the coasts are rigorously watched by imperial cruisers.

Garibaldi is reported to have had a conference with the revolutionary Neapolitan leaders. Naples is proclaimed to be in a state of siege.

According to a communication from Vienna, active negotiations are going on between the Courts of Vienna and Rome on the subject of the eventuality of an invasion of the Pontifical States by Garibaldi. The Duke of Modena has promised in that case to unite his troops to the Papal army.

Volunteers to the standard of Garibaldi are so numerous as to seriously embarass him, and he has requested that no more be sent at present.

A recent interview between the Kings of Denmark and Sweden gave rise to the report that the two Scandinavian Kingdoms intended to form an alliance against Germany.

Constantinople advices confirm the discovery of a conspiracy against the life of the Grand Vizier. Several individuals of high standing are compromised. The sale of gunpowder is prohibited at Constantinople.

Garibaldi, according to a correspondent writing from Milan, June 27th, contemplates a feat which will throw all his previous exploits in the shade. This is no more than a sudden invasion of the States of the Church by sea, and a march upon Rome. It is thought that, in such an event, the Pope will have to seek refuge in Austria. A French armorer has sent to Garibaldi a gift of a coat of mail, dagger proof and bullet proof. Its workmanship is perfect, and it is valued at upwards of five thousand francs. It may be worn under the uniform like a shirt, for it is extremely flexible, light and portable.

Baron Rothschild, the great Jew banker, is very intimate with Napoleon, is seen arm in arm with him almost every day, and sits at his right hand at public dinners. The political gossips say that the baron is to be made king of Jerusalem, under the protection of France, "for a consideration." A Jew ruling in Palestine would be a notable event, and would answer for a fulfillment of several prophetic texts.

NAPLES AND SICILY.

The Compt of Syracuse, uncle of the King of Naples, has written a letter to Prince Carignan, in which he announces his adhesion to the principle of Italian unity, and closes it with the words, "Hail, Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy."

Garibaldi continued his preparations for a descent on the main land.

The ambassadors at Naples were transferring their families to the steamers in the harbor.

Garibaldi volunteers in Calabria were organizing a revolution in the mountains.

Pending fresh events in Italy, and especially renewed action on the part of Garibaldi, rumors are circulated and conjectures indulged in. Of the former the latest that has reached me is that Col. Franconniere, aide-de-camp to Prince Napoleon, who is now in Turin, was bearer of an autograph letter from the French Emperor to Victor Emmanuel, warning him to be careful what he did, for that if he provoked a collision with Austria, he must not reckon on assistance from France, which Power, bound by the treaty of Zurich, would not interfere on his behalf.

The Paris correspondent of the Allemeine Zeitung of the 10th, says that the Pope has written a most melancholy letter to the Cardinal in France. He looks upon all as lost, and although convinced that he shall die by the bullet of an assassin, he declares he will not quit Rome under any condition or at any price.

The Fugitive Christians of Syria.

The following account of the removal of the surviving women and children of Deir-el-Kamar to Beirut, on board a British steamer, is from a letter of one of the officers, and gives a vivid picture of the bereavement and distress of the poor creatures:—

"When we got to the place pointed out, we saw on some hills, about two miles off the beach, crowds of women and children huddled together, apparently in great distress, and we could not make out how it was they did not come down to the beach to be taken off. So the captain sent me ashore with all the boats to bring them off. I made all the boats lay off the surf, and then landed myself, with an interpreter. I met an armed party of Druses on landing, and told them I wished to see the chief, as it appeared it was he who would not allow the people to depart. I went about two miles to a village where the chief lived. On my way up I met crowds of women and children in a fearful state of distress, but no men; they had all been killed. If I had been an angel, I could not have been more blessed; for, poor creatures, no sooner did they catch sight of my uniform, than they fell down at my feet and kissed my hands, and implored me to save them. I was quite astonished to see the number of them; instead of 200 to 300, as we heard there were, there were at least 1500, and the most horrible part was, there was hardly a man to be seen, nor a boy over 12 years old; they had all been massacred—husbands, brothers, and fathers, every one. Poor things, they seemed overjoyed to get away, and when they got to the beach I had the greatest difficulty in preventing them throwing themselves into the sea, and had to drag one or two of them out of the surf myself.

"We only had about eight boats, but these we began to load with all dispatch, every poor woman and child having to be carried through a tremendous surf to the boats. However, our blue jackets worked well and cheerfully. Some of the women and children were badly wounded. They had been wounded while clinging to their husbands and fathers when they were killed. As soon as a boat was loaded she was sent off to the ship, and the poor creatures stowed as close as they would lie on board, and then the boat was sent back. After two hours' hard work our decks were packed as close as possible, and we had room for no more. The gunboat, I must tell you, was full of fugitives from Sidon, so that she could not hold any. The sun had set, the surf was increasing fast, and two or three of our boats had been pitched bottom up on the beach, and there were still seven hundred unfortunate women and children on the beach, all footsore, and some of them had not touched any food for two or three days."

Jerusalem is now in danger, being menaced from without by three thousand Bedouin Arabs, and from within by the fanatical Moslems. The Missionaries have fled to Jaffa, and unless the Governor proves to be a better man than his colleagues, Jerusalem will be laid low. The streets of Beirut were almost deserted, and the town become as silent as a grave yard. Every trunk is packed ready to embark at a moment's notice, whenever their respective Consuls shall bid them go. Business ceased long ago, and shopping is at an end for the present.

It is generally believed that the French will insist upon occupying Syria immediately, and many think that the last hours of the "sick man" have come. One thing, and only one thing, is certain. Great changes of some kind are at hand in the East.

Thirty thousand Christian women had been sold at twenty-five piastres each, and detained in harems. The number of Christians killed in Syria is 15,000, at least. In Damascus, 8000 were slain.

Napoleon III. has given twenty-thousand Napoleons to help the Syrian Christians, who will be delighted to look upon his picture in gold.

Notices, &c.

To Subscribers.—The cash receipts and a portion of our book notices are unavoidably crowded out this week, owing to the index being inserted.

☞ The conference at Danielsonville, Ct., will be holden on the 26th of Sept. instead of the 6th, as noticed in a previous number.

Acknowledgment.—Have just received of Eld H. L. Hastings from the tract fund, $33.60 of tracts. These are to be scattered free where I travel. Also a few works for sale. Thanks to the donors, and publisher.
W. Sheldon.

Iowa, Minn. and Wisconsin Christian Conference.

Our fourth annual conference will be holden at Springville, Badax Co., Wis., commencing Oct. 4th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over Lord's day. Springville is about thirty miles from La Crosse (on the Mississippi river,) from which the stage runs every Tuesday and Friday, and about thirty-five from Sparta (on the Milwaukee and Lacrosse R. R.,) from which place a stage runs every Wednesday to Viroqua, only three or four miles from Springville. Strangers can inquire for Wm. A. Morse, or W. Sheldon.

P. S. W. Deyo, W. Sheldon, } Evangelists.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a campmeeting in Exeter, Me., commencing Monday, Sept. 17th, and continue one week. The meeting will be holden on the old ground, near the Chamberlain meeting-house, and twenty-two miles from Bangor. As there is no stage that runs within four miles of the place, if the brethren will inform us what day or days they will be in Bangor, we will have a team there to take them to the meeting for about one half the fare in the stage.

Arrangements will be made for boarding and horse keeping on reasonable terms. We hope all who can will bring their tents and bedding with them. We expect our preaching brethren, Billings and Hemenway, and all others whom the Lord shall send. As this meeting is not designed to build up any party or sect, we hope our brethren and sisters will come with hearts full of love and zeal for God and his truth, praying that truth may prevail and good order and quietness pervade the encampment.

Circumstances are such, it is thought best to change the location of this meeting from Levant, as was noticed by Bro. Hemenway, to Exeter, Me.

D. E. Ireland, H. N. Patten, H. Cole, } Committee.

Notice.

There will be a barn or grove meeting in South Pittsfield, N. H., about three miles from the village, commencing Sept. 7th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Sabbath. Elder Hiram Munger will attend and preach the word. Come, brethren, at the commencement of the meeting. Do not wait until Sunday. There will be provision made for man and beast. Brethren coming from Portsmouth will take the stage at Newmarket, Friday morning, and stop at Warren Yeattons, in Epsom. Inquire for C. S. Emerson.
C. S. Emerson.

Notice.

The Advent Chapel at West Hoosick, N. Y., will be dedicated Thursday, the 27th of Sept. Meeting to continue over the following Sunday. I and Bro. J. S. White are expected to attend, and preach the word. By request of the church.
M. Batchelor.

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

Also, a tent meeting in Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill., near Bro. Larken Scott's, to commence Sept. 27th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday. We hope to see a general rally. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be there to preach the word.

Also, there is to be two tent meetings in Brown Co., Ill.; one at Mt. Pleasant, or Mt. Stirling, as Brn. Raymond and others may arrange, to commence Oct. 12th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday.

The other at Ripley, to commence Oct. 3d, (Wednesday) at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be in attendance at all of the above named meetings and preach the word. I expect God will bless his word to the salvation of souls. I hope the brethren in the different localities will make the meetings a special subject of prayer, that there may be much good done in the name of Jesus.
Moses Chandler, for the Church.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a conference in Buchanan, Mich., to commence on the evening of the 19th of Sept. and continue over Lord's day. Bro. F. H. Berick will be present to preach the word. We trust our brethren will take advantage of this opportunity. In behalf of the church,
D. R. Mansfield.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses. We shall have a goodly assortment at the Wilbraham campmeeting, if the Lord will.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the Grove near the Anderson School-house, 2 1-2 miles south-west of Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, Sept. 23d, commencing at 10 o'clock.

Sept. 24th, 25th, 26th, in Unity, near the Centre Road Depot, on the Pittsburgh and Erie Rail Road.

Sept. 27th and 28th in the Simmon's neighborhood, one mile and a half from Jefferson, Ashtabula Co., Ohio.

Saturday evening and over Sunday, at Ashtabula, Ohio. Monday eve., Oct. 1st, at Girard, near Bro. Alton's.
John T. Cooney, Evangelist.

Bro. J. W. Crabtree will preach at
Sandisfield, Mass....Sept. 9th
New Britain, Ct....Sept. 16th
W. A. Fenn.

I will be at Yarmouth, Me., with Bro. R. R. York, Sept. 14th, and will preach for him that evening if he desires. Also, I expect to be in West Poland, Me., Sabbath, Sept. 16th, and preach in the Free Chapel if there is no other appointment. If there should be, will Bro. Jesse Partridge make appointment for me in that section.
O. R. Fassett.

Providence permitting, I will preach from Sept. 6th to 10th in the vicinity of Barnsted, N. H.

☞ Cannot attend the grove meeting in Chichester.
Hiram Munger.

Bro. W. Sutherland appoints to preach at
River Point....Sept. 9th
Warwick Plains....Sept. 16th

I purpose to preach at Massena, N. Y., the second and third Sundays of Sept.
M. Batchelor.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Portland, Me....Sunday, Sept. 9th
Frankfort Mills....Sunday, Sept. 16th

Commence a series of meetings at Dover, Me., where Bro. Lougee may appoint, Wednesday, Sept. 26th, to continue over the following Sabbath.
J. Hemenway.

APPOINTMENTS for DANIELSONVILLE, CT.
Eld. Geo. Champlin....Sept. 9th
Eld. H. F. Carpenter....Sept. 16th and 23d

The R. I. State Quarterly Conference will meet at this place Sept. 26th. We purpose continuing the public services over the following Sunday. Friends from abroad are invited to attend.
H. F. Carpenter, Pastor.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Newfield, Ct....Sept. 9th
Litchfield Station....Sept. 11th
Camps Mills (Bro. Gunn's)....Sept. 12th
Plymouth Hollow....Sept. 16th
Wallingford....Sept. 23d
L. S. Ludington.

On the second Sunday in September I will meet with Dr. Huntington and his people, and preach.
R. V. Lyon.

G. A. Otis and J. Pinkham, providence permitting, will be at Warner, N. H., where J. Morgan may appoint, Sept. 12th, 7 o'clock. At Bradford the 13th, and Newbury the 14th, each at 7 o'clock in the evening.

I will be with them Saturday evening, Sept. 15th, and Sunday the 16th. At Grantham where H. Ford shall appoint.
J. G. Smith.

Sarah Higgins will preach at the New Chapel W. H. Point, Sept. 9th.
B. Bancroft, Cor. Sec.

With God's permission I will attend meetings as follows:—
Round Pond, Me....Sept. 16th
Surry, Me....Sept. 23d
Carmel, Me., (Union Meeting-house)....Sept. 30th
Thomas Smith.

To Correspondents.

Eld. Jonathan Wilson's P. O. address is Shawnee, Niagara Co., N. Y.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question; "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem, and the positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the wicked ... [illegible] ... Baptist minister. Price, unbound, [illegible] per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 6 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Truth will Triumph at the Last.

Christian, doth the way seem dreary?
Is thy pathway marked with pain?
Do thy dearest friends forsake thee,
When their love should most sustain?
Trust, oh, trust in Jesus ever,
He will surely come again.

Christian, are you sometimes asking,
When your sky is overcast,
And in darkness you are wading,
When your foes will stand aghast?
Trust, oh trust in Jesus ever,
Truth will triumph at the last.

Christian, let not courage fail you
When the cares of life oppress;
Walking humbly, do your duty,
Though your sky is overcast.
Trust, oh trust in Jesus ever,
Truth will triumph at the last.

Christian, there will come a morning
That will scatter all the gloom,
Brighter hopes and sweeter flowers
Surely then thou 'lt call thine own.
Christian, trust in Jesus ever,
He will surely come to reign.

Christian, pray; pray without ceasing,
Let no chilling wind or blast
Move thy faith, oh, do not waver,
Soon afflictions will be past.
Trust thy faith in Jesus ever,
Truth will triumph at the last.

JULIAETTA TIBBALS.

Canadice, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

"What must be Done?"

The gospel must be preached. In view of the great harvest before us, Bro. H. L. H. asks the important question, "What must be done?" Well, the gospel must be preached! And for one, I feel almost certain that a "dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me," but "against my will," and woe is me if I preach it not.

I look upon the world as a vast wilderness of sin, inhabited by human beings who are groping their way in darkness, and wallowing in the filth and mire, because there is no one to instruct and lead them into the gospel light and green pastures of the Lord. There are many so-called teachers and preachers who have stationed themselves in this wilderness, permanently to put these wanderers in the right way to Zion. Onward they start, and because they have no leader, they soon get lost again, and return to their "wallowing in the mire." Now who will take the gospel-lamp and penetrate this dark wilderness, in search of some poor lost sinners, that would be glad to be led in the way of righteousness, life and peace? I will go, if my Master says so. But how am I to know? by certain impressions? I think so. When a man feels that he cannot enjoy religion, nor please God, nor be saved, unless he preaches Christ and him crucified to a dying world, I think it equivalent to saying, Go preach my gospel, or woe is upon thee. Now am I not right, or am I mistaken about this matter? I would know for a certainty, for I consider it holy work, —for none but those who are sent of God to do.

I will relate a few incidents and impressions which have led me to this conclusion. When I was first converted, some nine or ten years ago, under the labors of Bro. Sutherland, we had a young converts' prayer-meeting one afternoon. When I spoke, I talked about the christian's armor, and while speaking, Bro. S. remarked that I would some day "preach the gospel." I always remembered that; and perhaps he does to. My friends were much enraged to learn that I had become a "Millerite," and tried every way to shame me, telling me that it would not "last long." I remember saying that I would "preach those things before I would give them up." As I grew in grace, the impression grew stronger on my mind that I must bear that cross. Doubtless Bro's Brazee and Goodrell remember how I used to weep in agony, at times, but they knew not what for. Perhaps some will remember my bitter weeping at the Wilbraham campmeeting a year ago. But none knew the cause of my sorrow. None knew what a great burden I was under. None could sympathize with me, for I kept the secret to myself. I have frequently told my wife that I should backslide and be lost, unless I discharged that duty. For the last few months I have not enjoyed a particle of religion, because I would not do my Master's will.

Within a few weeks my mind has been heavily burdened with thoughts like these. The Lord is soon coming to gather his jewels, and take his loved ones home. I want to go there too, and I must get ready. But sinners don't know that he is so near, and I ought to tell them; yes, I ought to warn them of their danger, lest they raise their voice in the judgment, saying, O if you had told me these things, I might have been saved! Two weeks ago to-day, I resolved that I would serve the Lord and bear the cross. Called in both families of the house to hear my resolutions. I read the 51st Psalm, and the 6th chapter of Romans. Talked a little while, then prayed for myself and all in the house. The Lord [illegible] repaid me for obedience. I afterwards called my shop-mates together, talked with and prayed for them. Though the cross was heavy, grace was abundantly given; peace and consolation followed. Blessed be the name of the Lord! But must I enter the battle-field and wage war with Satan and his hosts? Must I buckle on the the armor and fight to save perishing sinners? In a word, must I preach the gospel? Had I education, with my impressions, I would not hesitate a moment. But when I look at myself, I behold my insufficiency, my ignorance and my weakness. Perhaps pride and ambition wants to be satisfied. Ah! that's it. If I could only master these big "supralapsaria" words, I would love to preach. But would the "vandals" understand? Would sinners flee from the wrath to come? No, no. Simple language can persuade the sinner that Christ loves them, and longs to save them. Away then, ambition, let me improve upon the one talent that God has given me, and if I lack any thing more, he can supply the deficiency. Let the learned preach to the learned, and I, being ignorant, will preach to the ignorant. Yea, I will go out into the highways and hedges, calling the poor, the lame, the halt and the blind, to come and hear the gospel, and hear what God hath in store for them that will love him.

I have conferred with "flesh and blood" long enough; have had the fear of man before me long enough. I must go. I must content myself that it is His will, and that he will qualify me, and be with me, if I will only go trusting in his name, striving to glorify him and his cause. I think of those poor ignorant fishermen of Galilee, whom he chose to be his apostles; I think of not a few who were called in these days that were ignorant, but now are "mighty in the Scriptures." I recollect that he sometimes takes a weak, ignorant man to confound the learned and mighty. For they, in their eloquence, labor year after year without converting a sinner. But he beholds the labors of a poor ignorant man of God crowned with success. These facts encourage me to go, if the Lord has chosen me, feeling that my sufficiency is of him. Oh, my Lord, help me; increase my faith, for I desire to serve thee more faithfully than ever before, securing for myself an abundant entrance into thy blessed kingdom, bringing with me one saved by my labor to share the glories of that world without end. Amen!

G. W. GILLESPIE.

Dalton, Mass.

For the Crisis.

To Preachers' Wives.

DEAR SISTERS:—I have felt it duty for more than three years past to address you on the subject of dress; but have neglected it for fear of offending some of my best friends. But duty impels me forward. The thoughts of God's cause and the good of sinners roll in upon me with ponderous weight. The cause of truth is suffering. "How?" asks one. Why, by the example of preachers' wives. Not that they are or should be better than others, but because there is more expected of them, and they are looked up to as an example by the weaker ones, we know. And this should be one great reason why we should be very careful to adorn our profession with a well ordered life and godly conversation, and not decorate our bodies with gold and silver, and costly array. But I have seen those I loved dearly decorated both with gold and costly array, and it has come home to my heart in thunder tones, "How can a husband preach the whole gospel, when a part of himself is practicing directly contrary to it?"

"O," says one, "I like good taste; I like to see persons look neat and tasty." So do I, but I had rather be neat and plain, than to spend so much time in fixing up the earthly bodies. I wish to stir up your minds by some of the blessed words of the Lord, written for our instruction. Says Paul, "I will that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting. In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness,) with good works."—1 Tim. 2: 8–10. Read also the language of Peter, as follows:—"Likewise ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives; while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear.—Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands: even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement."—1 Pet. 3: 3–6. Many other passages I might quote, to show the sinfulness of such a course as I have alluded to.

Have we not given ourselves to the Lord? Has he not called us to be partakers with our companions in the sufferings and sacrifices of the gospel? And are not his servants commanded to preach the whole gospel? Most certainly they are. Then how careful, how conscientious we should [illegible] Eternal things are too much trifled [illegible] with by us. My dear sisters, what can we expect of young converts, if preachers' wives set them no good example in regard to dress, unless God himself takes them in hand? What will be the result of such an example but worldliness and pride? My dear sisters, you are not aware of the immense good or evil you are capable of doing. The young and tender lambs are looking to you for strength; they are perishing for want of spiritual encouragement. O, look about yourselves, and see whether you are in the right path or not. Be companions for your husbands indeed. Throw your whole minds and souls into the work of God. Your husbands can preach with more power, if you will be willing to deny yourselves of a few things. Look after the poor; visit where they are the least respectable, and urge the erring to the path of duty. Do not try to see how much comfort you can take yourself, but see how much you can comfort others. It is for the good of your fellow men that you are placed in such a position as you are. Count not your lives dear to yourselves. If you see a sister in an error, go to her alone, and tell her of her fault, and do not publish it abroad. O that God would seal these instructions upon our hearts, that we may profit by them, is the prayer of

HATTIE.

Providence, R. I.

For the Crisis.

A Word or Two.

Some think organized matter cannot reason, therefore they say the body is but the passive instrument or agent of a spiritual essence within it, called spirit. This spirit, they say, possesses reasoning powers. But if this spirit is created, it is either organized matter, for whatever is created is matter of some kind, or passive unorganized matter. If a mere passive agency, yet matter, then the reasoning power or faculty is another essence still beyond, and is either only a more refined created organism, or a part of God himself. If the last, then man is but a mere passive instrument, or means through which God reveals or manifests himself; and hence must be saved, or more properly speaking, must have continued existence by virtue of God's unconditional or predestinated purpose. And whatever portion of mankind is refused continued existence must be totally annihilated, or changed to a state of nonentity, so far as capability of happiness or misery is concerned. For if they exist in torment, God is unjust, they not having sinned, being incapable. The total annihilation, so called, of the refused portion, or else the salvation or continued existence of all, is the future condition of every man, on the theory that created intelligences, as distinct beings from God, are an impossibility. We cannot comprehend how a created being can have reasoning powers, yet the Bible declares it possible, whether of this or that quality of matter.

H. B.

For the Crisis.

What is Truth?

"Man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?"—Bible.

Answer. 1st, They are not in heaven. "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven."—John 3: 13. "Then said Jesus unto them, yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me; and where I am, thither ye cannot come."—John 7: 33, 34. Mark the expression. Jesus says to his disciples, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you; ye shall seek me; and, as I said unto the Jews, whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you.'—John 13: 33. "For David is not ascended into the heavens."—Acts 3: 34. Was the apostle Peter mistaken, or did he tell the truth with regard to King David? The truth of course. Then let us believe it.

2d. They are not in hell fire. "The wicked is reserved to the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath."—Job 21: 30. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished; but chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise government."—2 Pet. 2: 9–10.

3d. Where are they? We answer affirmatively, they are in their graves—saints and sinners. "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.—John 5: 28, 29. This is plain talk, but is it not true? Where does Peter say that the patriarch David is? he has told us where he is not,—that he is not in heaven. Says he, "Let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day."—Acts 2: 29. All in one place. "All go to one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again."—Eccl. 3: 20. "For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—Gen. 3: 19. "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.—Dan. 12: 2. David, when speaking of his death, says, "Thou hast brought me into the dust of death."—Ps. 22: 15. "Now shall I sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be."—Job 7: 21.

4th. The grave is one of darkness, silence and repose. "There the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary be at rest. There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor. The small and the great are there, and the servant is free from his master."—Job 3: 17–19. Again, says Job, "I go . . . even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death."—Job 10: 21. David asks the solemn question, "Shall thy wonders be known in the dark? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?"—Ps. 88: 12. "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest."—Eccl. 9: 10.

Then, according to Bible testimony, they that are in their graves, or in the embrace of death, praise not the Lord, and can exercise no power of the mind whatever. They know not anything. Death is an enemy; Satan hath the power of this enemy of man, but Christ is coming soon to destroy both. 1 Cor. 15: 26; Heb. 2: 14; Rev. 20: 14.

P. TANDY.

Selected for the Crisis.

We would see Jesus.

We would see Jesus, for the shadows lengthen
Across the little landscape of our life;
We would see Jesus, our weak faith to strengthen
For the last weariness, the final strife.
We would see Jesus, for life's hand hath rested
With its dark touch upon both head and brow,
And though our souls have many a billow breasted,
Others are rising in the distance now.

We would see Jesus—the great rock foundation
Whereon our feet were set by sovereign grace;
Nor life nor death, with all their agitation,
Can thence remove us if we see his face.
We would see Jesus—other lights are failing
Which for long years we have rejoiced to see;
The blessings of our pilgrimage are fading—
We would not mourn them, for we go to thee.

We would see Jesus—sense is all too blending,
And heaven appears too dim, too far away
We would see thee to gain a sweet reminding
That thou hast promised our great debt to pay.
We would see Jesus—that is all we're needing,
Strength, joy, and willingness come with the sight;
We would see Jesus—dying, risen, pleading,
Then welcome day, and farewell mortal night.

JAS B.

Hamilton, C W, Aug 8th, '60.

For the Crisis.

Artificial Flowers.

"Why don't you wear them?" is often asked, "God made flowers." It is true, God made flowers, but not artificial ones. Art fails in its endeavors, if it does not present nature in the union of beauty and truth. Some artificials are not at all beautiful, and not one-tenth part are true to nature. And be they ever so beautiful and ever so true, they have no fragrance. Give me the blooming rose, the flower that God has made, with its lovely tints and sweet aroma. Works of art, if true to nature, I admire, whether it be statuary, painting or flowers. But our common artificial flowers are a disgrace to art and nature.

MARION A. COTTON.

Selections.

All for Dignity.

Offended dignity! How often have we seen brethren in a frenzy of excitement, because their dignity had been wounded. Some one has slighted them; a word of disrespect has been dropped; due consideration has not been paid to them in the appointment of committees, elections of officers, or councils, and plans of the church; their opinions have not been adopted, and their wishes deferred to in church-meetings; their propositions have been voted down, and their plans and recommendations rejected, and they are offended. Their dignity has not been properly considered, and they resent it. The minister has not called upon them as often as upon others; they are not elected leaders in the social circles; are crowded in the choir; or some one has failed to speak to them some time or other. Under these fearful burdens, these crushing griefs, they fret and foam, complain, snap and snarl, and nurse their trouble, feeling that their dignity has been wonderfully wounded.

Sometimes they will sulk and pout for weeks over it, absent themselves from the meetings of the church, walk stiffly by the preacher, deacons, and brethren, disdaining to unbend their offended dignity and seek to assuage their grief. Then again, they will prove petulant, contrary, throw obstacles in the way of the peace and prosperity of the church, determined to be felt somewhere; if they cannot be loved, they resolve to be feared; if they cannot be appreciated for good deeds, they determine to be recognized as a force, as having power, as of some consequence, by the injury they can do; and they find it much easier to become notorious for doing harm than for doing good. A man need not know much, nor have any virtues, to make a vast amount of trouble. "Almost a fool" can do more harm in a church than several good men can counteract. It is in this way that most men gain their notoriety. They can make trouble, do harm, annoy, destroy good, neutralize the efforts of the good and true, and they can do it in defence of their dignity. Some brother has offended them, and they refuse all social recognition, refuse to speak, withhold the hand, and their vain hearts turn away with the false and foolish thought that they are exalting their dignity. And when two such heroes meet, grumble, pout, swell and strut, what a spectacle of dignity they present! Poor souls, they don't seem to know that all such acts degrade and dishonor them.—Morning Star.

☞ Good and evil are in their nature like harmony and discord—both conditions depending on relations, and not principles of themselves.

A Bad Habit for a Mother.

We take the following from the "Mother's Journal:"—

Mrs. Coleman used to say she could not see why her children did not mind her better. She was sure she did not drive them, and make them obstinate in that way, and they had everything done for them which could be done, and yet they never yielded cheerful obedience; and she looked worried and anxious all the time. However, she would have stoutly resented it if any one else had ventured the opinion that they were not the best children in the world, or had suggested a change in her manner of governing them.

It was eight o'clock in the evening, and all the little Colmans were in the sitting-room, when the customary scene was commenced, which was repeated with slight variations every evening.

"Come, Horace," began the mother, addressing her eldest boy, a child of ten years, "come, it is bed-time now—you had better put away your book."

"Oh! I can't go to bed now—I'm right in the middle of a story, besides, I aint going as long as Carrie sits up."

"Come, Carrie, you go too," said the mother. "You won't feel like getting up in the morning."

Carrie took no notice of her mother's remark, but went on crocheting, and the mother busied herself with the baby, who presently fell asleep in her arms.

"There, Georgie, you're sound asleep on the sofa; you must awake now and go up stairs."

No answer from Georgie.

Presently Mrs. Colman rose, and laid the baby softly in the cradle. He had been very fretful all day. She began to shake Georgie gently by the shoulder, saying over and over again, "Come, wake up, Georgie."

"Be still!" vociferated the little fellow at last.

"Sh! sh! don't wake up the baby," said the mother; but Georgie clamored, and presently the baby joined in.

"Dear me, what a noise," said Horace, pettishly. The mother jogged the cradle gently, and by the time its refractory occupant was quiet, the boy upon the sofa was sound asleep again, where he lay till past nine o'clock. At last the waking up scene was recommenced, and the mother began to coax her daughter to rock the cradle.

Ungraciously, at last, she rose, and began to jog the cradle, muttering something about the plague of babies.

After some ten minutes of coaxing, with "Come now, do, Georgie, come, please do" reiterated for the fortieth time, Master Georgie was half led and half carried to bed. The two elder children went when their mother did.

Every morning a similar scene was carried on before breakfast to get the children up, and before school to get them ready and started, and the "come now," and the "please do," were about as effectual as in the previously cited instance, usually resulting in the children's doing as they pleased, or being hired to do as their mother pleased.

Occasionally the tune was varied to, "I wouldn't," "now, please don't," when Master Horace proposed to go skating on the river, or riding a dangerous horse—or Georgie took the vases from the mantel-piece to fill his little wheelbarrow.

Poor Mrs. Coleman sighed, and fretted and worried, but never tried the simple remedy once recommended to her, a little firm authority. Her will was weak—the children's strong, and they came off victors. There are many Mrs. Colmans, spoiling many families of children.

Peculiarities of Early Preachers.

The fathers differed much in pulpit action; the greater part used very moderate and sober gesture. Paul, of Samosata, used to stamp with his foot, and strike his thigh with his hand, and throw himself into violent agitations; but he was blamed for it by his cotemporaries. They thought his action theatrical and improper in a church. The first preachers delivered their sermons all extempore, and they studied the countenances of their auditors, to see whether their doctrine was understood.

Sermons in those days were all in the vulgar tongue. The Greeks preached in Greek, the Latins in Latin, for the preachers meant to be understood. They did not preach by the clock, so to speak, but short or long, as they saw occasion. Augustine used to leave off when the hearts of the people seemed properly affected with the subject. Their sermons were usually about an hour long, but many of them may be pronounced in half an hour, and several in less time.—Robinson.

Maxims of Washington.

The following maxims of Washington ought to be published in every newspaper in the land once a year:—

Use no reproachful language against any one—neither curses nor reviling.

Be not too hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any one.

In your apparel be modest, and endeavor to accommodate nature rather than procure admiration.

Associate yourself only with men of good quality if you esteem your reputation, for it is better to be alone than in bad company.

Let your conversation be without malice or envy, for it is a sign of a tractable and commendable spirit; and in all cases of passion, admit reason to govern.

Use not base and frivolous things against grown and learned men; nor very difficult questions and subjects among the ignorant; nor things hard to be believed.

Speak not of doleful things in the time of mirth, nor at the table; nor of melancholy things, as death or wounds, and if others mention them, change, if you can, the discourse.

Break not a jest when none take pleasure in mirth. Laugh not loud, nor at all without occasion. Deride no man's misfortune, though there seems to be some cause.

Speak not injurious words, either in jest or in earnest. Scoff at no one though you may get occasion.

Be not forward, but friendly and courteous—the first to salute, hear and answer—and be not pensive when it is time to converse.

Keep to the fashions of your equal, such as are civil and orderly with respect to time and place.

Go not thither, when you know not whether you shall be welcome or not.

Reprehend not the imperfections of others, for that belongs to parents, masters and superiors.

Speak not in an unknown tongue in company, but in your own language; and that as those of quality do, and not as the vulgar. Sublime matters treat seriously.

Think before you speak; pronounce not imperfectly, nor bring out your words too hastily, but orderly and distinct.

"Let Us Help One Another."

[The following quaint lines convey a beautiful moral, teaching us that there is no sphere or circumstance in life in which we cannot render each other "mutual assistance."]

A man very lame, was a little to blame,
To stray far away from his humble abode;
Hot, thirsty, bemired, and heartily tired,
He laid himself down in the road.

While thus he reclined, a man that was blind
Came by and entreated his aid;
"Deprived of my sight, unassisted to-night,
I shall not reach my home, I'm afraid."

"Intelligence give of the place where you live,"
Said the cripple, "perhaps I may know it;
In my road it may be, and if you'll carry me,
It will give me much pleasure to show it.

Great strength you have got, which, alas! I have not,
In my legs, so fatigued every nerve is;
For the use of your back, for the eyes that you lack,
My pair shall be much at your service."

Said the poor blind man, "what a wonderful plan,
Pray, get on my shoulders, good brother;
I see all mankind, if they are but inclined,
May constantly help one another."

—Golden Rule.

The Art of not Quarreling.

How is it we never quarrel, Mrs. Xantippe? Well, I will tell you. You see, for a quarrel, and especially a good quarrel, it is necessary to have two parties. One person can't make a quarrel. Now if I am in a quarrelsome humor, and break out, my wife remains cool and collected, and doesn't say a word. If my wife is peevish, and displays more temper than is becoming to one of her beautiful sex, I, her husband, remain as unmoved as a monument, or else cheat myself into the belief that I am listening for the moment to one of Grisi's heavenly songs. Thus, whilst one party is volcanically fuming, the other is as calm as a cold potatoe. In all our quarrels there is, in this way, always a controlling power. Seriously, we never quarrel, because there is a philosophic compact between us never to quarrel together. We only quarrel one at a time! and it is astonishing, if you leave a quarrel alone, how very soon it dies out. That's our secret, madam, and I should advise you and all Xantippes to follow it.—Punch.

Hygiene.

"THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

Value of Fresh Air.

Windows opened more would keep doctors from the door. A very large quantity of fresh air is spoiled and rendered foul by breathing. A man spoils not less than a gallon every minute. In eight hours' breathing, a full grown man spoils as much fresh air as seventeen three-bushel sacks could hold! If he were shut up in a room seven feet broad, seven feet long, and seven feet high, the doors and windows fitting so tightly that no air could pass through, he would die, poisoned by his own breath, in a very few hours; in twenty-four hours he would have spoiled all the air contained in the room, and have converted it into poison!

Reader, when you rise to-morrow morning, just go out of doors for five minutes, and observe carefully the freshness of the air. That air is in the state in which God keeps it for breathing. Then come back suddenly into your close room, and your own senses will at once make you feel how very far the air in your chamber is from being in the same wholesome and serviceable condition.

Tobacco.

Ladies, did you know that tobacco in your families may poison you, your children, and your posterity? Men of sense say but little about it as a nuisance. They go deeper; they treat it as a rank poison, which penetrates flesh and blood and bone, becoming part and parcel of the man, making him a living receptacle of the virus, a poisoned body, which, whether asleep or awake, at home or abroad, by insensible perspiration, poisons the common air and all about it! The tobacco effluvia of your son is sufficient to make a stage-load of women and children sick, who are not accustomed to it. The tobacco your husband uses each day, made into a tea, and given to a score of children, would poison the whole, and probably lay many of them dead.

Ladies, I am not attempting to show that the users of tobacco injure themselves; this would be superfluous; but do they injure others? Do they injure you and your children? I think they do. Fathers beget children in their own likeness. They transmit their color, features, temperaments, and diseases, and sometimes their appetites. And the idea that the offspring of parents debauched on tobacco, can avoid the disabilities of birth, or avoid an eternal law of God, would be ridiculous were it not pitiable. Physicians of acumen and sense have sometimes pointed me to family after family of pitiable dwarfs and half-idiots, saying, in substance, "These are specimens of the inherited effects of tobacco! The parents were sots on the poison; like begets like, and here you have it!" Physicians and others have now and then named the case of an infant here and there, which actually inherited a taste for tobacco, and their wailings, when a few days old, were appeased by beastly parents actually applying tobacco to their tongues! A noble woman remarks, "if getting married does not reform the tobacco toper, one of its blessed effects ought to do so, for no man ought to poison his babe!"

Mothers, you who have lost young children—they grew sick and died strangely, and no cause was assigned which robbed you of these objects of endearment. But did it ever occur to you, that, as soon as born, your babes were enveloped in tobacco smoke, and their tender lungs played in a poisoned atmosphere the instant they began to play at all? Did it ever occur to you that your child, by sleeping with its father, slept with a huge body of poison, perspiring at a million pores, and lodging its exhalations on the babe? I believe that many fathers, of tearful eyes and noble hearts, have killed their own children without knowing it! Painful thought!

Mothers! are you willing that husbands and sons "should smoke to their heart's content, if they do nothing worse?"—Anti-Tobacco Tracts.

Saleratus and Soda.

These articles have entered largely into bread making in this country during the last few years, and to the free use of them is attributed not only much ill health and decayed teeth, but the general frailness of our people, and especially of females. These articles tend to destroy the bloom, freshness and vigor of our people, and make them puny and sickly. A revolution is evidently necessary in bread making. In many countries they have laws regulating bread making, and inspectors of public bakeries. Nothing can be of greater importance to the health of the present generation, and the mental and physical status of the generation to follow us, than the food we eat, and especially the bread, which forms so large a portion of our food. We think that if no lady were allowed to marry until she could make good, light, plain, substantial, healthy bread, without poisonous drugs, and that if the promise to make such bread should be made a part of the marriage contract, we should all live happier and longer, and the children of subsequent generations would come into the world laughing instead of crying.

Smoking a Cause of Insanity.

The terrible ravages which tobacco is making on the bodies and minds of the young, seem to be attracting the attention of medical men in various parts of the world. In a pamphlet just issued by Dr. Seymore, of London, on Private Lunatic Asylums, and the causes of insanity of late years, the Doctor denounces with emphasis, as one of the producing causes, the immoderate smoking indulged in by boys and young men at Universities and "larger schools called Colleges." The doctor's remarks are as applicable to the youths of this country as those of Europe. No one conversant with disease can doubt that excessive smoking, especially in the case of young people, must be highly injurious to both mind and body. Its effect is to depress the circulation—the heart becomes weak, irregular in its action, and the pulse is scarcely to be felt. The victim becomes irresolute and nervous, his appetite fails, and his mind fills with imaginary evils. This may continue for years, but at length the smoker dies, often suddenly; then the examination has shown that the muscular structure of the heart is imperfect in its action; the left side is thin; and in some cases, in which sudden death has occurred, there has been found little more than a strip of muscular fibre left on that side.

To avoid the danger of Lightning.

During thunder storms persons in houses should sit or lie in some place as far distant as possible from the chimney, and the most exposed part of the walls—the middle of the room, if it is large, is the safest locality. Sailors on the sea should keep as far from the masts as possible, and farmers in the fields should never seek shelter under trees. Horizontal strokes of lightning sometimes take place, and several persons have been struck while sitting at an open window during thunder storms. Every window of a room in which persons are sitting, in such cases, should be closed; a flash of the fluid, which would pass through an open window into an apartment, will be conducted down through the floor and wall to the earth if the window is shut.

Beards.

"There is an intimate connection between the nerves and muscles of the face and eyes," says the Boston Post, "and allowing the beard to grow strengthens the eye. It is said that surgeons in the French army have proved by experience, in Africa, that soldiers wearing the beard are much less liable to disease of the eye, and it is generally conceded that it is a protection from diseases of the throat and lungs. It is asserted that in countries where it is the custom to wear the beard, the eye retains its lustre and brilliancy much longer."

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$1.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies, is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be [illegible] cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and [illegible] cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to [illegible] the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year [illegible] to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for [illegible] numbers, or $1.26 a year. The [illegible] Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 260. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 1.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Dies Iræ.

Day of wrath, of clouds and gloom,
Day of earth's predicted doom,
Can I stand when thou shalt come?

When the brave and strong shall quake,
When the hardened heart shall break,
Shall I then with terror shake?

Thou of pierced hands and side,
Thou who hast for sinners died,
Hear me, I to thee have cried.

Rising from the rending tomb,
Listen to the trump of doom,
Bid me to thy presence come.

Weeping bearer of my sin,
Who salvation didst begin,
To thy joy then take me in.

Thou who sought me when I fled,
Thou who for me blood hast shed,
Shelter thou my bowing head. H. L. H.

May, 1860.

For the Crisis.

Just a Word.

Brother, did the coat fit you? Put it on then; wear it; if you have become lukewarm or cold, it will warm you more effectually than the best "composition" in town. Did that arrow come right spat into your face? or did it stick into your bosom, outside of course, among the gold studs, chains, etc.? Sister, did the arrow light among your jewelry, flowers, laces and ribbons? or was your heart so bared that it went directly there, and begun a good work of grace?

Did the sword gleam frightfully before you? Did you dodge it? Ah! friend, God sent it. Thank him for it. Bless him that he loves you enough to chastise you, or to work with you. Were it not for his unbounded love he never would notice you enough to say, "repent." "Well, but the sword was so all-killingly sharp!" Did it hurt you much? He that maketh sore can make well. When you see the sword coming bless God, and remember this, no dodging. Take all he gives; it will be none too much.

I heard a sister say, "I don't like Bro. ——'s preaching, it's so loud, and so very plain and countryfied;" and I trembled for her that moment. I noticed her in our social conference meetings, and she spoke neither soft nor loud, but was mute. How could she be otherwise? She liked flowery things, but wore them all in her bonnet. Then the arrows of truth came lighting among these ornaments, and she just "dodged." Well, poor soul, you take your portion here. I'd keep my gold, and have it purified and made into a crown. And I would like a "golden harp." Then I'd also prefer the fadeless flowers of Eden to these paper and starched ones worn here. And I'm thinking too of that "costly array" which some will wear, though God so plainly forbids it. It seems as though those who dress plainly, "as becometh women professing godliness," can be hardly fellowshiped in these times.

Well, it seems as though I'd rather not wear my best garments on the journey, through the toil, smoke, suns and storms of life. I'd rather hide them from the world, and keep them pure to wear when I get home. I'm going to a very interesting marriage supper. Shall I put on my wedding garment on the journey, wear all the best here, and then sneak in with a muddy, faded dress? O no! I'll pass along in "modest apparel." No matter though friends forsake, and speculating neighbors deride; I'd choose to feed on food simple and healthy, for unless my appetite is good, I'll not relish the marriage supper.

The Bridegroom has sent me a ticket, with a note of invitation, bearing the inscription, "Come, eat and live." But he tells me I must pay my fare hence. Lord, I'll try and be there. I'm glad we have to "come up out of great tribulation," for the rest will be the sweeter. Christ has also promised me a crown, and tells me how I may have it ornamented. It is simply by turning souls to righteousness. By so doing, stars may be gained to deck my crown; and every time it is my happy privilege to turn a doubting one into the path of righteousness, I feel that another star is bought. Sometimes, when searching out the lowly, the most depraved, and pointing them to Jesus, Sr. Self-respect whispers slyly, "Why do you so?" Why, I'm only putting some stars in my crown. As for me, let my crown shine. The brighter the better. Light is glory; then the more light it is, the more glorious.

Who is willing to seek their portion in eternity, and take what comes in time? Who is willing to stand and be told their duty, and then fulfill it? Let us be faithful. "Well done" will be said only to those who have done well. Then let us work. O realize the shortness of time and be up and doing. Our harvest soldiers are failing. Even Bro. Burnham, that stout man, is feeling mortality. Who will help those who are worn out? Who will aid in the cry? The word comes to you to work; no dodging. Go at it. Be honest. Seek to gain an abundant entrance into the kingdom. Come, go to work. You have folded your arms too long now. Up, and gain victory and honor for God. Amen.

M. MATHEWS.

Lowell, Mass.

For the Crisis.

The Gospel.

The gospel of God, as revealed by prophets and apostles in the sacred Scriptures, originally signified "good tidings of great joy" concerning the first manifestation of Zion's king to Israel, with the promise and prospect of his death, burial, resurrection, ascension, and coming the second time at the end of this age or dispensation, to redeem from death the righteous dead, and change both them and the righteous living to immortality and incorruptibility; and to bestow that rich and heaven-bought recompense of eternal life—crown of life, kingdom of God under the whole heavens forever, and that far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, and I conclude that its signification is unchangeable and eternal, God having never changed his purpose in this direction. But should we adopt the so-called orthodox faith, as published extensively from the pulpit and press at this age of the world, as truth, we should be compelled by force of circumstances to admit, that God, for some wise purpose, had abandoned his former arrangement, and had introduced, through the medium of modern divines, a new order of things. For the gospel, that a majority of D. D.'s and Rev.'s publish, is a gospel as wide or distant from the original one, as death is from the resurrection, or earth is from heaven. For it is assumed and confidently taught, that all men are in the joyful possession of an immortal nature, whose existence runs parallel with the Deity, being a fragment of his own divinity, and that this nature bids adieu to its outward and earthly companion, together with the multitudinous relations and scenes of natural life, to enjoy (at death) by translation a more congenial clime in heaven—spirit world—or, as the poet predicts, "beyond the bounds of time and space," or confines of this mundane sphere; a place of departed spirits, where they enjoy a blissful immortality through an endless age.

This proclamation being a true one, it reduces the one cherished and sustained by "holy men of old, who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," to comparative insignificance, and more than this, it renders it null and void. So that, did I receive with "ingrafted meekness" the latter, I should be necessitated to abandon the former, or vice versa. But being thoroughly satisfied of the feasibility, durability, perpetuity and blessedness of the original one, I shall, by the grace of God, hold on by faith till the announcement is made, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him." Then I hope, by the merciful goodness of a benevolent and sin-pardoning God, to mingle and commingle with the sainted and angelic host, and enjoy the fruits of redeeming love, while eternity endures. Earth's attractions and pleasures are but small to me; but future ones are full of interest and glory, and are inviting me on to their sublime enjoyments. Worldly honors, riches and pleasures govern the multitude, and they seem to be drunken with them. But give me Jesus, glory, and the kingdom at last, and I'll try to endure life's purifying ordeal, till Jesus comes.

My brother, my sister, love God with all your hearts, and be fully ready for the coming of Jesus in '67.

What glorious news of gospel grace
Flows from a Savior's smiling face.
Our hearts are cheered by prospects given,
As o'er life's billows we are driven.

No earthly jewels, so rich and fair,
Can to us such glad tidings bear;
Our souls are ravished with delight
While looking for that world so bright.
News comes to us by prophet's voice,
The Lord is near, ye saints rejoice;
May this prove true, and never fail,
While the bride says, Amen, all hail!

A. N. SEYMOUR.

For the Crisis.

Improvement.

The Spiritualists say—and some of other classes—that the world is improving, people are growing better, etc. Now how can people be so deluded? Most every paper comes to us with intelligence just the reverse. Recently, the following appeared in a N. Y. paper:—"Fiends in human shape. The man who killed his mother—the man who put to death an old woman of seventy, because she would not give him rum—the man who put cross-ties on the railroad; these are 'fiends in human shape,' and their number appears to be steadily increasing." Steadily increasing! How true. Yes, faster, much faster than the inhabitants increase. The N. Y. Tribune enumerates over fifty unpunished murders, which have been perpetrated in that city within three years.

"AN INHUMAN MOTHER.—A mother has been arrested in New York charged with brutal treatment towards her child, a girl eleven years old, by burning her arm with a hot iron. On one occasion the inhuman mother placed a rope around the child's body, and let her down into a cistern, dragging her up and down two or three times. The body of the child bore frightful evidence of the mother's cruelty."

And still the dreamers cry "Improvement." Now, I am not very old, but I boldly say, there is far more wickedness now than when I first began to notice events; for I can remember when a murder occurring a thousand miles away, excited more attention and horror than one does now that is perpetrated in our immediate vicinity. Because there are more—yes, so many, that we expect to hear of them almost every day, and often read of several in a single day. "Improvement?" Does the following account look like it?

"FRIGHTFUL MURDERS AT WALWORTH, ENGLAND.—The London Times, comes to us with a report of one of the bloodiest deeds that ever graced the annals of crime. In comparison, the bloody record of this country falls into insignificance. The case mentioned is that of a servant named John Gridley Youngman, who stands charged with the murder of Elizabeth Youngman (his mother,) aged 46; Thomas Youngman, aged 11; Rayson Youngman, aged 6 (his brothers), and Mary Walls Streeter, a young lady to whom he was paying his addresses. The prisoner was brought before Lambeth Police Court, and during his examination exhibited complete self-possession. He admits having killed his mother, stating that he killed her in self-defence. With regard to the others, he says that she killed them and then made a stab at him, but he wrenched the knife from her grasp and killed her."

But I leave murders, and enumerate a few other facts for those who believe the race is an "Improvement." A Boston paper says of drunkenness on the Sabbath:

"This evil seems to be increasing in our midst, and with it comes brawling, swaggering, bullying, fighting, swearing, black eyes, bloody noses, and torn Sunday clothes."

Pass through the streets of Boston on a Sunday, and many a staggering wretch can be seen. Many rum shops sell more this day than any other. What do the rum-sellers care for a "Sunday law?" Suppose they occasionally get brought before the Police Court, and a fine of $5, or $10 is imposed? I know of a rum-seller in Boston, doing business not a rod from where I work, who on one Sunday sold $27 worth of his vile liquors; and he keeps a quiet, a respectable place. I have seen children so small that they stood tip-toe to reach the counter, buying rum. I have seen them sitting on a barrel in a rum-shop, with a glass of some kind of spirits, sipping therefrom with much relish. What a place for little ones to be in! What shocking language they hear and learn! I wonder if this will pass for "Improvement," too:—

"A SORRY SIGHT.—A boy, only ten years of age, was arrested in New York a few days since as a common drunkard; his eyes were bleared, his countenance bloated, and his general appearance that of a confirmed sot. He was found helpless in the streets from the effects of liquor."

Recently, a whole family—father, mother, and two children—were found drunk in the gutter, wallowing like beasts. Visit the Police Court, and see what a fearful lot of mortals are there, of various nations, and of all ages, from the youth just in their teens, to the aged of threescore and ten,—and if that sight convinces you of "Improvement," you are very easily convinced. The following from the Boston Herald contains the truth to the point; and really it is a gloomy picture for those to contemplate who look forward to generations ahead:—

"A MOVEMENT IN BEHALF OF YOUNG AMERICA.—A meeting has been held lately at Indianapolis, to consider what plan may be adopted to check the alarming increase of good-for-nothing or positively vicious young men. This is a movement in the right direction, and meetings should be held in every town in the United States of America. It is fearful to see how rapidly the boys of this generation are going to their own destruction. It has been well remarked that the first step in ruin is to permit a boy to go where he pleases, especially at night, without inquiry. If he does this often and acquires a habit of concealment, he is almost sure to be doing wrong. His parents may depend upon it that he is getting into mischief of some kind; for this step will invariably lead him into bad company of some sort. He will smoke cigars, begin to drink, acquire the swagger of the engine houses, the slang of the streets, and presently the profanity of low haunts. His language, look and manner, will begin to reek. If his parents allow him to run out on Sunday, instead of keeping him at home and taking him to church, they will all the more facilitate his passage down "the easy slope of hell"—which is the literal translation of the famous words of the Latin poet.

Young America in these days, is obliged to go through a terrible ordeal. Parents now delegate nearly all their powers over their children to the educational institutions, religious and secular. They find it very convenient to shirk the responsibility of attending closely to the moral culture of their children. Some send their children to school simply to "get rid of them," or to avoid the trouble involved in a personal attention to their wants. Others have imbibed the wicked notion that the schools and the various "societies" will take better care of their children than their parents—that the patent right machinery for moulding character is an improvement upon the original plan. This species of impiety prevails to an alarming extent in the fashionable religious circles of the day, and to it we may ascribe much of the degeneracy of our youth, the ruination of "Young America."

The men of this country are ruined young. They are blighted and blasted before they arrive at an age when the good that is latent within them would have an opportunity to blossom and to bear fruit. Being left to take care of themselves, or to be cared for by the public institutions, by parents who are wholly absorbed in business or in fashionable frivolities, they are overwhelmed in the rush and the fury of the tide of life that rolls over them. Let us do something for the salvation of "Young America."

I think what I have written is enough to convince any one that there is room for "Improvement," though there are no evidences of it in the incidents named. For my own part, I do believe in "Improvement," but the great Jehovah will accomplish it just right, far differently from mortal man's ideas, generally.

And may you and I be with the people who shall dwell in the land that never more will need the hand of "Improvement."

For the Crisis

The Fall of Man.

The following article is from the Phrenological Journal, and was probably written by Prof. Fowler, a man who is versed in the nature of man, possessing a profound knowledge of his constitution, nature, and history, as man has been since his creation, and as he is; and an opinion coming from such a source should be weighed well. We see that an honest man has no difficulty in harmonizing Scripture with true science, or rather we see that true science and Scripture do not clash, but ever harmonize. But those men of our day who love the "science falsely so called"—Spiritualism, better than Bible revelation, cannot at all harmonize Scripture with their spirit revelations from the "land of spirits." The reason is because there is a difference between God's truth and demonological lies. 1 Tim. 4: 1, 2. They say that man is not a fallen creature, but has ever been, and is continually progressing upward and onward to perfection and glory.—S. D. B.

"A correspondent desires us to answer certain queries which he propounds, and remarks: "It has been asserted that what moral organs man has at present, form but a vestige of what he possessed before the fall, and now these are but a meagre seat for the Holy Spirit. Can you reconcile this with the fact, that children generally possess the moral organs large?"

Reply. How much the moral organs of men have been weakened by "the fall," as in theology it is called, we are unable to say; but our correspondent, we think, is in error in supposing that any of the moral faculties have been obliterated. It is true that usually children have the moral organs more relatively developed than adults; but this is doubtless because the habits of adults have not been so moral and correct as their natural moral endowments would have warranted, and these have been dwarfed by non-use. It is said that "one diseased sheep contaminates the whole flock;" and it is true that a person of immoral and dissolute habits, if he have brilliant intellect, warm social attachment, good musical talent, and racy wit, can lead, and generally does, dozens of young men more or less away from the path of rectitude; and as these perverted young men exercise their animal propensities much more than their moral faculties, the former increase in size, while the latter are not fully developed, and at mature manhood they exhibit, in character and organization, a predominance of the lower over the higher elements of their nature. In other words, "the house of Saul has become stronger, and the house of David weaker." The original fall, like all other subsequent falls into sin and transgression, gave to the mind a tendency to vice; and this is illustrated in every human being who is tempted to depart from the ways of virtue. The majority of humankind, in addition to the contaminations of the original transgression, have had a hundred falls of their own. Man possesses today as many faculties as he did in the beginning, and many of them, especially the intellectual, the mechanical, and the esthetical, are probably in a higher degree of development now than they were at the beginning; and there is no doubt that each faculty is open to all good influences, and that religious and moral influences can obtain a foothold in nearly every human being. There may be some who are so low in the scale of being, so debased and demoralized, that they are past all human hope. But this last is a mere supposition; though, if we look among the eccentric, warped, partially insane people, and those who are the descendants of drunkards and the vilest of the vile, we may find instances in which truth is no longer true. Persons who are so low that they can not discern good from evil, as such, would require, certainly, the special influences of divine power to reach and reform them. But this is a theological topic, and does not legimately belong to our field of inquiry."

"It is I—be not afraid."

Life hath its days of darkness,
When thick the storm clouds lower—
When waves dash fiercely round thee,
And threaten to devour:
But still thou need'st not falter,
There's One forever nigh,
Who speaks above the tempest,—
"Fear not, for it is I."

He walks the waves beside thee,
No storm can drive him thence;
He bids the waters bear thee,
His arm is thy defence.
His face shines on the billows,
Let all thy terror fly;
Follow the path illumined,
He beckons,—"It is I!"

F. A. CRAFTS.—Chronicle.

For the Crisis.

"Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?"

Eternal life, though it is "the gift of God," is not an unconditional one. It is true that we, who have been violators of God's law, can never merit this gift; as present obedience can never atone for past sin,—yet we may fulfill conditions upon which the merits of him in whom the Father is "well pleased" may be imputed to us.

Man's responsibility is born of the fact that he is free to choose for himself; for human accountability and human free-moral-agency are inalienably allied, and must always go hand in hand; nor is it signing the death-warrant of the sovereignty of God to acknowledge this union, though many on this supposition have raised the "war-whoop." Undoubtedly God has power unconditionally to fore-ordain a portion of our race to immortality; but, knowing that this course must so fetter man as to render him unaccountable, it is a question whether the idea that he exercises that power is compatible with Divine justice, or in accordance with Divine truth. The question is settled by the words of John, "whosoever will," etc. Thus it is the "good pleasure" of him who "rules in the armies of heaven and among all the inhabitants of the earth," that man should hold the keys of his own destiny.

The wretched devotees among the heathen are a living monument of the instinctive feeling that we all have, that something is required of us individually. Their excruciating self-tortures, their costly temples, their sacrifices to their gods, are but the offspring of an effort to appease a conscience educated to idolatry. Would that the "Ark of the Covenant" might rest in their temples till "Dagon" falls before it! And would that we, who have the light, know something of the requirements of God, and understand the true way of meeting responsibility, had half the zeal of those who "walk in darkness,"—half their devotion! Many carry around their responsibility like so much freight, hiring baggage-men to look after it in a separate car, as it is something about which they do not like to trouble themselves. Of this class are those, whose only effort for the advancement of Christ's cause begins and ends in their pockets. They never pray individually for those who are "strangers to the covenant of promise," never make a personal effort to bring in "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel." Their voice has never warned the impenitent; never comforted the desponding; never encouraged the weak, and, if we trace their liberality down to its motive, we shall find that it springs from the same source as the old Romish system of purchasing indulgences; which, by the craft of Tetzel, (a most skillful vender,) attained great success. By lightening the pocket, they would take a load from the conscience. It has been truly said, that the conversion which is not pocket-deep is not worth much; but, though it is true that if conversion reaches a man's heart, it must also reach his purse, it is still possible for his purse to be converted while his heart remains untouched. Many shrink from responsibility by crying, "We have Abraham for our father!" But, though here around the brow of many a fool have been bound the laurels his ancestors have won; though here the honor or dishonor of our fathers rests upon us; though here the parent has sometimes been allowed to suffer for the guilt of the child; yet, at the tribunal of perfect justice, we stand or fall for ourselves.

None can say of the Lord, "He is my God," unless they can also say, "I am his servant;" for all are not Israel "that are of Israel;" the oil of the wise virgins can never fill the lamps of the foolish; and "God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham!"

"To whom much is given, of them shall much be required." God has never given to any a higher blessing that was not intended to raise the recipient to a higher range of duties. Wealth brings with it so great a responsibility, that it is hard for those who have riches to "enter into the kingdom of heaven." If it pleases the Lord to give us more weapons for the warfare, he does it that we may gird ourselves for warmer conflicts. When we pray to be led into all truth, we pray in effect that we may be placed in the front and thickest of the battle, within full range of the enemy's cannon.

Those whose eyes have been opened to behold "wondrous things out of God's law" are in a peculiar manner responsible; if by indifference, or an unchanged life, or by lending their influence, either avowedly or tacitly, to uphold error, they stamp the truth as "non-essential," for that very term applied to God's truth, robs it of its worth, clasps the shackles of error more closely on its unfortunate victims, and prevents the truth from making many free; acting like laudanum on the minds of those who have been "almost persuaded" to embrace the truth. Thus we are not only responsible for our own salvation, but, in a measure, for that of others; and it is to be feared that the blood of many of the lost will drip from the skirts of those who show by their conduct that God's word is to them of trifling importance. Fearful indeed is the risk they run, who hide the light God has given them; for that light might have warned the poor mariner whose bark is now stranded upon the quicksands of error, or dashed in pieces on the rocks of infidelity,—it might have led him to the "still waters," and enabled him to cast his anchor safely within the vail. Shall not their blood be required at the hands of those who refused to warn them? "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord!"

To be sure, as a friend once remarked, "God is able, without the aid of our weak voices, to take care of his own truth;" yet he uses means, and he has chosen us for his witnesses; and though the truth shall indeed "triumph gloriously," we shall have no share in the triumph unless our shoulder is laid to the wheel.

Personal good, demands personal effort. Instead of saying, "Here is my brother—send him;" let us have that spirit that can say, "Here am I, send me." And when in our weakness we fear the crushing weight of responsibility, let it be remembered that "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." By the lives of us who profess to be his followers, will the religion of Jesus be judged by those who are strangers to the blessed hope. "Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight;" let us forget the world with its ceaseless vanities; let us forget the fear of man; let us seek no longer for human praise; but remember "the song of the redeemed," and seek the joys of immortality. And would that we might witness such a manifestation of divine power, that the worshippers of Baal might be constrained to cry, "The Lord, he is the God! The Lord, he is the God!" and "by him only," henceforward, "make mention of his name." F. P.

Pine Avenue.

Patience.

Patience is that frame, or habit of the mind, in which it endures with composure whatever crosses our wishes or designs. It does not, however, preclude the mention of our trials to others, from whose sympathy we would seek relief; nor the use of any lawful means to prevent or extricate ourselves from trouble: where a remedy exists, it would, in many cases, be evidence of weakness, if not indeed of sin, to neglect its application. But it is the province of patience, not only to quiet the soul under irremediable evils, but to compose the mind in our efforts to remove those under our control.

Patience is properly classed among the christian graces; for it is far from being a production of nature, but rather a choice plant in the garden of grace. Indifference under trouble, or a kind of obstinacy, which defies affliction, and refuses utterance to murmurs that rankle in the bosom, may exist in the entire absence of this grace. Genuine patience, is neither indifference, nor stoicism. While it feels most keenly the rod of divine chastisement, it endures, not only without a word of complaint, but without a feeling of peevishness. Its importance in man's present state is proclaimed by every day's experience. Affliction and perplexities are the common lot of all. From these, none are wholly exempt. They meet us, as well in the higher as in the lower walks of life; and can be conquered only by patient endurance. Hence the exhortation of our Lord to the afflicted, suffering disciple:—"In patience possess ye your souls;" as if he had said, such are the trials and perplexing scenes that await you, that you can keep possession of your souls only by the constant exercise of patience. Without this, you will be carried away with unholy passions and feelings, which your trials are so well calculated to set in motion, and thus fall into sin and the snare of the devil. And who does not see how exceedingly applicable to himself is this exhortation of our Lord. Let us then, having glanced at the nature and importance of this grace, offer a few considerations which may urge us to its exercise.

Firstly. We should possess our souls in patience, because we cannot be happy, or enjoy the good within our reach, without it. He that is always finding fault with the present, and looking for bliss upon some future change of fortune, carries in his bosom the very elements of misery, from which no circumstances, however pleasing, can free him. While the patient man, placing his feet in the path of duty, regardless of storm or tempest, is always happy in the consciousness of the divine favor and protection; the peevish soul stumbles from the path at every trifle, and wanders amid thorns and brambles of his own creating. While patience gathers up a thousand precious gems amid the most perplexing scenes of life, and like the bee sips sweetness from almost every bitter thing; impatience dashes from our lips the very cordial which a kind providence would mingle with all our sorrows.

Secondly. The afflicted soul should always consider, that severe as his trials may seem, they bear no proportion to his deserts. Who among us dares say he does not deserve the most severe punishment, when he compares his past life with the requirements of the Son of God, the conditional promises, and the enduring mercy of the Almighty? How often have we acknowledged before the Searcher of hearts, that we deserve eternal banishment from his presence and the glory of his power, and expressed surprise at his long-suffering and forbearance, in so long suspending the fatal blow. And yet, we are not only thus spared, but in reach of eternal life. Why then murmur, as though our sufferings transcended the bounds of justice? And again, we should think how greatly our troubles might be multiplied, but for the special and constant interference of divine providence. We cannot only think of many instances of human suffering far greater than our own, and see a thousand streams of which we never drink; but, in the midst of all our cares, crosses and privations, there are mingled innumerable blessings. And if we are oppressed, God in his mercy has proportioned our strength to our burden, so that we are not yet crushed beneath the load. Our chance for gaining heaven is not lost, and we are yet in reach of riches durable as the throne of God. Have some of your friends failed?—there are many still remaining. If a christian, there still remains to thee the friendship of Almighty God; and does not this infinitely outweigh all thy losses?

Though the introduction of sin into our world was a great evil—since it does exist, it may be considered a favor that misery has become sin's companion to drive the sinner back to God. It does not, however, follow that afflictions necessarily benefit the sinner; for he may turn God's blessings into curses by madly rushing on, in spite of every obstacle, and eventually reap the reward of his labor. But to the child of God, it is certain that all these things work for good. For saith the apostle, "we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." Now this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments. Instead then of fretting about our trials, it is our business to press them all into our service, by a constant observance of all the divine commandments. But some one says, "My perplexities come not so much from God as from sinners; what I complain of, are the wrongs of men." But why fret thyself because of evil doers?—are not their insults included among the "all things?" Has thine enemy thrown an arrow at thee so secretly as to be unobserved by him who numbers the hairs of thy head? Whatever be the design of thine enemy, be assured, God has control of that arrow, and if it touch the saint, it must strike the right spot; for it must work for good. But here some one may say, "Then the sinner ought not to be blamed for doing.

good to the saints of God?" I answer: it is not the sinner that does good, but God that overrules the malicious design. What thanks to the midnight assassin, who aims a dagger at my heart, if God so control the murderous thrust as to open some dangerous abscess, and thus cause the wound, that was intended to destroy, really to preserve my life? Neither are sinners necessary, as unwilling instruments, for the perfection of the saints, as some vainly suppose. God has enough other ways to try his people; but, seeing men will sin, God will turn their conduct to some good account.

Once more. Afflictions afford us an excellent opportunity to glorify God, and do good to our fellow men. Religion never appears so lovely as when wading in the depths of adversity. It is in the furnace of affliction that we look for a tried and genuine piety; and if the christian is ever watched, it is while passing through the fiery ordeal. Of what real use is religion, if it stand by us only in prosperity? I know seasons of prosperity are pleasant and desirable; yet, so many are life's storms, that he who is only prepared to sail heavenward under clear skies and fair breezes, will hardly make the port of eternal life.

Finally, these trials will add to our treasure in heaven. How must the joy of the christian be heightened by the recollection of his past sufferings, when he feels a consciousness of eternal security and bliss in the paradise of God; when his pilgrimage is closed and he sits on the throne, having overcome the world, sin, flesh, and the devil; and his robes are made white by the blood of the Lamb! These promises God has given unto all them who, by a patient continuance in the ways of well doing, seek for glory. Amen.

Our voices with our hearts we lift
To thee, O God, in grateful praise,
For every good a d perfect gift
A song of gratitude we raise.
O God, with all thy gifts still give
The grateful and the trus ing heart;
So shall our souls have learned to live,
When called from earthly scenes to part.

D. A. CHAMBERLIN.

For the Crisis.

Westford Campmeeting.

This meeting commenced Aug. 28th, and continued to Sept. 3d. It continued to increase in numbers to the close. About one-third more attended than last year. The weather was very fine, and the congregations generally quiet and very attentive. As far as we could learn, all seemed to feel at home, and as well satisfied as could be expected in meetings of this kind. The prayer meetings were full of interest, and the Spirit of the Lord was there, to apply truth so as to result in a goodly number of conversions.

On Sunday, at the close of the afternoon service, we baptized five willing followers of Jesus, who came up out of the water giving glory to God for his mercy to them. We never enjoyed the ordinance better than on that occasion. May the Lord keep them in the way, and help others to go and do likewise. At one of the public meetings of the campmeeting at Westford, the following article was read, and, after some discussion, unanimously adopted, with one exception. It was also voted, that it should be sent to the "World's Crisis," for publication.

"Whereas, the Almighty, in his infinite goodness, has been pleased to present to this generation more light on the Scriptures than to any preceding age, and especially light in reference to the second coming of his Son from heaven, in order that we might be prepared to escape the things that are coming on the earth, and stand approved before the Son of man at his appearing;—and whereas, the visible and unmistakable signs in heaven and on earth admonish us that the time has come for every one to be awake to the importance of the second advent message; and that all should maintain an unflinching and unwavering Bible position, and wait for the Lord from heaven, and be identified with those that are giving meat in due season,—therefore,

Resolved, That we believe the announcement of the immediate coming of Christ to be emphatically the present truth,—the grand nucleus around which all other truths cluster,—the last warning and invitation to a perishing world, and necessary to be preached and believed in order for people to be prepared for the glory that is to be revealed; as much so as the preaching of Noah was to be received, that the people might be saved from the flood of water that deluged the earth.

Resolved, That preaching and believing the literal advent of Christ at hand is what makes us a peculiar people, different from other religious denominations; and that, in order to maintain our identity, and occupy the position that God would have us occupy before a gainsaying world, the grand theme and motive power in our meetings should be, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him." And the notices of Conferences and all other meetings should be advertised as Second Advent meetings; without making any compromise, either in name or practice, to please any that would wish to become popular and respectable in the eyes of an ungodly world; but rather let our light shine, and give our fellow men to understand, that we are expecting the Lord God from heaven, and are making preparations to receive him in peace."

J. S. WHITE, Chairman.

For the Crisis.

East Again.

BROTHER GRANT:—I wish to say to my brethren scattered abroad, that I am once more among the hills and valleys of my native New England. And yet, whether to remain permanently, I do not know. In this, I wait the direction of God. It is not strange that in accomplishing a six years' mission in the great West, one's heart should become greatly attached to the people and country. And although the trials and privations connected with this stay have been many and great,—often utterly intolerable but for the grace of God, who hath said, "I will never leave nor forsake thee,"—yet, the privilege of effectually pointing the sinner to the Lamb of God, with the thought of being instrumental of gathering and putting in order (to some extent) half a dozen churches of Christ,—is not without its practical consideration, be the final result what it may. For I suppose it is no more possible to keep in perpetual healthy existence the churches of this day, than it was those of St. Paul's, or the seven churches of Asia. It is for us to do what God demands, and leave the consequences with him. This is often a hard lesson; but must be learned, if we would be the servants of Christ.

The West—the great West, has lain near my heart, as no other section of earth has, for the past six years; were I able, I would send forth and sustain a legion of men in that vast, destitute but rich field. But the men and the means are God's;—God's will be done. But let those who know the truth and yet withhold more than is meet, remember that it "tendeth to poverty;" and God will by and by settle with his stewards. For two years and more of my stay in the West, I have been confined to pastoral labors mostly, because I lacked means to accomplish evangelistic labor. And yet, a thorough, intelligent, and energetic missionary effort is what is needed. followed by pastoral labors in due time. But all is with God. "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord."

That the great day of the Lord is approaching, and will soon be here to consummate the long cherished hopes of the church, I do not for a moment question. The storm-clouds hang low on the horizon of Europe. Rome must be burned; the battle of Armageddon must be fought; and then, with the rush of the nations, comes the Prince of Peace. "In the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished." "Be ye also ready, for, in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh!" Of my tour East, I purpose to speak directly. And I am, yours waiting for immortality at the appearing and kingdom of Christ.

P. B. MORGAN.

Boston, Sept. 1st, '60.

For the Crisis.

Rome Quarterly Meeting.

This was a good gathering, Aug 23, but as there are many reports to publish, I will only give a short notice of it. Owing to its being so near the time of our annual State conference, some were not present, preferring to be at the larger one; yet quite a good number attended, and they came prepared to work for the Lord. But few in the vicinity seem to be properly devoted to the work. Our meetings were good, and it refreshed our hearts to worship together. The preaching was good, and listened to with much attention. On Sunday, the town house was filled at an early hour, and the largest part of those who came were obliged to stand without all the day, while they listened to "the word of the kingdom." We trust the Lord will bring good out of this effort.

The Elders present were, H. B. Sevey, D. M. Hanscomb, T. J. Dudley, I. C. Wellcome, also Eld Tibbetts of the Christian church. May we all so live and labor that we may enter into the rest that shall soon be given.

H. B. SEVEY, Pres.
I. C. WELLCOME, Scribe.

Richmond, Me., Aug. 31, 1860.

The Light Ship.

The satisfaction which this little messenger has given has been greater and more general than I dared to expect. Although written for sailors especially, it has been read with great interest by all who could get it, and the universal opinion is that it is good.

The price is very reasonable for the quantity of matter which the work contains, and it must be perused to judge of the quality. I will mail one dozen, postpaid, to any single address for $1.00 after this date. The sailors have them free; but I must sell some to keep up this self-creating fund. Send in your orders to me at 167 Hanover street, Boston, Crisis office, and they will be promptly attended to. Single copies 10 cts., postage 1 ct.

JNO. F. COTTON.

For the Crisis.

HARMONY WANTED.—If God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost are three in one, will some one, through the Crisis, reconcile this fact with Luke 12: 10; also harmonize Rom. 2: 12 with Rom. 5: 18.

C. G. CARRE.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 12, 1860.

The New Volume.

As this is the first number of a new volume, it is befitting that we should say a word to those with whom we are pleasantly associated in the important work of persuading the people to prepare for the coming of the Son of man. Our prospects, so far as the Crisis is concerned, have never been so bright as now since it became a subscription paper. In publishing it, we feel conscious that we enjoy the approbation and blessing of our Father in heaven; and this gives us a cheerful heart to endure our toilsome labor without complaint. If we knew he were not pleased with its issue, we would quit it at once and forever. The cheering epistles from our dear brethren and sisters are also sources of sweet comfort, and are powerful aids in sustaining our hands in this last great work of sounding the judgment alarm. It is a privilege to serve those who love Jesus and his coming. We are one. Our work is short, but earnest. Let us, to a man, "STAND UP FOR JESUS."

Our prospects, so far as the consummation of our hope is concerned, are far brighter than ever. It is now nearly eighteen years since we were converted and became interested in the speedy coming of Christ. During this entire period, we have not had one moment of sorrow that we have associated with this people, believed this doctrine, and helped spread it among our fellow men. "Though oft disappointed and sometimes mistaken," we never felt better satisfied than we do now, that we are right in looking for the immediate coming of our Savior. All is clear. Heaven, earth, and sea proclaim the end is at hand. The moral and political signs are so plain in their testimony, when compared with the prophecies, that we see no room for a single doubt that the resurrection trump will soon awaken the dead. Surely, this is a "blessed hope." Dear brethren and sisters, let us all awake, and make one more mighty effort to arouse the sleeping virgins before it is too late. We have not one moment to lose. Haste to the work! "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." In heart and hand we are with you in the conflict, trusting in God. Let us make new efforts to scatter light and truth. Send your paper to your neighbor; get him to subscribe, that he may become interested in the grand event about to burst upon an astonished world. Do not delay. It is too late to falter now. He who retreats, draws "back to perdition." The struggle will be earnest, but the victory is sure to the faithful, and the triumph glorious. "Remember Lot's wife."

IMPROVEMENT.—We commence our new volume on better paper than we have ever before used. We hope our faithful patrons will succeed in making an addition to our subscription list sufficient to meet the extra expense. As many of our readers lend the Crisis to their neighbors, who are not able to take a copy themselves, and to others partially interested, but not enough to subscribe, it seems necessary that we use a good quality of paper that will endure many readings.

The Wilbraham Canpmeeting.

Our meeting last year at Wilbraham was thought to be the best we had ever had; but the general conclusion this year decided that the one just closed was better. It will be remembered with much pleasure by those who enjoyed its blessings. We think no one present will say, "the time for campmeetings is passed," after beholding the happy results of the one at W. There are several things worthy of notice.

1. THE GROUND is well suited for a campmeeting. It is elevated, grass-grown, and well shaded by tall forest trees. It overlooks the Chicopee river and a large extent of country around, and is located in a neighborhood noted for good morals and kind deeds. It is a hallowed spot, on account of blessings received from the Lord—a kind of Mt. Zion to those who assemble there yearly at "the feast of tabernacles," to enjoy the happy greetings from those of like precious faith.

2. THE ORDER of the meetings at W. is the very best, without which much of its excellent effects would be lost. We heard no hooting, swearing or scoffing on the ground. All was quiet as a home circle, save the songs, prayers, exhortations, and shouts of those who participated in the exercises of the meeting. We lay down to rest at night with no more fear of molestation than in a quiet country village. Every one treated us with respect, and seemed pleased to have us assemble for the worship of the God of our fathers. Every year adds new interest to this general gathering. These meetings have become a fixture—a kind of institution—and the people wait with anxiety for their annual return.

3. THE BOARD this year was first rate, and gave general satisfaction. The boarding department was conducted by Brn. R. E. Ladd and H. Munger. The baking was done on the ground, and was executed in a superior manner. We had plenty of nice meat, apple, berry, and custard pies, puddings, warm buscuit, etc., as good as is found at the first class hotels. By a vote of the encampment, if we are permitted to meet again next year, all the profits of the boarding department and of the entire camp arrangement, are to be used to help pay the board of the preachers, and the poor, and the other expenses of the ground. We are glad to announce this fact, as it must give universal satisfaction.

4. THE PRAYER MEETINGS were refreshing, and produced very happy results. Those in the largest tents were very animated and continually crowded. The singing was really soul-stirring, especially in the tents occupied by the Indians and the Africans; and the praying and exhortations were far from having the form without the power. In other tents, the meetings assumed a more calm, melting, and heavenly turn, especially calculated to promote devotional feelings, and affect the milder temperaments. So far as our observation extended, we heard no disputings on doctrine which so often disturb the social meetings at such gatherings. We are glad to learn that many who have formerly indulged in these unprofitable contentions, are satisfied that all disputings are out of place and detrimental to the best interests of a prayer meeting. The object of a conference and prayer meeting is to increase our devotional feelings, our love for God and one another; but controversy has the opposite effect.

5. THE PREACHING was excellent, and well calculated to awaken new interest in the study of the Scriptures, especially in the prophetical portion, relating to the speedy coming of Christ. We think there was more interest manifested on this subject than at any previous meeting upon the ground. There appears to be a genuine waking up to the fact that "the end of all things is at hand." The movements in Europe and Asia are arresting the attention of all classes, and convincing the Bible student that the last days have fully come. The preaching on the evidences of the immediate coming of Christ by Brn. Berick, Himes, Couch, and others, produced a very salutary and awakening effect upon those who heard. A new era is dawning upon the friends of Jesus who love his appearing. We shall expect to see a gradual increase of interest till the Savior comes. Our prospects are really heart-cheering. There seems but little room for doubt that we shall soon be with Jesus, if faithful. Praise the Lord, O my soul.

We will now be a little more specific in our report of the meeting. Mond y, 20th, was spent in erecting tents. In the evening, we had an interesting prayer meeting in the Boston tent. It appeared evident that those present had come in the name of the Lord, with a disposition to labor for the salvation of others.

Tuesday forenoon, there were so many putting up tents, that we had no preaching from the stand, but enjoyed a very interesting conference meeting in the Boston tent. In the afternoon Bro. L. S. Ludington preached on the character of Christ, his work and miracles, showing that he brought life and immortality to light. In the evening, Bro. C. Goodrich spoke on practical religion, showing the importance of self-denial and self-sacrifice, if we expect to be saved.

Wednesday. On account of rain last night, we had preaching in several tents. We listened to Bro. C. F. Hudson, in the Boston tent. He gave an interesting discourse on the things promised to the faithful, showing their great superiority over every thing for which the mere worldling is seeking. While in this world, he thought christians should dwell more on points of union than on the differences, and thus promote brotherly love.

In the afternoon, we listened to an able and instructive discourse from Bro. J. S. White of East Boston, founded on 1 Cor. 15: 24-25. He showed the work of Christ in the plan of redemption in a very clear light, which greatly cheered the humble followers of Jesus. It was one of those sermons that lasts for a life-time.

Wednesday evening, Bro. S. S. Brewer preached on the importance of prophecy, showing that those who neglect it, must walk in darkness relative to coming events, which now proclaim in thunder tones that Jesus will soon appear in glory, to gather his weary children to their happy home. Bro. B.'s heart was very much cheered with the glorious prospect.

Thursday, A. M., Bro. Batchelor, of Rutland, Vt., delivered a reviving discourse, showing that man is to inherit the earth, and that the time is at hand when Jesus will return to set up his everlasting kingdom. He said the evidences were so strong that he could not help believing in the speedy coming of Christ.

At 1 1-2 o'clock, we met in front of the stand for a general prayer meeting and love-feast. It was a heavenly season. One hundred and forty spoke in less than forty-five minutes. At the close of this meeting, four came forward for prayers. At the time for preaching it began to rain, and the audience adjourned to several tents, and listened to instructive sermons. We were not privileged to hear any of them, and consequently can give no report.

In the evening Bro. G. Champlin preached an animating discourse, describing the life of the christian in this world.

Friday. In the morning, we had interesting prayer meetings in several tents. At the hour of preaching, Bro. S. G. Mathewson, pastor of the church at Sandy Hill, N. Y., gave an interesting discourse from Rev. 7: 13, showing that the kingdom is not gained without an effort; that half-hearted desires and feeble resolves are of but little use; that in order to be christians, we must do all to the glory of God.

At 1 o'clock, we met again in front of the preacher's stand, for a general conference and prayer meeting, and had a very profitable season. One hundred and twenty-nine spoke in thirty minutes. We never heard more comprehended in so few words, than in the testimonies of those who stood up for Jesus in this meeting. At its close, six came forward for prayers and were blessed. At the hour of preaching, we were entertained with an able discourse from Bro. F. H. Berick, on the great chain of prophecy in the eleventh of Daniel, showing very conclusively, that we are near the end of the christian dispensation. At the close of the P. M. services, we repaired to the Chicopee river and buried seven in baptism. It was a pleasant season, and very comforting.

In the evening, Bro. W. S. Campbell, of New Britain, Ct., preached from Heb. 2: 14, showing the aggressive nature of christianity, and that finally it will end in a complete triumph over all opposing powers, and the destruction of the devil. Bro. J. S. White followed with some very interesting remarks on the second death as being the penalty for sin, and the glorious triumph of the saints in the new earth after the wicked are all destroyed.

Saturday. On account of rain this morning, we had preaching in several tents, and excellent social meetings. We did not have an opportunity to hear either of the sermons, but heard them well spoken of by those who listened. At 1 o'clock we had another very interesting general prayer meeting in front of the preacher's stand. One hundred and ten spoke in about thirty minutes. Several came forward for prayers, and found peace. There are a goodly number seeking the Lord. At the hour for preaching, Bro. J. V. Himes preached a stirring discourse, showing that the six thousand years from creation, and the prophetical periods which extend to the end of this dispensation, will probably close about 1867-8. The sermon was well calculated to awake the slumbering virgins, the backslidden and the sinner. We are glad to see a new interest in the evidences of the Lord's speedy coming. All things proclaim the kingdom near. We think the time has fully come for those who have light on the coming of Christ, to let it shine upon the darkness around them. There should be no flinching on the part of those who love Jesus. Now is the time for ACTION. In the evening, Bro. P B. Morgan preached from 1 Pet. 1: 10, 11, inviting the sinner to Christ, and showing him how to come, and the glorious results following. Bro. M. has just returned from the West, where he has been laboring very successfully for some years past. He intends to spend some time in the Eastern States. He will be found an efficient workman in the vineyard of the Lord.

Sabbath. This was one of the most lovely days that ever cheered a sin-cursed earth, and every one seemed to enjoy it. Zion's songs echoed very sweetly through our lovely, tented grove. At 8 o'clock, we met in front of the preacher's stand, for our general love-feast. It was a precious season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Two hundred spoke of their determination to be christians, and be ready to meet the Savior in peace. Their testimonies were really heart-cheering, and indicated a religion of power, of love and purity, that makes one a "new creature." It was truly a feast of good things. At its close, an invitation was given for those who did not feel ready to meet the Savior, to gather in the prayer circle, when a goodly number came forward, and we had a very affecting scene. A middle-aged man came and stood in front of the large audience, and said, "I belong to a little church in which the lively members are dragged down, and I have helped do it; pray for me." This confession took hold of his companion, who arose at once in the middle of the congregation, and with streaming eyes came and took her husband by the arm and said, pray for me." By this time others began to realize their situation, threw off the fear of man, urging their way to the penitent circle, where earnest and prevailing prayer was offered in their behalf. Preaching was advertised at 10 o'clock, but the interest in the prayer meeting was so great that we were not able to bring it to a close till 10 1-2 o'clock. At this time, Bro. J. Couch preached an interesting discourse on "the harvest of the earth;" showing that the physical, moral, and political signs indicate that the reaping angels are about to begin their great work of gathering the saints of God. A vast crowd of people listened with deep attention. There were more present than we have ever seen before at Wilbraham; but we saw no rowdyism to mar the peace of those who had met to worship the King of Kings, who is so soon to come in all his glory. A deep and hallowed sensation appeared to rest upon the entire encampment,—an impression like that felt just before the terrible tornado bursts upon us from the black, tempest cloud,—a consciousness that sublime events are about to open upon an astonished world.

In the afternoon, Bro. H. L. Hastings delivered an able discourse on practical christianity, showing the importance of leaving all for Christ, and of following him through evil as well as good report, if we expect to be saved in his coming kingdom; but if any one should "suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed." It was shown, in a very clear and forcible manner, that the only appropriate title for the followers of Christ is CHRISTIAN, a name divinely appointed at Antioch; and that all other names dishonor the author of our salvation.

At the close of the sermon, we assembled again on the banks of the Chicopee river, in which nine happy souls were buried in baptism, and rose to rejoice in the Lord with a delight never before enjoyed. The scene was one of unusual interest. A very large crowd stood as witnesses, and cheered the candidates with hearty songs and shouts of joy. The first candidates were a young couple, who not only enjoyed a happy matrimonial union with each other, but a still happier one with Christ. In cheerful obedience, they walked arm in arm into the flowing stream, were buried, and returned in fond embrace to the rejoicing saints, who made the hills all echo around with joyful praise to him who died and rose again. The ninth was a little girl eleven years old, and quite small of her age. She was dressed in white, and appeared very sincere and lovely. A deep sensation ran through the crowd when they first caught sight of this youthful follower of Jesus, walking calmly in his Jordan steps; but when she rose from the burial, and her little voice was heard shouting "glory," many of the spectators were melted to tears, and no doubt wished they were prepared to follow the example of this young disciple of Christ. This heavenly sight filled the saints with joy and gladness, which was heartily expressed in sweet notes of song and shouts of praise to our coming King. The scene will be long remembered by those who were favored with the sight.

At 6 o'clock, we met at the preacher's stand for the ordination of Bro. Hopkins, from Foster, R. I. A solemn and interesting charge was given by Bro. Himes. At the close of this exercise, we gathered around the communion table, to commemorate the sufferings of our Savior. This was a very interesting occasion,—one that will be remembered with pleasure and profit. Four hundred and twenty-seven sat down to show their love for Jesus and his return. Tears flowed freely from many eyes, when we thought and spoke of Him who died on the cross, that we may wear a crown of glory in the home of the pure and the blest. We felt more than ever resolved, in the strength of the Lord, to be christians; so that when earth's jewels are gathered, we may be found in the company of those who will be called to the marriage of the Lamb.

Thus closed one of the best campmeetings we have ever enjoyed. The remark was frequently made, "This is the best meeting I ever attended." We think great good will result from this gathering; and that but few weeks of a lifetime are more profitably spent, than the one in this delightful, tented grove. After the tents were taken down on Monday morning, we gathered once more in joyful sadness to say farewell, and repeat our firm resolution to endure to the end. We were sad at the thought of parting, but joyful in the hope that we should soon meet to part no more. We sung "When shall we meet again?"—said "good-bye," and slowly moved away from the hallowed spot, to renew our conflicts with a wicked world, while singled out by the finger of scorn as objects worthy of the reproach of a slanderous tongue, and the contempt of the popular throng. With joy we sing, "This is the way our Master trod."

The Coming Struggle.

It will be seen, by referring to the "foreign news" on the, opposite page, that the nations are constantly preparing for the grand onset, and rapidly approaching its consummation. The mere thought of coming events is enough to chill one's blood; but the nations must enter the bloody struggle, before we can see Jesus. The harlot on the "seven hills" must drink her cup of sorrow to the dregs, and she must be burnt ere the saints have their triumph. Then let the worst come; the sooner it begins, the nearer the end. A distinguished diplomatist says the peace of the world through 1860 can only be preserved by a miracle, so great are the complications at the present time.

Letters from Italy state that "the coming struggles are to be struggles of races; that the Latin races and the Anglo-Germanic races are to enter into a strife, and appeal to the God of battles to decide which shall be master."

The Liverpool Times says that "war is inevitable. There will be no permanent peace in Europe until we have had another great continental strife of arms. Events now approach so rapidly to a climax, that we may awake any morning to read the news of a struggle which may involve all the Great Powers before its termination."

The Liverpool Post says:—"The Turkish Empire is irrecoverably sick.... We are not likely to repeat the Crimean campaign—but we cannot tolerate Russia at Constantinople, or a satrap of France reigning in Syria. In that quarter of the world therefore, affairs are also rapidly assuming an aspect of danger and complexity which demands an instant and decisive solution." Another says:—"A general war in Europe seems to be impending." The Paris Constitutionnel publishes a letter from Turin, signed M. Grandguillot, commencing as follows:—

"Italy is now entering the most critical and most decisive period of her regeneration. Henceforth she stakes on a single card either her ruin or her salvation. Engaged as she is in the path upon which she has been thrown by the expedition of Garibaldi, Italy will within two months be either free and completely independent, or Austria will again reign, and this time from Messina to Turin."

A close observer in political matters says, the contending powers "are grappling at last in the death-struggle;" and that "Turkey is already virtually arraigned on trial for her life; and the decisive action of France has made it certain that the trial must be pushed to a final issue."

Christian, awake! Thy King is soon coming. Be upon thy watchtower, to welcome his approach. Take heed! Do not sleep now. Watch and pray. The hour of deliverance is at hand.

Discussion at Holden.

We have made arrangements to have a discussion with Adin Ballou, at the Town Hall, in Holden, Mass., commencing at 2 o'clock, P. M., Sept. 12th, and continuing two days, two sessions in each day, from 2 o'clock, P. M. till 5, and from 7 till 9 1-2 in the evening. QUESTION,—"Has man an immortal entity?"

Discussion.

We have arranged to discuss the following resolution, with Luke P. Rand, at Bryant's Pond, Woodstock, Me:—

Resolved, "That departed human spirits hold communion with the living on earth."

The discussion is to commence Tuesday evening, Sept. 25th, and continue three or four evenings, as thought best.

☞ We have received the third number of the "Voice of the Prophets." The contents are as follows:—Nearing Deliverance, The Celestial Railroad, The Coronation of the King of Kings, Notes on Sacred Chronology, To the Reapers, Testimony of a Millenarian, The Finished Mystery, This Gospel of the Kingdom, An old Tradition, A rare Gem, Signs, Fall of the Papacy, The 1,290 years, Cry aloud and spare not, Business Items. We learn that the subscription has run up to near three thousand. We wish success to the enterprise.

Meeting of the Christian Association.

To the brethren in Christ and churches of the Lord, who serve the living God and wait for his Son from heaven, greeting:

We, the undersigned, who are your servants for Jesus' sake, feel it duty to address you upon a matter of some importance.

Called of God, as we are, to the seeking of glory and honor and immortality, and looking for that blessed hope, even the glorious appearing of our Lord, we feel it to be our duty in every department of christian labor, to obey the Master's mandate, "Occupy till I come." Much is to be done, and great wisdom is requisite that the best cause may be promoted by the best means; that sinners may be saved, believers strengenthed, and the gospel of the kingdom preached in all the world for a witness to all nations.

Shall we not labor in such a work? Shall we not labor unitedly?

1. Some parts of our labor can be done single-handed. We can push out alone into the field and preach the gospel in the regions beyond. But in this case, those who stay behind may feel it a privilege to give their brethren the hand of fellowship to go unto the Gentiles, and also to sustain them by their sympathies, their prayers, and their money.

2. So likewise the publication of books and tracts for general circulation can be carried on alone; but yet at great expense of time and labor which might be avoided by consolidation.

3. The publication of a weekly journal devoted to the interests of the body at large cannot so easily be accomplished without association. The results of some experiments indicate that such an organ should not be the property of one man, while the disposition of the persons who sustain it indicates that no one man could originate and long preserve such a solitary interest without provoking rival interests and incurring various jealousies and dangers.

The "World's Crisis" was the result of associated action, and as such, of course, is of right the possession of those who sustain it. But law recognizes no right of property in unorganized bodies. Hence there must be an association constituted to hold this property, or else it is for the time being, legally the private property of the treasurer or business agent; for all demands against which he is personally responsible; and it is subject to his control absolutely—is liable for his debts, and is subject to administration in event of his decease, as also to mal-administration in case of his dishonesty. Since we have no association capable of holding any of our property, there is a positive call for action in this direction.

good to the saints of God?" I answer: it is not the sinner that does good, but God that overrules the malicious design. What thanks to the midnight assassin, who aims a dagger at my heart, if God so control the murderous thrust as to open some dangerous abscess, and thus cause the wound, that was intended to destroy, really to preserve my life? Neither are sinners necessary, as unwilling instruments, for the perfection of the saints, as some vainly suppose. God has enough other ways to try his people; but, seeing men will sin, God will turn their conduct to some good account.

Once more. Afflictions afford us an excellent opportunity to glorify God, and do good to our fellow men. Religion never appears so lovely as when wading in the depths of adversity. It is in the furnace of affliction that we look for a tried and genuine piety; and if the christian is ever watched, it is while passing through the fiery ordeal. Of what real use is religion, if it stand by us only in prosperity? I know seasons of prosperity are pleasant and desirable; yet, so many are life's storms, that he who is only prepared to sail heavenward under clear skies and fair breezes, will hardly make the port of eternal life.

Finally, these trials will add to our treasure in heaven. How must the joy of the christian be heightened by the recollection of his past sufferings, when he feels a consciousness of eternal security and bliss in the paradise of God; when his pilgrimage is closed and he sits on the throne, having overcome the world, sin, flesh, and the devil; and his robes are made white by the blood of the Lamb! These promises God has given unto all them who, by a patient continuance in the ways of well doing, seek for glory. Amen.

Our voices with our hearts we lift
To thee, O God, in grateful praise,
For every good and perfect gift
A song of gratitude we raise.

O God, with all thy gifts still give
The grateful and the trusting heart;
So shall our souls have learned to live,
When called from earthly scenes to part.

D. A. Chamberlin.

For the Crisis.

Westford Campmeeting.

This meeting commenced Aug. 28th, and continued to Sept. 3d. It continued to increase in numbers to the close. About one-third more attended than last year. The weather was very fine, and the congregations generally quiet and very attentive. As far as we could learn, all seemed to feel at home, and as well satisfied as could be expected in meetings of this kind. The prayer meetings were full of interest, and the Spirit of the Lord was there, to apply truth so as to result in a goodly number of conversions.

On Sunday, at the close of the afternoon service, we baptized five willing followers of Jesus, who came up out of the water giving glory to God for his mercy to them. We never enjoyed the ordinance better than on that occasion. May the Lord keep them in the way, and help others to go and do likewise. At one of the public meetings of the campmeeting at Westford, the following article was read, and, after some discussion, unanimously adopted, with one exception. It was also voted, that it should be sent to the "World's Crisis," for publication.

"Whereas, the Almighty, in his infinite goodness, has been pleased to present to this generation more light on the Scriptures than to any preceding age, and especially light in reference to the second coming of his Son from heeavn, in order that we might be prepared to escape the things that are coming on the earth, and stand approved before the Son of man at his appearing;—and whereas, the visible and unmistakable signs in heaven and on earth admonish us that the time has come for every one to be awake to the importance of the second advent message; and that all should maintain an unflinching and unwavering Bible position, and wait for the Lord from heaven, and be identified with those that are giving meat in due season,—therefore,

Resolved, That we believe the announcement of the immediate coming of Christ to be emphatically the present truth,—the grand nucleus around which all other truths cluster,—the last warning and invitation to a perishing world, and necessary to be preached and believed in order for people to be prepared for the glory that is to be revealed; as much so as the preaching of Noah was to be received, that the people might be saved from the flood of water that deluged the earth.

Resolved, That preaching and believing the literal advent of Christ at hand is what makes us a peculiar people, different from other religious denominations; and that, in order to maintain our identity, and occupy the position that God would have us occupy before a gainsaying world, the grand theme and motive power in our meetings should be, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him." And the notices of Conferences and all other meetings should be advertised as Second Advent meetings; without making any compromise, either in name or practice, to please any that would wish to become popular and respectable in the eyes of an ungodly world; but rather let our light shine, and give our fellow men to understand, that we are expecting the Lord God from heaven, and are making preparations to receive him in peace." J. S. White, Chairman.

For the Crisis.

East Again.

Brother Grant:—I wish to say to my brethren scattered abroad, that I am once more among the hills and valleys of my native New England. And yet, whether to remain permanently, I do not know. In this, I wait the direction of God. It is not strange that in accomplishing a six years' mission in the great West, one's heart should become greatly attached to the people and country. And although the trials and privations connected with this stay have been many and great,—often utterly intolerable but for the grace of God, who hath said, "I will never leave nor forsake thee,"—yet, the privilege of effectually pointing the sinner to the Lamb of God, with the thought of being instrumental of gathering and putting in order (to some extent) half a dozen churches of Christ,—is not without its practical consideration, be the final result what it may. For I suppose it is no more possible to keep in perpetual healthy existence the churches of this day, than it was those of St. Paul's, or the seven churches of Asia. It is for us to do what God demands, and leave the consequences with him. This is often a hard lesson; but must be learned, if we would be the servants of Christ.

The West—the great West, has lain near my heart, as no other section of earth has, for the past six years; were I able, I would send forth and sustain a legion of men in that vast, destitute but rich field. But the men and the means are God's;—God's will be done. But let those who know the truth and yet withhold more than is meet, remember that it "tendeth to poverty;" and God will by and by settle with his stewards. For two years and more of my stay in the West, I have been confined to pastoral labors mostly, because I lacked means to accomplish evangelistic labor. And yet, a thorough, intelligent, and energetic missionary effort is what is needed followed by pastoral labors in due time. But all is with God. "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord."

That the great day of the Lord is approaching, and will soon be here to consummate the long cherished hopes of the church, I do not for a moment question. The storm-clouds hang low on the horizon of Europe. Rome must be burned; the battle of Armageddon must be fought; and then, with the rush of the nations, comes the Prince of Peace. "In the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God shall be finished." "Be ye also ready, for, in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh!" Of my tour East, I purpose to speak directly. And I am, yours waiting for immortality at the appearing and kingdom of Christ. P. B. Morgan.

Boston, Sept. 1st, '60.

For the Crisis.

Rome Quarterly Meeting.

This was a good gathering, Aug. 23, but as there are many reports to publish, I will only give a short notice of it. Owing to its being so near the time of our annual State conference, some were not present, preferring to be at the larger one; yet quite a good number attended, and they came prepared to work for the Lord. But few in the vicinity seem to be properly devoted to the work. Our meetings were good, and it refreshed our hearts to worship together. The preaching was good, and listened to with much attention. On Sunday, the town house was filled at an early hour, and the largest part of those who came were obliged to stand without all the day, while they listened to "the word of the kingdom." We trust the Lord will bring good out of this effort.

The Elders present were, H. B. Sevey, D. M. Hanscomb, T. J. Dudley, I. C. Wellcome, also Eld Tibbetts of the Christian church. May we all so live and labor that we may enter into the rest that shall soon be given. H. B. Sevey, Pres.
I. C. Wellcome, Scribe.

Richmond, Me., Aug. 31, 1860.

The Light Ship.

The satisfaction which this little messenger has given has been greater and more general than I dared to expect. Although written for sailors especially, it has been read with great interest by all who could get it, and the universal opinion is that it is good.

The price is very reasonable for the quantity of matter which the work contains, and it must be perused to judge of the quality. I will mail one dozen, postpaid, to any single address for $1.00 after this date. The sailors have them free; but I must sell some to keep up this self-creating fund. Send in your orders to me at 167 Hanover street, Boston, Crisis office, and they will be promptly attended to. Single copies 10 cts., postage 1 ct.

Jno. F. Cotton.

For the Crisis.

Harmony Wanted.—If God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost are three in one, will some one, through the Crisis, reconcile this fact with Luke 12: 10; also harmonize Rom. 2: 12 with Rom. 5: 13. C. G. Carre.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 12, 1860.

The New Volume.

As this is the first number of a new volume, it is befitting that we should say a word to those with whom we are pleasantly associated in the important work of persuading the people to prepare for the coming of the Son of man. Our prospects, so far as the Crisis is concerned, have never been so bright as now since it became a subscription paper. In publishing it, we feel conscious that we enjoy the approbation and blessing of our Father in heaven; and this gives us a cheerful heart to endure our toilsome labor without complaint. If we knew he were not pleased with its issue, we would quit it at once and forever. The cheering epistles from our dear brethren and sisters are also sources of sweet comfort, and are powerful aids in sustaining our hands in this last great work of sounding the judgment alarm. It is a privilege to serve those who love Jesus and his coming. We are one. Our work is short, but earnest. Let us, to a man, "Stand up for Jesus."

Our prospects, so far as the consummation of our hope is concerned, are far brighter than ever. It is now nearly eighteen years since we were converted and became interested in the speedy coming of Christ. During this entire period, we have not had one moment of sorrow that we have associated with this people, believed this doctrine, and helped spread it among our fellow men. "Though oft disappointed and sometimes mistaken," we never felt better satisfied than we do now, that we are right in looking for the immediate coming of our Savior. All is clear. Heaven, earth, and sea proclaim the end is at hand. The moral and political signs are so plain in their testimony, when compared with the prophecies, that we see no room for a single doubt that the resurrection trump will soon awaken the dead. Surely, this is a "blessed hope." Dear brethren and sisters, let us all awake, and make one more mighty effort to arouse the sleeping virgins before it is too late. We have not one moment to lose. Haste to the work! "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." In heart and hand we are with you in the conflict, trusting in God. Let us make new efforts to scatter light and truth. Send your paper to your neighbor; get him to subscribe, that he may become interested in the grand event about to burst upon an astonished world. Do not delay. It is too late to falter now. He who retreats, draws "back to perdition." The struggle will be earnest, but the victory is sure to the faithful, and the triumph glorious. "Remember Lot's wife."

Improvement.—We commence our new volume on better paper than we have ever before used. We hope our faithful patrons will succeed in making an addition to our subscription list sufficient to meet the extra expense. As many of our readers lend the Crisis to their neighbors, who are not able to take a copy themselves, and to others partially interested, but not enough to subscribe, it seems necessary that we use a good quality of paper that will endure many readings.

The Wilbraham Canpmeeting.

Our meeting last year at Wilbraham was thought to be the best we had ever had; but the general conclusion this year decided that the one just closed was better. It will be remembered with much pleasure by those who enjoyed its blessings. We think no one present will say, "the time for campmeetings is passed," after beholding the happy results of the one at W. There are several things worthy of notice.

1. The Ground is well suited for a campmeeting. It is elevated, grass-grown, and well shaded by tall forest trees. It overlooks the Chicopee river and a large extent of country around, and is located in a neighborhood noted for good morals and kind deeds. It is a hallowed spot, on account of blessings received from the Lord—a kind of Mt. Zion to those who assemble there yearly at "the feast of tabernacles," to enjoy the happy greetings from those of like precious faith.

2. The Order of the meetings at W. is the very best, without which much of its excellent effects would be lost. We heard no hooting, swearing or scoffing on the ground. All was quiet as a home circle, save the songs, prayers, exhortations, and shouts of those who participated in the exercises of the meeting. We lay down to rest at night with no more fear of molestation than in a quiet country village. Every one treated us with respect, and seemed pleased to have us assemble for the worship of the God of our fathers. Every year adds new interest to this general gathering. These meetings have become a fixture—a kind of institution—and the people wait with anxiety for their annual return.

3. The Board this year was first rate, and gave general satisfaction. The boarding department was conducted by Brn. R. E. Ladd and H. Munger. The baking was done on the ground, and was executed in a superior manner. We had plenty of nice meat, apple, berry, and custard pies, puddings, warm buscuit, etc., as good as is found at the first class hotels. By a vote of the encampment, if we are permitted to meet again next year, all the profits of the boarding department and of the entire camp arrangement, are to be used to help pay the board of the preachers, and the poor, and the other expenses of the ground. We are glad to announce this fact, as it must give universal satisfaction.

4. The prayer meetings were refreshing, and produced very happy results. Those in the largest tents were very animated and continually crowded. The singing was really soul-stirring, especially in the tents occupied by the Indians and the Africans; and the praying and exhortations were far from having the form without the power. In other tents, the meetings assumed a more calm, melting, and heavenly turn, especially calculated to promote devotional feelings, and affect the milder temperaments. So far as our observation extended, we heard no disputings on doctrine which so often disturb the social meetings at such gatherings. We are glad to learn that many who have formerly indulged in these unprofitable contentions, are satisfied that all disputings are out of place and detrimental to the best interests of a prayer meeting. The object of a conference and prayer meeting is to increase our devotional feelings, our love for God and one another; but controversy has the opposite effect.

5. The preaching was excellent, and well calculated to awaken new interest in the study of the Scriptures, especially in the prophetical portion, relating to the speedy coming of Christ. We think there was more interest manifested on this subject than at any previous meeting upon the ground. There appears to be a genuine waking up to the fact that "the end of all things is at hand." The movements in Europe and Asia are arresting the attention of all classes, and convincing the Bible student that the last days have fully come. The preaching on the evidences of the immediate coming of Christ by Brn. Berick, Himes, Couch, and others, produced a very salutary and awakening effect upon those who heard. A new era is dawning upon the friends of Jesus who love his appearing. We shall expect to see a gradual increase of interest till the Savior comes. Our prospects are really heart-cheering. There seems but little room for doubt that we shall soon be with Jesus, if faithful. Praise the Lord, O my soul.

We will now be a little more specific in our report of the meeting. Mond y, 20th, was spent in erecting tents. In the evening, we had an interesting prayer meeting in the Boston tent. It appeared evident that those present had come in the name of the Lord, with a disposition to labor for the salvation of others.

Tuesday forenoon, there were so many putting up tents, that we had no preaching from the stand, but enjoyed a very interesting conference meeting in the Boston tent. In the afternoon Bro. L. S. Ludington preached on the character of Christ, his work and miracles, showing that he brought life and immortality to light. In the evening, Bro. C. Goodrich spoke on practical religion, showing the importance of self-denial and self-sacrifice, if we expect to be saved.

Wednesday. On account of rain last night, we had preaching in several tents. We listened to Bro. C. F. Hudson, in the Boston tent. He gave an interesting discourse on the things promised to the faithful, showing their great superiority over every thing for which the mere worldling is seeking. While in this world, he thought christians should dwell more on points of union than on the differences, and thus promote brotherly love.

In the afternoon, we listened to an able and instructive discourse from Bro. J. S. White of East Boston, founded on 1 Cor. 15: 24–25. He showed the work of Christ in the plan of redemption in a very clear light, which greatly cheered the humble followers of Jesus. It was one of those sermons that lasts for a life-time.

Wednesday evening, Bro. S. S. Brewer preached on the importance of prophecy, showing that those who neglect it, must walk in darkness relative to coming events, which now proclaim in thunder tones that Jesus will soon appear in glory, to gather his weary children to their happy home. Bro. B.'s heart was very much cheered with the glorious prospect.

Thursday, A. M., Bro. Batchelor, of Rutland, Vt., delivered a reviving discourse, showing that man is to inherit the earth, and that the time is at hand when Jesus will return to set up his everlasting kingdom. He said the evidences were so strong that he could not help believing in the speedy coming of Christ.

At 1 1-2 o'clock, we met in front of the stand for a general prayer meeting and love-feast. It was a heavenly season. One hundred and forty spoke in less than forty-five minutes. At the close of this meeting, four came forward for prayers. At the time for preaching it began to rain, and the audience adjourned to several tents, and listened to instructive sermons. We were not privileged to hear any of them, and consequently can give no report.

In the evening Bro. G. Champlin preached an animating discourse, describing the life of the christian in this world.

Friday. In the morning, we had interesting prayer meetings in several tents. At the hour of preaching, Bro. S. G. Mathewson, pastor of the church at Sandy Hill, N. Y., gave an interesting discourse from Rev. 7: 13, showing that the kingdom is not gained without an effort; that half-hearted desires and feeble resolves are of but little use; that in order to be christians, we must do all to the glory of God.

At 1 o'clock, we met again in front of the preacher's stand, for a general conference and prayer meeting, and had a very profitable season. One hundred and twenty-nine spoke in thirty minutes. We never heard more comprehended in so few words, than in the testimonies of those who stood up for Jesus in this meeting. At its close, six came forward for prayers and were blessed. At the hour of preaching, we were entertained with an able discourse from Bro. F. H. Berick, on the great chain of prophecy in the eleventh of Daniel, showing very conclusively, that we are near the end of the christian dispensation. At the close of the P. M. services, we repaired to the Chicopee river and buried seven in baptism. It was a pleasant season, and very comforting.

In the evening, Bro. W. S. Campbell, of New Britain, Ct., preached from Heb. 2: 14, showing the aggressive nature of christianity, and that finally it will end in a complete triumph over all opposing powers, and the destruction of the devil. Bro. J. S. White followed with some very interesting remarks on the second death as being the penalty for sin, and the glorious triumph of the saints in the new earth after the wicked are all destroyed.

Saturday. On account of rain this morning, we had preaching in several tents, and excellent social meetings. We did not have an opportunity to hear either of the sermons, but heard them well spoken of by those who listened. At 1 o'clock we had another very interesting general prayer meeting in front of the preacher's stand. One hundred and ten spoke in about thirty minutes. Several came forward for prayers, and found peace. There are a goodly number seeking the Lord. At the hour for preaching, Bro. J. V. Himes preached a stirring discourse, showing that the six thousand years from creation, and the prophetical periods which extend to the end of this dispensation, will probably close about 1867–8. The sermon was well calculated to awake the slumbering virgins, the backslidden and the sinner. We are glad to see a new interest in the evidences of the Lord's speedy coming. All things proclaim the kingdom near. We think the time has fully come for those who have light on the coming of Christ, to let it shine upon the darkness around them. There should be no flinching on the part of those who love Jesus. Now is the time for ACTION. In the evening, Bro. P. B. Morgan preached from 1 Pet. 1: 10, 11, inviting the sinner to Christ, and showing him how to come, and the glorious results following. Bro. M. has just returned from the West, where he has been laboring very successfully for some years past. He intends to spend some time in the Eastern States. He will be found an efficient workman in the vineyard of the Lord.

Sabbath. This was one of the most lovely days that ever cheered a sin-cursed earth, and every one seemed to enjoy it. Zion's songs echoed very sweetly through our lovely, tented grove. At 8 o'clock, we met in front of the preacher's stand, for our general love-feast. It was a precious season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Two hundred spoke of their determination to be christians, and be ready to meet the Savior in peace. Their testimonies were really heart-cheering, and indicated a religion of power, of love and purity, that makes one a "new creature." It was truly a feast of good things. At its close, an invitation was given for those who did not feel ready to meet the Savior, to gather in the prayer circle; when a goodly number came forward, and we had a very affecting scene. A middle-aged man came and stood in front of the large audience, and said, "I belong to a little church in which the lively members are dragged down, and I have helped do it; pray for me." This confession took hold of his companion, who arose at once in the middle of the congregation, and with streaming eyes came and took her husband by the arm and said, pray for me." By this time others began to realize their situation, threw off the fear of man, urging their way to the penitent circle, where earnest and prevailing prayer was offered in their behalf. Preaching was advertised at 10 o'clock, but the interest in the prayer meeting was so great that we were not able to bring it to a close till 10 1-2 o'clock. At this time, Bro. J. Couch preached an interesting discourse on "the harvest of the earth;" showing that the physical, moral, and political signs indicate that the reaping angels are about to begin their great work of gathering the saints of God. A vast crowd of people listened with deep attention. There were more present than we have ever seen before at Wilbraham; but we saw no rowdyism to mar the peace of those who had met to worship the King of Kings, who is so soon to come in all his glory. A deep and hallowed sensation appeared to rest upon the entire encampment,—an impression like that felt just before the terrible tornado bursts upon us from the black, tempest cloud,—a consciousness that sublime events are about to open upon an astonished world.

In the afternoon, Bro. H. L. Hastings delivered an able discourse on practical christianity, showing the importance of leaving all for Christ, and of following him through evil as well as good report, if we expect to be saved in his coming kingdom; but if any one should "suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed." It was shown, in a very clear and forcible manner, that the only appropriate title for the followers of Christ is Christian, a name divinely appointed at Antioch; and that all other names dishonor the author of our salvation.

At the close of the sermon, we assembled again on the banks of the Chicopee river, in which nine happy souls were buried in baptism, and rose to rejoice in the Lord with a delight never before enjoyed. The scene was one of unusual interest. A very large crowd stood as witnesses, and cheered the candidates with hearty songs and shouts of joy. The first candidates were a young couple, who not only enjoyed a happy matrimonial union with each other, but a still happier one with Christ. In cheerful obedience, they walked arm in arm into the flowing stream, were buried, and returned in fond embrace to the rejoicing saints, who made the hills all echo around with joyful praise to him who died and rose again. The ninth was a little girl eleven years old, and quite small of her age. She was dressed in white, and appeared very sincere and lovely. A deep sensation ran through the crowd when they first caught sight of this youthful follower of Jesus, walking calmly in his Jordan steps; but when she rose from the burial, and her little voice was heard shouting "glory," many of the spectators were melted to tears, and no doubt wished they were prepared to follow the example of this young disciple of Christ. This heavenly sight filled the saints with joy and gladness, which was heartily expressed in sweet notes of song and shouts of praise to our coming King. The scene will be long remembered by those who were favored with the sight.

At 6 o'clock, we met at the preacher's stand for the ordination of Bro. Hopkins, from Foster, R. I. A solemn and interesting charge was given by Bro. Himes. At the close of this exercise, we gathered around the communion table, to commemorate the sufferings of our Savior. This was a very interesting occasion,—one that will be remembered with pleasure and profit. Four hundred and twenty-seven sat down to show their love for Jesus and his return. Tears flowed freely from many eyes, when we thought and spoke of Him who died on the cross, that we may wear a crown of glory in the home of the pure and the blest. We felt more than ever resolved, in the strength of the Lord, to be christians; so that when earth's jewels are gathered, we may be found in the company of those who will be called to the marriage of the Lamb.

Thus closed one of the best campmeetings we have ever enjoyed. The remark was frequently made, "This is the best meeting I ever attended." We think great good will result from this gathering; and that but few weeks of a lifetime are more profitably spent, than the one in this delightful, tented grove. After the tents were taken down on Monday morning, we gathered once more in joyful sadness to say farewell, and repeat our firm resolution to endure to the end. We were sad at the thought of parting, but joyful in the hope that we should soon meet to part no more. We sung "When shall we meet again?"—said "good-bye," and slowly moved away from the hallowed spot, to renew our conflicts with a wicked world, while singled out by the finger of scorn as objects worthy of the reproach of a slanderous tongue, and the contempt of the popular throng. With joy we sing, "This is the way our Master trod."

The Coming Struggle.

It will be seen, by referring to the "foreign news" on the opposite page, that the nations are constantly preparing for the grand onset, and rapidly approaching its consummation. The mere thought of coming events is enough to chill one's blood; but the nations must enter the bloody struggle, before we can see Jesus. The harlot on the "seven hills" must drink her cup of sorrow to the dregs, and she must be burnt ere the saints have their triumph. Then let the worst come; the sooner it begins, the nearer the end. A distinguished diplomatist says the peace of the world through 1860 can only be preserved by a miracle, so great are the complications at the present time.

Letters from Italy state that "the coming struggles are to be struggles of races; that the Latin races and the Anglo-Germanic races are to enter into a strife, and appeal to the God of battles to decide which shall be master."

The Liverpool Times says that "war is inevitable. There will be no permanent peace in Europe until we have had another great continental strife of arms. Events now approach so rapidly to a climax, that we may awake any morning to read the news of a struggle which may involve all the Great Powers before its termination."

The Liverpool Post says:—"The Turkish Empire is irrecoverably sick.... We are not likely to repeat the Crimean campaign—but we cannot tolerate Russia at Constantinople, or a satrap of France reigning in Syria. In that quarter of the world therefore, affairs are also rapidly assuming an aspect of danger and complexity which demands an instant and decisive solution." Another says:—"A general war in Europe seems to be impending." The Paris Constitutionnel publishes a letter from Turin, signed M. Grandguillot, commencing as follows:—

"Italy is now entering the most critical and most decisive period of her regeneration. Henceforth she stakes on a single card either her ruin or her salvation. Engaged as she is in the path upon which she has been thrown by the expedition of Garibaldi, Italy will within two months be either free and completely independent, or Austria will again reign, and this time from Messina to Turin."

A close observer in political matters says, the contending powers "are grappling at last in the death-struggle;" and that "Turkey is already virtually arraigned on trial for her life; and the decisive action of France has made it certain that the trial must be pushed to a final issue."

Christian, awake! Thy King is soon coming. Be upon thy watchtower, to welcome his approach. Take heed! Do not sleep now. Watch and pray. The hour of deliverance is at hand.

Discussion at Holden.

We have made arrangements to have a discussion with Adin Ballou, at the Town Hall, in Holden, Mass., commencing at 2 o'clock, P. M., Sept. 12th, and continuing two days, two sessions in each day, from 2 o'clock, P. M. till 5, and from 7 till 9 1-2 in the evening. Question,—"Has man an immortal entity?"

Discussion.

We have arranged to discuss the following resolution, with Luke P. Rand, at Bryant's Pond, Woodstock, Me:—

Resolved, "That departed human spirits hold communion with the living on earth."

The discussion is to commence Tuesday evening, Sept. 25th, and continue three or four evenings, as thought best.

☞ We have received the third number of the "Voice of the Prophets." The contents are as follows:—Nearing Deliverance, The Celestial Railroad, The Coronation of the King of Kings, Notes on Sacred Chronology, To the Reapers, Testimony of a Millenarian, The Finished Mystery, This Gospel of the Kingdom, An old Tradition, A rare Gem, Signs, Fall of the Papacy, The 1,290 years, Cry aloud and spare not, Business Items. We learn that the subscription has run up to near three thousand. We wish success to the enterprise.

Meeting of the Christian Association.

To the brethren in Christ and churches of the Lord, who serve the living God and wait for his Son from heaven, greeting:

We, the undersigned, who are your servants for Jesus' sake, feel it duty to address you upon a matter of some importance.

Called of God, as we are, to the seeking of glory and honor and immortality, and looking for that blessed hope, even the glorious appearing of our Lord, we feel it to be our duty in every department of christian labor, to obey the Master's mandate, "Occupy till I come." Much is to be done, and great wisdom is requisite that the best cause may be promoted by the best means; that sinners may be saved, believers strengthened, and the gospel of the kingdom preached in all the world for a witness to all nations.

Shall we not labor in such a work? Shall we not labor unitedly?

1. Some parts of our labor can be done single-handed. We can push out alone into the field and preach the gospel in the regions beyond. But in this case, those who stay behind may feel it a privilege to give their brethren the hand of fellowship to go unto the Gentiles, and also to sustain them by their sympathies, their prayers, and their money.

2. So likewise the publication of books and tracts for general circulation can be carried on alone; but yet at great expense of time and labor which might be avoided by consolidation.

3. The publication of a weekly journal devoted to the interests of the body at large cannot so easily be accomplished without association. The results of some experiments indicate that such an organ should not be the property of one man, while the disposition of the persons who sustain it indicates that no one man could originate and long preserve such a solitary interest without provoking rival interests and incurring various jealousies and dangers.

The "World's Crisis" was the result of associated action, and as such, of course, is of right the possession of those who sustain it. But law recognizes no right of property in unorganized bodies. Hence there must be an association constituted to hold this property, or else it is for the time being, legally the private property of the treasurer or business agent; for all demands against which he is personally responsible; and it is subject to his control absolutely—is liable for his debts, and is subject to administration in event of his decease, as also to mal-adminstration in case of his dishonesty. Since we have no association capable of holding any of our property, there is a positive call for action in this direction.

4. It might also be well to consider if the counsel of wise and able brethren, authorized by the voice of the brethren at large, might not be of great service in directing the various interests to which we have alluded.

With these views and feelings, at a meeting held in Providence, July 25th and 26th, the undersigned, with others, associated themselves together, under the name of the Christian Association. The constitution, objects, and proceedings of the society were published in the Crisis of Aug. 1st. It was also directed that a regular or an annual meeting should be called, to be held before the 10th of November, 1860. The undersigned have been instructed to call such a meeting, to be held at Salem, on Tuesday, the 16th of October next.

We do accordingly invite all members of the Association to meet at that time and place, to counsel and act in behalf of the interests above named. All pastors of churches and ministers of Christ, disposed to co-operate in the work to be done, are regarded as members. And every church, congregation, or company of believers, who wish to co-operate, is authorized and invited to send one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members above the number of twenty-five members. That is, a church of seventy-five members may send two; a church of one hundred and twenty-five members may send three, and so on.

5. Another matter of business will doubtless claim attention, and should be mentioned by us. In the formation of the society, by a fair and good majority, though not by an unanimous vote, the term "Advent" was made no part of its name. Some friends have feared that this was done because we were ashamed of the name, or from some other worldly policy. We may remind those who could not attend the meeting in in Providence that the question of a name was freely discussed for a whole day's time; and we think some of those who were in the majority are most reliable, laborious and fearless in proclaiming the truths we hold dear. Yet we cordially invite the brethren to send a full representation of their opinions on this question. We can all cheerfully accept the will of the majority concerning the name to be taken by the society, and given as the imprint of its tracts. And let us so do and live that, whatever be our name, we need not be ashamed of our work, our character, or our Lord.

We invite the preaching brethren, and the churches by their delegates, to come and advise together in all these matters. Let the churches all send a full delegation, that it may be their interest as well as ours. We wish for a full, frank, free discussion, and then the best kind of action. We do not propose to bind men's consciences, make creeds, or build a sect, but simply to put work that must be done in an associated form, in a position to be done in the best possible manner.

And we invite not only preachers and delegates, but all who can come, to give us the benefit of their suggestions, their experience, or their prayers. Yet that all measures may be fairly tested, it is understood that only regular members, preachers or delegates, sent as above named, shall vote in matters of business; otherwise churches residing nearest might have exclusive control.

We invite also the correspondence of friends, who, though unable to attend, may by letter advise us of their views and sentiments. Come, then, brethren, to this meeting, and let us do work that God will approve, and that Christ will look upon and say, "Well done." Our time is short. The Lord is at hand. People perish for lack of knowledge. From every hand comes the cry for light and labor. The world and church are asleep. Are not we asleep also? Let us awake. Let us put our shoulder to the wheel. Let us work while the day lasts. Do not leave us alone in the matter. We may err. We need your advice, prayers, sympathies and help. We would serve God and his people. Let us then unite to work his work with zeal.

Your brethren in Christ,

H. L. Hastings,	J. Couch,
M. Grant,	Walter Pratt,
G. T. Adams,	J. Hemenway,
W. S. Campbell,	S. G. Mathewson,
A. Ross,	C. F. Hudson,
H. V. Davis,

Members of the Executive Committee.

For the Crisis.

"Reasons for my Hope."

Having read this work, written by Bro. H. L. Hastings, I wish to say for the encouragement of its circulation, it is in my judgment, the best work on the subject I have ever seen. No christian can read it without being benefitted many times more than its cost. There are important statistical facts enough to well pay the buyer. Then it is running over with instruction and comfort. Brethren, let it be widely circulated. I. C. Wellcome.

Richmond, Me.

☞ While every man wishes in his heart, it is the peculiarity and glory of the christian's wishes that, by being carried up in aspiration to God, they become sublimed into prayers.

Obituary Notices.

Died, at his residence in Blandford, Mass., May 17th, 1860, Bro. Chester Gibbs, aged fifty-two years.

Death has entered and broken our ranks One of our number has fallen a victim to the last great enemy of our race. Our brother has lived the life of the righteous, and had attended to the great concerns of the soul's salvation, and was a living epistle known and read of all men. When the cry was made in East Otis, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," his heart responded to the sentiment, and has since been looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the Savior to ransom the host, and gather the elect from the four winds of heaven, when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ.

His sickness was short, and was borne without a murmur. He was ready to go. He left a companion and three children to mourn his loss Their home is very lonely—husband and father gone to return no more till the great gathering day, when parents and children that have been left and scattered shall greet each other safe on Eden's shores to part no more forever.

The occasion was improved by a discourse from the writer, founded on Ps. 88 10,—"Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? Shall the dead arise and praise thee?" A large and deeply attentive audience were gathered. A large number of mourners, friends and neighbors followed his remains to their last resting place, to await till God shows wonders to the dead, and the dead shall arise and praise the Lord. David Bates.

ASLEEP IN JESUS.

Emily M. Hartwell "fell asleep" Aug 28th, 1860.

Sleep, oh thou weary one!
Rest, burdened heart, thy woes are fled,
Rest, weary hand; rest, aching head;
Rest with the peaceful, holy dead:
Rest, for thy toil is done.

Rest, for thy woe is past;
Here in the tomb thy dust we lay,
Accomplished is the hireling's day,
Finished thy weary pilgrim's way,
Thy journey's o'er at last!

Sleep 'neath thy Savior's smile;
Sleep till the morning break o'er thee;
Sleep till death's gathering shadows flee,—
Soon thou thy Savior's face shall see:
Sleep, then, a little while!

Rest, oh thou weary one!
"In Jesus" sweetly "sleep" thou here,
Away from care, and toil, and fear,
Till Christ thy master shall appear,
Then shall he call thee home.

H. L. H.

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 5th, '60.

Died, in Worcester, Aug. 10th, Alden Thayer, aged sixty-two years.

Bro. Thayer had been a believer for many years in the revelation which God has given of his Son Hence he believed not only in the first advent of our Savior, but also in his second coming to raise the dead, to give immortality to his people, to judge the world, to reign in his kingdom, to fill the earth with his glory, to restore all things spoken of by the prophets.

Our Bro. died of an injury he received in falling from a wagon He lived about four weeks after. Though he suffered much, he enjoyed much. He was at peace with God and man. He died in full expectation of a "better resurrection" He has left a widow and several children, to whom we hope God will sanctify the affliction. A sermon was preached on the Sunday following by the writer to a large congregation, from Job 14 14. J. S. White.

In Worcester, on the 18th of Aug., William E. Drury, aged forty-nine years.

Bro. Drury died of consumption, after some eight months' sickness. I learned that it was confidently hoped that, in the latter part of his sickness, he experienced that change of mind which gave him good hope of a future life through Christ.

His funeral was attended at his house by a large number of friends and acquaintance, when the following topic was considered "Man as he was, as he is, and as he will be." He left a large family, to whom we pray the Lord to sanctify his providence.

J. S. White.

East Boston, Mass

Died, of typhoid fever, at the residence of her sister, in Monson, Lester Co., Emily M., wife of Bro. Ira Hartwell, of Lowell, Mass., on Monday night, Aug. 28th, 1860, aged thirty years.

There are many who will read the above announcement with pain. Those who have known Sister Hartwell, and have loved her,—those who have shared her sympathies in their sorrows, and her substance in their poverty,—those who have found her home a pilgrim's home and her greeting an ever ready welcome, will grieve to feel that all these are to exist only in memory from henceforth.

Sister Hartwell was converted in early life, and several years ago embraced the promises of the better country and the "blessed hope." Since that time her faith has stood not in the traditions of men, but in the word of God. She looked to Jesus at his coming and to the resurrection of the dead for future life and glory and immortality; this hope was her joy in life and her consolation in death.

She was taken ill while in Connecticut attending on a sick relative, and after several days' sickness was removed to the house of her sister, in Monson, where she lingered for about ten days and died. Her death was unexpected, and the blow was most severe to her husband and little boy, who are overwhelmed with sorrow. Most of the time she anticipated recovering, and desired to do so that she might better than ever before illustrate the doctrine of Christ in her life. But this was not to be her privilege.

While she could converse she endeavored to invite her friends to Christ, and when unable to speak, she by signs and smiles of joy confirmed her testimony of faith and hope in the Redeemer. While many of her friends were met at Wilbraham, she, who had often met them there before, was only a few miles distant struggling in the grasp of death. Her husband failed to receive a dispatch sent to him, and only arrived the morning after she died.

Her struggles and toils are over. She died in great peace. She rests from her labors and her works do follow her. And when the Master shall call his chosen, no doubt he shall say to her, "I was an hungered and ye gave me meat; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me."

Will not those who have shared the hospitalities of Bro. Hartwell's once happy, but now desolate home, breathe a prayer that God's great peace may rest upon the broken heart of the lonely husband and motherless child; and that the severed ones may all meet again,

"Where fears of parting chill,—never, no never."

Sept. 1st, 1860. H. L. H.

Died with consumption, at Hartford, Ct., Aug. 30th, Chauncy Hall, aged fourteen years, only son of Sidney and Harriet Hall.

Chauncy was a lad of a remarkably amiable disposition, greatly beloved by his Sabbath school teacher and associates, and while he lived, a perpetual joy and comfort to his christian parents. And now that he has gone to his rest, we "sorrow not even as others which have no hope." He sleeps in Jesus; and when Jesus comes, "them also who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Amen. Come, Lord Jesus. P. B. M.

Died, in South Killingly, Ct., July 22nd, of consumption, Hattie, daughter of Jonah S. and Laura Young, aged eight years and eight months.

This family has drunk very deeply from the cup of affliction during the last six months. Blessed with nine lovely children, lovely by nature and made doubly so by Divine grace, they have seen the enemy Death snatch away to its land of darkness and confusion one after another in rapid succession till three only are left to them. The present year, only half past as yet, has called them to follow to the grave first Mary, whose very being seemed lighted with heavenly radiance, then Carrie, whose heart had learned to prize the Savior, in whom she trusted; and now little Hattie, whose happy innocence robbed death of half its boasting O death! art thou insatiable? wilt thou strip the household of all its jewels? Ride on, then, in all thy victory, if thou must, but short shall be thy triumph, for for hark! a voice from heaven—"I will ransom them from the power of the grave—I will redeem them from death—O death, I will be thy plagues! O grave, I will be thy destruction!" What meaneth this? Thy Conqueror comes! He holds the keys of thy dark prison house, He'll rob thee of thy treasures, and as they come forth, Abraham from Machpelah's cave, Daniel from Chaldea's plain, David from his city burial, the saints of God from earth and sea, and Hattie from the hill-side green, loud over them they'll raise this song of triumph—"O, death, where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory?" Cease, then, thy boasting, O tyrant, spare the remnant of the flock, for soon thou who hast devoured nations shalt thyself be swallowed up.

Such is the hope of these parents, and it dries their tears as the appointed hour makes haste when Jesus' voice shall pierce the tomb and call the dead to life. While in the furnace of affliction they mourn not as others who have no hope.

We improved the occasion of burial in the use of Isa. 48 10,—"I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction." In this assurance may they be comforted. H. F. C.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

By the arrival of the steamship America, we have news to the 25th ult.

ITALIAN REVOLUTION

Garibalda had received an accession of two fine steamers from England, one called the British Vulcan, and a considerable sum of money. Kossuth's staff had arrived.

The invasion of Calabria and the commencement of the campaign on the main land, by Garibaldi, is fully confirmed.

The town of Reggio had been attacked and taken by Garibaldi. Four thousand Calabrians joined the Garibaldians in this attack.

Fifteen hundred Garibaldians have disembarked in Calabria and were joined by two hundred insurgents, with whom they retired to the mountains. Preparations continued for the defence of Naples.

Col Cosenz, with 4,000 volunteers, had quitted Taormina, taking the direction of the mainland.

Fifteen hundred men, with arms and tents, from Sardinia, had landed at Naples, but were compelled to re-embark.

Four thousand Calabrian insurgents had joined the Garibaldians.

The correspondent of the Daily News confirms the announcement that the Calabrians are in open revolt against the King of Naples and in favor of Garibaldi.

The French Government has abandoned the project of raising Spain to the rank of a great power for the present.

The chiefs of the revolutionary movement at Naples had caused an illumination of the whole city. Crowds of people shouted "Garibaldi for ever," in defiance of the Royalists. About ten of the late police-agents have been killed.

The priests are constantly saying all Italy is falling into infidelity, and the Italians themselves tell us we are coming to believe nothing. With the testimony of priests and people to the same effect, one must conclude that there is some truth in the declaration.

A letter from Rome says

"The situation of this city, as well as that of Naples, is alarming. It is apprehended that the Roman territory will shortly be attacked, for everybody here is confident that Garibaldi will triumph at Naples, and that he will not stop there. His agent, M. Bertani, very explicitly declared so in the proclamation he addressed a few days since to the Italian volunteers.

FRANCE.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says:—

Commercial men are becoming more and more alarmed at Garibaldi's progress.

The correspondent of the London Morning Post says:—

The friends of Italy will be glad to learn that Garibaldi's plans for occupying Naples are proceeding with the utmost success. Towards the end of next week the public may expect important news. Not less than eight thousand men of Garibaldi's national army are now in the continental dominions.

It is reported in Paris that the French Government has received a communication from St. Petersburg, expressing the desire of Russia to act in concert with France and England in the East. The Russian Cabinet reiterates its opinion that the events now transpiring in the East hold in suspense the peace of the world, and that the very existence of Turkey is at stake.

The Eastern question has for a long while been considered as one of those which may most disturb the world.

RUSSIA.

It is asserted from a semi-official source, that Russia was certainly concentrating fresh troops in Bessarabia, and increasing her naval force in the Mediterranean.

Four Russian frigates, under the command of the Grand Duke Constantine, were about to proceed to Syria.

The Duke of Modena was enrolling volunteers and purchasing horses.

The French government had made known to the European Governments that its proposal to raise Spain to the rank of a great power having given rise to objections, it will not endeavor for the present to carry it out.

The accounts given in all the Russian journals of the prospects of the harvest are very unfavorable. Violent storms of rain and hail, floods and high winds, have damaged the crops in many localities; and, in addition to these causes of destruction, some of the southern provinces have been visited by that scourge, the locust. In Bessarabia the population has been called out against the advancing swarms of this insect as against an invading army. A cordon of 20,000 men, under military orders, was drawn round the district in which the locusts had appeared, and the measures taken for the extermination of the pest had to some extent succeeded, when another band appeared in the same district, and in the government of Cherson.

This insect army spread over the country till it covered an area of sixty wersts in length by twenty broad.

A letter from Japan alludes to a report that 12,000 Russian soldiers were on the march to Pekin. The writer is confident that something mysterious was on foot, and hopes the success of the Allies may not be thwarted by Russia.

ENGLAND.

All British war steamers in the dock yards are to be made ready for the next emergency.

England grows daily more warlike.

AUSTRIA.

A letter in the Paris Debats says:

"I need not tell you of the attitude of Austria it is as threatening as it can be and be at peace, i. e., not at actual war. Venetia is encumbered with troops. At Udine, a town of 18,000 inhabitants, there is a garrison of 14,000 soldiers. There are soldiers in the smallest villages."

ONE DAY LATER.

Father Point, Sept. 10 The Canadian steamship Bohemian, from Liverpool August 30, via Londonderry 31st, passed here this evening en route for Quebec.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post telegraphs that it does not appear that the proposal to make the city of Naples neutral has the slightest chance of success. We may hear any day that Garibaldi has entered Naples, and that the king has quitted it.

The Times Paris correspondent remarks that the demand of the French government, on account of the recent outrage on their Embassador at Naples, cannot be viewed otherwise than as a lift given to Garibaldi and the revolution.

Genoa, Aug 29. The Genose Jounes of to-day publishes the following report

On Monday last the Neapolitan Generals, assembled in council, had, with the exception only of Gen Bosco, unanimously resolved to advise the King to take his departure from the city.

A report was current in Naples that the officers of the army and navy had tendered their resignation en masse to the King.

Notices, &c.

Eld. M. Grant in Canada East.

At the earnest request of the Christian Association in Danville, C. E., Eld. M. Grant will revisit, and hold meetings with the church in this place on last Lord's day in Sept, and first in Oct, the Lord willing. I would most respectfully recommend that the churches in these townships, viz., Melbourne, Hatley, and Barstown, etc., would endeavor to secure a portion of his labor for the good of their health, before he returns.

J. Porter.

Notice.

The brethren in Ohio, through their committee, Geo. W. Cherry, Bro. Southwick, Bro. Fish of Dayton, and P. Alling of Norwalk, have determined on holding a conference this fall in Northern Ohio. They choose as

The place North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio.

The time, so far as determined, is Oct. 26th, Friday, 11 A. M., and over the Lord's day, the 28th. The first, or morning meeting, may hold daily as long as needful. The second meeting early in the evening. Thus we shall not be hurried in our services, nor spend time needlessly in going and coming. All "who have an ear to hear" are invited to "hear" the proof positive, as holy writ and acknowledged fact, that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Those who believe are exhorted to come and help forward the objects of the conference. The Judge has said in relation to spreading the knowledge of his approach,—"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing!" "Now the just shall live by faith, but if he draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Come then, beloved, to dispense, as well as to "receive," more of "the manifold grace of God." To them that have shall be given, and they shall have MORE ABUNDANCE.

In behalf of the brethren, and subject to their amendment if deemed needful.

J. B. Cook.

Campmeeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a campmeeting in Exeter, Me., commencing Monday, Sept. 17th, and continue one week. The meeting will be holden on the old ground, near the Chamberlain meeting-house, and twenty-two miles from Bangor. As there is no stage that runs within four miles of the place, if the brethren will inform us what day or days they will be in Bangor, we will have a team there to take them to the meeting for about one half the fare in the stage.

Arrangements will be made for boarding and horse keeping on reasonable terms. We hope all who can will bring their tents and bedding with them. We expect our preaching brethren, Billings and Hemenway, and all others whom the Lord shall send. As this meeting is not designed to build up any party or sect, we hope our brethren and sisters will come with hearts full of love and zeal for God and his truth, praying that truth may prevail and good order and quietness pervade the encampment.

Circumstances are such, it is thought best to change the location of this meeting from Levant, as was noticed by Bro. Hemenway, to Exeter, Me.

D. E. Ireland,
H. N. Patten,
H. Cole,
} Committee.

Iowa, Minn. and Wisconsin Christian Conference.

Our fourth annual conference will be holden at Springville, Badax Co., Wis., commencing Oct. 4th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over Lord's day. Springville is about thirty miles from La Crosse (on the Mississippi river,) from which the stage runs every Tuesday and Friday, and about thirty-five from Sparta (on the Milwaukee and Lacrosse R. R.,) from which place a stage runs every Wednesday to Viroqua, only three or four miles from Springville. Strangers can inquire for Wm. A. Morse, or W. Sheldon.

P. S. W. Dexo,
W. Sheldon,
} Evangelists.

Notice to Campmeeting Committee in Me.—Two or three preachers will arrive at Bangor on Tuesday, 18th inst., by the Daniel Webster, that would like conveyance to the camp ground in Exeter. J. Hemenway.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a conference in Unity Village, N. H., to commence Friday, Sept. 21st, at half-past ten A. M., and continue over Lord's day. It is expected that Bro. J. G. Smith and G. Otis will be present to preach the word.

In behalf of the brethren, J. Kimball.

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

Also, a tent meeting in Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill., near Bro. Larken Scott's, to commence Sept. 27th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday. We hope to see a general rally. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be there to preach the word.

Also, there is to be two tent meetings in Brown Co., Ill.; one at Mt Pleasant, or Mt. Stirling, as Brn. Raymond and others may arrange, to commence Oct. 12th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday.

The other at Ripley, to commence Oct 3d, (Wednesday) at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr Mansfield are to be in attendance at all of the above named meetings and preach the word. I expect God will bless his word to the salvation of souls I hope the brethren in the different localities will make the meetings a special subject of prayer, that there may be much good done in the name of Jesus.

Moses Chandler, for the Church.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a conference in Buchanan, Mich., to commence on the evening of the 19th of Sept. and continue over Lord's day. Bro. F. H. Berick will be present to preach the word. We trust our brethren will take advantage of this opportunity. In behalf of the church,

D. R. Mansfield.

Notice.

The Advent Chapel at West Hoosick, N. Y., will be dedicated Thursday, the 27th of Sept. Meeting to continue over the following Sunday. I and Bro. J. S. White are expected to attend, and preach the word. By request of the church. M. Batchelor.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon, otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. P. B. Morgan will preach in

Boston, (Chapman Hall)	Sunday, Sept. 16th
Eld J. B. Cook	Sept. 23d and 30th

If the Lord will I propose to commence a series of meetings in the Town Hall at Hinesburgh, Vt., on Wednesday evening, Sept. 12th.

RUFUS WENDELL.

The Lord willing, I will preach in

South Tunbridge, Vt	Sunday, Sept. 16th
Danbury, N. H.	Sept. 17th
Loudon Ridge	Sept. 18th
Auburn	Sept. 19th
South Reading, Mass	Sunday, Sept. 23d
Lowell	Sept. 24th
Westford	Sept. 25th
Manchester	Sept. 26th

L. D. THOMPSON.

Providence permitting, I shall meet with the friends in Prospect, Ct., where Bro. Mix may appoint, Oct. 13th and 14th. Will Bro. Ira Morgan please meet me? Middlebury the 16th. At Bro. Porter's, Roxbury, the 17th. Waurnumang the 18th. JOSEPH GREGORY.

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach, if the Lord will, at

Bridgeport, Ct	Sept. 16th
Prospect	Sept. 23d
Cheshire Street,	Sept. 30th
North Canton	Oct. 7th

Eld. H. Pratt appoints to preach at

Music Hall Block, Springfield, Mass Sept. 16th

W. PAYNE.

Eld. Geo. Champlin will preach at

Bristol.......Sept. 16th

GEO. L. WHITE.

The Lord permitting, I will preach at

Springfield, Mass., Tuesday evening	Sept. 18th
Chester Factories, Wednesday eve.	Sept. 19th
Albany, Thursday eve	Sept. 20th
Seneca Falls, Friday eve.	Sept. 21st

and over the Lord's day if not supplied.

I shall be on my way home to print more of my works, and prepare to travel in the Western States and C. W. the coming year. I hope to leave home for some part of the West in Jan., 1861.

JACOB BLAIN.

The Lord will, I will preach in South Windsor, (Pleasant Valley,) Ct., Sept. 23d.

Eld. S. P. BABCOCK.

The Lord willing, we will hold a conference in Dalton, commencing on the evening of Sept. 21st, and continuing over the following Sunday, where Bro. Warren may appoint. S. S. BRAZEE.

A. FOX.

Dr. Fox will preach at Chester Factories evening of Sept. 19th. S. S. BRAZEE.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

Litchfield Station	Sept. 11th
Campa Mills (Bro. Gunn's)	Sept. 12th
Plymouth Hollow	Sept. 16th
Wallingford	Sept. 23d

L. S. LUDINGTON.

APPOINTMENTS for DANIELSONVILLE, CT.

Eld. H. F. Carpenter..........Sept. 16th and 23d

The R. I. State Quarterly Conference will meet at this place Sept. 26th. We purpose continuing the public services over the following Sunday. Friends from abroad are invited to attend.

H. F. CARPENTER, Pastor.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the Grove near the Anderson School-house, 2 1-2 miles south-west of Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, Sept. 23d, commencing at 10 o'clock.

Sept. 24th, 25th, 26th, in Unity, near the Centre Road Depot, on the Pittsburgh and Erie Rail Road.

Sept. 27th and 28th in the Simmon's neighborhood, one mile and a half from Jefferson, Ashtabula Co., Ohio.

Saturday evening and over Sunday, at Ashtabula, Ohio. Monday eve., Oct. 1st, at Girard, near Bro. Alton's. John T. Oxgley, Evangelist.

Bro. J. W. Crabtree will preach at

New Britain, Ct. Sept. 16th

W. A. FENN.

I will be at Yarmouth, Me., with Bro. R. R. York, Sept. 14th, and will preach for him that evening if he desires. Also, I expect to be in West Poland, Me., Sabbath, Sept. 16th, and preach in the Free Chapel if there is no other appointment. If there should be, will Bro. Jesse Partridge make appointment for me in that section. O. R. FASSETT.

Bro. W. Sutherland appoints to preach at

Warwick Plains Sept. 16th

I purpose to preach at Massena, N. Y., the second and third Sundays of Sept. M. BATCHELOR.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Frankfort Mills. Sunday, Sept. 16th

Commence a series of meetings at Dover, Me., where Bro. Lougee may appoint, Wednesday, Sept. 26th, to continue over the following Sabbath.

J. HEMENWAY.

G. A. Otis and J. Pinkham, providence permitting, will be at Warner, N. H., where J. Morgan may appoint, Sept. 12th, 7 o'clock. At Bradford the 13th, and Newbury the 14th, each at 7 o'clock in the evening.

I will be with them Saturday evening, Sept. 15th, and Sunday the 16th. At Grantham where H. Ford shall appoint. J. G. SMITH.

With God's permission I will attend meetings as follows:—

Round Pond, Me.	Sept. 16th
Sorry, Me	Sept. 23d
Carmel, Me., (Union Meeting-house)	Sept. 30th

THOMAS SMITH.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

S. G. Clarke's P. O. address is Wales, Ogle Co., Ill.

G. W. T.—We think not.

E. O. Allen.—All right.

B. Greaves.—All right.

Cash Receipts.

For the Preachers' Aid Society.—J. M. Muhlig, $2.00.

J Crowley 292, $1.30, Mrs. M A Haynes 260, $1.25; Hach. Bailey, 5 copies, 285, $5.00, D Stafford 260, $1.58; H Keefer 255, $2.28; J H Cox 260, $1.45, J Renshaw 270, $1.13, W C Keve 216 $2.16; J K Cobb 286, $1.40, C Fleming 282. $1.15; G Huntley 312, 2.26, A A Tupper 304 $1.99, J Baker 255, $1.25, R F Haley 286, $1.40, H Fyler 260, $2.12, E D Root 260, $2.08; R Sevey 269, $1.50, L B Watkins 286, $2.44, W D Hubbs 260, $1.20; C W Smith, 2 copies, 333, $6.40, Al. Gleason 260, $1.32; E Caulkins 265, 20 cts.

W S Olmsted 273, C H Bradford 270, H Shaw 271, A P Hyde 254, L Andrews 268, S H Oatley 273, Al. Rice 293, L Pease 273, C Drake 273, J W Helm 273, D Ashley 273, J L Rich 260, J Sawyer,—50 cts. each.

J Clothey 279, C M Smith 284, E Beals 281, E R Morton 281, T W Haskins 288, W J Hoyt 272, Mrs. S M Clark 260, A Logan 281, G W Hurd 250, C O Perrigo 282, S C Kingsley 282, C Hopkins 286, G H White 278, J C Works 282, T H Girard 265, Al. Loomis 282, J Hanson 265, T R Winn 275, S Shaw 237, Ol. Raymond 301, M Smith 272, H W Farmer 272, J Barker 260, N Fenton 252, F L Smith 275, L Haskell 286, A S Kelley 234, S Brown 276, J P Lougee 252, M M Miller 282, E M Mix 267, R Gibson 286, E Gibson 286, W Elmore 240, M Dansforth 286, J M Strong 276, J S Tenny 218, W Harriman 27 , Al. Williams 286, Em. Franchies 286, J M Dodge 286, J Bliss 260, L Barber 286, J A Chaplin 260, Mrs. L M Plummer 286, S Snyder 286, J Spenser 275, W Sprague 278, E B Woods 271, Mrs J B Piper 286, A K P Dudley 286, E S Diman 269, E Macomber 283, C F Clough 286, A Butler 260, J M Newcomb 182, Ad. Russ 260, M P Hough 286, J H Piper 270, L Deming 286, S Goodell 286, P Coon 286, O Jones 260, S F Hubbard 278, B F Kimball 286, P Howard 286, S Cooper 289, G L Rice 286, A Mayo 285, J J Austin 260, G Wood 260, Mrs H Beecher 286 B Patterson 260, J W Bartlett 286, N Lazelle 286, R Avery 260, Au. Bliss 286, S Mason 221, I I Neal 286, J Hill 286, G L White 286, Am. Richardson 286, A S Richards 286, C Weldon 286, Mrs C Button 282, L Shurtleff 286, A H Chidsey 259, J Brown 260, B Hitchcock 271, J D Fletcher 273, G Miller 234, D Randall 286, I G Wetherell 286, A Hitchcock 260, G P Goodell 260, P Bishop 225, Em. Ayres 286, I B Brown 286, L Tiffany 286, An. Smith 260, D D Chaffee 286, A Goodell 286, W Johnson 286, A L Bradley 281, A Kingsbury 312, A Spoor 286, G Gillet 313, E P Robinson 286, O D Pease 283, D Ford 286, A Streeter 265, A Clapp 286, E Edson 290, H Butler 286, J R Weaver 260, K C Cook 286, S French 282, J R Hersam 286, W Coller 260, L T Cunningham 278, J Gierlow 273, R Whitney 286, Mrs E Collins 286, S J Parsons 283, E G Ament 278, Al. Edson 260, Al. Davis 286, Mrs W Freeman 262, Mrs F Rice 288, A Spaulding 260, E S Mudgett 260, O K Gibbs 260, Mrs M A Small 276, J Davis 260, L A Prince 286, I J Stedman 281, D Campbell 286, And. Pine 286, J Pine 276, S Rayner, 286, S Black 206, P Richards 275, Aaron Yard 275, A A Thompson 286, Al. Jenny 267, N Raymond 286, E R Wormwood 278, I P Perkins 260, H Christenson 286, G F Polley 286, J E Wilson 286, W Beatty 286, C B Winder 286, S Rice 286, S J Craft 286, J B Cook, T Tewksbury 260, G V Adrieme 280, Mrs. P Phillips 286, C Colburn 286, G Huntley 286, S Gerrish 286, E D Hutchinson 281, H B Mead 260, C F Murray 286, R C Jackman 286, L Taylor 286, I Hartwell 260, B Wheelock 312, Mrs. G S Flint 288, H Wilson 286, W E Despa 286, M A Pote 286, Mrs. E Stowe 286, H Mythe 273, Mrs. S Blanchard 26 , J Allen 312, M I Robinson 286, E R Lemont 286, J Oldershaw 286, J M Worthing 286,—$1.00 each.

O I Clisby 281, Ab. Gatchell 260, E Buckland 262, J Jeffrey 261,—$1.50 each.

Books and Tracts.

J Crowley $3.70, W Nute $2.00, Miss J E Everett 86 cts., O I Clisby $2.50, S C Kingsley 27 cts, J W Hill 25 cts, W C Keve 40 cts, T Priday 25 cts. W Steele 48 cts, D B Jones 49 cts, C Fleming 85 cts, A A Tupper 50 cts, E Gibson $1.00, W P Devouport 21 cts, J Sneed $1.00, W L Strood 13 cts, M Stratton 27 cts, A M Cole $1.00, W Baker $1.00, H B Cross $1.34, I Hodgkins $1.00, H Gibbs $5.00, G W Young $3.74, J James $30.45, C Goodrich $1.88, D Mason 22 cts, H F Carpenter $3.00, A R White 69 cts, J McCammon $1.00, C W Smith $9.60, E J Cook 90 cts, O R Gibbs, tracts for poor, $1.50, E Root 48 cts, I Patchen $1.00, A S Whitney 69 cts, I J Stedman 27 cts, A Gleason 63 cts, L B Potter $1.00, D F Salley 43 cts, I Newton 36 cts, B Perkins 50 cts, W M Ingham $1.62.

[Remainder of receipts next week.

Books and Tracts.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Tracts from the Tract Fund.—Friends at the West can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.

H. L. HASTINGS.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruah and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 8 cts. $1.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Prices, postpaid, $1.25.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 3 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 1 cent single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed; or, Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 5 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or, the kingdom of God the Father, the Kingdom of Satan, the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $2.00 per hundred, 30 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Bacons, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

Zinzendorff's Hymn.

Christ's blood and righteousness to me
As robe and ornament shall be;
With these I'll stand, nor fear the rod,
Before the awful bar of God.

If through thy blood, O Lord, I be
Here doubly faithful unto thee,
And hate all evil for thy sake,
Till death at last shall me o'ertake:

Then will I, when I come to thee,
Not think how good and great I be,
But this: Here comes a sinner, Lord!
Who needs thy gracious, pard'ning word!

Jesus, thy praise the earth shall rend!
That thou from heav'n didst condescend,
And for mankind, and for my sake,
Eternal ransom here didst make.

— Missionary.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. S. S. Brewer to Bro. L. Boutell.

(Published by Bro. Boutell's request.)

Dearly Beloved Bro. in Christ:—After an absence of three months, we reached our dear home on the evening of the 10th, tired in, but not of the way. Home! O how sweet the old familiar expression, home! Never was home so dear to me. Yet what thoughts arise as I wake to memory the short days of my earthly pilgrimage. Alas, what ravages has Death, the insatiable monster, made even in my home. Five have been torn cruelly away from our fond hearts. Yet, hark! what heavenly melody breaks on our ears. O what a balm to my poor aching, bleeding heart, amid the conflicts and turmoils of this present life! "Thus saith the Lord, refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy." There, dear Bro., that is dearer than all the promises to pay, on demand, that have ever been or can be written by mortal man. And what, in the infinitude of God's most gracious mercy, sheds a heavenly lustre to the promise is, we are very, very soon to be an eye witness to the most sublime exhibition of God's power, in raising the dead. O, my soul, what a grand, awful, sublime subject to meditate upon—the universal waking up of all God's dear saints! What holy raptures will then cling with undying perpetuity to the immortalized host! O, what transcendent felicity will fill the souls of prophets, apostles, martyrs, as they wake in the beauteous, blooming image of the immortal Son of God! What scenes will those spots present where the calcined bones and ashes of the martyrs of Jesus now sleep, as they wake up in that bright morn of joy! O, the contrast! They fell asleep amid the burning flames, standing on coals of fire, surrounded by cruel enemies. Now they wake at the melting strains of the voice of the merciful Redeemer, surrounded by angels and all the just made perfect. That good man in the land of Uz, that feared God and eschewed evil, will see God. Yes, his testimony was, I shall see God.

O, what happy greetings will manifest themselves at Machpelah's tomb, as Abraham wakes from his sleep in Jesus! What a reciprocal thrill of joy will seize the immortal twain, at the dawning of eternal morn, as the father of the faithful salutes his dear companion—Good morning, Sarah! Good morning, Abraham! O, halleluiah, glory, eternal praise to God and the Lamb for the hope of sharing in that exceeding and eternal weight of glory. The anticipation fills my heart with an inexpressible ecstacy.

"And the thoughts of such amazing bliss Should constant joy create."

Amen and Amen. [And Amen. Ed.]

Home, here, I've none. If permitted to return to what I call home, the missionary fire begins to glow and bubble up, so that, before I am fairly rested, I must be off again. "The King's business requires haste." Home, oh it's sad and dreary at times! The little nest of happy warblers have flown; they are all scattered—Lizzie, John, and Sidney are gone; and Charlie is now away. O, my heart is sad; and

"All the world is sad and dreary, Everywhere I roam."

Ah! dear Bro., I can imagine very little the feelings of the old patriarch, as he exclaimed, "Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away!" Tears flow warm, thick and rapid down my furrowed cheeks, and it does seem impossible for me to suppress the spontaneous outgushing emotion of my full overflowing heart. O that the mental conflict was ended, and Jesus and all the dear saints glorified together. Amen.

Well, dear Luther, with you I have had some very good, hard times. We have had some of the hundred fold in this world. But, oh glory, we shall soon have all the pure unmingled felicity on the free soil of Beulah.

The day for its inauguration is fixed, firm as the throne of God; and we now see its visible approach. Yea, verily, it comes; it hasteth greatly. The old clock keeps ticking. The prophetic clock on the gory soil of Italy is pealing forth the knell of departing day. The morning cometh; day is breaking; omens are thick. The Roman harlot is wailing. The once terrific thunders of the Vatican, armed with vengeful ire, that made imperial thrones totter, fall with utter contempt at the footstool of the imbecile monarch that utters them.

Soon, all mortal conflicts will end. The mourners will be comforted. The merciful will obtain mercy. They that now hunger and thirst will be filled with an everlasting, eternal, overflowing fullness of love. The pure in heart will see God. Never, no, never did so bright a light shine on our pathway, indicating deliverance, as at this precise moment. I expect very soon to hear the weeping bride's long looked for and expected welcome, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.' Then the Son of Man shall sit on the Throne of his glory. Amen and Amen. "Even so, come Lord Jesus." O, "come quickly." Thy pilgrim Bro. in the midst of a despised people.

South Glastenbury, Ct.

For the Crisis.

Carlstadt and Luther.

Luther said, "But I wish to decide no doctrine; only I am not willing to be the slave of the opinions of men!" * * * *

Carlstadt was a Canon supported by church funds at Wittenburg. * * * Luther said, "I will enter Worms in spite of all the gates of hell and the powers of the air." Some told him they would burn him as they did Huss at Constance. He replied, "Though they kindle a fire all the way between Wittenburg and Worms that shall reach unto the heavens, I will in the name of the Lord appear." At Oppenheim Spalatin warned him to not venture into the city. He replied, "If there were as many devils in Worms as there are tiles on the roofs of the houses, I would still go thither." And he went. * * * *

When broken from public speech, men not only set at nought the Roman worship, but generally all other; they would not follow Luther's views, but claimed, as he did, the right to think and act for themselves in all matters. It seems now that Luther was employed the rest of his life to build, in part at least, what he had lately destroyed. Switzerland felt the effects of religious freedom, and men, acting on Luther's preaching that Rome was Antichrist, rejected her altogether in ceremony and doctrine.

While Luther was at Wartburg, men came from Twickau to Wittenburg claiming that God had given them the spirit of prophecy, and the time had come when the church was to be restored to the apostolical simplicity. Carlstadt, Melancthon, Ansdorf and many connected with the university, were for awhile carried away with their doctrine. The greater part of the monks at Wittenburg followed Luther's example and disbanded, or agreed to do it, and likewise abolished mass service. Carlstadt insisted on bringing all things back to the pattern of the primitive church, without regard to consequences or men's prejudices. Here Luther split with him and became his enemy; it is said he never loved those who would not follow him. Finally the controversy on church ceremonies, ornaments, altars, images, etc., ended in open tumult. Carlstadt went with Zwinglians and Anabaptists, who first began to rebaptize by immersion. Melancthon went with Luther and others. From 1523–25, Luther disputed with Erasmus on the freedom of the will; with Carlstadt on real presence in the Eucharist; with Muncer and peasants on civil government. Subsequently, the Lutheran church gave up Luther's predestinarian views, and Melancthon also adopted the views of Erasmus in this respect. Carlstadt said, "Death itself shall not drive me away from the Scriptures." "I have also requested the magistrates to forbid, under a severe penalty, preaching any thing the Scriptures do not contain and teach. For I know that nothing pleaseth God but what doth conform to his holy word. I shall therefore build exclusively on the word of God, not regarding what others teach. I know that I shall offend only those who are not christians. That we are sometimes at variance is because we do not stand by the word of God, and think that by our reason we can devise something that will please him."

Luther was ready to call in question James' epistle, as he could not reconcile it readily with his views of faith. Carlstadt complains of the audacity, unreasonable severity, the violence, false reasoning and shameless decisions of his friends. He had already distributed wine as well as bread in the supper, but Luther insisted on bread only, and prevailed. Carlstadt rejected the elevating and adoring the host; Luther allowed and introduced it again. Carlstadt said we should not regard what the multitude say or think, but look simply to the word. He held to the divine authority of the Sabbath. Luther believed we are free to observe any day the mass agree upon. Carlstadt said, we are bound to the Bible, and no one may decide after the thoughts of his own heart. Luther said, not so. Carlstadt opposed transubstantiation, consubstantiation, real presence, and the elevation and adoration of the host. Luther rejected the first, asserted the second and third, and allowed the other two.

When Carlstadt was banished as an Anabaptist, the Zwinglians received him, and Luther wrote "The Book against the Celestial Prophets" against him, and remained his enemy. Edwin C. Stiles.

Portland, Me.

☞ Envy shooteth at others and wounds herself.

For the Crisis.

The End.

Words of solemn import. How they thrill through the soul in tones of warning, bidding us know that it is done, all is over, and the end has come. Yes, the end of all our earthly expectations has at length arrived, bringing in its train the sad and unhappy consequences embodied in the mournful event. In the morning of life, when the affections of the youthful heart gush forth from their fountain in artless innocence, and with the sure hope of success,—we look forward to the world's brilliant future, as the place of happiness. As the wheels of time roll rapidly onward, ere we have reached the meridian of life, one after another of our cherished hopes have been consigned to oblivion, and the soul in sadness and sorrow cries out, "I have seen an end to all earthly perfection." Again the desire for wealth springs up in the mind, and the hand of energy is put forth to grasp the phantom, held up by the gay and delusive world to the bewildered gaze of the thoughtless and unwary; but just as the wished for summit reaches the zenith of its splendor, the bubble bursts, the riches have flown, the dream of happiness has closed, the end has come. And thus it will ever be with earthly desires, wealth or ambition. Mutation and decay are written upon all things here below; the withering touch of time blights our dearest hopes, and crushes our fondest prospects. We stand by the tomb, and see the end of all we hold dear; our loved ones are buried from our view, and the cold and heavy earth separates us from those who were once a part of our being; and we turn away to again meet the stern realities of life, dispirited and alone.

But though the earth on which we live is but a howling wilderness, presenting scarcely a trace of its primeval beauty, being filled with sorrow and sighing, tears and bereavements, oppression and bloodshed, man hating his fellow man, and hunting him as a beast of prey. Yet, amid all the ruin and devastation which sin has made, hope is permitted to spring up in the soul, like a verdant oasis in the desert, or a Goshen amid Egyptian darkness,—for the Star of Bethlehem hath appeared, to cheer the gathering gloom, dispersing its shades of night, and pointing with a halo of glory to the celestial joys of the New Jerusalem, where affliction and death are not known, but bliss and life-everlasting shine forth in immortal bloom, and the END is a word that will never be spoken; but onward and expansive heights of delight will open to the enraptured vision of the redeemed soul, as he continues to explore what, here upon the earth, in the tabernacle of clay, the eye had not seen, the ear heard, nor the heart conceived, of the glory which God had in reversion for those who love him.

Shall we not then rejoice that, though we may not reach forth our hand and pluck the flowers of earth, calling them our own, yet, through the glad tidings of the gospel, which are represented by repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, we may receive, to the joy of our hearts, the forgiveness of sins, and an inheritance that fadeth not away among the sanctified?

M. A. T.

Neal's Creek.

For the Crisis.

Brief Sayings.

Submit the keeping of your souls to God in well doing.

Beware of tampering with reckless and unmatured thoughts; for habit becomes quickly our master.

The blessedness of conquered faults is proportioned to the fierceness of the battle required to obtain the victory.

When pressed by the ungodly to follow the way of unsanctified desires, remember that, as thy need is, so will thy strength be, if thou consent not.

Discouraging and mysterious treatment from friend or foe, is a consuming fire to the bones, and a vampire upon our minds: but to ourselves we owe the most of our losses, for reason is never forsaken of God's help if we use it rightly. Let thy words be few, and thy good deeds many.

A continued dropping weareth a stone; so also many words quencheth the purpose.

If thou canst not bring thy desires into submission to God's will, thou wilt have to be as one chained. Therefore wait God's time, and learn to be content with his bounties, for verily they are his charities.

The glory of the righteous is his privilege to go and come without forcible restraint; but the folly of fools is in their need of exhorbitant requests and services; for where there is much dependence, honor is diminished. Therefore do without delay, or neglect what work is privileged thee, lest thy loss be permanent and always: for when God is furious, he waiteth not.

Let not thy mind dwell unduly upon one attainment of virtue and purpose, lest when thou art weighed in the balances thou art found wanting. Better is a little of every good, than an abundance of only one with many evils continually devouring it of its sweetness.

H. B.

☞ Is not every face that habitually turns towards us with affectionate, guileless smiles, beautiful in our eyes? And will not an habitual frown distort the noblest features, and render them hideous?

For the Crisis.

Gem Jottings.

Selected from the writings of divers authors, by a book-worm.

LOVE DUE TO THE CREATOR.

And ask ye why He claims our love?
O answer all ye winds of even,
O answer, all ye lights above,
That watch in yonder darkening heaven;
Thou earth, in vernal radiance gay
As when his angels first arrayed thee,
And thou, O deep-tongued ocean, say,
Why man should love the mind that made thee!

There's not a flower that decks the vale,
There's not a beam that lights the mountain,
There's not a shrub that scents the gale,
There's not a wind that stirs the fountain;
There's not a hue that paints the rose,
There's not a leaf around us lying,
But in its use or beauty shows
True love to us, and love undying!

— G. Griffin.

Obedience.—Says our Savior: "If a man love me, he will keep my words." Love is the fulfilling of the law, and obedience is the first fruit of love. But let no one hope to be owned of Christ hereafter, who does not own and obey him while here.—A. Joy, A. M.

KNOWLEDGE AND WISDOM.

Knowledge is proud that he has learned so much,
Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.

— Cowper.

Forward, not Upward.—I confess I look oftener forward than I look upward. We are more prone to look upward than to look forward. It is remarkable that all promises of glad things, and bright things, and blessed things, are in the future; and that the most common direction of the Bible is to look forward for our heaven, rather than to look upward . . . We are constantly encouraged to duties by the reward not that is above us, but the reward that gleams in the distance far beyond and before us.—John Cumming, D. D.

THE WORLD THAT AWAITS.

A world of all bliss,
But a little from this,
Will ope to the view of the righteous;
A world filled with glory—
Though strange seems the story—
All free from the curses like this.

Faith.—Faith is the believing of facts we do not know, upon the word of one who does. If any one knows every thing, or thinks he does, he can have no faith. A deep conviction of our own ignorance is therefore indispensable to faith.—Robert Patterson.

Selections.

Be Kind.

Kind words, looks, and acts are the small currency of social life, each of inconsiderable value, but in the aggregate forming the wealth of society. They are the "excellent oil" which keeps the machinery from rusting, wearing, or creaking. They are the dew that refreshes and nourishes the otherwise arid fields. They are the sunshine of an else murky, dreary world.

Be kind to your partner in life. Are you a husband? Your wife has left the home and friends of her youth, and linked her fortunes with yours. Her weaknesses and infirmities may try your patience at times, still she is your wife, perhaps the mother of your children, and kindness of word and deed may smooth the rough places of your common pathway. Are you a wife? Do not forget that the engagements and distractions of business sometimes cloud a brow that overshadows a true and noble heart. Do not be too exacting of demonstrated affection or of minor attentions. Be content with the evidences of real faithful love. Be ready to sympathize with every joy and sorrow of your companion, for his interests are yours. Make his home so bright, cheerful, happy, that the rivalship of "clubs," bar-rooms, and like temptations shall be vain. Unvarying gentleness and kindness of tone and manner, even when provocations arise, will melt and win.

Be kind to your children. They did not ask to come into the world; do not make them wish to leave it, to be rid of parental tyranny. They are dependent on you; don't misuse your power. They are "bone of your bone;" don't break your own bones. They are "flesh of your flesh;" don't tear your own flesh. They are forming characters for life—nay, for eternity; don't harden their consciences and stiffen their wills, so that their mature years shall bear testimony to the folly and the cruelty of those who gave them being. Rule in love. Conquer by affection. Win by kindness. In the nursery or the parlor, a beaming face, gentle tones, kindly acts, will do more in securing willing obedience and respect for authority than frowns or birch sprouts. Try them, and keep trying them.

Be kind to your servants. They are your "poor friends." Make them true friends and helpers, by a manifest interest in their temporal and eternal welfare; by just and punctual compensation for their services; by reasonable and timely requisitions of labor; by a proper recognition and reward of their fidelity, and by unvarying kindness in all your intercourse. You may have much to bear from them: see to it that they have little to bear from you. They have sensibilities: do not wound them. They have rights: do not invade them. They may have infirmities: do not increase them. You have the same Master in heaven: he is ever kind to you and to them. Imitate him.

Be kind to your neighbors. They may not be just those you would desire: perhaps, if they were to elect, you would move away. It is enough that they are your neighbors. Perhaps you can make them better; who knows? The way to do it is to show them by constant example just what a neighbor should be. Are they sick? Visit, comfort, help them. Are they in trouble? Give them your sympathy. Are they poor? So may you be some day; and if not, they are among the number of those of whom the blessed Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto them, ye have done it unto me." What you do for them in Christ's name, is nothing more than "lending unto the Lord." You have no better investment and no ampler security. Then be a peacemaker in the neighborhood, and thus get into the "beatitudes." Why, one man can hush the quarrels and heal the difficulties of a whole parish, if the law of kindness rule his speech, and the law of wisdom guide his steps, and the blessing of heaven attend his influence.

Of course you will be kind to your pastor: you prove that you don't belong to the fold if you are not.

Be kind to everybody. This world is wicked enough and wretched enough, at best, without adding to its misery by ill-tempered, uncharitable invasions of its peace. Christ came into it to proclaim a gospel of love. "God is love." The Holy Spirit is styled "the Comforter." And shall children of a common Father, the followers of a common Redeemer, the heirs of a common destiny, wrong and fret each other while journeying together to a common grave, and the same judgment bar? Rather let words of peace and acts of love distil like the dew over all the heritage of God.—Amer. Messenger.

Go to the Prayer Meeting.

1. It will be a relief to your conscience. It will be redeeming the solemn pledge which you made before angels and men, when you gave yourself to Christ and to his church. You cannot have a peaceful conscience while thus disregarding the vows of God which are upon you.

2. It will bring great good to your own soul. You will be refreshed and gladdened in spirit; you will have new and more satisfying evidence of your being the child of God, and will be prompted to new activity in his service.

3. If you are prompt and regular at the prayer meeting, it will greatly encourage your pastor. His labors are arduous and his discouragements are many, his night watchings often. Allow not his heart to sink at the thought that you have forsaken the place of weekly prayer. Encourage him by your constant presence, and you will be repaid an hundred-fold, in the increased happiness and usefulness of your pastor.

Go to the prayer meeting; it will animate their hearts, and make them feel strong in the day of trial. The few who have borne the heat and burden of the day sometimes feel sad, because no more "come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Yet they are resolved never to abandon the cause for they have enlisted for life. Go stand by their side, and share the burdens and toils, and you will also share their abundant rewards.

4. Your weekly presence at the prayer meeting will have a powerful influence upon the unconverted. When they see your perseverance in christian duty, united with a consistent life, they will take knowledge of you that you have been with Jesus; they will be constrained to go themselves to a place that is so constantly attractive to you, and may, through your instrumentality, be brought to a saving knowledge of Christ. Be punctual, then, at the prayer meeting, for the sake of those around you, who are "without hope and without God in the world."

5. Above all, go to the prayer meeting because it will glorify God. This is the great object for which christians should live,—"Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." In the spiritual prayer meeting, God is greatly honored by the growth of christians, in grace and in knowledge, and by the marvellous displays of the Spirit's power in the conviction and conversion of men. Go, through the storm, the cold and the heat—go, though but two or three are inclined to meet you there—go, though worldly cares press hard—go, meet the people of God for prayer, and you will meet your Savior also, and be richly blessed.

Reader, do you go to the prayer meeting? Will you go henceforth?

"Prayer makes the darkened cloud withdraw,
Prayer climbs the ladder Jacob saw,
Gives exercise to faith and love,
Brings every blessing from above.

Restraining prayer, we cease to fight,
Prayer makes the christian's armor bright,
And satan trembles when he sees
The weakest saint upon his knees."

Finding Fault with your Children.

It is at times necessary to censure and punish. But very much more may be done by encouraging children when they do well. Be therefore more careful to express your approbation of good conduct than your disapprobation of bad. Nothing can more discourage a child than a spirit of fault-finding on the part of its parent. And hardly anything can exert a more injurious influence upon the disposition of both parent and child. There are two great motives influencing human actions; hope and fear. Both of these are at times necessary. But who would not prefer to have her child influenced to good conduct by a desire of pleasing rather than by the fear of offending? If a mother never expresses her gratification when her children do well, and is always censuring them when she sees anything amiss, they are discouraged and unhappy. They feel that it is useless to try to please. Their dispositions become hardened and soured by this ceaseless fretting; and at last, finding that whether they do well or ill, they are equally found fault with, they relinquish all efforts to please, and become heedless of reproaches.

But let a mother approve of her child's conduct whenever she can. Let her show that his good behavior makes her sincerely happy. Let her reward him for his efforts to please, by smiles and affection. In this way she will cherish in her child's heart some of the noblest and most desirable feelings of our nature. She will cultivate in him a lovely and amiable disposition, and a cheerful spirit. Your child has been, through the day, very pleasing and obedient. Just before putting him to sleep for the night, you take his hand and say, "My son, you have been very good to-day. It makes me very happy to see you so kind and obedient. God loves children who are dutiful to their parents, and He promises to make them happy." This approbation from his mother is, to him, a great reward. And when, with a more than ordinarily affectionate tone, you say, "Good night, my dear son," he leaves the room with his little eyes full of feeling. And when he closes his eyes for sleep, he is happy, and resolves that he will always try to do his duty.—The Mother at Home.

Fashionable Professors.

One of the first developed principles of man is imitation. One of the ruling traits in man's life is imitation. The infant that smiles in the face of its fond mother, does so because it first sees its mother smile. The child that begins to articulate words, does so because it hears others. The boy that marches in military pride, with a feather in his cap, and a wooden sword by his side, does so to imitate the martial man. The girl that wants some pretty flowers to decorate her bonnet, or some jewelry to adorn her head or hands, does so because she sees others wear them.

The young man that wears that fine plaited bosom, adorned with some article of jewelry, does so to be in keeping with his companions; not that there is any value in artificials, in the finely plaited linen or jewelry. But it is simply to gratify the pride of the heart.

Now what lesson is here taught? Simply that christians should avoid this outward adorning of the body, which genders strife in the world, pride in our own hearts and a worldly mindedness in the church. But rather should we seek for that inward adorning of the mind, even a meek and quiet spirit which is of great price in the sight of the Lord.—Palmer.

A Song for the Million.

BY J. R. ORTON.

God of the mountain, God of the storm,
God of the flowers, God of the worm!
Hear us and bless us,
Forgive us, redress us!
Breathe on our spirits thy love and thy healing,
Teach us content with thy fatherly dealing—
Teach us to love thee,
To love one another, brother his brother,
And make us all free—
Free from the shackles of ancient tradition,
Free from the censure of man for his neighbor;
Help us each one to fulfill his true mission,
And show us 'tis manly, 'tis Godlike to labor!

God of the darkness, God of the sun,
God of the beautiful, God of each one!
Clothe us and feed us,
Illume us and lead us!
Show us that avarice holds us in thrall—
That the land is all thine, and thou givest to all.
Scatter our blindness;
Help us do right, all the day and the night—
To love mercy and kindness,
Aid us to conquer mistakes of the past;
Show us our future, to cheer us and arm us,
The upper, the better, the mansions thou hast,
And, God of the grave! that the grave cannot harm us.

Punctuality.—A committee of eight gentlemen had appointed to meet at twelve o'clock. Seven of them were punctual; but the eighth was a quarter of an hour behind the time, and came in full of apologies. "I had no idea of its being so late." he said, "no idea." "Friend, I am not sure we should admit thy excuse," said one of the committee-men, who was a Qurker. "It were a matter of regret that thou shouldst have wasted thine own quarter of an hour; but there are seven besides thyself, whose time thou hast also wasted, amounting in the whole to two hours, and one-eighth of it only was thine own property."

☞ Absolute purity of thought and life, is the richest human possession, and perfect obedience to the highest attractions of the soul is the only means of its attainment.

Reading for Youth.

For the Crisis.

"He sees Us!"

A few weeks since, in the village of Sandy Hill, N. Y., on the Lord's day, some little children did that which I fear many of our little readers may be tempted to do, notwithstanding it was exceedingly naughty. They attempted to take fruit, without permission, from the owner, thinking without doubt he was at church, and they could do so without being detected. But just as they were about to grasp the prize, the owner stepped to the door and heard them say, "He sees us," and with that they scampered over the wall as precipitately as though they had expected some wild beast of the forest was on their track, proving the saying of the wise man true, that "The wicked flee when no man pursueth."

But why were they so frightened at the sight of the owner, when a greater than the owner saw them all the time? Yes, my little readers, his eye was upon them; and though they might elude the eyes of their parents and the owner, they can never hide these wicked acts from his all-seeing eye, and sooner or later he will surely punish them with that severity a breach of his law demands. These little children evidently knew they were pursuing a wrong course, but I doubt whether they realized they were breaking three of the commandments of the great God, and I fear broke another still, in trying to cover their sin. Ah, how many children lie to cover their wicked acts! They were not only guilty of stealing, but, of disobeying their parents and breaking the Sabbath! And could they derive sufficient pleasure in the few moments they were eating this fruit to make amends for the fear and guilt they must have experienced in consequence of stealing it? Probably their sense of taste was gratified a half hour or so, and then there was their suffering for fear of detection, and thereby gaining the ill will of the owner, and all the good people of the place, besides sadly grieving their parents and daily carrying a guilty conscience; and more than all incurring the wrath of Him who gives them life and all the blessings they enjoy, and could by one word take their breath away and consign them to the cold and silent grave.

Now, my dear little friends, will you not think of this when you are again tempted to steal fruit? Do you say the owner has plenty and can spare some just as well as not? How much better that you should go and politely ask him to give you some. Only think how much happier you will feel, how many more friends you will gain than if you stole it. The plea that others do it will be no excuse for you. No. It will not palliate your crime in the least when you stand in in the presence of Him who hast said, "Thou shalt not steal." Your friend,

B. Mathewson.

For the Crisis.

A Discussion

Between a little boy named Walter, and a little girl named Hattie, each six years of age, concerning the dead. An actual occurrence. This colloquy was given me by the mother of little Hattie. Both have been made sad by the death of little Freddie, the brother of little Hattie. It was told her by the mother of little Walter, who overheard the conversation a day or two after little Freddie had died and was buried.

Walter.—Hattie, little Freddie is dead and gone to heaven, hasn't he?

Hattie.—No! he is dead, and been taken to the cemetery and buried.

Walter.—Why, no! Haitie, Freddie has gone to heaven; and he's a little angel there; and he's got little wings on his back; and he can fly anywhere; and he's having a good time there.

Hattie.—No! he hasn't gone to heaven, Walter; he is gone to the cemetery, and he's put in his little grave; and he'll stay there till Jesus comes, when he'll rise in "the first resurrection," and live with God in the "new earth."

Walter.—(A little excited.)—Hattie, I tell you he's gone to heaven; and if you don't stop, you shan't go to heaven and see little Freddie; and you shan't have little wings on YOUR back, like little Freddie.

This answer was so abrupt, that little Hattie did not reply, but went to inquire of her mother concerning these things. Will the children decide which had the best of the argument, little Walter or little Hattie. Let the doctors of divinity also decide. See Matt. 11: 25; Matt. 21: 16.

O. R. Fassett.

Do it Yourself.

Do not ask the teacher or some classmate to solve that hard problem. Do it yourself. You might as well let them eat your dinner, as "do your sums" for you. It is in studying as in eating; he that does it gets the benefit, and not he that sees it done. In almost any school I would give more for what the teacher learns than for what the best scholar learns, simply because the teacher is compelled to solve all the problems, and answer all the questions of the lazy boys.

Do not ask him to parse the difficult words, or assist you in the performance of any of your studies. Do it yourself. Never mind, though they look as dark as Egypt. Don't ask even a hint from any one. Try again. Every trial increases your ability, and you will finally succeed by dint of every wisdom and strength gained in the effort, even though the problem at first was beyond your skill. It is the study, and not the answer, that really rewards your pains.

Look at that boy, who has succeeded, after six hours of hard study, perhaps; how his large eyes light up with proud joy as he marches to his class. He treads like a conqueror. And well may he. Last night his lamp burned, and this morning he waked at dawn. Once or twice he nearly gave it up. He had tried his last thought; but a new thought strikes him and he ponders the last process. He tries once more, and succeeds; and now mark the air of conscious strength with which he pronounces the demonstration. His poor, weak schoolmate, who gave up that same problem after his first trial, now looks up to him with something of wonder as a superior being.

And he is his superior. That problem lies there, a great gulf between those boys who stood side by side yesterday. That boy that did it for himself has taken a stride upward, and what is better still has gained strength to take other and better ones. The boy who waited to see others do it, has lost both strength and courage, and is already looking for some good excuse to give up school and study forever. Remember, do it yourself.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 20 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.25 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 261. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 2.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

AT

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Lines to Nellie.

BY L. M. H.

Thou 'rt gone from my gaze,
Like a sad, sweet dream,
And I seek thee in vain
By moonlight's pale beam;
Then I breathe thy dear name,
But the winds only sweep
A low, mournful cadence
Where we laid thee asleep
In thy beauty and bloom
Away in the tomb.

Thou 'rt gone from my gaze,
But in dreams of the night
Thou art with me again,
Thy smile still as bright
As before death had sought thee
With a cold, icy hand;
And had borne thee away
To the dark, silent land,
In thy beauty and bloom
Away to the tomb.

Thou 'rt gone from my gaze,
No more shall I hear
Thy low, cherished accents
Fall on my sad ear.
Thy friends all are weeping
Since thou art away;
Regretting their loved one
So soon passed away,
In her beauty and bloom
Away to the tomb.

Thou 'rt gone from our gaze,
And in sorrow we weep;
Yet we know thou 'lt awake
From thy long, silent sleep,
When the morning shall dawn,
And the "Conqueror" appear,
To change living saints
And dispel every tear;
While immortal bloom
Awakes from the tomb.

"Ye must be Born Again."

I. Nature of Regeneration.

It was a remark of John Wesley, that if any doctrines within the whole compass of christianity may be properly termed fundamental, they are these two:—Justification by faith, and regeneration by the Spirit. By regeneration I understand a work of the Spirit of God in the human heart, resulting in the destruction of sin, and a complete renovation of man's moral nature. Regeneration, then, is not a conversion from one sect or creed to another, nor from atheism to a belief in the divine existence; but is a radical change of heart and life.

II. Necessity of Regeneration.

1. It is necessary in order to the attainment of eternal life. Man has incurred the displeasure of the Almighty,—has opposed the character, law, design and government of God, and stands a condemned criminal before him. Such being the case, he is not a fit associate for the company of the redeemed, nor capable of appreciating the joys of that higher life. Hence the imperative necessity of being made "a new creature" in Christ Jesus.

2. It is necessary in order to make man capable of enjoying eternal life. It is evident that, in the present state, sinners do not relish things of a spiritual nature. "God is not in all their thoughts." To the sinner, religion possesses no charm; the means of grace, the prayers of the saints, and even the blessed influence of the Spirit of God, seem to fall powerless upon his heart. Then how utterly incapacitated is he for the enjoyment of that better life that awaits us at the resurrection morn.

III. Evidences of Regeneration.

There are some unerring marks by which we may discern our spiritual state; but as many persons apply false tests to religious character, it may be well to point out these fallacies, and present the true tests of a regenerate state.

1. Zeal is no certain evidence of our spiritual state. For atheists are as zealous in trying to undermine the living God, as christians are in trying to convince men of his existence. Again, look at the Jewish nation. Having suffered for ages, and been driven from point to point, houseless, homeless and friendless, they still with unabated zeal defend their peculiar faith. Again, we find even among infidels, a zeal worthy of a better cause. In the market place, in the street, in the shop, and in whatever place you find them, they are incessantly urging and advocating the overthrow of christianity. And, I ask still further, where can a people be found under God's high heaven, outside of Pagan nations, who are so zealous as the Roman Catholics? Now all this shows conclusively, that zeal is no certain criterion by which we may know a regenerate heart; for the worst of causes have zealous advocates and defenders.

2. Exactness in the performance of external rites and ceremonies, is no evidence of regeneration. Instance the Pharisees, whose morality was unimpeachible, and whose external life bore unmistakeable evidence of sound morality. Nor, as to the external rites of the church, are the Catholics very far behind; for to them no sacrifice is too great, if it has a bearing on the church; in a word, the external rites of true christianity form the basis of the religion of the Romanists. Now if these marks do not indicate our condition before God, what are the true tests of regeneration?

1. Internal consciousness of being a child of God. Now a person may mean to do right, and still with all his endeavors to do so, he feels within dissatisfied, and sees clearly that there is a want of something he does not possess; but when a man is converted to God, and his heart is renewed and illuminated by the Spirit, then it is that he feels the powers of his soul going out after God, and becomes conscious of a new relation existing between him and God.

2. Love to the brethren. He is no christian, who does not and cannot look beyond the church of his choice. There is in christianity a sympathy that flows to every one of God's children; no matter by what name they are called, nor of what nation they are, nor in what circumstances they are placed; if they love Jesus, the true christian loves them. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." I don't care what pretentions a person may make, nor how many prayers he may offer, if he love not the brethren of every name, he is not of God, and wants the very leading evidence of being regenerated by the Spirit.

3. Another evidence of a regenerate state is seen in the fruit we bear. An old maxim says, that "actions speak louder than words." And this is especially true of the christian. His external life, his daily walk, oftentimes speak forth in loudest terms. Every true christian in his acts with his fellow man, shows forth his religion, and is a standing argument in favor of regenerating power.

IV. Effects of Regeneration.

1. It brings us into a new relation to God. Before, we were estranged from God, "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers to "the covenant of hope;" now we are of "the household of faith," and "heir of the promise," looking forward in hope of a better resurrection from the dead, and immortality beyond the grave. Then, we were rebellious; now, obedient. Then, fought against God, now, fight for him. Then, our hope clung to earthly pleasures; now, hope clusters around the glories of the future state. Our former relation was that of criminal to Judge; now, that of redeemed to Redeemer.

2. It removes our liability to eternal death. Man had transgressed, and trampled under foot the law of God; and as a transgressor, he could only look forward to the direct punishment; but Jesus wrought out for us the great salvation, and made known unto us, through the blessed gospel, the terms on which we may be saved;—"being born again." Regeneration, then, removes our liability to punishment, and brings us into favor with God.

3. It brings eternal life within our reach. When I look at the terrible doom that awaits the race of sinners, and then look at the glories of that upper temple, and the sunlight of the countenance of the Savior, and the raptures of an eternal life, O how I wonder at the folly of men in refusing this offer of mercy, and turning their backs upon the last ray of hope for this sin-cursed earth. O who would not, in view of the rich promises of the gospel, seek and serve Jesus? Let us, then, look to Jesus; bear in our breasts the evidence continually of our acceptance with God, live a life of faith, and we shall finally rest in the better kingdom. Above all things, let us see to it that we are born from above.

HENRY W. DANN.

West Troy.

SPECIAL PRAYER.—In one of the visits of her pastor, Dr. John Mason, Mrs. Graham mentioned to him the want of good servants as one of her trials. "Have you ever prayed to the Lord," he asked, "to provide good servants for you? Nothing that concerns our comfort is too minute for the care of our heavenly Father."

☞ May each of us who profess to be followers of Christ, imitate his example and the example of those who have been eminently distinguished for their labors of love.

For the Crisis.

Earthly Pleasures.

"Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes; but know thou that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment. Therefore remove sorrow from thy heart, and put away evil from thy flesh: for childhood and youth are vanity."—ECCL. 11: 9, 10.

I am aware that this is an important subject; one which should rest with weight upon the youthful mind. When they have passed the pleasures of this world; when the enjoyments, which they could once pursue with delight, have been blighted by the call of God, as they have felt it, not only while engaged in their different pursuits of business, but even in the lone and silent watches of the night; it is then that the sin sick one can no longer find cheer by walking in the ways of his heart. It is then that he feels that he is without hope and without God in the world. He has once seen the time when he could go and enjoy the company of those who sought their comfort in this present world; but now the world charms him no more. He begins to turn his thoughts to the word of God; and as he anxiously inquires, what must I do to be saved? he reads the blessed promises of God to those that will be good; or in other words, to those "who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality." He finds a new earth promised to the faithful—a home where sorrow is forever unknown. He reads that the inhabitants of that land shall not say, I am sick. Again he reads of the river of life, as it proceeds out of the throne of God, which has on its banks the tree of life. As he takes his standpoint there, and looks off in the far distance, he beholds the beautiful earth dressed in unfading green. He sees the loved and faithful ones of earth there united, to be separated no more forever. He says with anxious heart, that is a blessed home, but shall I, can I be there?

It is written, "whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." In the language of the preacher I would invite you, dear reader, if yet unreconciled to God, to repent. As one that loves you, I ask you in the name of my Master to forego the pleasures of earth and live for God. Let us meet on the fair banks of deliverance when Jesus comes.

W. N. HOUGHTALING.

Colerain, Mass.

P. S.—I would like to say to the brethren that the Lord is at work in this place, (Griswoldville.) Bro. H. G. McCulloch has preached the word to the people, and gladly some have received it. W. N. H.

For the Crisis.

"Behold, I make all things New."

In the beginning, God made all things, both in heaven above and earth beneath; and he pronounced every thing which he made to be "Very good." And I have not the least doubt but that it was just as God said, "Very good;" good in its highest sense too. And I do not think that any body, except Adam and Eve, ever saw the earth in all its primeval beauty and glory. Man being in honor, abode in that honorable, sinless state but a little while, before he voluntarily transgressed the holy law of God; hence that union and communion which existed between man and his Maker was terminated! Man violated God's law, sinned, and died! He did die, though the devil said he should not die; and the whole earth was cursed for man's sake, and has been groaning under the curse ever since.

Now, what is to be done? Man has sinned and come short of the glory of God. He is in a perishing condition truly. He cannot save himself; his offended God is under no obligation to save him, or help him in the least. What does the Lord do, but comes forward, and says to man, sinful as he is, "Here, live! for I have found a ransom!!!" The long and short of this whole story seems to be this: God says to man, you have voluntarily violated my holy law, and separated yourself from me; now just volunteer your love and hearty service to me, during this short life; and I will save you, and give you eternal life in my kingdom. Under these conditions, God has promised that "the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." That is, the saints of God shall finally come off victorious conquerors through Christ.

Having made these preliminary remarks, I wish to return to the subject first named, "Behold, I make all things new." In a former letter, I spoke of the earth as it was, and as it is; and now I wish to say something in regard to the earth as it will be. I am a sincere believer in the glorious restitution of ALL THINGS spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began! Glorious, indeed, will be the change which these sure and holy prophets contemplate. The earth is groaning under the curse, as I have already intimated; every thing that springs from it for the sustenance of man and beast is, more or less, cut down by frost, blasted by mildew, or stung or devoured by beasts and insects. But not so in the restitution age.

"No chilling winds, or poisonous breath, Shall reach that healthful shore."

Before the fall of man, the animal creation were all in perfect harmony, and submissive to man. But now they bite and devour each other; they are at enmity with man too. This enmity and savage disposition must be taken away, before things can be brought back to their Eden state. That such will be the case, under the restitution age, is evident from the following prophecies: "The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf, and the young lion, and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Other prophecies of similar import might be named; but this will suffice on this point. Does the candid reader doubt the real fulfillment of these blessed promises? He should not; for the all-wise and benevolent God is abundantly able to perform what he has promised. The Lord has said, "Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth," etc. And now, according to his promise, says Peter, "we look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

I don't think the dear saints will be disappointed in this, but their hope will be fully realized. Palestine will not only be restored to its Eden state, but the whole earth will be greatly blessed. For the sun and the moon will shed their seven-fold light and life-invigorating influence over the whole world; and this will doubtless so change the seasons as to cause the earth to yield her increase. The prophet goes on to say, "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing, the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon; they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God." And he further states in another passage, "For the Lord shall comfort Zion; he will comfort all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody." The lands that are now desolate, are to become like the garden of the Lord. Happy change! Glorious Restitution! May it soon take place.

"Then, truth shall sit on every hill,
And blessings flow in every rill,
And praise shall every heart employ,
And every vine shall shout for joy."

P. TANDY.

For the Crisis.

Mount Calvary!!!

Is there such a mountain? I judge that hundreds and thousands would say, "yes," to such a question. And why? Because the general impression is on the minds of the people, that Calvary is a mountain. Eminent ministers have spoken it; learned writers have written it; fine poets have woven it into their songs; thousands of converts refer to Mount Calvary; and old christians point sinners to the consideration of the sacrifice of Christ on Mount Calvary. While reading these remarks, you will call to mind the many expressions like these in verse: "Jesus died on Calvary's mountain," "On Calvary's rugged summit," etc., etc.

How comes all this? "Why," say a hundred voices, "the Bible teaches us that Jesus was crucified on Mount Calvary." No, no. You are too fast. Look again. The Bible does not teach thus. In Luke 23:33, we read, "And when they were come to the place called Calvary, there they crucified him." No mountain mentioned. Travelers to the Holy Land have inquired for "Mount Calvary," when shown the place where Jesus is supposed to have been crucified, but did not find it. They have turned to the New Testament to find it described; but, behold, it was not mentioned there! They found "a place called Calvary" mentioned, and they found it geographically situated in Judea, as described; but it is a plain, and not a mountain. Why is it so strongly fixed in the mind as "a mountain?" It is not by divine revelation; it is not by intuition of human reason. It may be because somebody imagined it to be so, and it has grown to a tradition, so as now to be almost universally believed, except by those who have explored the place.

Is it not, then as easy to slide into the tradition of "the land of spirits," "world of spirits," "immortality of the soul," "eternal life of the wicked," and many more of such strange and unscriptural dogmas? I think so. Let us be sure on what ground we tread;—never be hasty in our investigations and conclusions. Better to be "ten years on the fence," than to jump over and slump in the deep ditch out of sight, on strange ground. Let us not adopt an idea because many others have; but because, after patient, careful, deep and thorough investigation, we find it must be true, because God has made it so. Be sure you can master an animal, before you put him on the road for service. Be sure you have the true idea, before you venture to teach it as your theology. We will continue to study the sure word.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Richmond, Me.

For the Crisis.

Lines,

On the death of SCOTTO N., youngest child of Nathan J. and Jane Y. Streeter.

BY L. B. WEAVER.

He sweetly sleeps beneath the ground,
His lovely form by death is bound;
He heeds no sound, nor can he wake
Till God the chains of death shall break.

He suffered much whilst here his stay,
Six dreadful hours convulsed he lay
Beneath the iron grasp of death,
Till God saw fit to take his breath.

His little words ring in our ears,
Whilst to our minds his form appears;
At midnight hours we dream him here,
But we awake and all is drear.

Our hearts are grieved, and mangled sore,
We hear his little voice no more;
Our little child, our darling one,
O can it be that he is gone?

Yes, all is right, our Father gave,
That he has taken, he will save;
That lovely one he'll plant all fair
In his own garden soon, with care.

O come, Lord Jesus, quickly come,
And raise to life our sleeping one;
Restore to life, to health, to bloom,
Our lovely one now in the tomb.

For the Crisis.

Sacrifice.

DOES GOD REQUIRE THE MINISTER TO MAKE ALL THE SACRIFICE?

BRO. GRANT:—My heart has often been pained, when reading of God's ministers being obliged to leave the great harvest that is already white for the sickle,—when the blessed Son of God, who gave his own life a ransom for us, that we through obedience might not perish, but have life everlasting in the kingdom of God, declared that the laborers were few, and that we should pray the Lord of the harvest,—to do what?—make those few quit preaching and go to work like other men for a livelihood? No, no; but to pray the Lord to send forth more laborers into his harvest. Said he, to those whom he sent out, "Go your ways; behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes." But why, Lord, go so destitute? we shall need these. "For," (or, because) "the laborer is worthy of his hire." As if he had said, if you spend your time and talents ministering to others in spiritual things, let them supply your temporal and physical necessities; for it is not meet that you should make all the sacrifice; let all bear their part of the burden, that all may be sanctified together.

Since I have been made acquainted with the devotion, the trials, sacrifices, and self-denials of ministers, and their families; I have been led to ask myself this question: does God require those whom he commands to preach his word, to do so at their own expense? Does he demand of them all the sacrifice, all the self-denials that are to be made, on the part of all who would inherit the kingdom? or does he demand sacrifice on the part of all? Will he permit some to ride into the kingdom in soft-cushioned carriages, surrounded with their wives, their children, their houses, barns, lands, sheep, swine, cattle and horses, comfortable fires, plenty in the house and cellar to eat, drink and wear, and more in the barn to replenish with when necessary? who think if they entertain God's servant when he calls on them, and give him of their good things to eat, and say when he is about to leave, "God bless you, brother; come again. I think you might do a great deal of good here; there is a large field open, and scores that have never heard the truth, who would see it and believe it if they could only hear it; can't you make it convenient, brother, to give us a call? You will ever find a pilgrim's home at our house!"—who think, I say, that they have done all that God requires of them. Poor souls! they little dream of the sacrifice this brother would have to make to do as they require; nay, of the sacrifice he has already made in leaving his wife perhaps in feeble health, with all the cares of the family, and all the out-door cares devolving upon her; his children, and what little he hath, are also left to the mercies of the weather, and the companionship of a cold, heartless world, perhaps without a spoonful of flour in the house. I knew a preacher's wife who took the last dust of flour from her barrel twenty times in one season. Luxuries are unknown to them, and but few of the comforts of life. The minister looks forth upon the broad fields already ripe for harvest, and hears his Master's voice calling,—"Go work in my vineyard." Behold, "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." "Preach the word; be instant in season and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine." Work while the day lasts, for behold "the night cometh when no man can work."

How his heart yearns to go forth bearing the precious seed, but his energies are crippled; if he goes, he must needs leave his family in destitute circumstances. His heart twines about them, dependent as he knows they are upon his labor for that which sustains life. Again, if he goes forth to preach the gospel, his business must be suspended; for he cannot be in two places at one time; he cannot preach, and be at home seeing to his business. Do brethren ever think of this fact? Do they not know that when they are obliged to be from home a great deal, their business suffers? Nevertheless they may be able to hire a good trusty hand! Franklin hath well said:

"Whoever by the plough would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive."

Let those who are in the habit of thinking they have a "hard row to hoe" to "make the ends meet" when they spend all their time at their business, take the minister's place, and go forth here and there proclaiming the everlasting gospel, for which I will warrant them an abundant harvest of that which will starve a dog to death. Let them be faithful servants for one year, and see how near they will make the ends meet. Methinks, if conscience has nothing to do in the matter, they will be very glad, at the end of the year, to hide themselves by the side of their own comfortable fireside, surrounded with their own quiet families. Yes, they will esteem it a privilege; nay, more, a great blessing to be permitted to see to their own affairs, and enjoy the society of the nearest and dearest on earth continually. O the blessings of a quiet home! Who would barter them away for the cold embrace of strangers? Who, of choice, would leave all that is most dear on earth, and go out into the cold, heartless world, facing heat, cold and storm, with no prospect of remuneration in this life, save now and then a "thank you," or a "God bless you?" I say, who of their own free will would do it? No sane man would be so reckless of the comforts of life.

Now, dearly beloved brethren and sisters, what say you? Have you no part nor lot in this matter? If God, who so loved the world as to give his only begotten Son to die, that we through obedience might have eternal life, requires his ministers to make such a sacrifice of their time, and all that is dear to them; do you not suppose that he hath something for you to do besides giving your whole time and energies to the work of laying up something of this world's goods? Do you not think he requires you to make sacrifices or self-denials sometimes for the advancement of his cause? In whose skirts will the blood of those souls be found, who might have been saved had not those ministers been obliged to leave the field for want of sufficient remuneration for their toils? What is the end of those who keep back the hire of the laborer? Remember Jesus said, "The laborer is worthy of his hire," when he sent out his disciples to preach the gospel. If God requires that one class of men should leave all that they have, and go forth as sheep among wolves to preach his word in order that some may be saved, and they themselves not be cast away, will he admit you there, after you have spent your whole life trying to lay up some of the goods of this world, and, if ever you have given anything to God, it has been something that you could spare just as well as not? Does Christ mean a part of mankind, or all, when he says, "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required?" Will this apply to ministers only? Does it not have something to do with worldly goods? What think you, my brother, my sister? Hath not God something for you to do? a sacrifice, a self-denial for you to make, that you may find an abundant entrance there? These are important questions—queries that ought to settle deep into the hearts of all that profess to love God, especially of those that are looking for the speedy return of their Lord.

Of all people in the world, we are the ones that should be up and doing; we should be willing to make self-denials; not only this, but to present our "bodies a living sacrifice," [illegible] We profess to be looking for the King of kings, expecting him to bring us great rewards, and yet compel God's servants, whom he hath sent to work in his vineyard, to leave the field for want of the necessaries of life, because we withhold from them the just reward of their labor. Such a state of things does not savor of God. If we love God and our fellow men as well as we do the world and its ease, this state of things would not exist among us. No, never. Think not to say within yourselves, we have more truth than any other sect, and that will save us; for remember, to "him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin," and he "shall be beaten with many stripes." Think of the perishing mortals about you for whom Christ died, and ask yourself this solemn question, am I doing all in my power for their salvation? If you cannot preach, you can help those that can, by paying them for their labor out of the treasury of the Lord which he hath committed to your care. Be careful how you lay away your Lord's money, for he will demand it with usury at his coming.

O when I think of the coldness, the lukewarmness, the worldly-mindedness of those looking for the Savior, my heart fails me, and I am led to exclaim, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Remember, that faith without works is dead being alone, and that all our boasted knowledge will profit us nothing; nay, will prove a curse to us if we have not corresponding works. Then let us be up and doing while the day lasts, for behold "the night cometh when no man can work." Behold how the signs thicken all about us, saying in thunder tones, "Behold he cometh, go ye out to meet him." But O! remember "the speechless guest." Strive to have on the wedding garment. In the language of Peter, "Seeing that ye look for such things, what manner of persons ought ye to be?" Yes, O yes, what manner of persons ought we to be? O! God help us to be just what thou wouldst have us be. Amen.

MARTHA J. W. SOBER.

Burlington, Mich.

For the Crisis.

Advice.

"Let no man despise thy youth."—HEB. 4: 12.

Paul, the author of this epistle, among many good qualities, possessed in a great degree what we at this day call a knowledge of the world. He knew that although age and honors, authority of position, great learning, and commanding personal appearance usually command the veneration of mankind, unless counteracted by some degrading vice. One virtue of a young preacher appears to me to be frugality; for if there be a calling in the world which demands freedom from debt, it is that of a preacher, depending upon the brotherhood for his living. I would most earnestly warn young men against contracting debts, either in a small or large degree. It will place a very heavy load upon all your acts. Should a case of poverty come under your observation, you cannot relieve it because you are in debt. Let no young preacher presume to boast of honor, of independence, who fears the face of his creditors, and who meets a creditor in every street. It will be found much better for all men to "owe no man any thing," than to be continually ashamed of ourselves.

In conclusion, I would say, go, my brother, into the vineyard of the Lord, and may the grace of God go with you. The religion you preach is true. Dispense its ordinances with seriousness, its doctrines with sincerity; urge its precepts; be sober, be vigilant; of all men have a good report, confirm the faith of others, adorn your own by the virtues of your life; be peaceable, be courteous, "condescending to men of low estate;" be gentle to all men, that you may gain some; and the awakened sinner, the enlightened saint, the young whom you lead to virtue, shall pursue you with prevailing blessings and fervent prayers. And at the last day, if you present even one recovered soul, what a grateful offering it will be to him whose mission was to save the lost.

S. F. MATTHEWS.

For the Crisis.

The Fullness of Christ.

In order that we may approach to a comprehension of the greatness or perfection of Christ's righteousness, let us consider the question,—does it require the combined righteousness of the whole household of faith to equal Christ's?

The church is the bride of Christ, has not as yet been ready for the marriage. Our own individual fitness [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Poor Business.

Yes, poor business, mean business, wretched business, disagreeable business, unprofitable business. I have been doing it, and I believe I will not do much more of it, for several reasons:

1. It is hard work, and takes time that might be employed in the work of God.

2. It is not as agreeable as working in the Lord's vineyard.

3. It isn't productive business, as I can earn money faster working with my hands than by doing that.

4. It never ought to be done, but should not be needed.

5. It hinders the tracts from being sent off, as I can't do too many things at once.

6. It makes me, and others too, feel bad, and is about as unpleasant as begging.

"But what is it?" "What?" Can't you guess? Didn't you ever have to do it? Well, I hope you won't have much of it, indeed I do. "But what is it?" What is it? Why, it is writing dunning letters, and sending out appeals to men who owe me for publications to send me the pay. I think I may about as well quit that business, and try something more agreeable and profitable,—praying, for instance. What do you think about it, brother? Let me know, will you? Yours in Christ,

H. L. Hastings

Providence, R. I.

For the Crisis.

Tour East—Observations, etc.

It is contrary to our nature to leave long cherished scenes and associations without a feeling of pain, however sensible one may be that duty calls to the step proposed. And my last day with the congregation, whose interests I had made my own for the past sixteen months,—the general gathering, the throbbing hearts, the tearful eye, and the choked farewell,—I shall, I think, never forget. And oh the thought, should we never meet on the earth! God grant ours may be a blessed reunion in the coming kingdom.

With a speedy journey, we soon found ourselves beneath the roof of my christian parents in Connecticut. God be thanked for the kindly, fostering care of God-fearing-and-loving parents! To them, under God, I owe all that I am. O that all parents knew and realized more their responsibilities as parents; and could realize that theirs it is to affectionately lead their children to Christ! When their minds are young and tender, this can be done. Love, properly exhibited, will woo to Christ.

My first Sabbath was spent at Hartford. Here we have a large and interesting church of stanch and faithful brethren. They are now worshiping in a fine brick edifice, for which they pay annually the sum of five hundred dollars. The congregation is large, and yet for many months they have been without a pastor. God grant them one after his own heart.

My next Sabbath was spent at the Wilbraham campmeeting. This national feast of Tabernacles has finally become very-like a settled institution, among many of those who are looking for the Lord. This year the attendance was said to be larger than ever before. There were upwards of fifty preachers present; fifty-three tents, beneath whose curtains there were estimated to be encamped upwards of a thousand souls. On Sunday, it was variously estimated that there were present from five to seven thousand persons. How many were desirous of profiting by the privilege, God knoweth; but it is worthy of remark, that throughout the entire meeting, there was not observed so much as the semblance of disorder. Much of this is owing to the vigilance of the almost argus-eyed superintendent,—Bro. H. Munger—who, with the greatest quietness and kindness, sees that all things are done "decently and in order."

In point of worth, it was generally said, that this was the best meeting ever held on the ground. A large number were either turned from backslidings, or converted from the world. The preaching was highly practical and spiritual. By this it is not meant that the doctrine of Christ's speedy advent, to give immortality to his saints, was neglected, any more than the doctrine of his first advent, with the atonement, and kindred doctrines. For to us, as a people, we know no practical preaching that does not hinge upon these great truths.

My last two Sabbaths have been spent in Boston. The church worshiping at Chapman Hall have a large and interesting congregation, with a fair prospect for the future; although it is evident they are far from what might have been realized, but for the imperative call that has kept their worthy pastor—Elder Grant—so much occupied in the open field. Evidently, God has called, and eminently fitted Bro. Grant for a large and important work. As an evangelist, we have none whose labors at this time compare with his; and, as a debater, he is probably surpassed by few, if any, in our country. The editorial chair of the Crisis has felt, too, the absence of Elder Grant, but in this he has been largely sustained by the untiring efforts of his companion, whose ample scholarship has eminently fitted her as his helper. Suffice it to say, the paper is prospering. The church worshiping on Hudson St. have what is unspeakably advantageous in a city like Boston—the benefit of an elegant meeting-house of their own. The congregation has added somewhat to the number since I was last here; and with the indefatigable labors of their old pastor—Elder Himes—cannot well do otherwise than hold their own. The church at East Boston—across Charles river—have a small, plain edifice, and, under the pastoral care of Bro. J. White, is in a healthful, growing condition.

Finally, as the result of my observations thus far, I am quite of the conviction that the cause is growing in New England. But the most noticeable and painful feature of it is, the want of able and earnest ministers to preach the truth, and care for the churches. The sequel of this is evidently, 1st, the idolatrous spirit of covetousness that has cursed the age; and 2d, the want of system in our church economy. But of this hereafter. P. B. Morgan.

Boston, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Cause in the West.

Our tent meeting commenced according to the appointment. Bro. and Sister Mansfield arrived Wednesday evening. We had our tent pitched in a beautiful place. The brethren were in the Spirit at the commencement of the meeting. We had a glorious time. I trust much good will be the result. We buried one in the likeness of Christ's death, and a number of others we expect will soon follow. We had a good attendance all through the meeting. We had a very severe storm on Saturday afternoon. It commenced just before our meeting was out. The wind blew a terrific gale, and lasted for about two hours; yet our tent outrode the storm, and no damage was done to it. Another storm came up about 2 o'clock on Sunday morning. At 9 o'clock, it cleared up, and the people began to come, and continued to do so till about 11 o'clock. We had a large and attentive congregation, and the meeting wound up gloriously. God be praised. We struck our tent on Sunday evening, ready for another move. The labors of our dear Bro. and Sister Mansfield, were very highly appreciated. God bless them.

Tuesday, we started for Brown county. We went by private conveyance, and arrived at Bro. Raymond's the second day. We had a very pleasant trip. We commenced our meeting on Thursday evening. Good attendance. Pitched our tent on the old ground. We continued the meeting over the Lord's day,—then we moved our tent to Mt. Pleasant, five miles from the first place, and continued the next week. Had a good time. Sunday evening, four rose for baptism, and many more were interested. I think the meeting will result in the conversion of a number of men and women to God, and the removal of a great amount of prejudice. God's name be praised. We think Bro. and Sister Mansfield's visit to Illinois has made the hearts of many glad. I found them true yoke-fellows in the gospel.

Thursday, 21st, they were to commence a meeting in Ripley. I think the result will be good. From there, they return back to Mich. May the peace of God be with them forever.

I would say a few words about their course, as some may think it strange; as they had made their arrangements to go from our tent meeting in Brown Co. to Wis., and spend a few weeks there and in Iowa. When they arrived at Brown Co., they found a letter from Bro. Deyo, of Strawbury Point, stating that times were so hard, they were fearful they could not meet their expenses. As they were not expecting them, they wished them to defer their visit till Sept. They received another from Wis., rather discouraging. On the whole, they concluded to defer their visit north till a future period, and spend their time now in Ill.

The calls are many. O that we had men of God in the field to fill them. I think I am the only Advent preacher t at travels and spends his whole time in the field, that lives now in the State of Ill; and my health is failing. I have one very lame lung. My cough is hard; and if I do not get help soon, I shall be laid by. I expect I shall have to leave this climate. O how I wish some one or more of God's true ministers would come to this field of labor. Bro. Pratt has left for the present. I am sorry. He is one of the men for the West. He was a good yoke-fellow. God bless him, and aid him to come back, if duty calls. Is there not some one else who ought to come? I can find places for six men of the right stamp, who would be well supported. Who will come? If any conclude to come, write me. The Lord direct. I expect our work is most done. The Master will soon be here.

"Fly on wings of morning,
Ye who the truth can tell."

I hope I shall have the prayers of the church that my lungs may be healed; that I may still sound the alarm to a guilty world, and a sleepy church.

Moses Chandler.

Monmouth.

[This was overlooked.—Ed.]

☞ "Do good," says the Hungarian proverb, "and throw it into the sea. The fish will never know it, but God will!"

☞ Nothing can be more unjust and ridiculous than to be angry with another because he is not of your opinion.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 19, 1860.

Stop! Stop!!

In looking over our subscription book, we find several who have paid nothing for the past year; consequently, are owing the office $2,00, besides the advance pay for the present volume just commenced. If such are not able to pay, and will take the trouble to write us, and let us know the fact, we will continue the paper if it be their wish. If others can pay, but have been careless and neglected to do so, we wish they would sit down now, before they forget it again, and send us a note containing the money. If there are others who can pay and will not, if they will send us a line stating the fact, we will kindly stop the paper, and let them settle with the Lord. If He is satisfied, we have no fault to find.

Unless we hear immediately from those who have paid nothing for the Crisis during the past year, who now owe us $2.00, besides the advance pay for the present volume, we shall be obliged to stop its weekly visits to their homes. We are sorry to do this at a time like the present, when every one so much needs all possible helps to prepare him for the great event about to burst upon an astonished world. Our free list is large, numbering several hundreds; but if you are poor, and wish the paper continued, we shall send it cheerfully, so long as we possibly can. We have not yet had to turn the poor empty away, and if those who can, will only pay, we think we shall not in time to come. We hope those who cannot pay, as well as those who can, will try to get some new subscribers. In this way they may favor the office and their neighbors too.

Come, let us all do the best we can. Our toilsome days are nearly ended; and if faithful, we shall soon be resting in our happy Eden home with all the pure and lovely.

Wayside Notes.

We have recently paid a visit to Bro. D. T. Taylor at "Our Home" in Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y. We were rejoiced to find him improving under the skillful treatment of Dr. Jackson and his associates. He is very anxious to gain strength sufficient to assist again in sounding the last alarm to a guilty world. He feels much like a sick man who sees his neighbor's house on fire, but is not able to render scarcely any assistance. He appears to be satisfied that the Dr. understands his case, and is treating him very successfully. Bro. T. requests the prayers of those who love the Lord, that he may regain strength to preach the gospel.

We found several other preachers at "Our Home," of different denominations, some of whom are becoming interested in the glorious truths we love so well. May they be restored to health and help spread the glad tidings of the coming kingdom and reign of Christ, where pain and sickness, sorrow and death are forever unknown.

While at "Our Home," Dr. Jackson kindly opened his rooms, Sabbath morning, for the accommodation of those who wished to hear us speak on the saint's inheritance. An intelligent audience listened attentively. A large number who were unable to get into the house, were provided with comfortable seats outside. In the afternoon and evening, we spoke in Canaseraga Hall, in the village, to large and attentive audiences, which seemed anxious to know the truth. We hope for good fruit from this brief effort.

"Our Home." We would not close without saying a word concerning this health institution, where people are successfully cured without medicine. "Our Home" is pleasantly situated on the hill-side, or rather, on the side of a small mountain, and overlooks the entire village of Dansville, with its plentiful fruit and shade trees, gardens, meadows, flocks and herds, thus making it one of the most pleasant situations in our country for such an institution; from the fact that its inmates are surrounded by very pure air and a plentiful supply of soft water that gushes out of a rock some three hundred and fifty feet above the Cure. This remarkable fountain is called "THE ALL-HEALING SPRING." Judging from the number cured, many of whom are those who have been pronounced by other physicians incurable, we think the name very appropriate.

Their new and extensive bath-rooms are said to be the best on the continent. They have about one hundred and fifty patients. From observation, and the testimony of many others better qualified to judge than ourselves, we think we do not exaggerate at all, when we say that this health institution is the best in America. Dr. Jackson, Dr. Austin, Dr. Hurd and their associates have had very extensive, and the most successful experience. This would not properly be called a "Cold Water Cure," the thought of which almost produces a chill, especially to those who have heard the screeches, the "oh's!" and the sighs of those who are compelled to take the shocking cold baths, in some institutions of this kind; for we learn that Dr. J. seldom gives a bath below eighty-five degrees—Fahrenheit. The patients speak of their baths as being agreeable instead of unpleasant. The Dr. seems to have hit upon a method of treating various diseases of our race in a very successful manner, without the use of a particle of medicine. He has a strong and active mind, well disciplined in studying cause and effect in all the various departments of the human system. His course of treatment is now no matter of experiment with him, but an established fact. He appears to be thoroughly posted in the laws of life and health, and does not go about his work with any fears relative to the results, if his advice is followed. One could hardly spend a week more profitably, than at "Our Home," for the purpose of learning how to live,—what kind of food to use, and how to prepare it.

While there, we attended an interesting prayer meeting, which is held weekly, Thursday afternoons, besides their daily family prayers, which are conducted by Dr's. Jackson and Hurd.

We also had a very pleasant visit with Bro. Cogswell and family, who live in the village. He loves the "blessed hope," while he stands firmly in its defence, and is highly respected for his consistent christian life.

On our return, we called a short time on Bro. P. A. Smith, in Rochester, who is one of the Lord's faithful servants; and is having good success in the regions round about, in turning men from Satan to Christ. He is one of those men that have "no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; and is sounding a faithful alarm to the slumbering virgins.

Editorial Notices.

☞ The article in our last week's number, headed "Improvement," should have been credited to N. D. Berry.

Better Paper.—We announced last week that we should print the Crisis on better paper than we have before used. It so happened that some portion of the paper was of the same quality that we have been using; and the same is true of this week's issue; but we hope our paper maker will have it all right by next week.

The Millennial Harbinger and Bible Expositor.—This is now the name of what was the Prophetic Expositor. In other words, the Prophetic Expositor has been moved to Seneca Falls, N. Y., and is in the hands of Bro. Thos. G. Newman, who is Editor, proprietor and publisher. It is now published weekly at $2.00 a year. We are pleased with the spirit and contents of the paper. We wish our Bro. Newman success in his arduous labors.

We have just received three new tracts from Bro. Himes, entitled, "The Judgment nigh," 1 cent single, 50 cts. per 100; "The Personal coming," 2 cents single, $1,00 per 100; and "My Position," 1 cent single, 50 cts. per 100.

Our Discussion with Adin Ballou.

We have now had eighteen public discussions on points relating to our "blessed hope," but we have had no opponent so fair and gentlemanly as Mr. Adin Ballou, of Hopedale, Mass. His object seemed to be to arrive at the truth, rather than to obtain the victory.

We discussed the following question:—"Has man an immortal entity?" He affirmed, we denied. Our debate was at the Town Hall in Holden, about seven miles from Worcester. We began Wednesday P. M., at 2 1-2 o'clock, and continued till 5. On account of the tremendous storm, we adjourned to meet at 9 o'clock the next day. On Thursday we met according to adjournment, and discussed the question from 9 till 12, from 2 till 5, and from 7 till 9 1-2 o'clock, before a very orderly, attentive, large, and intelligent audience. We think a very good effect will follow.

Mr. Ballou adduced nearly all the passages that are ever brought to sustain the doctrine of the immortality of the spirit. He maintained that after the "breath of life" entered into the human organization, it [the breath] became "individualized;" and at the death of the body, it left as the moral and intellectual being, to exist eternally.

We introduced the Scriptures which declare that this breath is in man's "nostrils;"—is not the man in whose nostrils it is found; but common to all living creatures upon the planet; as Solomon says of man and beast, "They have all one breath;" (Eccl. 3: 19,) and that when taken away, they all die and return to dust; or as David expresses it, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled, thou takest away their breath, THEY die and return to dust."—Ps. 104: 19. We urged our gentlemanly opponent to produce one passage of Scripture to show that anything but "the breath of life," in our nostrils, leaves us at death; but none was given. He held that different men and animals had different "degrees" of "the breath of life," which accounted for their varied moral and intellectual faculties; while we contended that the difference resulted from variations in their physical organisms, especially the brain; and that all our thinking stops when it is destroyed; hence, as Paul says, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, ... then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are PERISHED." We claimed that this Scripture could not be true, if "the real man" escapes the power of death.

At the close of the discussion, one of the audience arose and requested us to repeat the discussion in the city of Worcester. To this we both consented, on condition that the seats should be free. We have not decided definitely on the time, but mentioned the month of Nov. We varied the question to the following:—Resolved: "That eternal existence is a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver." We shall expect a very interesting discussion. Notice of it will be given in due time.

Eccl. 3: 18-21.

The Septuagint of Eccl. 3: 18–21, reads as follows:—"I communed with my heart concerning a saying of the sons of men, 'That God distinguisheth them.' Now in order to show that they themselves are beasts, that at least which befalleth man, befalleth them; and that which befalleth the beast befalleth man. The same event happeneth to both. As the one dieth so dieth the other. And they have all one breath. What advantage then hath man over the beast? None; for all are vanity. They are all for one place. They were all from the dust; and to dust they shall all return. And who hath seen the breath of the sons of men whether it ascendeth upwards; and the breath of the beast, whether it descendeth downwards into the earth?"—Thompson's Septuagint.

The word ruach is properly rendered breath in these three examples. Whoever attempts to prove from this scripture that a spirit entity leaves man at death, should also claim that the same goes from beasts; for "they have all one breath."

"Precocious Crime."

The above is the heading of an article in the "The World." While facts are abundant on every hand to show that our race is rapidly growing "worse and worse," it is astonishing to see the blindness of many who pretend to preach the gospel, and yet tell us the world is continually growing better. Why, even the mere boys are worse than the most wicked men were formerly. Says "The World" of Aug. 20th:

"Not long since we noticed the arrest of a boy, ten years of age, for habitual intoxication, and again, of another, who was hardly recovered, and whose life is still doubtful. Then followed the police report of the arrest of six boys, varying in age from seven to fifteen years, members of a gang of burglars, who had carried on a system of house-breaking so cunningly that they eluded for a long time the utmost vigilance of the police. Instances of assaults with deadly weapons, and even of murders by boys no older than these, have not been wanting to our police records during the past few months. A peculiarly distressing case was reported last week of the death of an honest lad, from injuries received three years ago at the hands of his companions. He was employed, with other boys, in a rope-walk in Williamsburgh, and for refusing to join in a strike, was seized by the others and hung by the neck and heels to a beam, where he remained three hours before he was discovered."

The foregoing is a specimen of the boasted progress of the age. It is rapid, it is almost universal, but it is to destruction. When the angel is told to thrust in his sickle, the reason given is, "For their wickedness IS GREAT." We think the harvest must be near. It seems as if the vileness of Sodom had returned. O Lord, "Let thy kingdom come" and end the revolting scene.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. W. Bragg.

To the Saints Scattered:—After an elapse of time, I can say, to the praise of God, that my courage is still good, yea, never was better than now. I do believe the Lord is at the helm, and "that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Rom. 8: 28. Though we have passed through many a rough storm since '54, yet the old ship's crew have not as yet lost their reckoning, or point of compass; but are still looking, longing, and sighing for a home in the land of promise, that is soon to "be given to the saints of the Most High." Dan. 7: 27. We expect to obtain it, "by patient continuance in well doing;" by fulfilling the royal law according to the Scripture, and in loving our neighbor as ourselves. All must be done by the principle of love. Bro. Paul says, "By love serve one another; for all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Gal. 5: 13, 14. This is the only principle that will fit us "for glory, honor, and immortality, eternal life." This is the way the Master went before us, and has said, "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

He has so loved us while we were yet sinners, as to give "his life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren."—1 John 3: 16. Says Paul, love "is the bond of perfectness."—Col. 3: 14. If we are now lacking the perfection of the gospel, we can look to Christ, who has "suffered being tempted." He has been tempted "in all points" "as we are, yet without sin." "He is able to succor them that are tempted." O then, with joy we'll enter the furnace of affliction, where the Lord has chosen his people; remembering these light afflictions, which are "but for a moment," work out "for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen." Let us take heed to the exhortation of Peter, to "Arm yourselves likewise with the same mind" of Christ, to suffer in the flesh, for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God."—1 Pet. 4: 1, 2. O praise the good Lord for the perfect law of liberty, that will free us from sin and condemnation; that will make us righteous as he is righteous; holy as he is holy: but this state is attainable only on the road of loving our neighbor as ourselves, bearing one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6: 2. If we "have the same care one for another," being baptized "by one spirit" "into one body," we shall all suffer together, being "of the same mind," speaking the same thing; and will "remember them that are in bonds as bound with them, and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body."—Heb. 13: 3.

"With such a people I want a share,
And reap and toil till Christ appear;
Then home to glory I will go,
And all my Savior's glory know."

I know this way is contrary to the old man. It is self-denying in every step, yet we can claim the promise sure, that the Lord will never leave nor forsake them that trust in him, but will make us like Mount Zion that cannot be moved, but abideth forever. To all that overcome is the promise sure of a seat with him on his throne. O praise the good Lord. I love the prize, and the way to obtain it. I ask not an easier way to the land of rest, but with Moses can say, I choose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season."—Heb. 11: 25. We have the promise, if "we suffer with him," we shall also reign with him. Then let us never complain of having so many trials that we cannot serve the Lord; but always reckon that all things work for our good. Let us never be fearful, or faint by the way, but "say to them that are of a fearful heart, be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you."—Isa. 35: 4.

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word."

I feel, for one, that we have every reason to be of good courage, and do the commandments, which "are not grievous," but joyous; for in keeping them there is a great reward,—a hundred fold here, with persecution, and life eternal in glory. Then cheer up, pilgrims and strangers, who are seeking a home by sin undefiled. Pray much, watch unto prayer, and obtain the gospel union, begotten by the Holy Ghost, in keeping the commands. From a pilgrim sister, in hope of eternal life through Christ.

Canaan.

From Bro. Timothy Cole.

Bro. Grant:—As I was not permitted to attend either of the campmeetings, on account of domestic cares and afflictions, I have failed to see many of the beloved friends in Christ, that I expected to see. And with some, I had expected to arrange appointments for future labor, in protracted meetings and Sabbath supplies. I would now say, that by the falling asleep of some, and the better health of others, I feel, by God's permission, a willingness to go and labor where doors may be opened for the work of God. Brethren who shall wish my co-operation and help, please address me at Haverhill, Mass. Yours in hope of the promise made to the fathers.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

I take my pen to acknowledge the receipt of two packages of tracts from some unknown friend or friends. The Lord bless them, is the prayer of my heart. They come just at the right time, when my tracts were most gone. We have spread tracts far and wide in Aroostook, and they are waking up a spirit of inquiry all through this country. The reception of these bundles of tracts makes me feel that I have the sympathy of my brethren and sisters in more favored portions of the country. Such little favors do me good; it raises my courage, strengthens my hands, encourages my heart. I am subject to depression of spirits, and sink down sometimes in my feelings, and feel as David did, when he said in his depression, I shall one day perish by the hand of Saul.

A few weeks ago I received by mail a letter containing one dollar, purporting to be from a brother Scribner of Topsham, Maine; a brother I never knew. And O how my poor heart overflowed with gratitude to God, and to the unknown giver. It encouraged me in my labor, and I went on my way rejoicing, feeling that God favored me. O let the brethren and sisters remember poor me, away down east on the Aroostook river, and let them communicate with me, by sending me tracts, or a few post office stamps, or letters filled with encouraging words. They can do it; many of the sisters might do it; they need not fear to write to me, for I have a wife I love and respect as much as any man ought to. It would be very cheering, very encouraging indeed to me, far removed from home as I am, to receive letters from any body. Any who desire to communicate or correspond with me, can direct to Presque Isle, Me. I shall probably be here some weeks. There is a large field here for labor; ears and doors are open; the spirit of inquiry is wakened up in all this region of country. The spirit of opposition is also wakened up, as might be expected. Many have embraced the truth in relation to the coming of Jesus and his kingdom; and the unconscious state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked. Many others are inquiring in relation to these truths, and a great interest is felt generally in the subject in all this region. We have held meetings for ten or fifteen miles all around Presque Isle, embracing six townships, and visited most every family. Bro. Corliss has left for Mass., and I am alone again; and I feel that this is my place for the present. I hope brethren will remember and communicate with me, as the Lord may direct.

To the givers of those bundles of tracts, let me say, I will do my best to put them into the hands of those who will read them. I generally add a word of exhortation to every tract, and my tracts introduce me and the subject to every family. I esteem it a privilege to be the bearer of these tracts to the poor and destitute. I love the work; I enjoy it; had rather be in this humble work, than to be a king on a throne.

May the Lord bless you, and while you have watered others, may your own souls be like a well watered garden. Pray for me, that I may have strength of body, and force of mind, and the wisdom which comes from above, and that I may have access to the minds of the people of this new and very fast increasing country.

Salmon Brook Plantation,
Aroostook Co., Me.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—I have just returned from the Indiana State Conference. We had one of the best, if not the best meeting I ever attended. Betwixt three and four hundred brethren and sisters, from different parts of the State, were present, full of faith and love; and it was truly blessed to enjoy their society. The preaching, praying, exhortations, and singing, were all excellent and timely. The Bible they adopt as their only rule of faith and practice; and freedom of speech, thought, investigation and judgment, is granted to each one, and nothing but christian character is made a test of fellowship. Every thing seems to be moving forward quietly and in a prosperous manner. The cause of truth can but prosper in that State, while devoted men and women are intelligently pushing forward the car of truth as they now are. We bid them all a hearty God speed.

From Bro. H. Morrison.

Bro. Grant:—As we look over the christian world, we find thousands professing to follow Jesus; but how few are in reality walking in his footsteps, living out his principles, obeying his commands. There are a few, however, who are striving to obtain the promise who love to obey; and by the grace of God will obey, though the world scoffs and frowns. Yes, as Bro. S. S. Brewer says, their scoffs and jeers just serve to drive us nearer and nearer to Jesus, as did the stones hurled at Stephen. Yes, the daily disappointments will just serve to wean us from man, whose breath is in his nostrils.

O the mercy and goodness of God to us! He has delivered us from darkness to light, from human discipline, creeds, etc., to the precious Bible.

How well thy blessed truths agree!
How wise and holy thy commands!
Thy promises, how sure they be!
How firm our hope and comfort stands.

Should all the forms that men devise
Assault our faith with treach'rous art,
We'd call them vanity and lies,
And bind the gospel to our heart.

As Bro. Wm. G. Moncrieff remarks, "Alas! when piety has no essential life, but a sort of galvanic existence. Alas! for those who are not good because God requires it, and because it is proper to be holy in summer as in winter; but merely puts on a little goodness because the Lord is about to appear." On account of the tarrying of the vision the few here have fallen away. "No man, having put his hand to the plough and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." "For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them. But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog is turned to his own vomit again, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire."

Dear Brn. and Srs. let us take warning, even by such, and remember that the promises are only to them that shall endure unto the end; the same shall be saved. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching. "Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." Let us keep walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless, and be "steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." And soon, very soon, it will be said, "come ye blessed of my Father."

New Glasgow, C. E.

From Sr. M. J. Achorn.

Bro. Grant:—I take pleasure in reading the letters from the Brn. and Srs.; and perhaps a line from me may encourage some lone heart still to trust in God. I am desirous to live nearer to the throne of mercy. I feel that I need more than ever the prayers of God's dear children for me; and more especially do I desire the prayers of my Brn. and Srs. for an absent son, that lies prostrated by the caving in of the mine where he was at work. His back was seriously injured, and his left leg was broken in two places. It was set the next day, but the fifth day after, amputation became necessary. The injuries in his back, together with four bed sores that were made by lying so long, have confined him ever since the 19th of last January. He can sit up now most of the time, but has no use of his well leg, as yet. Believing that the prayers of the righteous availeth much, I make this one request, that you will remember him at the throne of grace, that God, who is rich in mercies, would look in tender compassion on the widow and her son; that he would raise him to health, to return to his friends.

When I think of the blessed privilege those enjoy who meet for the worship of God, I long to be with them; but, as I cannot, I will try to be contented with my lot. You may well think how dear to my heart are the weekly visits of the Crisis. It seems as though I could not be without it. I am, hoping for deliverance soon. Your sister in tribulation and patience till Jesus comes.

Washington.

For the Crisis.

Financial Report of the Savoy Campmeeting.

In answer to many inquiries in regard to the profits and expenses of the boarding stand, the committee wish to state that the receipts taken at the stand were not quite sufficient to meet the expenses. The reason of this was in consequence of the number of free boarders. The committee wish further to state, that all the collections taken were distributed to the preaching brethren, after paying the bill for keeping horses.

E. M'Cullock.

Obituary Notices.

Died, in Lockport, N. Y., Aug. 16th, Dr. Samuel Leinbach, aged sixty-nine.

Dr L. was a man well read in the science of his profession, and a consistent member of the Lutheran church. He was also a Bible student. Guided by the light of the Word, he had learned that Heaven had purposed to establish a kingdom on this earth. Believing in a kingdom of reality, he looked for a King. By comparing prophecy and history, he became convinced that the day was at hand for the King to appear and establish the kingdom. In this waiting and expecting state he was living, when the enemy laid his icy hand upon him. But he yielded to his power in full hope of a complete victory in the morning of the resurrection. His funeral was attended by the writer on Saturday, Aug. 18th. The audience, on the occasion, were invited to consider the subject of the resurrection of the just

The day after the above funeral, a Mrs. Mary Price, daughter of the deceased, was thrown from a carriage, on returning from a Methodist campmeeting which had been held in Pekin, in this county, and had one arm broken in three places, and her side bruised. During the week mortification commenced, and on Sunday, Aug. 26th, she died. The funeral was attended the next day. By her special request, we preached on the occasion, and took for our text and subject, "That blessed hope." The audience was large, and gave very good attention to the word. We hope for favorable results.

Mrs. Price lived and died at Shawmee, where the funeral services were held and she was buried. She was a member of the Presbyterian church, but had been an attendant upon services we have been holding there for a few weeks past, and was becoming deeply interested in the examination of our views. She was one of those intelligent, candid and consistent christian women who command universal respect. She leaves a family of seven children to feel more deeply her loss than others. This is rendered the more afflictive because, four years since, they were called to part with a father.

In contemplating this work, it was truly blessed to be able to say, "An enemy hath done this." Few instances have occurred to render more impressive the fact that death is an enemy. I love this feature of our hope, as well as the glorious truth that death is a conquered foe. The saints shall have the victory through Jesus Christ, the great Life Giver. The Lord grant us our portion in the first resurrection.

L. P. Judson.

In Danbury, Ct., Aug. 24th, 1860, after eleven long weeks of extreme pain and suffering, Sister Jane B. Jennings, wife of Mortimer Jennings, in the twenty-third year of her age, retired from earth's rude scenes of suffering and strife, to sleep in Jesus, until all the faithful shall awake in his likeness.

For the first time death, that cruel enemy, has broken our family circle, consisting of parents and six children. She was the constant companion of my childhood days, being only two years younger than myself. We [illegible] in years, has been called the second time to pass through the same trying scene. She leaves to his care an infant son aged four weeks.

Funeral services were attended in the Baptist church in Brookfield, near the residence of my father. Bro. R. Wendell of Albany, who accompanied us from the Wilbraham camp-ground, preached to a crowded house a truly comforting and deeply instructive discourse, from the familiar words of the apostle Paul, recorded in the last six verses of the fourth chapter of his first epistle to the Thess. We trust it will not be a lost season to very many who listened with deep attention. No other occasion would have permitted us to listen to our own ideas of the gospel hope within that consecrated (?) house. Nearly three years have passed away since Sister Jane knelt at the same altar where her encoffined form was laid, and gave her heart to God. Two years ago last spring, she at the same altar gave her hand in marriage to Bro. Jennings. Both were engaged in the Sabbath school at that time. Since then she, with parents, brother William and two sisters, with other family connections, have been excluded as members from the same church; not for vile and immoral deeds, (of which, it is to be feared, some still within its pale are guilty,) but because they trusted they had found a livelier hope and a more excellent way.

But to return to the scene at Wilbraham I wish to tender many thanks to the dear friends, not only for their sympathy, but for the friendly aid shown me in that needful hour. After bidding you a hasty adieu, my Bro. and myself, in company with our dear Bro. W., were hurried along on our journey until we reached Norwalk, where we were obliged to wait four long hours. After taking some refreshment, we walked to the oft-referred-to bridge, a few rods from the depot, where but a few years since so many lives were hurried out of existence in a moment of time. As we stood upon the bridge, the rumbling chariots went sweeping by, shaking the huge timbers, and causing earth to tremble at their approach; while we in our imagination pictured the heart-rending scene, and viewed them as plunging into the fearful chasm below, which furnished a watery resting place for torn and mangled bodies, crushed within those massive cars. Truly "in the midst of life we are in death." O may we learn the lesson well, and so "number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

Evening came, and we were again on our way to Danbury, where we arrived about nine o'clock. My heart grew more sad as I neared the door where, six months before, dear Jane, with tearful eyes, bade me a last farewell till Jesus comes. I pressed her living offspring to my aching heart, and then they led me to the room where, encircled in ice, her lovely form was laid; and when I saw her pale face, still beautiful, though robed in death, and felt the cold damp chill as I laid my head upon her bosom, and for the first time realized that Jane was truly dead, grief that I had never known before burst in deep sighs from my swelling heart; and what to me seemed most cruel was, that the enemy should come and steal her life away, while I with weeping, went forth to preach God's word. But care for the living must occupy my mind, and deep thought take the place of grief, that I my short race too may run and gain with her a conqueror's crown.

Elvira S. Fenn.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

TWO DAYS LATER.

New York, Sept. 13. Steamship Asia, from Liverpool Sept. 1, via Queenstown 2d, arrived at noon to-day.

Naples was tranquil. Garibaldi had quitted Calabria. His destination is not known. It is reported that he had entered Monteleone.

Garibaldi's whole army had reached the main land.

Forty-five hundred French soldiers had landed at Beirut. There had been threatening manifestation between the Christians and Moslems.

The following dispatches refer to Garibaldi's operations in Naples.

Naples, Aug. 28. The royal troops in Calabria have again been defeated. The insurgents of Basilicata are advancing toward Salerno. It is believed they will join Garibaldi and march against Naples.

Naples, Aug. 28, (Official.) The Neapolitan troops were attacked by the Garibaldians at Piale, (the telegram says on Piale,) by whom they were surrounded and defeated. An armistice was then proposed. The commanding officer referred this proposition to the general-in-chief. In the meantime the enthusiasm of the Neapolitan troops abated, they became disorganized and dispersed, leaving the batteries without any defenders.

The Paris Pays, till lately one of the staunchest adherents of the King of Naples, now publishes the following desperate "latest news:"

"The last dispatches from Naples represent the situation as more serious than ever. The insurrectional movement spreads rapidly in the provinces, and the desertion of the troops goes on in daily increasing proportions. A panic pervades all minds in Naples itself, notwithstanding the material tranquility hitherto maintained in the city. It is thought that Francis II, in this almost desperate situation, will soon resolve to leave his capital. The tenor of the last news from Calabria and the attitude of the navy are said to have induced the King to seek safety in flight."

A letter in the Times says:

"All the news received of Garibaldi is to the effect that he is making great progress. Even the most sanguine of his enemies dare not doubt of his success. The Monde says that all the news received is of a revolutionary origin, and disguises a part of the truth, but adds, it is easy to see that the inaction of the Neapolitan fleet and the inertness of the government leave the field clear for the enemy."

FOUR DAYS LATER.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 14. Steamship Melita, from Liverpool 5th inst. for New York, via Halifax, was intercepted off Cape Race at three o'clock this afternoon by the news boat of the Associated Press.

FRANCE.

The Emperor and Empress had reached Chambéry, and were enthusiastically received.

A Paris correspondent says that France has just purchased ten large steam transports in the United States.

AUSTRIA.

A revolutionary conspiracy has been discov[illegible]

The papers seized are said to throw a startling light on the proceedings of a neighboring power.

SYRIA.

The French troops continued at Beyrout, and it was thought they would not be required to go into the interior.

The details of the executions at Damascus show that individuals belonging to the highest families had been found guilty and suffered the penalty of death. One hundred and sixty-seven additional executions had taken place.

ITALY.

Sardinia was about to interfere at Naples. It is reported that General La Mamora was about to leave for Naples with 30,000 men, his object being to prevent Naples from becoming a prey to anarchy, in view of the fall of the Bourbon dynasty.

All the disposable vessels of the Sardinian navy were to be sent to Naples, and military preparations were going on more vigorously than ever in Piedmont. The government was hiring every available transport, and it is said that if the rapid conveyance for so large a force is found to be impossible, the Pope will be asked to allow its passage through his dominions.

The Province of Terra Dilavaro had risen in insurrection. Bands of insurgents had united and were marching on Camp Basso.

There is nothing as to Garibaldi's movements, further than was at Monteleone.

It is reported that the Neapolitan ministers had tendered their resignations, but that they were not accepted.

The King of Naples is to pay an indemnification of three million francs for French losses during the bombardment of Palermo.

It is asserted that the prohibition placed on the departure of volunteers from the Sardinian States is to be removed.

It is rumored that the cabinets of France and Turin have agreed to prevent any invasion of the States of the Church. The French garrison at Rome is to be increased some 3500 men.

Ancona has been declared in a state of siege, and the Papal delegate recalled.

LATEST.

Liverpool, Sept. 5. Confusion was increasing at Naples. The annexation committee on the 3d inst., received a communication from Garibaldi, announcing that as the country required a definite solution of the present difficulties, he would be in Naples about the 8th, and in the name of Victor Emmanuel assume the dictatorship of the two Sicilies.

The Neapolitan Ministry had withdrawn their resignations, as an attempt to form a new one under Prince Ischitella had failed. Count Persigny had made another speech, giving the impression that Napoleon will do no more than maintain the Pope's throne in the Vatican, and not help Lamoriciere to keep the Roman States.

The Paris Bourse was quite steady on the 4th.

It is reported from Syria that the French troops had suffered a reverse at the hands of the Druses in Lebanon.

TWO DAYS LATER.

Father Point, Sept. 17. Steamship Jura, from Liverpool 6th, via Queenstown 7th, passed here this morning, en route for Quebec.

FRANCE.

The Emperor is reported to have assured M Farini of his sincere desire to see Italy independent, and said that when Victor Emmanuel is master of Sicily and Naples he will be strong enough to contend alone against Austria; but should Austria prove victorious in a conflict, France would not allow her to abuse her victory.

The Paris Bourse was dull and drooping. Rentes closed at 67f. 95c.

It was reported that the Empress is not well, and will not be able to accompany the Emperor to Algeria.

ITALY.

Garibaldi was last heard of at Palmi, when he was marching upon Salerno.

An insurrection had broken out at Sala, where Victor Emmanuel was proclaimed King.

It is reported that the Austrian Minister at Naples had telegraphed to Vienna that the King of Naples had resolved to quit his States, and that his pictures, furniture and luggage were embarked on the 4th, on board a Spanish vessel.

Latest.—Naples, Thursday, 1 P. M.—It is said that the King will leave here to-day for Gaeta.

SYRIA.

It is again asserted that Christians had been massacred at Baalbec, and in the village near Jean d' Acre.

THE FRENCH IN SYRIA.

(Correspondence of the Traveller.)

Beirut, Syria, Aug. 16.—One battalion of French troops arrived at Beirut this morning, and others will arrive to-morrow. All doubts about the occupation of Syria by the French are now dispelled. The Eastern question is again upon the tapis. Correspondents of the London Times and other English and French papers have arrived, and the public will now receive information of all passing events.

Yesterday was the grand fete day of the French Emperor—the fifteenth of August. Every one of the twenty-five ships of war in the harbor fired a salute, and in the evening the corps diplomatique, together with the local authorities, and the admirals and chief officers of the combined squadrons, met at dinner at the French Consulate General. The usual amount of champagne was distributed among the guests, and Vive l' Empereur was shouted with all due enthusiasm by Moslem and Greek alike. The dinner was magnificent,—so say the gentlemen, the ladies were not invited,—and is considered a brilliant affair. The illumination was fine, and the uniforms of the fifty civil, diplomatic and naval officers added a striking effect to the scene. Every nation was there represented, and many knotty questions were quietly discussed. These cosmopolitan dinners have a good effect, they bring the representatives of the different nations together and enable them to understand each other better, which promotes good feeling.

Every nation seems desirous of being represented in Syria at this time, and Sardinia, Holland and Spain have sent their fleets to the Beirut station. All but America have shown their interest in behalf of their subjects and the Christians of Syria, by sending large and numerous vessels of war.

(From the London Times.)

Syria.—The accounts received from the coast of Syria have realized all our worst fears. On the 9th of this month the city of Damascus was attacked by the Druses, and five hundred Christians are said to have perished. The Consulates, with the exception of the English, were burnt down. In short, the whole place seems to have been at the mercy of the marauding army, the Turkish authorities having shown their usual complicity with the aggressors. This frightful event must remove the scruples of the most cautious politician. Instant action must take place to save the world from crimes which will be a reproach to it for ages. No one can tell what another week may bring forth. The next mail from Beyrout may inform us that Aleppo has shared the fate of Damascus, that at Jerusalem Christians of every nation and church, including a number of Protestant Englishmen, have been put to the sword. Whatever may have been the beginning of this movement, there can be no doubt that it has assumed a most formidable character. Yesterday it was a feud between two mountain tribes; to-morrow it may be the onslaught of the Musselman races on the Christians, whom recent events have caused them to look upon with increasing hatred and dread. Before succor can arrive, before the Turk can be made to feel that Europe will stand no trifling in this matter, it may be that every village in Syria, nay, in the whole of Asia, may be stained with blood. Races which have lived in security for centuries under the protection of the European Powers, may be swept from the earth by this fierce outbreak of fanaticism, all hopes of a better future may be destroyed, and the regeneration of these unhappy lands made impossible for ever by a single month of unchecked lawlessness. When too late, it may be discovered that civilization has been once more overwhelmed by a deluge as it was beginning to blossom and to give hopes of bringing forth fruit.

It is strange that a land which was the cradle of christianity should continue, age after age, to be the place of its sharpest trial. It would almost seem as if a spell hung over that renowned and holy corner of Asia, and condemned it to keep forever its former likeness, to furnish persecutors and martyrs, frenzied multitudes demanding blood, and timid Governors giving up the guiltless to death. Since the days when the Patriarchates of Antioch and Jerusalem went down under the first shock of Arab invasion, the Christians of Syria and Palestine have been the most ill used subjects of the most fanatical part of Islam. Their fate has somewhat resembled that of the tribes whom Israel, ages before, found in the same land. They have been exterminated, or reduced to the condition of slaves, or forced to conform to the victorious faith.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

Meeting of the "Christian Association."—Those interested in devising means to make a more earnest and effectual effort to arouse a wicked world and a sleeping church to the all-important truth that the Lord is soon coming, are invited to meet at Salem, Mass., Tuesday, Oct. 16th, 10 1-2 A. M., at the Union Street Chapel, for this purpose. Let those who cannot come, pray that the Lord may direct those who may assemble to adopt the best mode of action, and help them to do all things to his glory. For particulars, see Crisis No 1, Vol. 12, Sept. 12th.

M. Grant, for the Committee.

Notice.—A Request.

Our views have been preached against of late, which shows that there is fear of danger to the craft. Bro Wendell, if you will come at some convenient time, though poor, we will do what we can to make it agreeable.

N. S. Latimer.

Milton, Ulster Co., N. Y.

Eld. M. Grant in Canada East.

At the earnest request of the Christian Association in Danville, C. E., Eld. M. Grant will revisit, and hold meetings with the church in this place on last Lord's day in Sept. and first in Oct., the Lord willing. I would most respectfully recommend that the churches in these townships, viz., Melbourne, Hatley, and Barstown, etc., would endeavor to secure a portion of his labor for the good of their health, before he returns.

J. Porter.

Notice.

The brethren in Ohio, through their committee, Geo. W. Cherry, Bro. Southwick, Bro Fish of Dayton, and P. Alling of Norwalk, have determined on holding a conference this fall in Northern Ohio. They choose as

The place North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio

The time, so far as determined, is Oct. 26th, Friday, 11 A. M., and over the Lord's day, the 28th. The first, or morning meeting, may hold daily as long as needful. The second meeting early in the evening. Thus we shall not be hurried in our services, nor spend time needlessly in going and coming. All "who have an ear to hear" are invited to "hear" the proof positive, as holy writ and acknowledged fact, that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Those who believe are exhorted to come and help forward the objects of the conference. The Judge has said in relation to spreading the knowledge of his approach,—"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing!" "Now the just shall live by faith, but if he draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Come then, beloved, to dispense, as well as to "receive," more of "the manifold grace of God." To them that have shall be given, and they shall have more abundance.

In behalf of the brethren, and subject to their amendment if deemed needful.

J. B. Cook.

Iowa, Minn. and Wisconsin Christian Conference.

Our fourth annual conference will be holden at Springville, Badax Co., Wis., commencing Oct. 4th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over Lord's day. Springville is about thirty miles from La Crosse (on the Mississippi river,) from which the stage runs every Tuesday and Friday, and about thirty-five from Sparta (on the Milwaukee and Lacrosse R. R.,) from which place a stage runs every Wednesday to Viroqua, only three or four miles from Springville. Strangers can inquire for Wm. A. Morse, or W. Sheldon.

R. S. W. Deyo, W. Sheldon, } Evangelists.

Notice.

The Lord will, there will be a conference in Unity Village, N. H., to commence Friday, Sept. 21st, at half-past ten A. M., and continue over Lord's day. It is expected that Bro. J. G. Smith and G. Otis will be present to preach the word.

In behalf of the brethren, J. Kimball.

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

Also, a tent meeting in Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill., near Bro. Larken Scott's, to commence Sept. 27th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday. We hope to see a general rally. Bro and Sr. Mansfield are to be there to preach the word.

Also, there is to be two tent meetings in Brown Co., Ill.; one at Mt. Pleasant, or Mt. Stirling, as Brn. Raymond and others may arrange, to commence Oct. 12th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday.

The other at Ripley, to commence Oct 3d, (Wednesday) at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be in attendance at all of the above named meetings and preach the word. I expect God will bless his word to the salvation of souls. I hope the brethren in the different localities will make the meetings a special subject of prayer, that there may be much good done in the name of Jesus.

Moses Chandler, for the Church.

Notice.

The Advent Chapel at West Hoosick, N. Y., will be dedicated Thursday, the 27th of Sept. Meeting to continue over the following Sunday. I and Bro. J. S. White are expected to attend, and preach the word. By request of the church. M. Batchelor.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld J. B. Cook will preach in Boston, (Chapman Hall) .... Sept. 23d and 30th

Providence permitting, we will preach in Portsmouth, Friday evening .... Sept. 21st
Portland, Sabbath .... Sept. 23d
MILES GRANT.

Bro. J. Turner will preach, Providence permitting, on the camp-ground near Unionville, on land of Bro. Johnson, Sept. 23d. S. WOODRUFF.

Providence permitting, I will meet the brethren in Danbury, N. H., Sabbath, Sept. 23d.
DANIEL CHURCHILL.

The Lord willing, there will be a conference at Sandwich Centre, N. H., commencing Sept. 20th and continuing over the Sabbath.
TRISTRAM MASON.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portland, Me., Wednesday evening, Oct. 31; and commence a four days meeting at Machias Port, Me., Oct. 5th, if the boat from Portland arrives on that day, or the first arrival after. HIRAM MUNGER.

Bro. J. T. Ongley appoints to preach near Bro. John Sherwood's, Waterford, Pa., evening, Oct. 2d.
Ravlin Hill, near Clymer, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Oct. 3d and 4th.
Findley's Lake, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., evening, Oct. 5th.
Ripley Hill, Chautauqua Co., three miles south of the State Line depot, Oct. 6th and 7th.

The Lord willing, I will preach in
South Reading, Mass .... Sunday, Sept. 23d
Lowell .... Sept. 24th
Westford .... Sept. 25th
Manchester .... Sept. 26th
L. D. THOMPSON.

Providence permitting, I shall meet with the friends in Prospect, Ct., where Bro. Mix may appoint, Oct. 13th and 14th. Will Bro. Ira Morgan please meet me? Middlebury the 16th. At Pro. Porter's, Roxbury, the 17th. Wauraumaug the 18th. JOSEPH GREGORY.

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach, if the Lord will, at Prospect .... Sept. 23d
Cheshire Street, ... Sept. 30th
North Canton .... Oct. 7th

The Lord permitting, I will preach at Seneca Falls, Friday eve. .... Sept. 21st and over the Lord's day if not supplied.
I shall be on my way home to print more of my works, and prepare to travel in the Western States and C. W. the coming year. I hope to leave home for some part of the West in Jan., 1861.
JACOB BLAIN.

The Lord will, I will preach in South Windsor, (Pleasant Valley,) Ct., Sept. 23d.
Eld. S. P. BABCOCK.

The Lord willing, we will hold a conference in Dalton, commencing on the evening of Sept. 21st, and continuing over the following Sunday, where Bro. Warren may appoint. S. S BRAZEE. A. FOX.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Wallingford. .... Sept. 23d
L. S. LUDINGTON.

APPOINTMENTS FOR DANIELSONVILLE, CT.
Eld. H. F. Carpenter .... Sept. 23d
The R. I. State Quarterly Conference will meet at this place Sept. 26th. We purpose continuing the public services over the following Sunday. Friends from abroad are invited to attend.
H. F. CARPENTER, Pastor.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the Grove near the Anderson School-house, 2 1-2 miles south-west of Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, Sept. 23d, commencing at 10 o'clock.
Sept. 24th, 25th, 26th, in Unity, near the Centre Road Depot, on the Pittsburgh and Erie Rail Road.
Sept. 27th and 28th in the Simmon's neighborhood, one mile and a half from Jefferson, Ashtabula Co., Ohio.
Saturday evening and over Sunday, at Ashtabula, Ohio. Monday eve., Oct. 1st, at Girard, near Bro. Alton's. John T. Ongley, Evangelist.

Providence permitting, I will
Commence a series of meetings at Dover, Me., where Bro. Lougee may appoint, Wednesday, Sept. 26th, to continue over the following Sabbath.
J. HEMENWAY.

With God's permission I will attend meetings as follows:—
Surry, Me .... Sept. 23d
Carmel, Me., (Union Meeting-house) .... Sept. 30th
THOMAS SMITH.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

S. G. Clarke's P. O. address is Wales, Ogle Co., Ill.

S. C. Carpenter.—All right.

P. S. Pekham, Coventry.—All right.

N. Orcott.—Paid to No. 265.

N. Orcutt.—Bagster's Bible, with Maps and Index, Turkey morocco binding, $5, at 106 Washington street.

M. Field.—Send the book.

Cash Receipts.

For Preachers' Aid Society.—Sr. Loomise, Hitchcockville, $1.00.

C. E. Scribner.—For missionary purposes, $2.00.

E H Chase 244, Mrs. A Ricker 278, J K Bean 260, S Rose 260, J D Smith 260, J McWade 260, C W Safford 260, H O Harris 260, D G Sawyer 271, Mrs. G W Pease 309, O M Matthews 312, H O Hatman 260, A Farrow 312, H Fellows 260, J M Phillips 260, E Smead 260, J Lyford 260, M Stratton 312, I Hatter 260, G Taylor 260, W W Harding 260, J Stone 312, E Baker 312, A M Cole 270, I Hodgkins 312, S K Dyer 286, W H Albro 297, N K Thurston 260, W Davis 260, D S Cables 306, B Jones 260, H Bennett 286, H Card 260, E Mathews 269, C Marble 290, T Pease 312, L J Beach 273, J Cooper 309, S Titus 234, E M Freeman 286, S Bliss, 2 copies, 286, W O Hough 306, W Pynchon 312, J D Merriam 260, B T Weaver 297, S B Colton 250, J W Doten 276, E Loomis 273, E Pendleton 306, S Warner 264, H E Twing 260, Mrs. P C Chandler 317, L G Ingalls 324, H O Page 338, J E Roberts 286, A B Reed 261, H C Benton 260, Mrs. S Orcott 286, D W Spear 286, N J Winchell 282, O Loomis 278, P Converse 298, B R Clark 286, J H Hall 273, 2 copies, 273, M W Benham 286, L T Moses 286, E D Hutchins 260, M Merrill 286, C Newell 312, B A Sherman 286, T Glover 338, E B Boynton 312, S Robbins 290, C A Hastings 290, E A Eggleston 343, E Phelps 271, L Paine 260, C R Crossett 260, M Bogardus 286, A Morse 312, S F Otis 286, G A Otis 260, Mrs. R S Robinson 318, C Benton 260, G L Mixter 286, Oph. Haynes 287, O H Lawrence 263, L Lord 312, C H Mead 280, F Burr 286, E J Cook 312, E Skillens 260, B Perkins 274, J W Piper 260, Mrs. D Perry 312, E A Black 260, W Hoar 276, D S Randall 312, N L Robie 234, B Fifield 286, Mrs. M A Fogg 290, C B Walker 312, R P Volentine 260,—$2.00 each.

S Hale 278, $1.59; W Mix 300, $1.56; Mrs. M E Hamilton 269, 36 cts; A B Swanesburg 260, $1.40.

R Thurlow 273, P Harp 286, Mrs. C Smith 256, Mrs. H M Butters 273, E Wood 273, J Saunders 273, C H Berry 268, J Dunbar 269, J R Hyde 265, J B Clark 273, J N Boxwell 273,—50 cts. each.

C Churchell 284, J M Muhlig 322, C Ford 226,—$3.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

T W Wright $1.00, Eld. C P Dow $2.00, W E Harris 12 cts, S K Fenton 12 cts, W Mix 44 cts, Ab. Kidder $1.00, J N Boxwell $1.50, W S Ingraham 30 cts, E P Conser 27 cts, Mrs. F Parker 25 cts, E E Dalton $1.00.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single. 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Tracts from the Tract Fund.—Friends at the West can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.
H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10. 28, Gen 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred, 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred, postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruahh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single, postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred, 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Sheppard. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00 [illegible]

Treatise on Matt. 24, and 25. Price, 3 cts. Postage 1 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Brooks, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS OF H. L. HASTINGS, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp. $1 00

The Great Controversy between God and Man: its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp. 60

Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 124 pp. Paper 30 cts. Cloth 50

Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing 00

Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing 00

Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 720 pp. 50

Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 720 pp. 50

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 320 pp. 75

The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt. 25

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm. Ramsey, D. D., edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth, 40

Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper, 15

The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, 87 pp. 13

Tracts of 24 Pages.—3 cts. single; $1 for 1600 pages—by mail 1200 pp. for $1.

The Church not in Darkness,	by H. L. H.	pages 24
The Three Worlds,	by H. L. H.	24
The Last Days,	by H. L. H.	24
Plain Truths,	by H. L. H.	23
Will all men be saved?	by H. L. H.	24
Voice of Warning	by D. T. Taylor	24
The New Heavens and Earth,	"	24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos.		24
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H. &c.	36
Important Questions, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H.	36
State of the Dead,	by John Milton	24
The Intermediate State,	by H. G.	24
Destiny of the Wicked	by H. L. H.	12
Future Punishment,	by H. G.	12
The Key of Truth,	by W. S.	12
Man's Future State		12
Letter on Dress	by Adoniram Judson	12
The Day of Judgment,	by St. Cyril	12
Outline of the Coast,	by A Voyager	8
The Night Cometh,	by John Adey	8
Gems, 9 Nos. poetry,	by H. L. H.	12
One Thing		8
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ,		4
The Duration of the Earth	by A. Clarke	4
Hope and Duty of the Church,	M. Henry	4
The Restitution,	by St. Cyril	4
A Warning Voice,	by Cotton Mather	4
Loving Christ's Appearing,	by Baxter	4
Little Children, Love one another		4
The One Resting Place,	by H. Bonar	4
My Friend,	by H. L. H.	4
Abundant Grace	"	4
Wondrous Love	"	4
Go in Peace	"	4
Living Water	"	4
The Banner	Anonymous	4
The Blood of Christ	"	4
Are you a Christian?	by H. L. H.	4
Why not Now?	"	4
Are you Pardoned?	"	4
Are you Safe?	"	4
Are you Saved?	"	4
Do you Pray?	"	4
When Will He Come?	by J. C. Ryle	4
Statement of Account	by H. L. H.	4
Man in Death	By Bishop Law	4
Forty Questions on Immortality		4
SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.
No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked		1
No. 2. The State of the Dead		1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus		1
No. 4. The Resurrection		1
No. 5. Plain Truths		1
No. 6. The Judgment		1
POETRY.
Brother, Shall we Meet?	by H. L. H.	2
Sister, Shall we Meet?	"	2
Stand up for Jesus!	"	1
The Harvest is Past	"	1
Beyond!	"	1
At Rest!	"	1
We would see Jesus	by Josephine	1
A Little While	by J. C.	1
LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.
Life Insurance, Envelope Size	H. L. H.	12
Home	"	12
Lost, Lost	"	4
Peace in Christ	"	4
Worth Knowing	"	4
All things are Yours	"	4
Now	"	4
Assurance	"	4
About God	"	4

The foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $10, with their order, shall receive $12. worth of books at the retail price. Tracts are sent by mail, 1200 pages, on the receipt of a dollar. When sent by express, or at the expense of the buyer, 1600 pages will be sent for one dollar. Terms cash. Persons who desire to do good, can obtain Four hundred tracts, of four pages each, for $1. These may be widely distributed and open the way for religious conversation. Persons may thus be a blessing to those around them. The poor can have any of these tracts sent to them free, by remitting stamps to pay the postage. Ministers can have specimen copies of the tracts and pamphlets sent free. All letters, orders, and remittances should be addressed to the Publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 43 Weybosset St., Providence, R. I.

January, 1860.

 These publications can be obtained in Boston of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York: G. W. Young, 138 William st.; Philadelphia: A. P. Porter, 728 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publisher through all Booksellers.

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

To Minnie on her Birthday.

BY MARY M. MORGAN.

Thy fourteenth birthday, darling Minnie!
My heart goes out in prayer for thee,
That 'mid the thorns of life's rough journey,
Thine eyes may ever roses see;
That happy birthdays may be given
To thee, till earthly ties are riven.

What shall I wish for thee, dear Minnie?
A life unstained by earthly gloom?
A heart untouched by blighting sorrow?
A painless passage to the tomb?
I would, (were these vouchsafed to any,)
Ask them for thee, my darling Minnie.

This may not be, love's hand may soften
The ruggedness of life's dark way;
Yet still thy heart will very often
Yearn for a brighter, better day;
Thick clouds the shining sun will cover,
And darkness round thy pathway hover.

I'll ask that when thy hearth is weary,
With toil and labor, care and strife,
And earth seems dark and very dreary,
That even in this fitful life,
Enough of light to thee be given
To guide thy wandering steps to heaven.

And when at last this mortal story
Is finished, may'st thou glorified,
Stand with the saints, in fadeless glory,
Close to the loving Savior's side,—
Praising the riches of his grace,
Spend an eternity of bliss.

Cheshire, Ct.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. D. Wellcome.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—I would like to write you a letter, and tell you about my pleasant tour to the "Old Bay State," and the refreshing season enjoyed at Wilbraham campmeeting. Thanks to the generosity of a few good sisters, and kindly greetings of friends long cherished in memory, and many newly found. But I am too weary with my journey, and too much pressed with needful care, to say much now.

A little business matter is that of which I now would speak. So numerous were the testimonies given in regard to the interest and profit with which "Letters Illustrative of Christian Experience" were read, that I have thought best to make an effort to do, what many think ought to be done, viz: publish them in book form, adding thereto other letters illustrative of our hope. I have written respecting this before, but not in a very proper manner, as I opened the way only for those who would take copies at wholesale price, and then the printer made a blunder, giving the price $200, instead of $2.

The following plan was suggested to me, and I began to act upon it during the hour of intermission, Tuesday noon, at Westford; and as the result of that limited effort, obtained subscribers for fifty copies.

The plan was this: obtain the names of those who will subscribe for one or more copies, and if a sufficient number can be procured, publish the book. Some subscribed for three, six, and nine copies. Had I only acted upon this plan at Wilbraham, I doubt not from the evidence, that I could easily have obtained subscribers for two hundred copies.

It would probably cost about two hundred and fifty dollars for a stereotyped edition of one thousand copies; and I think there are a sufficient number interested in this matter, to raise the amount necessary. How many of you will subscribe one dollar, two dollars, three dollars, and receive payment in books? Let some brother or sister take a pencil and paper, and obtain the names of those in their vicinity who will subscribe, and for every five they shall receive a copy as premium. This can soon be settled, provided you act promptly. Those who subscribe for half a dozen or more to sell again, shall have them at one-third discount. Let me hear from you soon, and your names shall be duly entered on a book, with the amount subscribed. Your sister in Christ.

Richmond, Me.

From D. R. and M. S. Mansfield.

BRO. GRANT:—We arrived home very much fatigued and worn. We have spent four weeks with the brethren in Central Illinois. On our arrival in Warren county, at the place of meeting, we met Bro. Chandler on the ground, all ready to pitch the tent, which was accomplished by him and others in a short time, and all arrangements made to seat as many as the tent would hold. By the by, Bro. Chandler has added sixteen feet in length to the tent, which makes it with the new addition quite roomy and calculated to hold a large congregation.

Our meeting commenced in the Spirit and wound up without a jar or discord. Quite a number of brethren came from a distance. All seemed to enjoy the meeting. We trust a lasting impression was made on the minds of some. They lingered around, and seemed loth to have the tent come down. But our next appointment was in Brown county, and we had no time to tarry; so we bade them farewell, and hastened away in company with Bro. and Sister Chandler. After two days' ride across the prairie, forty-five miles, we arrived in Brown county in time to rest one day. Here we received letters from the brethren north, who, on account of the hard and busy times, desired to have their meeting deferred to a future time.

Our meeting commenced here under favorable circumstances. The Lord smiled upon us, and we had good weather, good congregations, good health, and a good gospel to preach to sinners,—salvation, full and free to all who will accept offered mercy upon the terms given by Him who died for us. Much interest was felt at this meeting; and a desire to hear more on the subject, aroused the brethren to action. A motion was made, and carried into effect, to strike the tent and pitch it at Mt. Pleasant, four miles distant. Here we had the same congregation. The cloud broke, and the Lord helped us in pulling some out of the fire. Ten willing converts were planted in the likeness of Christ's death, and arose to walk in newness of life. Three more received the right hand of fellowship.

Here wound up our third tent meeting. Every heart was full of praise to God for what he had done. Now, dear children, you have come in at the eleventh hour;—work well, and you will receive a reward. Be humble; watch and pray; hunt for the "old paths," and give no countenance to the many conflicting notions and commandments of men. Live in peace; let love be without dissimulation; and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly. We will see you again in due time, if the Lord will. Farewell.

Here we parted with our Bro. and Sister Chandler. We spent four days with the church at Ripley. Our congregations were large. All appeared to be interested, and to enjoy the meeting. Sorry we could not have stayed longer.

Our dear Bro. Chandler is almost alone in this large field of labor. Who will come to his aid? Four or five good, judicious laborers could be well sustained, we think. To such as have nothing to do but ride a hobby from one church to another, we frankly say, your room is better than your company. The cause demands such men as will labor to build up, and strengthen the things that remain, encourage to prayer and holy living. The church is quite tired of men who are filled with nothing but theory. Our prayer is, Lord, send us men filled with the Spirit, who will labor for God.

Buchanan, Mich.

From Bro. Wm. M. Ingham.

BRO. GRANT:—I left my home at Lawrence, May 28th, on a tour in Maine. Stopped in Boston four days at the Anniversary meetings,—attended the Advent conference, at Kneeland St., part of the time, and had some good meetings; some interest was waked up on the time of the Lord's coming. From Boston, I went to Augusta in the Steamer. Stopped there two Sundays. There, is a little company that are loving the appearing of the Lord, and striving, amidst opposing influences, to travel the narrow way to the kingdom.

June 5th, went to China, had two meetings at the meeting house, Week's Mills. A small remnant is there that are still interested in the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus. June 7th, went to Bolton Hill, four miles east of Augusta, and had an evening meeting,—good attention, some interest to hear. June 8th, had an evening meeting at a school house, two miles from the former place. Evening of the 11th, meeting on the east side of the river,—good attention. June 12th, quite sick. June 13th and 14th, attended a Free-will Baptist quarterly meeting at Augusta. Had some good preaching. Evening of the 14th, a meeting on Sand Hill, in Augusta. At Somerville the 15th, fifteen miles east of Augusta, where I had an evening meeting; had a free time speaking. After I finished, gave liberty, and we had twenty-eight exhortations in quick succession. Our meeting did not last as long as Paul's did, but it did not close very early.

Sunday, the 18th, meeting at the same place; spoke twice, had a social meeting in the evening, baptized two, administered the Lord's supper to those of the Father's children that were ready to partake. Had a good, interesting meeting all day. Hope that some good was done. There have been quite a number reclaimed there within a few months past, and some few converted. Bro. Elbridge Chisam lives there, and takes the lead of the meetings, and is a good helper to the little flock. May the Lord prosper him and them, and may many more there be brought to a knowledge of the truth, that they may be saved. June 19th, meeting at Bro. Elijah Grant's, in Palermo. Five years have passed since I was there before. Many changes have taken place; some have fallen asleep, I trust, in Jesus; some have moved away, and some I fear have been led away by the spirits that have manifested themselves in these last days, in fulfillment of prophecy. May the Lord help them to see the danger, and flee from the snare of the arch enemy, that walketh about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour.

June 21st, at the Richmond meeting, at the Reed school-house, 6 o'clock, P. M. But few out. Had rather a discouraging time. June 22d, sick at Bro. Umberhind's—the pilgrim's home. At Brunswick the 23d. Sunday, 24th, spoke twice at the yellow school-house. Not many out, but good attention. Some are there who are decided to go through to the end. June 25th, at Cumberland, at a school-house. Good number present and good attention. There is quite an interest there of late to hear on the subject of the blessed hope. May the interest increase, till many are led to embrace the truth as it is in Jesus. June 26th, evening, at Yarmouth. Good attention. Bro. York and a Baptist preacher were present; I took a part. At Biddeford the 27th and 28th. Had two meetings,—not a large number present, but good attention. The meeting was at Bro. John Libby's. They have established a meeting, and hired a convenient hall in a central part of the city, and are glad to have preaching brethren visit them and preach the word. June 28th, visited the residence of Bro. Edwin Towne, of Kennebunkport, the home of the lamented Lizzie Towne, who was killed in the fall of the Pemberton Mill. Visited her grave, a few rods from the house, where she sweetly sleeps in Jesus, to awake to immortality when the last trump sounds. Happy morn to all the saints, when loved ones will meet to part no more. The parents feel their loss very sensibly. May the Lord sustain them under this sore affliction, and prepare them for his heavenly kingdom. June 29th, had a meeting at the school-house, in Bro. Towne's district. Had a free time speaking, and good attention. At Kennebunkport the 30th.

Sunday, July 1st, spoke three times at the Advent meeting-house, to attentive congregations. Enjoyed good freedom in speaking, and hope that some good was done in the name of the Lord. July 2d, returned home; found my family as well as usual, for which I desire to be thankful to the Lord. Thus ended five weeks' labor, for which I must give an account at the judgment of the great day, that is near at hand and hasteth greatly. May we all realize it more and more, and live in daily readiness for the solemn event, so that we may hear the Master say, "Well done." Amen.

Lawrence, Mass.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

BRO. GRANT:—By the request of a number of brethren and sisters, I will endeavor to write a few lines for the benefit of the friends of truth; also to give a few "Notes by the way," having just returned home from a short tour. Found a few at my first appointment at Cherry Tree, Venango Co., Pa., that have become interested in the truth. One purchased a Bible of us; also a number of other books. He is one of the many that have become disgusted with the popular preaching, and had neglected the study of the Bible, having but little or no faith in it; but the presentation of truth has awakened in him and others an interest to search the Scriptures. He told me that it was the first time in his life that he could say he was owner of a Bible, and he was past the meridian of life. I am astonished to see how many there are that have become infidels on account of the gross misrepresentation of the Bible.

We found a few at our next appointment—south-west, Warren Co., Pa.,—who begin to see men as trees walking; but there were so many there joined to their idols, that we could not do much in the presentation of truth. Went to our next appointed place of meeting, on the Alleghany river, and found a few friends fixing seats in the grove. It being a very busy time, there were but few out on Saturday, but a tolerably good turn out on Sunday. At the close of the service in the afternoon, Bro. Isaac Jones was baptized. Quite a number in that region are almost persuaded to become christians. In the evening, we had a meeting at the house of Bro. Isaiah Jones. I never shall forget that dear family, and the interest they take in searching the Word, and the care manifested towards us. May the good Lord reward them in the Kingdom, is my prayer.

Although tired and weary, yet on we went over the high hills near the Alleghany river, to our next appointment. There appeared quite an interest in the word preached. Bro. Bush aided in exhortation after our discourses. As he was rather unwell, the preaching was done by myself.

Our next appointment was in Deerfield, Warren Co., Pa., an entirely new place. Bro. B. left us at this place for home. Bro. Jones, of Crawford Co., assisted us in singing and talking the truth in private houses. We found at this place a notice given out for a three days' meeting; and it was one of the most interesting to me; for here I found the people willing to hear, with one or two exceptions. We presented the subject of "Man as he was, is, and will be." Two preachers were present, and one gave notice that he would review me at the close, as I would not answer his questions, etc., when he would speak out in time of preaching—as it was evident all he wanted was to disturb. The last day, we appointed the meeting at an early hour, so as to give him a chance to review us. We had written out three passages of scripture on the blackboard, which seemed to cause him a great deal of trouble; for he raved, and struck with his fists, until he almost obliterated the chalk marks. A gentleman made a remark after the meeting in relation to his actions, saying, the "hand-writing" was as great a trouble to him as to one of old. He undertook to quote a very few passages, but did not quote one right. We think that it will result in good. To our heavenly Father be all the glory. Quite a number were anxious that we should come again. The friends there were not in circumstances to aid us at present, but spoke of the future, believing what the Bible teaches in that respect, that "we should not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn," and "they that preach the gospel should live of the gospel." Two or three spoke of taking the Crisis, and Expositor, but could not just yet. In the morning we started for our next appointment, three miles south of Columbus, Pa. Met quite a company in the evening, and found an interest to hear. They begged hard for us to hold a grove meeting in the neighborhood, which we consented to do. The above are all new places. Saturday evening, met with the little church at Root's settlement, Athens, Crawford Co. Bro. Geo. Bush met us again at this place, and aided in presenting the truth. Sunday morning, met at 9 A. M., for a love-feast and business,—had a good time. At 10 o'clock, Bro. Bush gave us an excellent discourse on "Faith, Hope, and Charity." In the afternoon, at 4 o'clock, spoke to the friends in the Hatch settlement, five miles from Root's. The next morning we started for home.

Here ends one short tour, in which we traveled 157 miles, and were gone from home thirteen days. We preached fourteen times, Bro. Bush once, besides his good exhortations after us. He is young, but is truly gaining, and, if he does his duty, will soon become an able minister. Receipts—cash, $1.50; wool, etc., $1.80. Expenses—21 cts.: broke wagon spring, which will cost me 50 cts. or more. I do not wish to complain, for my receipts were better this time than at some other times. I have thought that I should have to wait awhile; and yet, to see the anxiety manifested in different places, and knowing that the friends have not the means, and feeling that "wo is me if I preach not the gospel," I still go ahead, trusting in the Lord. Hitherto he hath helped me. The harvest is great and the laborers few. Soon Jesus is coming, and what we do must be done quickly. Brethren and sisters, let us all do our duty, whatever it may be. If it is "teaching," then teach; if it is exhortation, then exhort; if it is giving, then do it with simplicity; let all be done for the glory of God. Pray for us, that we may prove ourself sufficient for the task put upon us, and be the means, in the hands of God, of bringing some few to see the truth and obey the same, and be prepared for his coming kingdom. Amen. Yours in hope.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Selections.

Baptism of a Dying Girl.

In Dr. Magoon's church, in Albany, a few Sundays since, a spectacle was witnessed, which for sublimity has rarely been equalled. A young lady of that city—a Miss McKown—long a sufferer from consumption, whose disease had very nearly approached its termination, expressed a desire to baptized. Her friends and Dr. M. endeavored to persuade her against it. Her condition was such that it was feared she had not the strength to withstand the effect of the ordinance. For weeks she had not spoken above a whisper, or been able to walk across her apartment. She still insisted on its performance, and a council of the trustees of the church being called, they consented that the wishes of the dying girl should be carried out. Their decision being made known to her, she requested that her spiritual robes should be made and worn at the baptism. Accordingly on the following Sunday she was conveyed to the church, and after the morning service, preparations were made for her baptism, along with several others. Dr. Magoon announced to the audience—the large church being crowded to suffocation—that they were about to witness the most impressive and sublime spectacle of their lives—the baptism of a young lady whose lamp of life was just flickering in its socket, and whose breath might possibly cease with the ordinance. She was then brought forth, dressed in her grave clothes, and Dr. Magoon picking her up carefully in his arms, carried her into the pool of water. Her white robes were scarcely whiter than her own pale cheeks. With the gentlest motion she was passed under the water, and as she was brought out, her head dropped upon the shoulder of the minister, and amid the tears of hundreds, the murmur ran through the church—"She is dead"—"She is dead." But not so; she still lived, and in answer to an inquiry, said she never was so happy in her life as at that moment. The announcement was then made to the congregation that she was alive, and the revulsion of feeling was of the happiest and most pleasing nature.—Troy Daily Times.

A Warning to Novel Readers.

The following communication, just received, is from the pen of a beloved sister in the Lord, on whom God has bestowed special mercy, in restoring her soul and leading her a second time in paths of righteousness. Let others, taking warning by her example, beware of Satan's traps. We withhold the name of the authoress from motives of delicacy, as her experience was not intended to meet the public eye.—ED.

Mr. Newton, Dear Sir:—Think me not bold in writing this letter to you, my heart is full and I long to tell you how much I thank you for that visit. You remember, perhaps, that I was reading one of those "literary serpents" when you came in. You told me that it would be the ruination of my soul if I did not give it up. Too well I know your words were true, and I blush to think that I, who had professed to know a Savior's love, should have yielded to temptation, and given myself and my time to such reading.

Your words sink deep in my heart when you told me not to bring reproach on my Savior;—they have haunted me in my silent hours. When I have had time to think, and when I would seek my bed at night, I could not pray; for well I knew that I was serving some other master besides my Savior. I knew I was bringing reproach on my Savior. I have been a professor of religion nearly three years; I was fourteen years of age when I first enlisted in the good way; I loved my Savior and felt that he owned me for his child, but for five or six months I had been growing cold and neglected my duties. I commenced taking three weekly papers, the New York "Ledger," "Weekly," and "Mercury;" I lost all interest in my prayer-meetings and finally staid away from them entirely! I gave myself up to those papers; I could not do any kind of work till I had read them. When you left your papers ("The Golden Rule,") I did not think I should read them, but my best friend, Jesus, had not forgotten me after all my backslidings; he alone it was that put it into my heart to read your papers. Oh! how they spoke to me in language stronger than words! I think it wholly through their influence that I am found kneeling again to a slighted Savior, an humble supplicant at his feet.

P. S.—Pardon me for the liberty I have taken in writing, but I felt that I must tell you how much good your paper was doing for me. Oh! speak more earnestly, if possible, against those wicked papers; there are hundreds of young folks that are being led away by them in the same way that I have been. Permit me to subscribe myself, your friend in the Lord.—Golden Rule.

[We take pleasure in recommending the Golden Rule to our readers. Address David F. Newton, Ed., Box 1212, N. Y.—ED.

An Appeal to the Smoker.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Act upon a nobler plan;
Rise, assist with honest pride
Mind's dominion over man.

Throw the tempting pipe away—
Bend not to its base control;
Rend the chords which sense has tied
Round the fibres of the soul.

Throw the tempting pipe aside,
What though passion's plea be strong;
For thyself the right decide—
Be not governed by the throng.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Wage not with thy system war;
Nature slighted and defied,
Will avenge her broken law.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Know thy rank in nature's scale;
Man to angel is allied,
Let not the resemblance fail.

Throw the tempting pipe aside—
Nerve thy soul and bend thy will;
Vow—and then whate'er betide,
Faithfully thy vow fulfill.

Fashionable Women.

Fashion kills more women than toil and sorrow. Obedience to fashion is a greater transgression of the laws of woman's nature, a greater injury to her physical and mental constitution, than the hardships of poverty and neglect. The slave woman at her tasks will live and grow old and see two or three generations of her mistresses fade and pass away. The washer-women, with scarce a ray of hope to cheer her in her toils, will live to see her fashionable sisters all die around her. The kitchen-maid is hearty and strong, when her lady has to be nursed like a sick baby. It is a sad truth that fashion-pampered women are almost worthless for all the great ends of human life. They have but little force of character; they have still less power of moral will, and quite as little physical energy. They live for no great purpose in life; they accomplish no worthy ends. They are only doll-forms in the hands of milliners and servants, to be dressed and fed to order. They dress nobody; they feed nobody; they instruct nobody; they bless nobody; and save nobody. They write no books; they set no rich examples of virtue and womanly life. If they rear children, servants and nurses do all, save to conceive and give them birth. And when reared what are they? What do they ever amount to, but weaker scions of the old stock? Who ever heard of a fashionable woman's child exhibiting any virtue or power of mind for which it became eminent? Read the biographies of our great and good men and women. Not one of them had a fashionable mother. They nearly all sprang from strong-minded women, who had about as little to do with fashion as with the changing clouds.

Useful Information.

The washerwomen of Holland and Belgium, so proverbially clean, and who get up their linen so beautifully white, use refined borax as a washing powder, instead of soda, in the proportion of a large handful of borax powders to about ten gallons of boiling water. All the large washing establishments adopt the same mode. For laces, cambric, etc., an extra quantity of the powder is used, and for crinolines, (required to be made very stiff,) a strong solution is necessary. Borax being a neutral salt, does not in the slightest degree injure the texture of the linen; its effect is to soften the hardest water, and therefore it should be kept on every toilet table. To the taste it is rather sweet, is used for cleaning the hair, is an excellent dentrifice, and in hot countries is used with tartaric acid and bicarbonate of soda as a cooling beverage. Good tea cannot be made from hard water; all water can be made soft by adding a tea-spoonful of borax powder to an ordinary sized kettle of water, in which it should boil. The saving in the quantity of tea used will be at least one-half.—Scientific American.

TO PREVENT METALS FROM RUSTING.—Melt together three parts of lard and one of rosin. A very thin coat will preserve Russia iron, stoves and grates from rusting during summer, even in damp situations. The effect is equally good on brass, copper, steel, etc. The same compound forms an excellent water-proof paste for leather. Boots, when treated with it, will soon after take the usual polish when blacked.

☞ When we are alone, we have our thoughts to watch; in the family our tempers; in company our tongues.

Making Sermons.

Rev. J. B. Simmons, a Baptist minister of Indianapolis, writing on this subject says: "First. If you have a printed book of plans and skeletons, throw it into the fire. Secondly. If you have a blank book in which you have collected the plans of sermons you have heard other ministers preach, throw that in the fire too. Thirdly. If you have been in the habit of picking your sermons up from scraps, and newspapers, and books, stop it. Fourthly. If you have been in the habit of reading printed sermons a good many times over and then attempting to preach them, stop that. Get your Bible, fix on a passage, sit down to it, and begin reading the passage over and over again. Study every verse thoroughly, and select the verse you wish to use for a text. Of this verse study not only every sentence, but every clause and every word most diligently. Look out the meaning of the individual words especially. Note down on paper whatever thoughts occur to you during this effort. Avoid commentators, except for the meaning of obscure clauses or phrases; and even then, only use them after, not before you have sucked out of the passage all you can by your own effort. If you take this course, your thoughts will be mainly both rich and original. They will please yourself, and of course excite you to additional thought. Having worked on in this way for six, twelve, or fifteen hours of hard and prayerful study, being careful to write down all the thoughts that occur to you as you go on, you will find that you have collected a mass of thought sufficient to make three, perhaps five sermons. But do not make three of five. Make only one. Out of this accumulation of thought select the choicest and best, arrange them under proper headings in one sermon. If you write on only one side of single leaves, which is an excellent plan, you can throw much of your matter into sermon form without re-writing. Imbue your soul with your theme by going prayerfully over it several times; then rising from your knees in your closet, hasten to the pulpit, and try to preach as though you never expected to address your hearers again."—N. O. Advocate.

FIRE-PROOF.—Take whitewash and alum, in the proportion of one pound of the latter to one gallon of the former, and give your roofs, or other wood exposed to taking fire, one or two coats, and hot coals will have no more effect than ice on it.

Hygiene.

"THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

Twelve Ways of Shortening Life.

1. Wearing of thin shoes and cotton stockings on damp nights and in cool, rainy weather. Wearing insufficient clothing, and especially upon the limbs and extremities.

2. Leading a life of unfeeling, stupid laziness, and keeping the mind in an unnatural state of excitement by reading trashy novels. Going to theatres, parties and balls in all sorts of weather, in the thinnest possible dress. Dancing till in a complete perspiration, and then going home without sufficient over-garments through the cool, damp air.

3. Sleeping in feather beds in seven-by-nine bedrooms, without ventilation at the top of the windows, and especially with two or more persons in the same unventilated bedroom.

4. Surfeiting on hot and very stimulating dinners. Eating in a hurry, without half masticating your food, and eating heartily just before going to bed every night, when the mind and body are exhausted by the toils of the day and the excitement of the evening.

5. Beginning in childhood on tea and coffee, and going from one step to another, through chewing and smoking tobacco, and drinking intoxicating liquors, by personal abuse and physical excesses of every description.

6. Marrying in haste and getting an uncongenial companion, and living the remainder of life in mental dissatisfaction. Cultivating jealousies and domestic broils, and being always in mental ferment.

7. Keeping children quiet by giving paragoric and cordials; by teaching them to suck candy, and by supplying them with raisins, nuts, and rich cake. When they are sick, by giving them mercury, tartar emetic, and arsenic, under the mistaken notion that they are medicines, and not irritant poisons.

8. Allowing the love of gain to absorb our minds, so as to leave no time to attend to our health. Following an unhealthy occupation because money can be made by it.

9. Tempting the appetite with bitters and niceties, when the stomach says, No, and by forcing food when nature does not demand, and even rejects it. Gormandizing between meals. Using tobacco and stimulants.

10. Contriving to keep a continual worry about something or nothing. Giving way to fits of anger.

11. Being irregular in all our habits of eating and sleeping; going to bed at midnight and getting up at noon. Eating too much and too many kinds of food, and that which is too highly seasoned.

12. Neglecting to take proper care of ourselves, and not applying early for medicinal advice when disease first appears. Taking celebrated quack medicines to a degree of making a drug-shop of the body.

The above causes produce more sickness, suffering and death than all the epidemics, malaria, and contagion combined with war, pestilence, and famine. Nearly all who have attained to old age have been remarkable for equanimity of temper, correct habits of diet, drink, and rest—for temperance, cheerfulness, and morality. Physical punishment is sure to visit the transgressor of nature's laws. All commit suicide, and cut off many years of their natural life, who do not observe the means for preventing disease and of preserving health.

Uses of Ice.

In health no one ought to drink ice water, for it has occasioned fatal inflammations of the stomach and bowels, and sometimes sudden death. The temptation to drink it is very great in summer; to use it with any safety the person should take but a single swallow at a time, take the glass from the lips for half a minute, and then another swallow, and so on. It will be found that in this way it becomes disagreeable after a few mouthfuls.

On the other hand, ice itself may be taken as freely as possible, not only without injury but with the most striking advantage in dangerous forms of disease. If broken in pieces of the size of a pea or a bean, and swallowed as freely as practicable, without much chewing or crushing between the teeth, it will often be efficient in checking various kinds of diarrhea, and has cured violent cases of Asiatic cholera.

A kind of cushion and powdered ice kept to the entire scalp, has allayed violent inflamations of the brain, and arrested fearful convulsons induced by too much blood there.

Water, as cold as ice can make it, applied freely to the throat, neck and chest with a sponge or cloth, very often affords an almost miraculous relief, and if this be followed by drinking copiously of the same ice-cold element, the wetted parts wiped dry, and the child be wrapped up well in the bed clothes, it falls into a delightful and life-giving slumber.

All inflamations, internal or external, are promptly subdued by the application of ice or ice water, because it is converted into steam and rapidly conveys away the extra heat, and also diminishes the quantity of blood in the vessels of the part.

A piece of ice laid on the wrist will often arrest violent bleeding of the nose.

To drink any ice-cold liquid at meals retards digestion, chills the body, and has been known to induce the most dangerous internal congestions.

Refrigerators constructed on the plan of Bartlett's, are as philosophical as they are healthful, for the ice does not come in contact with the water or other contents, yet keeps them all perfectly as cool.

If ice is put in milk or on butter, and these are not used at the time, they lose their freshness and become sour and stale, for the essential nature of both is changed, when once frozen and then thawed.—Journal of Health.

A Drunkard's Brain.

Hyrtl, by far the greatest anatomist of the age, used to say that he could distinguish in the darkest room, by one stroke of the scalpel, the brain of the inebriate from that of the person who had lived soberly. Now and then he would congratulate his class upon the possession of a drunkard's brain, admirably fitted, from its hardness, and more complete preservation, for the purpose of demonstration. When the anatomist wishes to preserve a human brain for any length of time, he effects his object by keeping that organ in a vessel of alcohol. From a soft, pulpy substance, it then becomes comparatively hard; but the inebriate, anticipating the antagonist, begins the indurating process before death. Terrible enchantment that dries up all the fountains of generous feelings, petrifies all the humanities and sweet charities of life, leaving only a brain of lead and a heart of stone."—Boston Med. Journal.

A Fact Worth Knowing.

It may not be generally known, that when a person is drowning, if he be taken by the arm from behind, between the elbow and the shoulder, he cannot touch the person attempting to save him, and whatever struggles he may make will only assist the person holding him in keeping his head above water, and a good swimmer can keep a man thus above the water for an hour. If seized any where else, the probability is that he will clutch the swimmer, and perhaps, as is often the case, both will be drowned.

A GOOD THING.—The Golden Salve, prepared by C. P. Whitten, is demonstrated to be a good thing. We have used it in a variety of ailments, and find it acts like a charm. We wish always to keep it as a present relief for many of the ills that flesh is heir to.

J. B. COOK.

FRUITS.—Dr Kennicott says:—"The free use of ripe fruits not only prevents disease, but their regulated enjoyments helps to remove that which already exists. All ripe fruits are more or less nutritious. Prof. Salisbury has clearly demonstrated that the apple is superior to the potato, in the principles that go to increase the muscle and the brain of man, and in fattening properties it is nearly equal, when cooked for swine, or fed to other domestic animals."

THE TEETH.—Chemical analysis shows that "tartar" on the teeth is the product of a living insect, upon which neither vinegar nor tobacco juice has any effect, but which is instantly destroyed by soapsuds; hence the Journal recommends plain white soap as the best dentrifice.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	[illegible]
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they live, and direct to ELD. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents a year to any part of the United States.

[illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 262. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1860. | VOL. XII. NO. 3.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

AT

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth: especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Man.

BY F. T. KANSFIELD.

Is man so great a mystery as theologians teach?
Possessing other entities the eye can never reach?
The outer man of dust was made, in which they all agree,
And in this house there dwells a soul and spirit, making three?

By this arrangement, don't you see a triune man appears?
Mysterious as a three-one-God, whose center's everywhere?
For in the outer man there dwells the mystic man—
the soul;
Also, a third or spirit-man, which makes the compact whole.

Soon body-man returns to dust; the spirit-man to God;
The soul-man down to hell is cast to writhe in fire
and flood;
So must Cain for six thousand years in these conditions dwell;
One Cain in dust,—one Cain with God,—the other
Cain in hell!

Woodstock, McHenry Co., Ill.

For the Crisis.

Unity.

When inspiration calls the attention of the human family to look upon any particular object, whether it be a pleasing one or the opposite, it is always for the moral benefit of those addressed; therefore, inattention to such a call, from such a source, is positive demonstration of the most foolish improvidence, and should be reckoned in the catalogue of the sins of "neglect," which, according to the Apostle's teaching, incurs the fearful malediction of heaven.

In the 133d Psalm, the writer designates no particular class of the family of man; therefore, it is obvious, when compared with other Scriptures, that both saints and sinners are called upon to gaze on a scene not only beautiful and pleasing to the senses, but calculated to promote the highest good of the beholders. Says the sweet singer of Israel, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." At first he would only attempt to fix the mind upon the sublime spectacle, without any particular explanation or comparison; as much as to say, if I can only establish the attention upon a scene so beautiful and lovely, it will so completely ravish the beholder, as to inspire the desire at once to become one of the number whose very appearance casts so sweet and salutary an influence over all who are favored with the sight.

"How good!" How natural the expression. When we have participated in any superior excellency, either moral or physical, with congenial associates, what expression so natural to address to each other, when taking a retrospective view of the same, as "How good!" it was! The superlative adjectives may be employed to those outside the delightful entertainment, but is not sufficiently social for familiars like David and Jonathan. What saint can gaze upon so lovely a scene as is here presented, without feeling new aspirations to be made a partaker of the Divine nature, and determinately suppress every selfish and captious emotion that shall presume to deface the bright tablet of a christian heart? When such a scene has made an indelible impression upon the mental vision of a disciple of Christ, "peace and good will to man" will appear a most prominent insignia of his character; hence he will make use of every laudable means to promote that union which is strength indeed to the church of God. He had rather bear the flag of truce, than insert the tiniest wedge to dissever the "unity" of brethren. He will rather suffer long, than gratify self, when aware he by thus doing may cast one spot upon, or in any measure mar the lovely picture presented by the Eternal to the ken of mortals. He will exhibit christian courtesy while filling the different stations assigned by Providence. To superiors he is reverential; to equals and inferiors is affable, practicing self-denial to render them happy, and thus promote that "unity" that insures the high encomiums of heaven. He will by no means press what God has not enforced, especially, where he sees disunion among brethren is likely to be the result. He considers no service too menial that shall promote "unity" among brethren. If necessity require, he does not consider it at all derogatory to his dignity to wash his brother's feet.—John 13th. He sees what must be apparent to all, that in order to dwell together in unity, much christian forbearance must be exercised; and all desirous of maintaining this agreeable state of things must heed the apostle's admonition, "Yea, all of you be subject one to another."

The other class of the human family,—who know not God, are also called to behold the goodly picture of "brethren dwelling together in unity," as an inducement to make choice of that blessed Spirit that teaches you to love one another here; and if secured in time, will be a passport to introduce you where every being will welcome you with acclamations of immortal love.

Again, when your eyes are permitted to behold this heavenly picture, recollect this is proof positive that Christ has true disciples on the earth, and this is the distinctive feature by which you may know the fact. Read Christ's words,—"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Now when your senses witness the existence of such a class, conviction must force itself upon you, however skeptical you may have been. Though the great mass professing Christianity exhibit the opposite characteristics, just as inspiration informs us they would do in the last days, still Christ has a "little flock," so small perhaps as to escape your notice, yet they are extant. Now please condescend to take a more humble position, and see if you cannot discern a little company who love one another well enough to dwell together in unity. And if you will look at the likeness inspiration has pleased to draw of those "dwellers in unity," you will see it is pertinent indeed, as are all heaven's comparisons. Says the Psalmist, "It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments." In order to understand the force of this likeness, we should turn to Ex. 30 : 23, 24, where we shall find the recipe for this compound, or perfumery, which was poured in such profusion upon the head of Aaron as to run down upon the skirts of his garments. This ointment, or perfumery, being composed of the "principal spices," each in itself highly odoriferous, must, when compounded after the art of the apothecary, or perfumer, emit the highest fragrance; and when used in such abundance, could not fail to agreeably affect all who came near. Perhaps all have not considered how much an agreeable affection of the olfactories contributes to the pleasure of our being.

Just enter an apartment where every thing may be pleasant to the other senses, the eye, the ear, etc., and at that moment let some very disagreeable exhalations, either from decayed animal or vegetable substances, present themselves to your sense of smell, and you at once feel very unpleasant, and very likely an involuntary scowl will cloud your visage, and you no longer wish to gratify your auditory and optic nerves at the expense of your olfactories. On the other hand, enter the second apartment, where there is nothing particular to gratify the eye or ear, but at the same time a sweet odor greets your sense of smell, and you involuntarily smile, feel quite agreeable, good natured, etc. Quite similar is the effect upon one who beholds "brethren dwelling together in unity." The witnessing this scene produces not only a most agreeable and cheering sensation, but its effect is highly conducive to spiritual health and progress. Then if the effect of beholding this heavenly picture is so salutary, will not all try to increase the number? Every one can do something in this direction. But where this heavenly portrait already exists, how careful should all be about casting one spot or defacing it in the least! It surely must be a most fearful work to mar a portrait heaven has been at the expense of drawing, and one on which it is obvious such value is set.

Again, the Psalmist employs another comparison relative to these dwellers in unity, which is the dew upon Mount Hermon, which travelers inform us is very copious; so much so that it feritlizes the earth, causing it to bring forth to its inhabitants.

Then, according to the last mentioned similitude, this class are really necessary to the promotion of spiritual life. As Mt. Hermon would have yielded but little or nothing for the service of man without these copious dews, so the world would present a moral sterility bereft of this heavenly picture. Look at the phase of spiritual affairs where the opposite picture exists, and you may be able to form some idea of what would be the effect if there were none existing in the world. Surely there must be a moral famine. Then, mortals, steadfastly behold the picture to which heaven calls your attention; get it indelibly fixed on the heart, and in so doing receive the benefit accruing from obedience to heaven's call.

BEULAH MATHEWSON.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Endurance.

How much there is contained in this word, the past history of this world plainly declares. Read the profane history of Rome, and on almost every page there is written endurance. The people of those times prided themselves on their powers of physical endurance. It was to them a virtue of no mean character to suffer the most excruciating of torments. They would contend with wild beasts, the most ferocious on account of their hungry condition; they would present these things as proofs of the noblest traits of character man could possess. The like spirit has not been confined to Rome. Go to Mexico; see there the gladiatorial exhibitions of endurance. Again view the superstitious Hindoo; how he will subject himself to all manner of tortures; and what for? In the case of the Romans and Mexicans, it was simply an exhibition of strength and brute courage; in that of the Hindoo, it is more often to appease the wrath of his offended Deity. In fact, we have no necessity to go to any of the above named places to discover this manifest characteristic of flesh and blood; it is in our midst. Read of the pugilistic encounters of men of our own times and nation. It is for the amount of endurance they are able to perform, they obtain the prize.

Let us leave those who manifest this kind of endurance, and go into the busy walks of every day life. What here do we observe? Endurance. Go into the shop of the mechanic, and look upon the sturdy son of labor; and what do we observe? Endurance. Go where you will, be where you may, we cannot fail to see the necessity of some kind of endurance. Endurance is primarily a necessity; secondly, it becomes a choice, as I have shown; but the circumstances leading to the choice, be they good or bad, are what I have here to do with.

We are born into this world physically and intellectually incapable of doing but little, very little, that is of an enduring character; the most helpless of all, is the son of man,—dependent, wholly so; yet, to to hear the boasted immortality of this worm talked of, we might think, did not the Scriptures inform us to the contrary, that it was even so, as a certain poet has said,—"a worm, a god." Well, seeing, as we have reason to be thankful for, that man, made up of "body, soul and spirit," (as it is once expressed in the word of truth,) is so mean a creature in his composition, and so entirely dependent upon the mercy of those around him, it becomes a necessity that he should have powers of endurance; and this has been provided him; and in the ratio that these powers are used, in the same do they grow.

Having looked at man in his natural condition, and seen what he is, and may be; I will now turn to him, and see if he bears the same relation to God as his son, as he does to Adam the first as his son. The apostle Paul has said, when giving Timothy, his son in the gospel, a charge as a soldier of Jesus Christ,,—"endure hardness." Now Timothy, you have enlisted under the banner of Jesus Christ; you'll get your pay some day; but you'll have to endure even hardness. You will, in all probability, have to suffer privations of a severe character; yet I, as the ambassador of Jesus Christ, assure you you'll get your reward; therefore "endure." The Lord has promised, he will not fail. Well, this is encouraging, truly; but, brother Paul, how am I to get this pay, and when? Two very significant questions to be put, and natural ones, too. Well, Timothy, as you ask these questions, I'll answer them. I desire you should keep before you this fact: you have enlisted, and I call upon you for the love of the King and country you will fight for, be faithful. I repeat what I have before said, endure. You are aware that the requirements of an army are, first, believe your commander; i. e., that he means just what he says. When he says, "shoulder arms," he does not mean "carry arms." No; I want you to be very careful of this. Obey orders, is the next thing for you to do; and see that you do it willingly, as a "good soldier." The Captain, you know, is seated on a horse; he can see when you cannot. The smoke of the battle field may obscure your further march; yet, if the word is "march"—march! The result is with him. So of the captain under whom you have engaged to fight. The way may appear dark—very dark; yet be assured of the all-seeing ability of your commander. I tell you, "endure;" if the contest is hot and heavy, it will not be long. But, Timothy, I desire to answer your questions. You have not joined this army without knowing something of Him under whom you fight. You have from a child known those writings which have enlightened your mind and prepared you for this step. Well, "God, who cannot lie," has promised to all who have a faith like unto Abraham, declared by God as the father of many nations, and as I have said that all who have the same faith as he did they shall be blessed when he is. You have asked, "when," and "how?" The "when" is at the time the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven; and the "how" is by a resurrection of the dead, or by a "change." He has the power to effect this change from "mortality to immortality." I know whereof I affirm in this matter, and therefore do I speak. Now, my son Timothy, endure; for you know what a great reward is yours, if you prove a faithful and valiant warrior. I have endured all things for the elect's sake; and it is a faithful saying, that if we be dead, or suffer death for Christ's sake, we shall live with him, and reign with him. "Thou hast made us unto our God, kings and priests, and we shall" (yet future) "reign on the earth." Now, Timothy, see to it that you endure; see to it that you overcome; see to it that though the enemy may for a time conquer you, you will conquer him; you'll yet have the power so to do, and the song yet to sing in its fullest strain of glory, "I have fought my way through."

From the foregoing remarks, it is self-evident that, in order to contend against all opposition, and to "so run that we might win," we have to be established with a good physical constitution, if we would secure an earthly prize; for, should we attempt to contend for earthly honor, fame or glory, and the attaining of the same is dependent on our powers of endurance, how essential this pre-requisite becomes; so, if we would attain the prize of eternal life with eternal honor and glory, we have to be faithful to the laws of spiritual life. A proper use of all the faculties of the mind is to be made. We have to know how to use the good G[illegible] has provided. "Every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" is the bread which is to be our support; hence the necessity of knowing what are the words of God, and how they are to be used. Show me a man whose faith and life are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone," and I'll show you a man that will endure, yes, the scorching heat of opposition may pour its most direct rays upon him, and he'll not wilt under it; he'll flourish and grow strong. Yea, let the violent storm of adversity descend upon him, he'll not be moved; his faith is built upon a Rock, and in the end he will be able to show what it is to have "a faith that will not shrink." Be admonished, you who are ready to fall by the way; you who have toiled and struggled amid the "fiery darts of the enemy," be encouraged and faint not; "the Judge standeth before the door." "The triumphing of the wicked is short." It is his time now, but it will not always be so. David prayed, "Let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end." "In the name of the Lord, I (Jesus) will destroy them," Ps. 118 : 11—a prophecy for Christ. Jesus said, "all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning me." And it will be fulfilled; as true as God lives, he will not alter one word that has gone out of his mouth.

Fight on, then; keeping your armor well polished, your sword ever ready to strike, your feet well shod, that you may run and not be weary, walk and not faint; and a crown of life is laid up at the end of the contest. "So run that ye may obtain." It is a glorious prize; it's an ever sparkling crown. Age will not lessen its lustre. It is worth more than it will cost you. It is yours, if you will only stretch out your hand and receive it. ALL things are yours if you ENDURE to the end.

G. W. Y.

For the Crisis.

I can but Weep, yet rest in Hope.

When I consult my own heart, and find how sadly I am in want of the spirit of Him "who, when he was reviled, reviled not again;" that "if compelled to go a mile," could not, I fear, "go" in the spirit of Christ, "twain;" or, "if sued at the law," losing my "coat," could not freely "give my cloak also;" or, "if smitten on one cheek," could not meekly "turn the other also,"—I can but weep.

When I attempt to proclaim "the truth as it is in Jesus," and find myself laboring under "the plague of an evil heart of unbelief," insomuch that, "though to will is present with me, yet how to perform that which is good I find not," but find myself worshiping God, not so much in the spirit, as in the truth, and those who "come in" as the fruits of my labors, bearing the same marks,—I can but weep.

When I remember how abundantly the power of God was manifest in prayer meetings years ago, and not only the "power," but the love, simplicity, fervor and earnestness which marked the exercises on those occasions; and behold now the reluctance with which brethren meet for prayer, and the disposition to treat the exercises as a duty—a burden, rather than a privilege—the majority neglecting them altogether, or acting as mere spectators,—I can but weep.

When I reflect that those who preached in former days would aim at sin, and especially the sins of those who should be listening, accounting it sin in them not to rebuke sin; and behold how prone are teachers now to touch only on "those things on which all are agreed," lest they shall be accounted "fault finders," and continue "daubing with untempered mortar," while the moral canker is gnawing at the very vitals of their hearers, and their destruction immediately impending,—I can but weep.

When I behold how infidelity is o'erspreading our land like a flood, supported by a wonderful display of miraculous power, opposed by none of the world and but few of the professed church, while friends on the right and left are daily smitten with its deadly sting, and no one says, "why do ye so,"—I can but weep.

But, when I read that "the wicked shall do wickedly," and also that "the wise shall understand,"—I rest in hope.

When I read that, though all slumber and sleep following the disappointment, they should yet arise and trim their lamps before the bridegroom comes,—I rest in hope.

When I read concerning the time immediately preceding the Lord's coming, "Here are they that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus,"—I rest in hope.

I. K. LOMBARD.

E. Stoneham, Me.

For the Crisis.

Evening and Morning Visions of Daniel.

MR. EDITOR:—With your permission, I would like to present your readers a short series of brief articles on the very important distinction between the two visions of the prophet Daniel, as he says, "The visit of the evening and morning are true."

I have no wish to controvert any cherished theory, my only aim being to mark such important distinctions and necessary connections as will induce all to examine candidly the words of the prophet, rather than be led by the opinions of uninspired men.

The fact that Geography is as necessarily inseparably connected with, and as essential to, a right understanding of prophecy, as history and chronology, may have been admitted by some, but of too little practical bearing on the minds of most. The predictions of Daniel and John, especially, have a definite locality, as well as order of time.

But my present object is to notice, what the oversight of all, or nearly all, the most distinguished English and American writers on prophecy have omitted; or, what is worse, they have confounded distinctions, and blended events, so as to obscure and confuse the minds of students. For instance, the two visions of Daniel, for he had but two grand outlines, (the last or morning vision being filled in detail at different interviews with the angel), which are generally confounded; whereas, each vision has a different location, different numbers and time of beginning; different "little horns," i. e., systems of religious imposture, and different and distinct periods of termination. Thus regarded, the whole becomes delightfully clear and instructive.

The great outlines of the evening vision are drawn in the 7th chap., and the other, or morning vision, in the 8th; the filling up of the latter in detail, follow in the remaining chapters of the book. Corresponding with the first vision of the 7th, is the dream of Nebuchadnezzar in the 2d chap., which Daniel interpreted three years after being carried into Babylon—48 years previous to his own first vision.

The emblems of the two, though identical in meaning, are widely different in their aspect. To the earthly mind of this ambitious prince, the four great empires were represented by the four parts of a magnificent image; but to the devout mind of Daniel, by four wild and voracious beasts.

As to the time assigned to the power of these four empires, we shall find, in the sequel, to be "seven times," or 2520 years. The time allotted to the morning vision, is 2300 years; or, in the words of the angel, "unto two thousand three hundred days,"—prophetical days of course.

As before observed, the first outline of the morning vision was given in the 8th chap. It was only two years after the first, but it anticipated fifteen years, as the scene was laid at Shushan, the capital of Persia, while Daniel was in Babylon. After the Persian empire was established on the ruins of the Babylonian, and Daniel was transferred, and made an officer in the Persian court, the angel was sent to give him the full detail, or to fill up the outline given several years before. He says, "I am now come to make thee understand the vision."

But I will close by repeating the pledge of brevity, and promising to be concise as possible, and to make the proof of each assumption ample.

D. C.

A Song of Praise.

Can birds in spring refuse to sing,
And give their Maker praise,
While they can see, from bush and tree,
The goodness of his ways?

Can humble vines and lofty pines
Receive the summer showers,
And not their praise of glory raise
In evening's silent hour?

Can sunny field neglect to yield
Its verdure ever green,
For him who gave the rills that love
The lovely hills between?

Can mount or vale accept the gale
Their guardian angels bring,
And not in song, both loud and long,
The Giver's praises ring?

How, then, shall we in silence be
Before our gracious Lord,
Who giveth all, both great and small,
The blessings of his word?

"Watch!"

"Watch ye, therefore. . . . And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch!"—MARK 13: 35.

Who of all men in the world most need this exhortation? The christian. Why?

1. Because he is a soldier, surrounded by enemies who are waiting to destroy his soul. They are ready to take advantage of his carelessness or neglect of duty; they are vigilant; they are numerous; they are subtile. Therefore he should watch.

2. Because he is a pilgrim, traveling through a hostile land. There may be snares in his way; stones, over which he may stumble; pits, into which he may fall; enemies, who would strive to make him linger on his way, and lure him from his heavenly home. Therefore he must watch.

3. Because he is a steward. He has precious treasures to take care of—his own soul, his talents, his time, his Master's honor. He must take care that he does not lose the first, misuse the second, waste the third, and endanger the fourth. Therefore he need to watch.

4. Because he is a servant. His Lord is now absent; his return is uncertain; it may be years hence; but it may be to-night. When he comes back he will expect all to be in readiness for his reception—each one at his post, each one looking out for him. Therefore the christian must watch.

Christian reader! you are a soldier—you have entered Christ's army by your profession; his enemies are yours; his cause is yours. Are you watching?

Christian reader! you are a pilgrim—you confess that earth is not your home, that you are dwelling here but for a time; you know that you are surrounded with dangers. Are you watching?

Christian reader! you are a steward. Christ has given precious treasures into your possession. Are you watching?

Christian reader! you are a servant—you profess to be expecting the return of your Lord. Are you watching? Your Captain, your Lord, your Master says to you, "Watch!" and pronounces you "blessed" if you watch. Rev. 16 : 15.—Friendly Visitor.

For the Crisis.

"Know Thyself."

They are strongest, who know their weakness; they are humblest, who know their guilt; they are safest, who know their danger; they are wisest, who know their ignorance. The truest, and by far the rarest knowledge, is a knowledge of ourselves. Says one, "Man, know thyself; all wisdom centres there." A thorough knowledge of our need, our deficiences, and our capabilities, is a good main-spring to pure ambition, and a sure forerunner of greatness. While ignorance of self might lead us to assume a position for which we are unqualified, self-knowledge would have an opposite tendency, and might save us the mortification of discovering that we had been "thinking of ourselves more highly than we ought to think." Many might save themselves the disgrace of taking a lower seat, had they known their unfitness to fill a higher one. Not that our aims should be low; they should be high, the higher the better. The danger is, that instead of raising our actions to a high standard of excellence, we lower our standard down to the level of our actions. Yet while our banner bears the motto "Excelsior," let us not forget that in every position there is an A B C department. Superiority in any department is gained "step by step." The adventurous rope-walker at Niagara did not, with all his presumption, run so fearful a risk without having practiced rope-walking in safer positions. A knowledge of the frailty of human nature in general, and of our own nature in particular, might teach us caution. The full radiance of the noon-day sun does not burst suddenly on "the path of the just," but we read that it "shineth more and more unto the perfect day." We must "grow in grace."

Self-exaltation and undue self-esteem are cradled in the lap of ignorance, and the first dawning of a pure intellect is a death-blow to each of them. A fool is always a professor of universal knowledge; considering himself to have attained already the highest point of excellence, he is of course stationary. On the other hand, we often see persons whose intellectual powers, though naturally good, have been dwarfed for want of exercise, brought down to the level of baser surroundings. Indolence, it is true, is most frequently the cause of persons choosing a position below their capabilities; yet ignorance of self is one great reason why the intellectual attainments of some are always at a stand-still, while, under the genial influence of a proper degree and kind of exercise, they might be daily on the increase.

There is no position so favorable to intellectual growth as one in which every attainment is but an eminence from whence we view higher good, yet to be striven for; and higher paths, yet untrodden. Knowledge of self, being the prompter to ambition for mental excellence, as well as a guide to its attainment, is then, as says the poet, "the centre of all wisdom;" and from this centre springs a desire to cultivate what graces we have not, and increase those that we have; and this desire brings forth fruit in the form of a cultivated mind and heart.

The generality of people are better acquainted with every body else than with themselves. We sometimes seem almost blinded to our motives, when others can discover them. Our own trials and conflicts are indeed known only to ourselves and to our God; for "the heart knoweth its own bitterness, and a stranger intermeddleth not therewith." Often smiles are but a veil for tears, and a glad voice screens a bleeding heart. Yet of the moral quality of our actions, others are sometimes the best judges; and so says Burns:

"O had some power the gift to gie us,
To see our-sel as others see us!"

Such a sight might bring down many a lofty head. With true disinterestedness we forget the beam in our own eye, while we are much concerned about the mote in our brother's eye. This unselfishness is strikingly evinced under the preaching of a close-cutting, practical sermon, when each will be engaged in fitting the cap upon a neighbor's head; and Mr. A.'s heart will swell with the benevolent hope that Mr. B. will be convinced of his error and reform accordingly. We need not be afraid that, by taking all the good advice we need to ourselves, we shall rob our neighbor of his share.

At the close of the last supper, when Jesus was about to "make his soul an offering for sin," he turned upon his disciples with the sad and startling announcement, "One of you shall betray me!" What consternation must have filled the hearts of the little band at these words; and what distrust of self is implied in the question they ask! "Lord, is it I?" Had they lived in these latter days of Pharisaical pride, John might have said, "Lord, is it Peter?" and Peter might have said, "Lord is it Thomas?" For there are, in these days, very few who possess the spirit indicated by a remark a friend once made, in speaking of a practical sermon,—"I did not need to ask 'Is it I?' for I knew it was." On such a spirit, good advice, kindly given, is never wasted.

Self-knowledge is the stepping-stone to reform; and experience is the best text-book to be used in acquiring that knowledge. There is nothing that so thoroughly engrafts lessons of wisdom upon our hearts as experience. We need to feel the pain and languor of disease as a token of our mortal natures, ere we can read our pledge of immortality in the wounded side of Him upon whom is the "chastisement of our peace." 'Tis only when the destroyer enters our own circle that we realize, what the death-knell of thousands to whom we are indifferent might fail to teach us, how easily the "silver cord is loosed," and how deep the gloom that shrouds the "valley of the shadow of death." We need to feel the stroke of the chastening rod, ere the Hand that held it can apply to us the balm of healing.

We need to feel the effects of a fall, ere we know how weak we are, and in whom our true strength lies. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Peter, over-rating his own strength, said to Jesus, "Though all men are offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended!" and that very night broke his vows of allegiance, denied the thorn-crowned heir to David's throne, saying, "I know not the man." When we trust to ourselves, God will allow us to fall that we may know that "in the Lord Jehovah" is alone found "everlasting strength." May the Lord teach us to know ourselves and our weakness; to know Him and his strength; and to know Jesus, and the efficacy of his atonement and mediation. F. P.

Pine Avenue.

For the Crisis.

Maine Annual Advent Conference.

This Conference assembled according to notice in Augusta, Blanchard Hall, Sept. 6th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. After singing an appropriate hymn, prayer was offered by Eld. I. Smith, of Eddington, and the time of the first meeting spent in prayer and social remarks. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. I. Smith preached from 2 Pet. 3 : 14, an appropriate discourse, which was followed by several forcible exhortations.

Evening. Eld. H. B. Sevey preached a good discourse from John 12 : 32, which was followed by stirring remarks from others. The Conference began with spirit and devotion.

Friday. Met at 8 o'clock, A. M. After prayer, Eld. H. B. Sevey was re-elected Chairman, and Eld. I. C. Wellcome Secretary. A committee of three—I. Smith, Eld. R. R. York, Benj. Ray—was then chosen to arrange the business of Conference and see to its expenses. The Executive committee on home missions was called on to report their doings, when the foreman, Eld. I. C. Wellcome, presented the following Report:—

"Brethren beloved:—It was our first object to see if means could be raised to sustain an evangelist, and it was sometime before that appeared. We have corresponded with several ministers abroad, whose labors were desired by some of the principal donors They cannot be obtained. It is but recently that we were assured of this. $36.50 have been paid into the treasury, and $44 more subscribed, and there is a mind on the part of many to aid, when they see the evangelist in the field. It is our conviction that we should turn our attention to the sending out evangelists from among the ministry of Maine, who are now obliged to devote much of their time to other work, because not sustained. They are as able ministers, and, if properly sustained, could gain as great acquirements as the ministry of other States."

This report called forth many spirited and timely remarks by I. Smith, N. Smith, Humphrey, York, Hanscomb, Wellcome, Wight, Kennedy, and Carr, concurring with the ideas of the report. We wish all our people in Maine could have heard and appreciated these remarks; they would then take an active interest in sustaining their ministers in the State.

At 10 o'clock we adjourned business to 8 o'clock, Saturday, and spent the remainder of the A. M. in social worship. The Lord blessed us abundantly, and we truly found it good to be there. A large number of brethren and sisters came in from abroad. At 2 o'clock, P M., preaching by Bro. Levi Rhodes, from John 6 : 68, followed by several brethren, who spoke earnestly and scripturally of the importance of the agency of the Holy Spirit to accompany the word.

Evening. At 7 o'clock, Eld. L. L. Howard preached from Luke 16 : 19; several exhortations followed.

Saturday, A. M., 8 o'clock. After prayer, the Secretary read the doings of yesterday, which were approved. The report of the committee on missions was again called up, and after being read and approved by vote of conference, the committee asked to be dismissed. But the conference voted that they serve another year, with the addition of two more members,—I. Wight and E. M. Haggett. Eld. I. Smith now moved that the committee be instructed to proceed forthwith to employ an evangelist of our own State, or elsewhere, as they judge best, and put the mission in operation. Unanimously voted. Eld. I. C. Wellcome then offered the following resolution, which met a hearty response and action:

"Whereas some of our fellow laborers have called and held a convention in Providence, R. I., the 25th of July last, and reported their doings in the Crisis of Aug. 1st, by which we learn that they took preliminary steps, and adopted a constitution, under which to organize a society for the work of the gospel, we in this State feel a deep interest in said action and proposition, inasmuch as the paper recognized by them to be published as their organ, and the tract interest desired to be united with it, are much patronized by us, as auxiliaries to our work; also the general work desired, as set forth in said preamble and constitution is one with our own. We therefore wish in conference capacity to suggest to our brethren that we deem it inconsistent with our standing before a gazing world, and with the rights of another organized body of christians, to adopt their society title, by which to be distinguished as an organized body; nor consistent with the interests of our society generally. There are many and appropriate names given in the Bible to persons, sects, and characters, which names arise from their parentage, residence, or their prominent points of doctrine. All who believe in Christ claim the christian name; but something peculiar to their various positions or views has led to their other proper names, as sects, or tribes, excepting one, now known to the world as the 'Christian Church,' or Society. Our faith in the speedy personal advent of Christ to the earth, with his accompanying work, has procured for us the name 'Adventists,' appropriate to our position and labor. By it we are known and recognized throughout Christendom. We heartily respond to it. We now have several Conferences, and many churches organized under it. Also many preachers who have been ordained and received their credentials under it. And inasmuch as said society proposes to publish an organ of the Advent faith, with tracts and books on the same, to organize churches, ordain ministers, and sustain by these gospel order and labor, all of which we are equally interested to do; we therefore beg of them as a matter of justice to 'the Christian Society,' and that we may be allowed to work with our brethren without division and confusion, to retain our real, well known, well deserved, appropriate given name. Then you may add the christian name with it."

This called forth an active statement of our true position and duty by many present, with a hearty approval of the resolution. Eld. L. L. Howard moved an amendment as follows:—"We heartily remonstrate against the action of said convention." It prevailed, and the resolution unanimously passed as amended.

I. C. Wellcome then presented the following resolution:—"Whereas there are persons in various parts who hold to certain points of doctrine in common with us,—by which we are denominated Adventists, and who yet claim not to be associated with us as fellow laborers, nor with some of the most vital points of doctrine we recognize as scriptural, but 'teach things they ought not, pervert whole houses,' and bring desolation to society; we believe it unscriptural and unreasonable that we should use our money, labor and toil to produce, under God, christian society and unity, to call conference and other meetings in pursuance of such work, and then deliver them over to the instructions and influence of such teachers, and waste our labor in questions to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers." See 2 John 9 : 10; Rom. 16 : 17–18. "If they wish society congenial with their own views, let them produce it by their own means and labors, call their own meetings, and we will not contend for rights in them."

This caused some discussion, and called for explanation, which was given. The resolution referred to those who teach the community of goods, the taking the right of stewardship from individuals and giving it to the elders; no resurrection of infants; no radical and sudden conversion; a perfection that leads to Cochranism; and much more of the like evils, too bad to name here,—and we present this resolution because some who come among us to sow their doctrine, talk of being deprived of their rights when we refuse to have them preach here. The resolution then passed by a rising vote. The remaining part of the A. M. was spent in reports of the cause abroad.

At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. B. Emery preached a cutting and trimming discourse on Titus 2 : 15. We thought it must do good, for it seemed as though the Lord sent it. Several exhortations followed. The remainder of the reports were then given. Brn. Haggett, Hanscomb, Howard, Emery, S. K. Partridge, Jere. Partridge, Kennedy, Chism, I. Smith, N. Smith, Wellcome, Humphrey, Rhodes, Carr, Sevey, Wheeler, Oakes and Meader gave reports, the most of which were very heart-cheering, showing an increase of converts and of devotion, a spread of truth, and an open door for the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. A Baptist, who heard these reports, remarked to his friend that he had not attended so good a conference, nor heard so good a report of churches for twenty years. We have much encouragement to work on by "the same rule, and mind the same things."

Conference voted that the doings of this session be forwarded by the secretary to the Advent Herald, and the World's Crisis for publication. Voted, that when this conference closes, we adjourn to A. D. 1861, at such time and place as the secretary shall notify.

Evening, 7 o'clock. Eld. D. M. Hanscomb preached from 2 Tim. 4 : 8,—the christian warfare and crown. A blessed theme.

Sunday, 8 o'clock, A. M. Met in social prayer and conference, which was a precious season. A large number of testimonies were given of the love of God, the power of his saving grace, and of the joys arising from the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus return to bestow his rewards. We could truly say,

> "What a glorious hope is ours,
> While here on earth we stay;
> We more than taste the heavenly joys,
> And antidate that day."

At 10 1-2 o'clock, Eld. E. M. Haggett preached a good discourse to a very attentive audience. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. I. C. Wellcome preached a discourse from Heb. 6 : 1, 2; after which the Lord's supper was shared by a large number of believers in his return to their salvation.

Evening, 7 o'clock. Eld. L. L. Howard preached from Isa. 8 : 12–17, showing the signs of the times, and the duty of watching for the coming of our Lord. It seemed as though all present felt the force of the truth. Great solemnity rested on all. Several strong appeals were made to the people to obey the Lord, and be ready for the coming kingdom of our God, to share its glories and live forever.

The time for parting had now arrived. Our hearts seemed more closely knit together than ever before. New and happy acquaintances had been formed. Our hearts entwined around the blessed hope—and each other. Several young preachers of promise, who had just entered the field, were with us, and resolved to preach the truth as they found it. Dr. N. Smith, it will be noticed, was able to be with us once more. Although very feeble, and unable to labor, it did us good to see him. Thus closed the largest, and, in several points, the best annual Conference we have yet held. The hearts and houses of our brethren in Augusta were open to do all they could to entertain us. May the Lord shower his blessing upon them, and crown their labors of love with abundant success. And may we all so live that we may soon meet in the coming kingdom of our God, to part no more forever. Amen.

H. B. Sevey, Chairman.
I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.

Richmond, Me.

For the Crisis.

Report of the Annual Conference of Northern Illinois.

Bro. Grant:—I send you a brief account of the annual conference of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, which met at Crave's Grove, Stephenson Co., Ill., Sept. 7th, 8th and 9th. The church appointed Eld. H V. Reed President, and the writer as Secretary; and Brn. Creaton, Austin and House to arrange matters during the conference. The business committee consisted of Brn. Renner, Bridge, Clark, and Kinneston The following resolutions were passed:—

1. Resolved, That the above business committee retain their office until the next annual conference.

2. Resolved, That Elder Robert Chown be our Evangelist for the next year.

3. Resolved, That our next quarterly conference be at Harvard, on Friday, Dec. 28th, 1860.

4. Resolved, That we give our thanks to the friends of Crane's Grove for their kind hospitality during the conference.

5. Resolved, That we adjourn our annual conference until Sept., 1861,—due notice to be given.

The preaching and exhortation were practical, and stirring to the child of God, and calculated to awaken the unconcerned Three were immersed on the confession of their faith in the gospel of the kingdom. The first discourse was by the writer, from Jude 3,—"That ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Eld. H. V. Reed delivered a discourse showing that our conversation must be such as becometh the gospel, so that the way of truth shall not be evil spoken of. Bro. N. Hitchcock gave a discourse on the christian's hope of eternal life. Eld. E. G. Clark discoursed on the kingdom, enforcing obedience to the gospel. Eld. H. V. Reed delivered two other discourses in his usual manner of earnestness for the truth, being a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of life. Bro. Reed delivered a sweeping discourse from 1 Tim. 3 : 16,—"And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness." He clearly showed that God's word was no longer a mystery, but a revelation made known to all nations. Rom. 16 : 25, 26. The writer delivered another discourse on 2 Tim. 4 : 2,—"Preach the word,"—showing the word is the good seed, (Luke 8 : 11,) which must be understood, received, and kept in honest hearts, and fruit produced with patience in order to be saved.

Dear Bro., may we be willing to take God's word in all its teachings, that we may rightly divide to each a portion of meat in due season. I can look back when I was published as a disturber for proclaiming life eternal through Christ alone; and requested not to speak of it by some who are now its strong supporters, and are writers for the Crisis. May we then, dear brethren, search the Scriptures, that we may grow in grace and in knowledge; that we may no longer be dwarfs, but men of full stature in understanding.

I wish to express many thanks to that brother who sent me a package of tracts, which I have faithfully circulated among the sects, believing they will accomplish much good. I am ready to work for my Lord wherever a door may be opened; and hope to be found faithful, so that with you I may receive the reward of the inheritance.

Robert Chown, Evangelist.

Plumb River, Jo Davis Co., Ill.

☞ True philosophy can discern nothing else in a great many words and names but the letters of the alphabet which compose them.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 26, 1860.

☞ We would say to our readers that the article on the "Evening and Morning Visions of Daniel," by D. C., are from one who was instrumental in first getting Bro. Wm. Miller to come to Boston. This same D. C. kept the first "Graham Eating House" in our country; and afterwards established the first "Water Cure" in America. If he can give us any light on the visions of Daniel it will be thankfully received.

Italy.

The revolution in Italy is progressing rapidly. There is scarcely a ray of hope left for the temporal, or even the spiritual power of the Pope. He is like a confined prisoner in a besieged city, while the surrounding army is continually receiving fresh troops; or, like a man in the heart of a burning city, when the flames have completely surrounded him, and all avenues of escape are cut off, and his destruction is only a matter of time, depending upon the progress of the flames.

It is thought by some that the French troops at Rome will defend the Pope. True, this is the avowed object as declared by Napoleon; but we surmise that the real design is only to keep Austria, Spain and others who would send aid to the Pope, from doing so, till it is too late, and then allow the revolutionists to do as they please with Rome and its Pontiff. It is evident that Napoleon sympathizes with Garibaldi in his efforts to liberate Italy. The fact that the French troops were at Rome, nominally to protect the Pope and his dominions, has prevented him from making military preparations, as he would have done if he had been left to his own resources; so that he is worse off for the French troops, in case they do not fight for him. It is now too late for him to raise an army sufficient to protect his estates, hence he is as helpless as Napoleon I. when banished to St. Helena.

It is said that Napoleon III. has already given orders to his troops not to attempt to defend the States of the Church, but only the Pope's throne at the Vatican, and in case of an insurrection, they are to remain in their barracks. It is said the French troops are to the Pope, like a guard around the house of a dying man, to prevent too much outside disturbance while in the death-struggle.

Francis II., king of Naples, has fled to Gaeta, about forty miles north-west of Naples, where the Pope sought an asylum in 1849. It has been a resort for wealthy Roman families, and is a strongly fortified seaport city of the kingdom of Naples. Cicero died near here, B. C. 43.

The troops that once sustained the Pope, are deserting by thousands and joining the victorious march of Garibaldi, rejoicing that the liberty of Italy is at hand, and determined to assist in the great work. Generals and other officers of the Roman government, are resigning, and giving their aid to the revolution. In a word, the throne of the "Abomination of Desolation" is tottering to its fall, and is evidently about to be "given to the burning flame." As saith the poet,—

"To be living is sublime."

Our King is at hand, let us be ready to meet him with joyful acclamations, and "crown him Lord of all."

"This Generation."

"Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled."—Luke 21 : 32.

In the "Supplemental Annotations" to "The New Covenant," by Granville Penn, we find the following interesting remarks on verse 32, quoted above. We think he sets forth the matter in its true light. He says:—

"I tell you, that that generation shall not pass away, until all those things be done,—he genea autee,—'that generation;' not 'this generation,' as our English version has erroneously rendered; following the Latin Vulgate, which renders, 'generatio hæc.' It is evident that 'that generation' which is here pointed out, is that which is predicated in the preceding warning respecting the 'times of the full accomplishment of the Gentiles;' and that our Lord declared, that 'that generation' should not pass away before the 'times of the Gentiles' should be fully accomplished: or that, while that generation should be still subsisting, the 'times of the Gentiles' should be brought to their termination. There are contemporary generations between an aged man and a new-born infant; but which of these generations is the one here designed in the prophecy, is not pointed out by our Lord. The Port Royal grammarians show (B viii. c. 6) from Budæus, 'that there is sometimes occasion for ambiguity in the pronoun autos.' That ambiguity, in this place, misled the Latin translator, and Wickliffe; and from the latter it misled also all our following translators from the Greek. 'If autos has the article before it, it signifies the same—idem' (Matthiæ, Gr. Gr. § 467); therefore autee—eadem, here relates to the genea—'generation' in which 'the times of the Gentiles shall be fully accomplished.' The verse 33 resumes, and clinches the verse 24: e. g.

24. Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fully accomplished:—

33. Verily I tell you that that generation shall not pass away till those things be done.

Euthymius (in the twelfth century,) who clearly saw that 'the generation' intended by our Lord did not mean a particular generation of coexisting persons, thus proposed to explain the reference: 'What did he mean by genea autee? He called "generation" the "religion of all who believed on him." The apostles did not suppose that our Lord's predicted dangers would entirely extinguish both the preaching and the faithful; for he assured them that his religion would not be effaced before his second advent; but that it would continue to the consummation of time, and would not be affected by any danger.' (Vol. 2, p. 935.)

But the interpretation thus ingeniously devised is not required; for the genea autee—'that generation' here expressed, is plainly to be understood in its ordinary acceptation: and, therefore, it eminently behoves us of 'this generation,' so signally noted, to mark well our Lord's concluding and most solemn warning:—What I say to you, I say to all, Watch!—Watch, therefore; for ye know not in what day your Lord cometh."

"One Spot."

The following remarks of Dr. Cumming probably express the feelings of many honest minds, who have not yet seen the clear light of Scripture on this point. When speaking of the doctrine of eternal torment, he says:—

"I feel no pleasure in showing it; my wish is to believe that the torments of the lost are not eternal; that hell is not so terrible; for I must say, it is the one difficulty I have encountered in studying this holy book, that there should be one spot in God's magnificent universe where tears will be ceaselessly shed, where the wild and piercing wail of sorrow will rise disturbing the harmony of songs that are perpetual; and where there shall be ceaseless sinning, and therefore ceaseless suffering. I say, that it is just the thought that has always struck me as the most difficult."

It seems strange to us, that a doctrine so plainly taught in the Bible as is the destruction of the wicked, should be overlooked by so many. But we think the chief difficulty arises in consequence of a belief in the immortality of the soul, for if man is an immortal soul, then it follows that some must be eternally miserable, unless all are saved. The Scriptures forever settle this point beyond all doubt, by affirming that "The Lord preserveth all that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy."—Ps. 145 : 20. Mr. Webster defines destruction to consist "in the annihilation of the form of any thing; that form of parts which constitutes it what it is." All is plain relative to this doctrine when we let the Bible mean what it says. We are thankful that the Lord has not left us to believe in the doctrine of eternal torment, for we verily think that there is no error preached that dishonors God more than this. We do not wonder that Dr. Cumming looks at it as a spot upon the universe.

Study.

The following truthful remarks from John Wesley are worthy the consideration of all who preach the gospel. They were written to one who neglected the habit of reading and study. He says:—

"Hence your talent in preaching does not increase; it is just the same as it was seven years ago. It is lively, but not deep; there is little variety; there is no compass of thought. Reading can only supply this, with daily meditation and daily prayer. You wrong yourself greatly by omitting this; you can never be a deep preacher without it, any more than a thorough christian. O, begin! Fix some part of every day for private exercises. You may acquire the taste which you have not; what is tedious at first, will afterward be pleasant. Whether you like it or not, read and pray daily. It is your life! there is no other way; else you will be a trifler all your days, and a pretty, superficial preacher. Do justice to your own soul; give it time and means to grow; do not starve yourself any longer."

Scoffers.

It is sometimes said of those who love the appearing of Christ and are looking for his coming; that "the fools are not all dead yet;" if this is true, it is equally so that the scoffers are not all dead yet. In the Boston Traveller of Sept. 1st, we find the following:—

"The Millerites, who are supposed to number 50,000 strong and foolish, are not agreed as to the exact time of the falling due of immortal smash, which will be paid without any days of grace. Some of them expect that we shall all be done up in little less than seven months, or about three weeks after the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln as President of the United States, and perhaps they merely typify the disunionists. Others take a more cheerful view of things, because expecting a speedy last view of them, and are certain that the world will go to pot, amidst a great panic, just before the close of the year, which is to be the last year, so that we'd all better make the best of it. These two classes are the radicals and destructives among the sect, who would have the pulling down work done in a hurry, as is the custom with such chaps; but there is a conservative class of Millerites, who are for hastening slowly, and they place the last day so far off as the autumn of 1870, when the world will fall with the leaf. Those will be "the melancholy days" indeed, and "the saddest of the year" to all but the Millerites, who will exhibit the usual spectacle of pleased prophets of evil. But so many of us will be dead long before this time ten years, that the world might as well not be destroyed, so far as the greater part of grown up people are concerned. Some of us will be robbed of our right by this postponement of the grand finale, and we should use our interest with the slower portion of the Millerites, to have the hands on their clock put forward a few days."

We are sorry to find a paper like the Traveller using such low language and turning into the ranks of those who scoff at the second coming of Christ. Says Jesus, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." It is no enviable position to occupy, when fulfilling the following prophecy:—"There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming?"

Truth Spreading.

The following sensible remarks are extracted from Dr. J. K. Finley's "letter to a clergyman," published in the Bible Examiner. Dr. Finley was an Elder in the Presbyterian church, at Niles, Mich. He says:—

"In endeavoring to ascertain the true nature and constitution of man, it is most reasonable and proper for us to go to the account which God himself has given in the history of his creation; and we will find the inspired record very plain and very explicit on the whole subject. In the second chapter of Genesis, 7th verse, we read, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Examine the expression carefully, "he became," not "he received," not "was put into him;" but he became a living soul. Man was made of the dust, —the whole man, not a part of him,—and when the breath of lives was put into his nostrils—the same breath that sustained the lives of all other animals, or in other words, when he was caused to breathe, henceforth he was a living soul. Previous to this he had been a lifeless soul. "Here we see an organized creature, a lifeless soul, which by a specified process becomes a soul alive, and, therefore, begins to perform the functions peculiar to his rank in the universe."

How different is this, the inspired account, from the common notions on the subject of the human constitution. Not a word is said about any immortal, immaterial entity put into the man to complete the process; nothing hinted at except organization, formed from existing world elements. When God would remind Adam of what he was constituted, he says, without the remotest allusion to any thing else, "Dust thou art." Our brethren, who claim to be "par excellence" the orthodox, say, that this is not him at all, it is only the shell that encases him—or as some say, the house in which he dwells temporarily—thus "perverting the truth at the bidding of a dogma which has been not merely enshrined but enthroned in the temple of our divine religion."

Did it never strike you, my dear sir, as very singular, to say the least, that when God inspired Moses to give an account of the formation of Man, he should have thought his mission completed, when he had told how the case was made in which the man was confined? If a mechanician had underaken, by the direction of some mighty potentate of earth, to give an account of the construction of a watch, and had pronounced his work completed after describing the case, would it be esteemed satisfactory, do you suppose? And if not in this instance, why should it in the other? And yet no other part of the Bible professes to give any further account of the matter.

"A soul then is no mystery, so far as its origin and composition is concerned. It can be seen and felt, and weighed, but it is an astonishing mystery, beyond our highest conceptions, how that out of the 'dust of the ground' such a complex being could be formed; a being capable of such varied and sublime functions, such intense sufferings and enjoyments."

But let us inquire more particularly, what is meant by man being a soul? The word soul is, as you well know, the English translation of the Hebrew word Nephesh, and this word comes from a verb nesme, signifying to breathe. Man, then, is a soul, a nephesh, because he lives by breathing; the man became a living soul, or breathing creature—a creature to live by breathing vital air. Such being the case, we would reasonably expect that all creatures in the world, which live by breathing, would have the same designation, and such we find to be the fact.

In the following passages, and many others that might be specified, the same word occurs and is used to describe the various orders of inferior animals. Gen. 1 : 21; "And God created great whales and every living creature" (nephesh.) Verse 24; "Let the earth bring forth the living creature" (nephesh.) Gen. 9 : 10, "Every living creature" (nephesh) "that is with you." Levit. 11 : 46. "of every living creature" (nephesh) "that moveth in the waters." And by referring to the 30th verse of the first chapter of Genesis, you will find it designates "every beast of the earth, and every fowl of the air, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is nephesh;" our translation says, "wherein there is life." Every living creature then, of birds, reptiles, fishes, and beasts, that lives by breathing, is a nephesh, a soul, as certainly as man is; and he is more soul than they are. They are all souls because they have life maintained by inspiring the common electrified air, which is, therefore, called the breath or spirit of lives. "Man's superiority to the other breathing tribes consists, not in his being a soul, but in the magnitude of his powers; in other words, in the loftier position he occupies in the scale of existence, as an intellectual, moral, and responsible agent."

As it is impossible for me, in the limits of such a communication as this, to give all the proofs by which the non-immortality of the soul is established: I will only further suggest one, which to a scholar like yourself, or, in fact, to any man of ordinary good sense, who is honestly searching for the truth, must be irresistible. Indeed, it may be said in the language of a powerful writer on the subject, in England, "It may be regarded as removing the question of the immortality of the soul entirely out of the arena of controversy." It is this. The word nephesh is translated by the inspired writers of the New Testament into the Greek, by the word Psuche. Psuche, then, is the equivalent of nephesh. Now, if you refer to the 15th chapter of Corinthians, where Paul is treating of the resurrection, you will find, verse 44th, he uses the adjective, Psuchikon, literally soulical, to designate the natural, corruptible body, in contradistinction from the word Pneumatikon, which designates the spiritual and immortal body which christians will receive at the resurrection. You see, here, the Spirit of God takes the very word psuche, which orthodoxy says indicates the immortal soul, and from it constructs an adjective by which to teach that the soul is corrupt, and mortal, and perishable. Can any article be more conclusive?"

For the Crisis.

Seamen sometimes Poetical.

It is the general impression, among those who know them not, that sailors are almost entirely devoid of sentiment, and are governed by their passions and appetites, in defiance of the higher order of morality and refinement. This is true only in a limited sense. They, poor fellows, experience so little of the ease and pleasures of this life, that when they get a chance are apt to go it pretty strong. But withal, they are unacquainted with the mean vice of the land debauchee, only when they are victimized by the crowds of pimps who inveigle them into dens, where they are plundered, abused, and not unfrequently murdered. It is not to be wondered at if the exterior of a being should be rough

"Who has been used to talk with winds."

Yet beneath the shaggy surface there often lies a heart guileless as a child's and loving as a woman's, true to the duties and affections of home, cherishing the memory of some dear one far away, and keeping the shrine inviolable amid many temptations which beset his way. I have seen men whose cheek no danger could blanch, drop tears over a portrait or a lock of hair; and one man I knew who bore about with him in a pocket, made in the inside of his flannel shirt for its accommodation, the tiny shoe of his dead child, and at last carried it with him down into the dark caverns of his ocean tomb. There is hardly a ship's company who has not its "Joe Miller," and oftentimes its "poet Laurette,"—he who makes the doggerel, while his mates stand by ready to strike the chorus at the proper time. Some of the poetry, however, is of a better class, and often a religious sentiment pervades the song.

While visiting some of the seamen's boarding houses last week, scattering the "Light Ship," a young man of about twenty years, from Liverpool, England, showed me his log book, from which I took the following lines, composed by himself:—

THE DRUNKARD.

> Ah, how silly is the drinker swallowing more than he can need!
> To the eye of every thinker he must seem a fool indeed:
> So he hurts his constitution, adding drunkenness to thirst,
> All for want of resolution not to yield to drink at first.
> Was he used to work and labor, honest industry his pride?
> Idle now, a wretched neighbor, hurts himself and all beside.
> Has he wife of love and beauty, yielding him a plenteous share?
> Soon he falls in every duty, nor for dearest ties will care.
> Has he children, young and tender, sweetly prattling at his knee?
> Nought but curses does he render to his humbling family.
> Business must decay and fail him,—none a drunkard will employ;
> No disease that e'er could harm him could so sure and soon destroy.
> See, religion mourns and warns him—virtue, goodness flee away,—
> Does God love the wretch who leaves him? for a drunkard does not pray.
> O what shame to see a creature found in shame so much divine,
> Ruined and debased, each feature swollen and bloated like the swine!
> How debased that noble reason which to worship God was given,—
> Foul the drunkard's sin, 'tis treason, and will cast him out of heaven.
> How deformed his best affections, warped from heaven to dying earth,—
> Can he bear his own reflections? On his base his sordid mirth
> To drink he truly sacrifices health and wealth, and self and friends,—
> This the only God he prizes, see how slavishly he bends.
> But can this his pleasure save him when he's on a dying bed,
> When the devils wait to have him, watching round his guilty head?
> What new plea, what strong petition can he urge to stop his doom?
> Vain his cries, and vain his wishing, when to judgment he shall come!
> Stop then, drinker, dash the liquor, dash it on the ground,
> Not a serpent stings thee quicker, none with viler poison's found.
> Stop then, turn thine eyes to heaven, seek the loving, dying Lord,
> Pray to have thy sins forgiven, and thy sin-lost soul restored.
> Grace can heal thy sick nature, give thee power thy lusts to quell,
> Make thee quite another creature, make thee whole and keep thee well.
> Hear the words that gospel sends thee, "Laden sinner, come to me!"
> If the Savior does befriend thee, saved forever thou shalt be.
>
> James Hatton.

April 13th, 1860.

I will let it speak for itself; but I think a chap like that is worth looking after.

Jno. F. Cotton.

Peculiarities of Ancient Sects.—They constantly appeal to the Bible as the only rule of faith and practice. Scarcely a man or woman not better read in the Scriptures than the doctors of the church. Luther admired their aptness in Scriptures. Every person, even women, are allowed to preach. —Benedict, p. 56–7.

☞ Lord Shaftesbury recently stated, as the result of his personal investigation, that "of all the adult male criminals in London, not two in a hundred who live an honest life up to the age of twenty, afterwards enter upon a course of crime," and that "almost all who enter upon such a course of crime, do so between the ages of eight and sixteen." Oh! the necessity of family discipline!

We need to feel the effects of a fall, ere we know how weak we are, and in whom our true strength lies. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Peter, over-rating his own strength, said to Jesus, "Though all men are offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended!" and that very night broke his vows of allegiance, denied the thorn-crowned heir to David's throne, saying, "I know not the man." When we trust to ourselves, God will allow us to fall that we may know that "in the Lord Jehovah" is alone found "everlasting strength." May the Lord teach us to know ourselves and our weakness; to know Him and his strength; and to know Jesus, and the efficacy of his atonement and mediation. F. P.

Pine Avenue.

For the Crisis.

Maine Annual Advent Conference.

This Conference assembled according to notice in Augusta, Blanchard Hall, Sept. 6th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. After singing an appropriate hymn, prayer was offered by Eld. I. Smith, of Eddington, and the time of the first meeting spent in prayer and social remarks. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. I. Smith preached from 2 Pet. 3 : 14, an appropriate discourse, which was followed by several forcible exhortations.

Evening. Eld. H. B. Sevey preached a good discourse from John 12 : 32, which was followed by stirring remarks from others. The Conference began with spirit and devotion.

Friday. Met at 8 o'clock, A. M. After prayer, Eld. H. B. Sevey was re-elected Chairman, and Eld. I. C. Wellcome Secretary. A committee of three—I. Smith, Eld. R. R. York, Benj. Ray—was then chosen to arrange the business of Conference and see to its expenses. The Executive committee on home missions was called on to report their doings, when the foreman, Eld. I. C. Wellcome, presented the following Report:—

"Brethren beloved:—It was our first object to see if means could be raised to sustain an evangelist, and it was sometime before that appeared. We have corresponded with several ministers abroad, whose labors were desired by some of the principal donors They cannot be obtained. It is but recently that we were assured of this. $36.50 have been paid into the treasury, and $44 more subscribed, and there is a mind on the part of many to aid, when they see the evangelist in the field. It is our conviction that we should turn our attention to the sending out evangelists from among the ministry of Maine, who are now obliged to devote much of their time to other work, because not sustained. They are as able ministers, and, if properly sustained, could gain as great acquirements as the ministry of other States."

This report called forth many spirited and timely remarks by I. Smith, N. Smith, Humphrey, York, Hanscomb, Wellcome, Wight, Kennedy, and Carr, concurring with the ideas of the report. We wish all our people in Maine could have heard and appreciated these remarks; they would then take an active interest in sustaining their ministers in the State.

At 10 o'clock we adjourned business to 8 o'clock, Saturday, and spent the remainder of the A. M. in social worship. The Lord blessed us abundantly, and we truly found it good to be there. A large number of brethren and sisters came in from abroad. At 2 o'clock, P M., preaching by Bro. Levi Rhodes, from John 6 : 68, followed by several brethren, who spoke earnestly and scripturally of the importance of the agency of the Holy Spirit to accompany the word.

Evening. At 7 o'clock, Eld. L. L. Howard preached from Luke 16 : 19; several exhortations followed.

Saturday, A. M., 8 o'clock. After prayer, the Secretary read the doings of yesterday, which were approved. The report of the committee on missions was again called up, and after being read and approved by vote of conference, the committee asked to be dismissed. But the conference voted that they serve another year, with the addition of two more members,—I. Wight and E. M. Haggett. Eld. I. Smith now moved that the committee be instructed to proceed forthwith to employ an evangelist of our own State, or elsewhere, as they judge best, and put the mission in operation. Unanimously voted. Eld. I. C. Wellcome then offered the following resolution, which met a hearty response and action:

"Whereas some of our fellow laborers have called and held a convention in Providence, R. I., the 25th of July last, and reported their doings in the Crisis of Aug. 1st, by which we learn that they took preliminary steps, and adopted a constitution, under which to organize a society for the work of the gospel, we in this State feel a deep interest in said action and proposition, inasmuch as the paper recognized by them to be published as their organ, and the tract interest desired to be united with it, are much patronized by us, as auxiliaries to our work; also the general work desired, as set forth in said preamble and constitution is one with our own. We therefore wish in conference capacity to suggest to our brethren that we deem it inconsistent with our standing before a gazing world, and with the rights of another organized body of christians, to adopt their society title, by which to be distinguished as an organized body; nor consistent with the interests of our society generally. There are many and appropriate names given in the Bible to persons, sects, and characters, which names arise from their parentage, residence, or their prominent points of doctrine. All who believe in Christ claim the christian name; but something peculiar to their various positions or views has led to their other proper names, as sects, or tribes, excepting one, now known to the world as the 'Christian Church,' or Society. Our faith in the speedy personal advent of Christ to the earth, with his accompanying work, has procured for us the name 'Adventists,' appropriate to our position and labor. By it we are known and recognized throughout Christendom. We heartily respond to it. We now have several Conferences, and many churches organized under it. Also many preachers who have been ordained and received their credentials under it. And inasmuch as said society proposes to publish an organ of the Advent faith, with tracts and books on the same, to organize churches, ordain ministers, and sustain by these gospel order and labor, all of which we are equally interested to do; we therefore beg of them as a matter of justice to 'the Christian Society,' and that we may be allowed to work with our brethren without division and confusion, to retain our real, well known, well deserved, appropriate given name. Then you may add the christian name with it."

This called forth an active statement of our true position and duty by many present, with a hearty approval of the resolution. Eld. L. L. Howard moved an amendment as follows:—"We heartily remonstrate against the action of said convention." It prevailed, and the resolution unanimously passed as amended.

I. C. Wellcome then presented the following resolution:—"Whereas there are persons in various parts who hold to certain points of doctrine in common with us,—by which we are denominated Adventists, and who yet claim not to be associated with us as fellow laborers, nor with some of the most vital points of doctrine we recognize as scriptural, but 'teach things they ought not, pervert whole houses,' and bring desolation to society; we believe it unscriptural and unreasonable that we should use our money, labor and toil to produce, under God, christian society and unity, to call conference and other meetings in pursuance of such work, and then deliver them over to the instructions and influence of such teachers, and waste our labor in questions to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers." See 2 John 9 : 10, Rom. 16 : 17–18. "If they wish society congenial with their own views, let them produce it by their own means and labors, call their own meetings, and we will not contend for rights in them."

This caused some discussion, and called for explanation, which was given. The resolution referred to those who teach the community of goods, the taking the right of stewardship from individuals and giving it to the elders; no resurrection of infants; no radical and sudden conversion; a perfection that leads to Cochranism; and much more of the like evils, too bad to name here,—and we present this resolution because some who come among us to sow their doctrine, talk of being deprived of their rights when we refuse to have them preach here. The resolution then passed by a rising vote. The remaining part of the A. M. was spent in reports of the cause abroad.

At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. B. Emery preached a cutting and trimming discourse on Titus 2 : 15. We thought it must do good, for it seemed as though the Lord sent it. Several exhortations followed. The remainder of the reports were then given. Brn. Haggett, Hanscomb, Howard, Emery, S. K. Partridge, Jere. Partridge, Kennedy, Chism, I. Smith, N. Smith, Wellcome, Humphrey, Rhodes, Carr, Sevey, Wheeler, Oakes and Meader gave reports, the most of which were very heart-cheering, showing an increase of converts and of devotion, a spread of truth, and an open door for the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. A Baptist, who heard these reports, remarked to his friend that he had not attended so good a conference, nor heard so good a report of churches for twenty years. We have much encouragement to work on by "the same rule, and mind the same things."

Conference voted that the doings of this session be forwarded by the secretary to the Advent Herald, and the World's Crisis for publication. Voted, that when this conference closes, we adjourn to A. D. 1861, at such time and place as the secretary shall notify.

Evening, 7 o'clock. Eld. D. M. Hanscomb preached from 2 Tim. 4 : 8,—the christian warfare and crown. A blessed theme.

Sunday, 8 o'clock, A. M. Met in social prayer and conference, which was a precious season. A large number of testimonies were given of the love of God, the power of his saving grace, and of the joys arising from the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus return to bestow his rewards. We could truly say,

"What a glorious hope is ours,
While here on earth we stay;
We more than taste the heavenly joys,
And antedate that day."

At 10 1-2 o'clock, Eld. E. M. Haggett preached a good discourse to a very attentive audience. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. I. C. Wellcome preached a discourse from Heb. 6 : 1, 2; after which the Lord's supper was shared by a large number of believers in his return to their salvation.

Evening, 7 o'clock. Eld. L. L. Howard preached from Isa. 8 : 12–17, showing the signs of the times, and the duty of watching for the coming of our Lord. It seemed as though all present felt the force of the truth. Great solemnity rested on all. Several strong appeals were made to the people to obey the Lord, and be ready for the coming kingdom of our God, to share its glories and live forever.

The time for parting had now arrived. Our hearts seemed more closely knit together than ever before. New and happy acquaintances had been formed. Our hearts entwined around the blessed hope—and each other. Several young preachers of promise, who had just entered the field, were with us, and resolved to preach the truth as they found it. Dr. N. Smith, it will be noticed, was able to be with us once more. Although very feeble, and unable to labor, it did us good to see him. Thus closed the largest, and, in several points, the best annual Conference we have yet held. The hearts and houses of our brethren in Augusta were open to do all they could to entertain us. May the Lord shower his blessing upon them, and crown their labors of love with abundant success. And may we all so live that we may soon meet in the coming kingdom of our God, to part no more forever. Amen.

H. B. Sevey, Chairman.
I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.

Richmond, Me.

For the Crisis.

Report of the Annual Conference of Northern Illinois.

Bro. Grant:—I send you a brief account of the annual conference of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, which met at Crave's Grove, Stephenson Co., Ill., Sept. 7th, 8th and 9th. The church appointed Eld. H. V. Reed President, and the writer as Secretary; and Brn. Creaton, Austin and House to arrange matters during the conference. The business committee consisted of Brn. Renner, Bridge, Clark, and Kinneston. The following resolutions were passed:—

1. Resolved, That the above business committee retain their office until the next annual conference.

2. Resolved, That Elder Robert Chown be our Evangelist for the next year.

3. Resolved, That our next quarterly conference be at Harvard, on Friday, Dec. 28th, 1860.

4. Resolved, That we give our thanks to the friends of Crane's Grove for their kind hospitality during the conference.

5. Resolved, That we adjourn our annual conference until Sept., 1861,—due notice to be given.

The preaching and exhortation were practical, and stirring to the child of God, and calculated to awaken the unconcerned Three were immersed on the confession of their faith in the gospel of the kingdom. The first discourse was by the writer, from Jude 3,—"That ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Eld. H. V. Reed delivered a discourse showing that our conversation must be such as becometh the gospel, so that the way of truth shall not be evil spoken of. Bro. N. Hitchcock gave a discourse on the christian's hope of eternal life. Eld. E. G. Clark discoursed on the kingdom, enforcing obedience to the gospel. Eld. H. V. Reed delivered two other discourses in his usual manner of earnestness for the truth, being a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of life. Bro. Reed delivered a sweeping discourse from 1 Tim. 3 : 16,—"And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness." He clearly showed that God's word was no longer a mystery, but a revelation made known to all nations. Rom. 16 : 25, 26. The writer delivered another discourse on 2 Tim. 4 : 2,—"Preach the word,"—showing the word is the good seed, (Luke 8 : 11,) which must be understood, received, and kept in honest hearts, and fruit produced with patience in order to be saved.

Dear Bro., may we be willing to take God's word in all its teachings, that we may rightly divide to each a portion of meat in due season. I can look back when I was published as a disturber for proclaiming life eternal through Christ alone; and requested not to speak of it by some who are now its strong supporters, and are writers for the Crisis. May we then, dear brethren, search the Scriptures, that we may grow in grace and in knowledge; that we may no longer be dwarfs, but men of full stature in understanding.

I wish to express many thanks to that brother who sent me a package of tracts, which I have faithfully circulated among the sects, believing they will accomplish much good. I am ready to work for my Lord wherever a door may be opened; and hope to be found faithful, so that with you I may receive the reward of the inheritance.

Robert Chown, Evangelist.
Plumb River, Jo Davis Co., Ill.

☞ True philosophy can discern nothing else in a great many words and names but the letters of the alphabet which compose them.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 26, 1860.

☞ We would say to our readers that the article on the "Evening and Morning Visions of Daniel," by D. C., are from one who was instrumental in first getting Bro. Wm. Miller to come to Boston. This same D. C. kept the first "Graham Eating House" in our country; and afterwards established the first "Water Cure" in America. If he can give us any light on the visions of Daniel it will be thankfully received.

Italy.

The revolution in Italy is progressing rapidly. There is scarcely a ray of hope left for the temporal, or even the spiritual power of the Pope. He is like a confined prisoner in a besieged city, while the surrounding army is continually receiving fresh troops; or, like a man in the heart of a burning city, when the flames have completely surrounded him, and all avenues of escape are cut off, and his destruction is only a matter of time, depending upon the progress of the flames.

It is thought by some that the French troops at Rome will defend the Pope. True, this is the avowed object as declared by Napoleon; but we surmise that the real design is only to keep Austria, Spain and others who would send aid to the Pope, from doing so, till it is too late, and then allow the revolutionists to do as they please with Rome and its Pontiff. It is evident that Napoleon sympathizes with Garibaldi in his efforts to liberate Italy. The fact that the French troops were at Rome, nominally to protect the Pope and his dominions, has prevented him from making military preparations, as he would have done if he had been left to his own resources; so that he is worse off for the French troops, in case they do not fight for him. It is now too late for him to raise an army sufficient to protect his estates, hence he is as helpless as Napoleon I. when banished to St. Helena.

It is said that Napoleon III. has already given orders to his troops not to attempt to defend the States of the Church, but only the Pope's throne at the Vatican; and in case of an insurrection, they are to remain in their barracks. It is said the French troops are to the Pope, like a guard around the house of a dying man, to prevent too much outside disturbance while in the death-struggle.

Francis II., king of Naples, has fled to Gaeta, about forty miles north-west of Naples, where the Pope sought an asylum in 1849. It has been a resort for wealthy Roman families, and is a strongly fortified seaport city of the kingdom of Naples. Cicero died near here, B. C. 43.

The troops that once sustained the Pope, are deserting by thousands and joining the victorious march of Garibaldi, rejoicing that the liberty of Italy is at hand, and determined to assist in the great work. Generals and other officers of the Roman government, are resigning, and giving their aid to the revolution. In a word, the throne of the "Abomination of Desolation" is tottering to its fall, and is evidently about to be "given to the burning flame." As saith the poet,—

"To be living is sublime."

Our King is at hand, let us be ready to meet him with joyful acclamations, and "crown him Lord of all."

"This Generation."

"Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled."—Luke 21 : 32.

In the "Supplemental Annotations" to "The New Covenant," by Granville Penn, we find the following interesting remarks on verse 32. quoted above. We think he sets forth the matter in its true light. He says:—

"I tell you, that that generation shall not pass away, until all those things be done,—he genea autee,—'that generation;' not 'this generation,' as our English version has erroneously rendered; following the Latin Vulgate, which renders, 'generatio hæc.' It is evident that 'that generation' which is here pointed out, is that which is predicated in the preceding warning respecting the 'times of the full accomplishment of the Gentiles;' and that our Lord declared, that 'that generation' should not pass away before the 'times of the Gentiles' should be fully accomplished: or that, while that generation should be still subsisting, the 'times of the Gentiles' should be brought to their termination. There are contemporary generations between an aged man and a new-born infant; but which of these generations is the one here designed in the prophecy, is not pointed out by our Lord. The Port Royal grammarians show (B viii. c. 6) from Budæus, 'that there is sometimes occasion for ambiguity in the pronoun autos.' That ambiguity, in this place, misled the Latin translator, and Wickliffe; and from the latter it misled also all our following translators from the Greek. 'If autos has the article before it, it signifies the same—idem' (Matthiæ, Gr. Gr. § 467); therefore autee—eadem, here relates to the genea—'generation' in which 'the times of the Gentiles shall be fully accomplished.' The verse 38 resumes, and clinches the verse 24: e. g.

24. Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fully accomplished:—

38. Verily I tell you that that generation shall not pass away till those things be done.

Euthymius (in the twelfth century,) who clearly saw that 'the generation' intended by our Lord did not mean a particular generation of coexisting persons, thus proposed to explain the reference: 'What did he mean by genea autee? He called "generation" the "religion of all who believed on him." The apostles did not suppose that our Lord's predicted dangers would entirely extinguish both the preaching and the faithful; for he assured them that his religion would not be effaced before his second advent; but that it would continue to the consummation of time, and would not be affected by any danger.' (Vol. 2, p. 935.)

But the interpretation thus ingeniously devised is not required; for the genea autee—'that generation' here expressed, is plainly to be understood in its ordinary acceptation: and, therefore, it eminently behoves us of 'this generation,' so signally noted, to mark well our Lord's concluding and most solemn warning:—'What I say to you, I say to all, Watch!—Watch, therefore; for ye know not in what day your Lord cometh.'"

"One Spot."

The following remarks of Dr. Cumming probably express the feelings of many honest minds, who have not yet seen the clear light of Scripture on this point. When speaking of the doctrine of eternal torment, he says:—

"I feel no pleasure in showing it; my wish is to believe that the torments of the lost are not eternal; that hell is not so terrible; for I must say, it is the one difficulty I have encountered in studying this holy book, that there should be one spot in God's magnificent universe where tears will be ceaselessly shed, where the wild and piercing wail of sorrow will rise disturbing the harmony of songs that are perpetual; and where there shall be ceaseless sinning, and therefore ceaseless suffering. I say, that it is just the thought that has always struck me as the most difficult."

It seems strange to us, that a doctrine so plainly taught in the Bible as is the destruction of the wicked, should be overlooked by so many. But we think the chief difficulty arises in consequence of a belief in the immortality of the soul, for if man is an immortal soul, then it follows that some must be eternally miserable, unless all are saved. The Scriptures forever settle this point beyond all doubt, by affirming that "The Lord preserveth all that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy."—Ps. 145 : 20. Mr. Webster defines destruction to consist "in the annihilation of the form of any thing; that form of parts which constitutes it what it is." All is plain relative to this doctrine when we let the Bible mean what it says. We are thankful that the Lord has not left us to believe in the doctrine of eternal torment; for we verily think that there is no error preached that dishonors God more than this. We do not wonder that Dr. Cumming looks at it as a spot upon the universe.

Study.

The following truthful remarks from John Wesley are worthy the consideration of all who preach the gospel. They were written to one who neglected the habit of reading and study. He says:—

"Hence your talent in preaching does not increase; it is just the same as it was seven years ago. It is lively, but not deep; there is little variety; there is no compass of thought. Reading can only supply this, with daily meditation and daily prayer. You wrong yourself greatly by omitting this; you can never be a deep preacher without it, any more than a thorough christian. O, begin! Fix some part of every day for private exercises. You may acquire the taste which you have not; what is tedious at first, will afterward be pleasant. Whether you like it or not, read and pray daily. It is your life! there is no other way; else you will be a trifler all your days, and a pretty, superficial preacher. Do justice to your own soul; give it time and means to grow; do not starve yourself any longer."

Scoffers.

It is sometimes said of those who love the appearing of Christ and are looking for his coming, that "the fools are not all dead yet;" if this is true, it is equally so that the scoffers are not all dead yet. In the Boston Traveller of Sept. 1st, we find the following:—

"The Millerites, who are supposed to number 50,000 strong and foolish, are not agreed as to the exact time of the falling due of immortal smash, which will be paid without any days of grace. Some of them expect that we shall all be done up in little less than seven months, or about three weeks after the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln as President of the United States, and perhaps they merely typify the disunionists. Others take a more cheerful view of things, because expecting a speedy last view of them, and are certain that the world will go to pot, amidst a great panic, just before the close of the year, which is to be the last year, so that we'd all better make the best of it. These two classes are the radicals and destructives among the sect, who would have the pulling down work done in a hurry, as is the custom with such chaps; but there is a conservative class of Millerites, who are for hastening slowly, and they place the last day so far off as the autumn of 1870, when the world will fall with the leaf. Those will be "the melancholy days" indeed, and "the saddest of the year" to all but the Millerites, who will exhibit the usual spectacle of pleased prophets of evil. But so many of us will be dead long before this time ten years, that the world might as well not be destroyed, so far as the greater part of grown up people are concerned. Some of us will be robbed of our right by this postponement of the grand finale, and we should use our interest with the slower portion of the Millerites, to have the hands on their clock put forward a few days."

We are sorry to find a paper like the Traveller using such low language and turning into the ranks of those who scoff at the second coming of Christ. Says Jesus, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." It is no enviable position to occupy, when fulfilling the following prophecy:—"There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming?"

Truth Spreading.

The following sensible remarks are extracted from Dr. J. K. Finley's "letter to a clergyman," published in the Bible Examiner. Dr. Finley was an Elder in the Presbyterian church, at Niles, Mich. He says:—

"In endeavoring to ascertain the true nature and constitution of man, it is most reasonable and proper for us to go to the account which God himself has given in the history of his creation; and we will find the inspired record very plain and very explicit on the whole subject. In the second chapter of Genesis, 7th verse, we read, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Examine the expression carefully, "he became," not "he received," not "was put into him;" but he became a living soul. Man was made of the dust,—the whole man, not a part of him,—and when the breath of lives was put into his nostrils—the same breath that sustained the lives of all other animals, or in other words, when he was caused to breathe, henceforth he was a living soul. Previous to this he had been a lifeless soul. "Here we see an organized creature, a lifeless soul, which by a specified process becomes a soul alive, and, therefore, begins to perform the functions peculiar to his rank in the universe."

How different is this, the inspired account, from the common notions on the subject of the human constitution. Not a word is said about any immortal, immaterial entity put into the man to complete the process; nothing hinted at except organization, formed from existing world elements. When God would remind Adam of what he was constituted, he says, without the remotest allusion to any thing else, "Dust thou art." Our brethren, who claim to be "par excellence" the orthodox, say, that this is not him at all, it is only the shell that encases him—or as some say, the house in which he dwells temporarily—thus "perverting the truth at the bidding of a dogma which has been not merely enshrined but enthroned in the temple of our divine religion."

Did it never strike you, my dear sir, as very singular, to say the least, that when God inspired Moses to give an account of the formation of Man, he should have thought his mission completed, when he had told how the case was made in which the man was confined? If a mechanician had underaken, by the direction of some mighty potentate of earth, to give an account of the construction of a watch, and had pronounced his work completed after describing the case, would it be esteemed satisfactory, do you suppose? And if not in this instance, why should it in the other? And yet no other part of the Bible professes to give any further account of the matter.

"A soul then is no mystery, so far as its origin and composition is concerned. It can be seen and felt, and weighed, but it is an astonishing mystery, beyond our highest conceptions, how that out of the 'dust of the ground' such a complex being could be formed; a being capable of such varied and sublime functions, such intense sufferings and enjoyments."

But let us inquire more particularly, what is meant by man being a soul? The word soul is, as you well know, the English translation of the Hebrew word Nephesh, and this word comes from a verb nesme, signifying to breathe. Man, then, is a soul, a nephesh, because he lives by breathing; the man became a living soul, or breathing creature—a creature to live by breathing vital air. Such being the case, we would reasonably expect that all creatures in the world, which live by breathing, would have the same designation, and such we find to be the fact.

In the following passages, and many others that might be specified, the same word occurs and is used to describe the various orders of inferior animals. Gen. 1 : 21, "And God created great whales and every living creature" (nephesh.) Verse 24; "Let the earth bring forth the living creature" (nephesh.) Gen. 9 : 10, "Every living creature" (nephesh) "that is with you." Levit. 11 : 46. "of every living creature" (nephesh) "that moveth in the waters." And by referring to the 30th verse of the first chapter of Genesis, you will find it designates "every beast of the earth, and every fowl of the air, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is nephesh;" our translation says, "wherein there is life." Every living creature then, of birds, reptiles, fishes, and beasts, that lives by breathing, is a nephesh, a soul, as certainly as man is; and he is more soul than they are. They are all souls because they have life maintained by inspiring the common electrified air, which is, therefore, called the breath or spirit of lives. "Man's superiority to the other breathing tribes consists, not in his being a soul, but in the magnitude of his powers; in other words, in the loftier position he occupies in the scale of existence, as an intellectual, moral, and responsible agent."

As it is impossible for me, in the limits of such a communication as this, to give all the proofs by which the non-immortality of the soul is established: I will only further suggest one, which to a scholar like yourself, or, in fact, to any man of ordinary good sense, who is honestly searching for the truth, must be irresistible. Indeed, it may be said in the language of a powerful writer on the subject, in England, "It may be regarded as removing the question of the immortality of the soul entirely out of the arena of controversy." It is this. The word nephesh is translated by the inspired writers of the New Testament into the Greek, by the word Psuche. Psuche, then, is the equivalent of nephesh. Now, if you refer to the 15th chapter of Corinthians, where Paul is treating of the resurrection, you will find, verse 44th, he uses the adjective, Psuchikon, literally soulical, to designate the natural, corruptible body, in contradistinction from the word Pneumatikon, which designates the spiritual and immortal body which christians will receive at the resurrection. You see, here, the Spirit of God takes the very word psuche, which orthodoxy says indicates the immortal soul, and from it constructs an adjective by which to teach that the soul is corrupt, and mortal, and perishable. Can any article be more conclusive?"

For the Crisis.

Seamen sometimes Poetical.

It is the general impression, among those who know them not, that sailors are almost entirely devoid of sentiment, and are governed by their passions and appetites, in defiance of the higher order of morality and refinement. This is true only in a limited sense. They, poor fellows, experience so little of the ease and pleasures of this life, that when they get a chance are apt to go it pretty strong. But withal, they are unacquainted with the mean vice of the land debauchee, only when they are victimized by the crowds of pimps who inveigle them into dens, where they are plundered, abused, and not unfrequently murdered. It is not to be wondered at if the exterior of a being should be rough

"Who has been used to talk with winds."

Yet beneath the shaggy surface there often lies a heart guileless as a child's and loving as a woman's, true to the duties and affections of home, cherishing the memory of some dear one far away, and keeping the shrine inviolable amid many temptations which beset his way. I have seen men whose cheek no danger could blanch, drop tears over a portrait or a lock of hair; and one man I knew who bore about with him in a pocket, made in the inside of his flannel shirt for its accommodation, the tiny shoe of his dead child, and at last carried it with him down into the dark caverns of his ocean tomb. There is hardly a ship's company who has not its "Joe Miller," and oftentimes its "poet Laurette,"—he who makes the doggerel, while his mates stand by ready to strike the chorus at the proper time. Some of the poetry, however, is of a better class, and often a religious sentiment pervades the song.

While visiting some of the seamen's boarding houses last week, scattering the "Light Ship," a young man of about twenty years, from Liverpool, England, showed me his log book, from which I took the following lines, composed by himself:—

THE DRUNKARD.

Ah, how silly is the drinker swallowing more than he can need!
To the eye of every thinker he must seem a fool indeed:
So he hurts his constitution, adding drunkenness to thirst,
All for want of resolution not to yield to drink at first.
Was he used to work and labor, honest industry his pride?
Idle now, a wretched neighbor, hurts himself and all beside.
Has he wife of love and beauty, yielding him a plenteous share?
Soon he fails in every duty, nor for dearest ties will care.
Has he children, young and tender, sweetly prattling at his knee?
Nought but curses does he render to his humbling family.
Business must decay and fail him,—none a drunkard will employ;
No disease that e'er could harm him could so sure and soon destroy.
See, religion mourns and warns him—virtue, goodness flee away,—
Does God love the wretch who leaves him? for a drunkard does not pray.
O what shame to see a creature found in shame so much divine,
Ruined and debased, each feature swollen and bloated like the swine!
How debased that noble reason which to worship God was given,—
Foul the drunkard's sin, 'tis treason, and will cast him out of heaven.
How deformed his best affections, warped from heaven to dying earth,—
Can he bear his own reflections? On his base his sordid mirth
To drink he truly sacrifices health and wealth, and self and friends,—
This the only God he prizes, see how slavishly he bends.
But can this his pleasure save him when he's on a dying bed,
When the devils wait to have him, watching round his guilty head?
What new plea, what strong petition can he urge to stop his doom?
Vain his cries, and vain his wishing, when to judgment he shall come!
Stop then, drinker, dash the liquor, dash it on the ground,
Not a serpent stings thee quicker, none with viler poison's found.
Stop then, turn thine eyes to heaven, seek the loving, dying Lord,
Pray to have thy sins forgiven, and thy sin-lost soul restored.
Grace can heal thy sick nature, give thee power thy lusts to quell,
Make thee quite another creature, make thee whole and keep thee well.
Hear the words that gospel sends thee, "Laden sinner, come to me!"
If the Savior does befriend thee, saved forever thou shalt be.

James Hatton.

April 13th, 1860.

I will let it speak for itself; but I think a chap like that is worth looking after.

Jno. F. Cotton.

Peculiarities of Ancient Sects.—They constantly appeal to the Bible as the only rule of faith and practice. Scarcely a man or woman not better read in the Scriptures than the doctors of the church. Luther admired their aptness in Scriptures. Every person, even women, are allowed to preach.—Benedict, p. 56–7.

☞ Lord Shaftesbury recently stated, as the result of his personal investigation, that "of all the adult male criminals in London, not two in a hundred who live an honest life up to the age of twenty, afterwards enter upon a course of crime," and that "almost all who enter upon such a course of crime, do so between the ages of eight and sixteen." Oh! the necessity of family discipline!

We need to feel the effects of a fall, ere we know how weak we are, and in whom our true strength lies. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Peter, over-rating his own strength, said to Jesus, "Though all men are offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended!" and that very night broke his vows of allegiance, denied the thorn-crowned heir to David's throne, saying, "I know not the man." When we trust to ourselves, God will allow us to fall that we may know that "in the Lord Jehovah" is alone found "everlasting strength." May the Lord teach us to know ourselves and our weakness; to know Him and his strength; and to know Jesus, and the efficacy of his atonement and mediation. F. P.

Pine Avenue.

For the Crisis.

Maine Annual Advent Conference.

This Conference assembled according to notice in Augusta, Blanchard Hall, Sept. 6th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. After singing an appropriate hymn, prayer was offered by Eld. I. Smith, of Eddington, and the time of the first meeting spent in prayer and social remarks. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. I. Smith preached from 2 Pet. 3 : 14, an appropriate discourse, which was followed by several forcible exhortations.

Evening. Eld. H. B. Sevey preached a good discourse from John 12 : 32, which was followed by stirring remarks from others. The Conference began with spirit and devotion.

Friday. Met at 8 o'clock, A. M. After prayer, Eld. H. B. Sevey was re-elected Chairman, and Eld. I. C. Wellcome Secretary. A committee of three—I. Smith, Eld. R. R. York, Benj. Ray—was then chosen to arrange the business of Conference and see to its expenses. The Executive committee on home missions was called on to report their doings, when the foreman, Eld. I. C. Wellcome, presented the following Report:—

"Brethren beloved:—It was our first object to see if means could be raised to sustain an evangelist, and it was sometime before that appeared. We have corresponded with several ministers abroad, whose labors were desired by some of the principal donors. They cannot be obtained. It is but recently that we were assured of this. $36.50 have been paid into the treasury, and $44 more subscribed, and there is a mind on the part of many to aid, when they see the evangelist in the field. It is our conviction that we should turn our attention to the sending out evangelists from among the ministry of Maine, who are now obliged to devote much of their time to other work, because not sustained. They are as able ministers, and, if properly sustained, could gain as great acquirements as the ministry of other States."

This report called forth many spirited and timely remarks by I. Smith, N. Smith, Humphrey, York, Hanscomb, Wellcome, Wight, Kennedy, and Carr, concurring with the ideas of the report. We wish all our people in Maine could have heard and appreciated these remarks; they would then take an active interest in sustaining their ministers in the State.

At 10 o'clock we adjourned business to 8 o'clock, Saturday, and spent the remainder of the A. M. in social worship. The Lord blessed us abundantly, and we truly found it good to be there. A large number of brethren and sisters came in from abroad. At 2 o'clock, P M., preaching by Bro. Levi Rhodes, from John 6 : 68, followed by several brethren, who spoke earnestly and scripturally of the importance of the agency of the Holy Spirit to accompany the word.

Evening. At 7 o'clock, Eld. L. L. Howard preached from Luke 16 : 19; several exhortations followed.

Saturday, A. M., 8 o'clock. After prayer, the Secretary read the doings of yesterday, which were approved. The report of the committee on missions was again called up, and after being read and approved by vote of conference, the committee asked to be dismissed. But the conference voted that they serve another year, with the addition of two more members,—I. Wight and E. M. Haggett. Eld. I. Smith now moved that the committee be instructed to proceed forthwith to employ an evangelist of our own State, or elsewhere, as they judge best, and put the mission in operation. Unanimously voted. Eld. I. C. Wellcome then offered the following resolution, which met a hearty response and action:

"Whereas some of our fellow laborers have called and held a convention in Providence, R. I., the 25th of July last, and reported their doings in the Crisis of Aug. 1st, by which we learn that they took preliminary steps, and adopted a constitution, under which to organize a society for the work of the gospel, we in this State feel a deep interest in said action and proposition, inasmuch as the paper recognized by them to be published as their organ, and the tract interest desired to be united with it, are much patronized by us, as auxiliaries to our work; also the general work desired, as set forth in said preamble and constitution is one with our own. We therefore wish in conference capacity to suggest to our brethren that we deem it inconsistent with our standing, before a gazing world, and with the rights of another organized body of christians, to adopt their society title, by which to be distinguished as an organized body; nor consistent with the interests of our society generally. There are many and appropriate names given in the Bible to persons, sects, and characters, which names arise from their parentage, residence, or their prominent points of doctrine. All who believe in Christ claim the christian name; but something peculiar to their various positions or views has led to their other proper names, as sects, or tribes, excepting one, now known to the world as the 'Christian Church,' or Society. Our faith in the speedy personal advent of Christ to the earth, with his accompanying work, has procured for us the name 'Adventists,' appropriate to our position and labor. By it we are known and recognized throughout Christendom. We heartily respond to it. We now have several Conferences, and many churches organized under it. Also many preachers who have been ordained and received their credentials under it. And inasmuch as said society proposes to publish an organ of the Advent faith, with tracts and books on the same, to organize churches, ordain ministers, and sustain by these gospel order and labor, all of which we are equally interested to do; we therefore beg of them as a matter of justice to 'the Christian Society,' and that we may be allowed to work with our brethren without division and confusion, to retain our real, well known, well deserved, appropriate given name. Then you may add the christian name with it."

This called forth an active statement of our true position and duty by many present, with a hearty approval of the resolution. Eld. L. L. Howard moved an amendment as follows:—"We heartily remonstrate against the action of said convention." It prevailed, and the resolution unanimously passed as amended.

I. C. Wellcome then presented the following resolution:—"Whereas there are persons in various parts who hold to certain points of doctrine in common with us,—by which we are denominated Adventists, and who yet claim not to be associated with us as fellow laborers, nor with some of the most vital points of doctrine we recognize as scriptural, but 'teach things they ought not, pervert whole houses,' and bring desolation to society; we believe it unscriptural and unreasonable that we should use our money, labor and toil to produce, under God, christian society and unity, to call conference and other meetings in pursuance of such work, and then deliver them over to the instructions and influence of such teachers, and waste our labor in questions to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers." See 2 John 9 : 10; Rom. 16 : 17–18. "If they wish society congenial with their own views, let them produce it by their own means and labors; call their own meetings, and we will not contend for rights in them."

This caused some discussion, and called for explanation, which was given. The resolution referred to those who teach the community of goods, the taking the right of stewardship from individuals and giving it to the elders; no resurrection of infants; no radical and sudden conversion; a perfection that leads to Cochranism; and much more of the like evils, too bad to name here;—and we present this resolution because some who come among us to sow their doctrine, talk of being deprived of their rights when we refuse to have them preach here. The resolution then passed by a rising vote. The remaining part of the A. M. was spent in reports of the cause abroad.

At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. B. Emery preached a cutting and trimming discourse on Titus 2 : 15. We thought it must do good, for it seemed as though the Lord sent it. Several exhortations followed. The remainder of the reports were then given. Brn. Haggett, Hanscomb, Howard, Emery, S. K. Partridge, Jere. Partridge, Kennedy, Chism, I. Smith, N. Smith, Wellcome, Humphrey, Rhodes, Carr, Sevey, Wheeler, Oakes and Meader gave reports, the most of which were very heart-cheering, showing an increase of converts and of devotion, a spread of truth, and an open door for the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. A Baptist, who heard these reports, remarked to his friend that he had not attended so good a conference, nor heard so good a report of churches for twenty years. We have much encouragement to work on by "the same rule, and mind the same things."

Conference voted that the doings of this session be forwarded by the secretary to the Advent Herald, and the World's Crisis for publication. Voted, that when this conference closes, we adjourn to A. D. 1861, at such time and place as the secretary shall notify.

Evening, 7 o'clock. Eld. D. M. Hanscomb preached from 2 Tim. 4 : 8,—the christian warfare and crown. A blessed theme.

Sunday, 8 o'clock, A. M. Met in social prayer and conference, which was a precious season. A large number of testimonies were given of the love of God, the power of his saving grace, and of the joys arising from the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus return to bestow his rewards. We could truly say,

> "What a glorious hope is ours
> While here on earth we stay;
> We more than taste the heavenly joys,
> And antidate that day."

At 10 1-2 o'clock, Eld. E. M. Haggett preached a good discourse to a very attentive audience. At 2 o'clock, P. M., Eld. I. C. Wellcome preached a discourse from Heb. 6 : 1, 2; after which the Lord's supper was shared by a large number of believers in his return to their salvation.

Evening, 7 o'clock. Eld. L. L. Howard preached from Isa. 8 : 12–17, showing the signs of the times, and the duty of watching for the coming of our Lord. It seemed as though all present felt the force of the truth. Great solemnity rested on all. Several strong appeals were made to the people to obey the Lord, and be ready for the coming kingdom of our God, to share its glories and live forever.

The time for parting had now arrived. Our hearts seemed more closely knit together than ever before. New and happy acquaintances had been formed. Our hearts entwined around the blessed hope—and each other. Several young preachers of promise, who had just entered the field, were with us, and resolved to preach the truth as they found it. Dr. N. Smith, it will be noticed, was able to be with us once more. Although very feeble, and unable to labor, it did us good to see him. Thus closed the largest, and, in several points, the best annual Conference we have yet held. The hearts and houses of our brethren in Augusta were open to do all they could to entertain us. May the Lord shower his blessing upon them, and crown their labors of love with abundant success. And may we all so live that we may soon meet in the coming kingdom of our God, to part no more forever. Amen.

H. B. Sevey, Chairman.
I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.

Richmond, Me.

For the Crisis.

Report of the Annual Conference of Northern Illinois.

Bro. Grant:—I send you a brief account of the annual conference of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, which met at Crave's Grove, Stephenson Co., Ill., Sept. 7th, 8th and 9th. The church appointed Eld. H. V. Reed President, and the writer as Secretary; and Brn. Creaton, Austin and House to arrange matters during the conference. The business committee consisted of Brn. Renner, Bridge, Clark, and Kinneston. The following resolutions were passed:—

1. Resolved, That the above business committee retain their office until the next annual conference.

2. Resolved, That Elder Robert Chown be our Evangelist for the next year.

3. Resolved, That our next quarterly conference be at Harvard, on Friday, Dec. 28th, 1860.

4. Resolved, That we give our thanks to the friends of Crane's Grove for their kind hospitality during the conference.

5. Resolved, That we adjourn our annual conference until Sept., 1861,—due notice to be given.

The preaching and exhortation were practical, and stirring to the child of God, and calculated to awaken the unconcerned. Three were immersed on the confession of their faith in the gospel of the kingdom. The first discourse was by the writer, from Jude 3,—"That ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Eld. H. V. Reed delivered a discourse showing that our conversation must be such as becometh the gospel, so that the way of truth shall not be evil spoken of. Bro. N. Hitchcock gave a discourse on the christian's hope of eternal life. Eld. E. G. Clark discoursed on the kingdom, enforcing obedience to the gospel. Eld. H. V. Reed delivered two other discourses in his usual manner of earnestness for the truth, being a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of life. Bro. Reed delivered a sweeping discourse from 1 Tim. 3 : 16,—"And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness." He clearly showed that God's word was no longer a mystery, but a revelation made known to all nations. Rom. 16 : 25, 26. The writer delivered another discourse on 2 Tim. 4 : 2,—"Preach the word,"—showing the word is the good seed, (Luke 8 : 11,) which must be understood, received, and kept in honest hearts, and fruit produced with patience in order to be saved.

Dear Bro., may we be willing to take God's word in all its teachings, that we may rightly divide to each a portion of meat in due season. I can look back when I was published as a disturber for proclaiming life eternal through Christ alone; and requested not to speak of it by some who are now its strong supporters, and are writers for the Crisis. May we then, dear brethren, search the Scriptures, that we may grow in grace and in knowledge; that we may no longer be dwarfs, but men of full stature in understanding.

I wish to express many thanks to that brother who sent me a package of tracts, which I have faithfully circulated among the sects, believing they will accomplish much good. I am ready to work for my Lord wherever a door may be opened; and hope to be found faithful, so that with you I, may receive the reward of the inheritance. Robert Chown, Evangelist.

Plumb River, Jo Davis Co., Ill.

☞ True philosophy can discern nothing else in a great many words and names but the letters of the alphabet which compose them.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 26, 1860.

☞ We would say to our readers that the article on the "Evening and Morning Visions of Daniel," by D. C., are from one who was instrumental in first getting Bro. Wm. Miller to come to Boston. This same D. C. kept the first "Graham Eating House" in our country; and afterwards established the first "Water Cure" in America. If he can give us any light on the visions of Daniel it will be thankfully received.

Italy.

The revolution in Italy is progressing rapidly. There is scarcely a ray of hope left for the temporal, or even the spiritual power of the Pope. He is like a confined prisoner in a besieged city, while the surrounding army is continually receiving fresh troops; or, like a man in the heart of a burning city, when the flames have completely surrounded him, and all avenues of escape are cut off, and his destruction is only a matter of time, depending upon the progress of the flames.

It is thought by some that the French troops at Rome will defend the Pope. True, this is the avowed object as declared by Napoleon; but we surmise that the real design is only to keep Austria, Spain and others who would send aid to the Pope, from doing so, till it is too late; and then allow the revolutionists to do as they please with Rome and its Pontiff. It is evident that Napoleon sympathizes with Garibaldi in his efforts to liberate Italy. The fact that the French troops were at Rome, nominally to protect the Pope and his dominions, has prevented him from making military preparations, as he would have done if he had been left to his own resources; so that he is worse off for the French troops, in case they do not fight for him. It is now too late for him to raise an army sufficient to protect his estates, hence he is as helpless as Napoleon I. when banished to St. Helena.

It is said that Napoleon III. has already given orders to his troops not to attempt to defend the States of the Church, but only the Pope's throne at the Vatican; and in case of an insurrection, they are to remain in their barracks. It is said the French troops are to the Pope, like a guard around the house of a dying man, to prevent too much outside disturbance while in the death-struggle.

Francis II., king of Naples, has fled to Gaeta, about forty miles north-west of Naples, where the Pope sought an asylum in 1849. It has been a resort for wealthy Roman families, and is a strongly fortified seaport city of the kingdom of Naples. Cicero died near here, B. C. 43.

The troops that once sustained the Pope, are deserting by thousands and joining the victorious march of Garibaldi, rejoicing that the liberty of Italy is at hand, and determined to assist in the great work. Generals and other officers of the Roman government, are resigning, and giving their aid to the revolution. In a word, the throne of the "Abomination of Desolation" is tottering to its fall, and is evidently about to be "given to the burning flame." As saith the poet,—

"To be living is sublime."

Our King is at hand; let us be ready to meet him with joyful acclamations, and "crown him Lord of all."

"This Generation."

"Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled."—Luke 21: 32.

In the "Supplemental Annotations" to "The New Covenant," by Granville Penn, we find the following interesting remarks on verse 32, quoted above. We think he sets forth the matter in its true light. He says:—

"I tell you, that that generation shall not pass away, until all those things be done,—he genea autee,—'that generation;' not 'this generation,' as our English version has erroneously rendered; following the Latin Vulgate, which renders, 'generatio hæc.' It is evident that 'that generation' which is here pointed out, is that which is predicated in the preceding warning respecting the 'times of the full accomplishment of the Gentiles;' and that our Lord declared, that 'that generation' should not pass away before the 'times of the Gentiles' should be fully accomplished: or that, while that generation should be still subsisting, the 'times of the Gentiles' should be brought to their termination. There are contemporary generations between an aged man and a new-born infant; but which of these generations is the one here designed in the prophecy, is not pointed out by our Lord. The Port Royal grammarians show (B viii. c. 6) from Budæus, 'that there is sometimes occasion for ambiguity in the pronoun autos.' That ambiguity, in this place, misled the Latin translator, and Wickliffe; and from the latter it misled also all our following translators from the Greek. 'If autos has the article before it, it signifies the same—idem' (Matthiæ, Gr. Gr. § 467); therefore autee—eadem, here relates to the genea—'generation' in which 'the times of the Gentiles shall be fully accomplished.' The verse 33 resumes, and clinches the verse 24: e. g.

24. Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fully accomplished:—

33. Verily I tell you that that generation shall not pass away till those things be done.

Euthymius (in the twelfth century,) who clearly saw that 'the generation' intended by our Lord did not mean a particular generation of coexisting persons, thus proposed to explain the reference: 'What did he mean by genea autee? He called "generation" the "religion of all who believed on him." The apostles did not suppose that our Lord's predicted dangers would entirely extinguish both the preaching and the faithful; for he assured them that his religion would not be effaced before his second advent; but that it would continue to the consummation of time, and would not be affected by any danger.' (Vol. 2, p. 935.)

But the interpretation thus ingeniously devised is not required; for the genea autee—'that generation' here expressed, is plainly to be understood in its ordinary acceptation: and, therefore, it eminently behoves us of 'this generation,' so signally noted, to mark well our Lord's concluding and most solemn warning:—'What I say to you, I say to all, Watch!—Watch, therefore; for ye know not in what day your Lord cometh."

"One Spot."

The following remarks of Dr. Cumming probably express the feelings of many honest minds, who have not yet seen the clear light of Scripture on this point. When speaking of the doctrine of eternal torment, he says:—

"I feel no pleasure in showing it; my wish is to believe that the torments of the lost are not eternal; that hell is not so terrible; for I must say, it is the one difficulty I have encountered in studying this holy book, that there should be one spot in God's magnificent universe where tears will be ceaselessly shed, where the wild and piercing wail of sorrow will rise disturbing the harmony of songs that are perpetual; and where there shall be ceaseless sinning, and therefore ceaseless suffering. I say, that it is just the thought that has always struck me as the most difficult."

It seems strange to us, that a doctrine so plainly taught in the Bible as is the destruction of the wicked, should be overlooked by so many. But we think the chief difficulty arises in consequence of a belief in the immortality of the soul, for if man is an immortal soul, then it follows that some must be eternally miserable, unless all are saved. The Scriptures forever settle this point beyond all doubt, by affirming that "The Lord preserveth all that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy."—Ps. 145 : 20. Mr. Webster defines destruction to consist "in the annihilation of the form of any thing; that form of parts which constitutes it what it is." All is plain relative to this doctrine when we let the Bible mean what it says. We are thankful that the Lord has not left us to believe in the doctrine of eternal torment; for we verily think that there is no error preached that dishonors God more than this. We do not wonder that Dr. Cumming looks at it as a spot upon the universe.

Study.

The following truthful remarks from John Wesley are worthy the consideration of all who preach the gospel. They were written to one who neglected the habit of reading and study. He says:—

"Hence your talent in preaching does not increase; it is just the same as it was seven years ago. It is lively, but not deep; there is little variety; there is no compass of thought. Reading can only supply this, with daily meditation and daily prayer. You wrong yourself greatly by omitting this; you can never be a deep preacher without it, any more than a thorough christian. O, begin! Fix some part of every day for private exercises. You may acquire the taste which you have not; what is tedious at first, will afterward be pleasant. Whether you like it or not, read and pray daily. It is your life! there is no other way; else you will be a trifler all your days, and a pretty, superficial preacher. Do justice to your own soul; give it time and means to grow; do not starve yourself any longer."

Scoffers.

It is sometimes said of those who love the appearing of Christ and are looking for his coming; that "the fools are not all dead yet;" if this is true, it is equally so that the scoffers are not all dead yet. In the Boston Traveller of Sept. 1st, we find the following:—

"The Millerites, who are supposed to number 50,000 strong and foolish, are not agreed as to the exact time of the falling due of immortal smash, which will be paid without any days of grace. Some of them expect that we shall all be done up in little less than seven months, or about three weeks after the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln as President of the United States, and perhaps they merely typify the disunionists. Others take a more cheerful view of things, because expecting a speedy last view of them, and are certain that the world will go to pot, amidst a great panic, just before the close of the year, which is to be the last year, so that we'd all better make the best of it. These two classes are the radicals and destructives among the sect, who would have the pulling down work done in a hurry, as is the custom with such chaps; but there is a conservative class of Millerites, who are for hastening slowly, and they place the last day so far off as the autumn of 1870, when the world will fall with the leaf. Those will be "the melancholy days" indeed, and "the saddest of the year" to all but the Millerites, who will exhibit the usual spectacle of pleased prophets of evil. But so many of us will be dead long before this time ten years, that the world might as well not be destroyed, so far as the greater part of grown up people are concerned. Some of us will be robbed of our right by this postponement of the grand finale, and we should use our interest with the slower portion of the Millerites, to have the hands on their clock put forward a few days."

We are sorry to find a paper like the Traveller using such low language and turning into the ranks of those who scoff at the second coming of Christ. Says Jesus, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." It is no enviable position to occupy, when fulfilling the following prophecy:—"There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of his coming?"

Truth Spreading.

The following sensible remarks are extracted from Dr. J. K. Finley's "letter to a clergyman," published in the Bible Examiner. Dr. Finley was an Elder in the Presbyterian church, at Niles, Mich. He says:—

"In endeavoring to ascertain the true nature and constitution of man, it is most reasonable and proper for us to go to the account which God himself has given in the history of his creation; and we will find the inspired record very plain and very explicit on the whole subject. In the second chapter of Genesis, 7th verse, we read, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Examine the expression carefully, "he became," not "he received," not "was put into him;" but he became a living soul. Man was made of the dust, —the whole man, not a part of him,—and when the breath of lives was put into his nostrils—the same breath that sustained the lives of all other animals, or in other words, when he was caused to breathe, henceforth he was a living soul. Previous to this he had been a lifeless soul. "Here we see an organized creature, a lifeless soul, which by a specified process becomes a soul alive, and, therefore, begins to perform the functions peculiar to his rank in the universe."

How different is this, the inspired account, from the common notions on the subject of the human constitution. Not a word is said about any immortal, immaterial entity put into the man to complete the process; nothing hinted at except organization, formed from existing world elements. When God would remind Adam of what he was constituted, he says, without the remotest allusion to any thing else, "Dust thou art." Our brethren, who claim to be "par excellence" the orthodox, say, that this is not him at all, it is only the shell that encases him—or as some say, the house in which he dwells temporarily—thus "perverting the truth at the bidding of a dogma which has been not merely enshrined but enthroned in the temple of our divine religion."

Did it never strike you, my dear sir, as very singular, to say the least, that when God inspired Moses to give an account of the formation of Man, he should have thought his mission completed, when he had told how the case was made in which the man was confined? If a mechanician had underaken, by the direction of some mighty potentate of earth, to give an account of the construction of a watch, and had pronounced his work completed after describing the case, would it be esteemed satisfactory, do you suppose? And if not in this instance, why should it in the other? And yet no other part of the Bible professes to give any further account of the matter.

"A soul then is no mystery, so far as its origin and composition is concerned. It can be seen and felt, and weighed; but it is an astonishing mystery, beyond our highest conceptions, how that out of the 'dust of the ground' such a complex being could be formed; a being capable of such varied and sublime functions, such intense sufferings and enjoyments."

But let us inquire more particularly, what is meant by man being a soul? The word soul is, as you well know, the English translation of the Hebrew word Nephesh, and this word comes from a verb nesme, signifying to breathe. Man, then, is a soul, a nephesh, because he lives by breathing; the man became a living soul, or breathing creature—a creature to live by breathing vital air. Such being the case, we would reasonably expect that all creatures in the world, which live by breathing, would have the same designation, and such we find to be the fact.

In the following passages, and many others that might be specified, the same word occurs and is used to describe the various orders of inferior animals. Gen. 1 : 21; "And God created great whales and every living creature" (nephesh.) Verse 24; "Let the earth bring forth the living creature" (nephesh.) Gen. 9 : 10, "Every living creature" (nephesh) "that is with you." Levit. 11 : 46. "of every living creature" (nephesh) "that moveth in the waters." And by referring to the 30th verse of the first chapter of Genesis, you will find it designates "every beast of the earth, and every fowl of the air, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is nephesh;" our translation says, "wherein there is life." Every living creature then, of birds, reptiles, fishes, and beasts, that lives by breathing, is a nephesh, a soul, as certainly as man is; and he is more soul than they are. They are all souls because they have life maintained by inspiring the common electrified air, which is, therefore, called the breath or spirit of lives. "Man's superiority to the other breathing tribes consists, not in his being a soul, but in the magnitude of his powers; in other words, in the loftier position he occupies in the scale of existence, as an intellectual, moral, and responsible agent."

As it is impossible for me, in the limits of such a communication as this, to give all the proofs by which the non-immortality of the soul is established: I will only further suggest one, which to a scholar like yourself, or, in fact, to any man of ordinary good sense, who is honestly searching for the truth, must be irresistible. Indeed, it may be said in the language of a powerful writer on the subject, in England, "It may be regarded as removing the question of the immortality of the soul entirely out of the arena of controversy." It is this. The word nephesh is translated by the inspired writers of the New Testament into the Greek, by the word Psuche. Psuche, then, is the equivalent of nephesh. Now, if you refer to the 15th chapter of Corinthians, where Paul is treating of the resurrection, you will find, verse 44th, he uses the adjective, Psuchikon, literally soulical, to designate the natural, corruptible body, in contradistinction from the word Pneumatikon, which designates the spiritual and immortal body which christians will receive at the resurrection. You see, here, the Spirit of God takes the very word psuche, which orthodoxy says indicates the immortal soul, and from it constructs an adjective by which to teach that the soul is corrupt, and mortal, and perishable. Can any article be more conclusive?"

For the Crisis.

Seamen sometimes Poetical.

It is the general impression, among those who know them not, that sailors are almost entirely devoid of sentiment, and are governed by their passions and appetites, in defiance of the higher order of morality and refinement. This is true only in a limited sense. They, poor fellows, experience so little of the ease and pleasures of this life, that when they get a chance are apt to go it pretty strong. But withal, they are unacquainted with the mean vice of the land debauchee, only when they are victimized by the crowds of pimps who inveigle them into dens, where they are plundered, abused, and not unfrequently murdered. It is not to be wondered at if the exterior of a being should be rough

"Who has been used to talk with winds."

Yet beneath the shaggy surface there often lies a heart guileless as a child's and loving as a woman's, true to the duties and affections of home, cherishing the memory of some dear one far away, and keeping the shrine inviolable amid many temptations which beset his way. I have seen men whose cheek no danger could blanch, drop tears over a portrait or a lock of hair; and one man I knew who bore about with him in a pocket, made in the inside of his flannel shirt for its accommodation, the tiny shoe of his dead child, and at last carried it with him down into the dark caverns of his ocean tomb. There is hardly a ship's company who has not its "Joe Miller," and oftentimes its "poet Laurette,"—he who makes the doggerel, while his mates stand by ready to strike the chorus at the proper time. Some of the poetry, however, is of a better class, and often a religious sentiment pervades the song.

While visiting some of the seamen's boarding houses last week, scattering the "Light Ship," a young man of about twenty years, from Liverpool, England, showed me his log book, from which I took the following lines, composed by himself:—

THE DRUNKARD.

Ah, how silly is the drinker swallowing more than he can need!
To the eye of every thinker he must seem a fool indeed:
So he hurts his constitution, adding drunkenness to thirst,
All for want of resolution not to yield to drink at first.
Was he used to work and labor, honest industry his pride?
Idle now, a wretched neighbor, hurts himself and all beside.
Has he wife of love and beauty, yielding him a plenteous share?
Soon he falls in every duty, nor for dearest ties will care.
Has he children, young and tender, sweetly prattling at his knee?
Nought but curses does he render to his humbling family.
Business must decay and fail him,—none a drunkard will employ;
No disease that e'er could harm him could so sure and soon destroy.
See, religion mourns and warns him—virtue, goodness flee away,—
Does God love the wretch who leaves him? for a drunkard does not pray.
O what shame to see a creature found in shame so much divine,
Ruined and debased, each feature swollen and bloated like the swine!
How debased that noble reason which to worship God was given,—
Foul the drunkard's sin, 'tis treason, and will cast him out of heaven.
How deformed his best affections, warped from heaven to dying earth,—
Can he bear his own reflections? On his base his sordid mirth
To drink he truly sacrifices health and wealth, and self and friends,—
This the only God he prizes, see how slavishly he bends.
But can this his pleasure save him when he's on a dying bed,
When the devils wait to have him, watching round his guilty head?
What new plea, what strong petition can he urge to stop his doom?
Vain his cries, and vain his wishing, when to judgment he shall come!
Stop then, drinker, dash the liquor, dash it on the ground,
Not a serpent stings thee quicker, none with viler poison's found.
Stop then, turn thine eyes to heaven, seek the loving, dying Lord,
Pray to have thy sins forgiven, and thy sin-lost soul restored.
Grace can heal thy sick nature, give thee power thy lusts to quell,
Make thee quite another creature, make thee whole and keep thee well.
Hear the words that gospel sends thee, "Laden sinner, come to me!"
If the Savior does befriend thee, saved forever thou shalt be. James Hatton.

April 13th, 1860.

I will let it speak for itself; but I think a chap like that is worth looking after.

Jno. F. Cotton.

Peculiarities of Ancient Sects.—They constantly appeal to the Bible as the only rule of faith and practice. Scarcely a man or woman not better read in the Scriptures than the doctors of the church. Luther admired their aptness in Scriptures. Every person, even women, are allowed to preach. —Benedict, p. 56–7.

☞ Lord Shaftesbury recently stated, as the result of his personal investigation, that "of all the adult male criminals in London, not two in a hundred who live an honest life up to the age of twenty, afterwards enter upon a course of crime," and that "almost all who enter upon such a course of crime, do so between the ages of eight and sixteen." Oh! the necessity of family discipline!

For the Crisis.

"They will not hear."

No; if they do, they get mad, call you a fanatic, hug the golden god, the clay god, the god of tea, tobacco and snuff, closer than ever. Reason with them, and they pronounce you a fool. Give them Bible arguments, but one volley of smoke from that nasty, abominable, steaming, puffing old pipe will scare it all into nothingness. No use to talk with them; the smoke is so thick they can't see; snuff has spoiled the sense of smelling, no matter how sweet the odor. The mind is dull as iron; no use to offer argument. Let them smoke,—let them die.

Who can admire a man lined in and out with tobacco? The inside coating reflects on the outward appearance, and he's a smoky, dirty, grim, grey color, from head to foot. Then what eyes! The natural lustre is not. The clear, bright expression has given place to a half-and-half color, that looks like an egg-shell rolled in log-wood dye. Then old mother Waste-money brings on some tea, partaking of a peculiar brassy taste, which adds much to the swimming, drowning look of the faded eye. "Saving bacon," indeed, to smoke the animal alive,—smoked from childhood to old age. Father smokes, mother smokes, no wonder my breathing became difficult. If I hadn't run out into the fields, wandered from home, and refused to smoke too, they might have smoked religion out of me,—fairly smoked me to death long ago. Thank a horrible hatred to smoke, I never would puff tobacco.

Brethren, did our Leader or the apostles smoke? Did you ever imagine how pretty Paul would have looked, had he have taken out a huge pipe and smoked and spit, till every one gagged and run, especially after preaching a "practical discourse," showing how we ought to deny ourselves, forsake the world, and "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh?"

M. Matthews.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

Bro. Grant:—The quarterly conference at New Hartford, Butler Co., Iowa, was an excellent one. The meetings were held in a beautiful grove. There were six preachers present. Conference opened Saturday, Aug. 25th, to transact business. At nine o'clock the constitution was read. Then the doors were opened for admission. The church at New Hartford of thirty members were presented by Eld. Castile Churchill, and received; also Eld. S. Wright of New Albion was received. This brother had been in "Doubting Castle," and awhile on the fence, but is now delivered.

While at this place, my child was taken very sick, and has not yet recovered. I wish to express my gratitude for the kindness and hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Churchill and Bro. S. Wright, who attended my child. May the Lord reward them. Five united with the church. The meeting was well attended. I visited the churches at Marble Rock, and baptized one. They all seem to be steadfast in the faith and hope of the gospel.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

From Bro. J. Raymond.

Bro. Grant:—I am glad that I am a pilgrim and a stranger here, and to the world unknown. I live away back in the woods of Wisconsin. I find a people here that like to hear the gospel of the kingdom. It is something new to the most of them. They are afraid of Millerism, and consider it one of the signs of the last days; but praise the Lord, quite a number are now rejoicing in what we believe. I have been here about three years,—all alone, except the Master. We have now a little band of loving children, that are waiting for the Prince of David to raise up the tabernacle. Do the watchmen think he will come soon? O tell us when the chief Shepherd will appear.

I preach, or try to, to quite a large field. We are all poor; our crops have been cut off for three years. I get no money for my services. I have a family of four to care for. Thanks me to my Master, while I was gone out in harvest to get some clothes to wear to meeting, the Lord converted my boy, a lad fifteen years old. How glad was my heart! and would God that it might be gladdened by having a companion reconciled to him.

I am now fifty-two years old. I was a sailor for several years, but am now bound for the land of everlasting glory. I now live in Stockbridge, Calumet Co., Wis. There are a good many of the Stockbridge and Brothertown Indians here. There is one Eld. Dick, who is an Advent preacher. His labors are mostly with his own people. Sometimes he helps me in this place. He will be with me next Lord's day. We have a meeting at Brothertown the 5th of Oct.

Stockbridge, Wis.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Moses Tallmadge, from W. Martinsburg, writes:—"I am seventy-five years of age, and will introduce myself as a man who has been taught to believe in the world's conversion, until, by affliction, I was brought to take the Bible as the only rule for my faith and practice. When I behold professed christendom "having a form of godliness," without the power and without the cross, conforming to a proud and sinful world; and when I see the multitude driving with railroad speed to destruction, and iniquity abounding as it is now, I conclude there is to be no conversion of the world, but the masses will be as they were in the days of Noah. These things speak loudly, 'Escape for thy life; look not behind thee.'"

Bro. Albert P. Allen, Lafayette, R. I., writes:—"The little church here has not been in a very flourishing condition for some time past. Sometimes we have had only two or three out, but we have tried to keep up the interest in our prayer meetings. But at present our labors seem not to have been in vain. On Wednesday evening, at one of our prayer meetings, our hearts were made glad to see one poor sinner rise up and request our prayers. He now testifies to the goodness of God, and invites sinners to come to Jesus and flee from the wrath to come. There are three others that have come to the Savior and are now giving testimony for him. Dear Brn., still be faithful; trust in Him who is able to save to the uttermost; soon Jesus will come and claim his own."

A Stranger writes:—"Truly I might have said a few days since with the Psalmist, 'My steps had well nigh slipped.' But as God would have it, a kind friend put into my hand "The Three Worlds," or Earth's past, present and future, by H. L. Hastings. I read it, and to-day I can thank God it was written. In my youthful days I was brought from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. Since 1833, I have been looking to see God raise up a people; for, as far as I am acquainted, I could find no order but what had fallen from their former steadfastness. When the cry was made in 1842–3, 'Behold the Bridegroom cometh,' I was among the number that heard the joyful sound. But oh my weakness, my weakness! Shall I confess it? Yes, I will. I have been swayed by circumstances. In 1844, my husband, then living, was a preacher of the Free-will Baptist order. He, together with his church, was cut off from the quarterly meeting (I was among the number) for the crime of attending an Advent camp-meeting; this being agreeable to a resolution passed by that body. Notwithstanding the crosses we had borne, the reproaches that had come upon us, we went back to the church after the time passed. Yet my husband, as long as he lived, preached the coming of the Lord nigh. He died as the good man dies, and I believe he will have a resurrection with the just.

Years have passed on. My present husband preaches to a Congregational church, having all the conviction that I have, that the day of the Lord is nigh. Yet I fear he does not fully give the alarm. O what shall we do in that great day? God save us, is my prayer. I write to relieve my troubled mind. Will not some kind friend say what I shall do? Pray for us. A stranger in distress."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 18th. Steamship Europa, from Liverpool 8th, via. Queenstown 9th, passed Cape Race, on Sunday evening, en route for Boston via. Halifax.

ITALY.

Garibaldi landed at Salerno on the 5th, and was expected to arrive at Naples at any moment.

A battle was considered likely to occur on the 7th at Nocoro and Salerno. The royal troops occupied a strong position, and in case of defeat would retire upon Gaeta.

The Queen of Spain had offered the King of Naples a refuge in Spain, which the latter accepted.

The brigade Caldarelli is reported to have passed over to Garibaldi.

The Swiss journals denounce the position of the troops of Gen. Lamoiciere, and call on the Pope to disband his foreign mercenaries.

It is rumored that Count Cavour has sent a note to Rome, announcing that any movement of the Pontifical troops beyond the Roman frontier would be considered an act of intervention, and Piedmont would in such a case consider herself justified in occupying the Marches.

The latest dispatches from Naples are to the evening of the 5th. They announce that the King left there for Gaeta on that day on board a Spanish vessel. Before leaving he reduced the penalties of prisoners.

Garibaldi dined at Lavaca on the 6th, and was expected to enter Naples on the 7th, as Lavaca is only twenty-six miles from the capital.

The advanced guard of Garibaldi's army arrived at Salerno on the noon of the 6th.

Naples was tranquil.

The London Times editorially says, "the King has gone to Gaeta only to consider whether he will fly to Madrid or Vienna. Naples is as good as lost, and the turn of Rome must come next."

AUSTRIA.

It is reported that 35,000 Austrian troops had received orders to leave Vienna for Trieste.

Recent disturbances at Undine had led to the discovery of a great conspiracy favorable to Garibaldi. Numerous arrests had been made.

GERMANY.

A general meeting of the National Union at Coburg unanimously adopted a programme for the transfer of the central power to Prussia, and the convening of a German Parliament.

The Grand Duke of Mechlenburg is dead.

Bologna, Sept. 8—An Insurrectionary movement has taken place in the province of Pesaro, and four hundred of the insurgents had attacked and defeated the Papal troops.

Telegraphic communication with Naples is interrupted.

Turin, Sept. 8.—The manager of the Southern Railway has been requested to prepare for an extraordinary transport of troops.

The third, fourth, and eighth corps de armee are about to be placed on a war footing, and the soldiers on furlough have received orders to join their regiments.

Your Halifax agent is informed, on what he thinks reliable authority, that the British Government received a dispatch after the Europa left Liverpool, to the effect that Garibaldi entered Naples triumphantly and without opposition on the 7th.

FRANCE.

The Paris correspondent of the Liverpool Times writes:—The displeasure with which the Emperor views the resolution taken by the Pope, of confiding the organization of his army and of his defense to Gen. Lamoriciere, one of his political adversaries, has a great effect on the policy which he is pursuing at this moment. French influence has been proved powerless against the acts of Gen. Lamoriciere. But in the event of any mishap befalling him, such a circumstance would be far from displeasing at Paris; and the French government, in fact, has already arranged how to act in the event of the disorganization of the Roman army, and its consequent defeat, which appears inevitable."

AUSTRIA.

Austria is evidently anticipating a conflict with the Italians for the retention of Venetia, and she is also threatened with another insurrection in Hungary. If the first outbreak should occur, the second will assuredly follow. The recent intelligence from Pesth leaves little doubt that the train is already laid for the conflagration. General Benedek has determined to resign the Governorship of Hungary, on the ground that he cannot reconcile himself to the idea of doing what the authorities at Vienna require—namely, to shoot and hang those who are likely to rise in insurrection to regain their national liberties. Another, and perhaps a still stronger motive, is said to influence him—the belief that, in the event of a conflict, the army cannot be relied on.

SARDINIA.

The Paris letter in the London Daily News says that unless the Pope, yielding to the demand of Piedmont, at once dismissed Lamoriciere and his bands, they will probably be attacked immediately by a Sardinian army, with Victor Emmanuel in person at its head.

TURKEY.

A letter from Constantinople says:—"In spite of all the military displays, the arrests and executions that are taking place, and although everything may appear quiet, a desperate outbreak is expected here from day to day. Do not be astonished at whatever may happen. The Turk has confidence in the fulfilment of a prophecy of fanatical doctrine that the time is at hand when the Turkish empire will be at an end, and consequently it has become a common saying among the Turks that, as they gained Constantinople by the sword, they will mark the loss of it with the dagger.

GARIBALDI'S PROCLAMATION.

Garibaldi has addressed the following proclamation to the people of the Neapolitan continent:

The opposition of the strangers interested in our humiliation and internal factions have impeded Italy from constituting herself.

To-day, it seems, Providence has put an end to so much misfortune. The unanimity of all the provinces, and the victory which is smiling everywhere on the sons of liberty, are proofs that the evil times of this land of genius draw toward their end.

A step still remains, and that step I do not fear. If we compare the small means which led a handful of brave men to these straits with the great means which we can dispose of now, every one can see that the enterprise is not difficult.

But I wish, nevertheless, to avoid bloodshed among Italians, and therefore turn to you, sons of the Neapolitan continent.

I have seen that you are brave, and do not wish to see it again. Our blood we will shed together on the corpses of the enemies of Italy, but between us let there be peace.

Accept the right hand which has never served a tyrant, but which has been hardened in the service of the people. I ask you to help to constitute Italy without the loss of her sons, and with you I will serve her or die for her.

G. Garibaldi.

RESULT OF THE SYRIAN MASSACRES.

The Beyrout correspondent of the Daily News, writing on the 22d August, says:—"I mentioned that the number of Christians massacred in Damascus, during five or six days that the reign of terror lasted, amounted to 5500 men, women and children. This has now been ascertained to be correct. The total number of persons killed in cold blood by Druses and Moslems since the disturbances first commenced at the end of May, including the various towns on the Lebanon, Sidon, Damascus and elsewhere, amounts to the fearful number of 12,000, besides those who fell in open fight, when as yet the war was a mere sectarian outbreak. The amount of property plundered, burnt, destroyed, and otherwise swept away during the same period—not counting the consequent losses to trade, but simply the actual loss of money, jewels, houses, furniture, horses, cattle, silk, cocoons, silk factories, mulberry and olive trees, vines, oil, wine, grain, flour, and (a very considerable item) church plate, has been very carefully calculated, and is found to represent no smaller a sum than between fourteen and fifteen millions sterling. The number of villages destroyed amounts to 163. The churches burnt are more than 220. Of convents, large and small, seven have been destroyed, and nearly 200 priests have been butchered in various parts."

LATEST.

The steamship Adriatic brings foreign files to the 12th inst.

GARIBALDI'S ENTRY INTO NAPLES

The London Times of the 12th has the following dispatch:

Marseilles, Sept. 11. Letters received from Naples to the evening of the 8th inst. state that the Sardinian flag was flying from all the forts. Before Garibaldi's entry into Naples the Sardinian Admiral had threatened to fire upon any Neapolitan vessel which should attempt to proceed to Gaeta. Garibaldi had found an immense quantity of war materiel, and 80,000,000 lire in the bank. A Te Deum had been celebrated in the Cathedral by Father Gavazzi, the people shouting "Hurrah for Victor Emmanuel!" "Hurrah for Garibaldi!" The people were armed, some even with pikes and sticks.

General illuminations had taken place.

The Papal Nuncio, the most of the Ambassadors, and Count Trapani had followed the king to Gaeta.

The king had appointed Signor Ulloa, brother of General Ulloa, as his Prime Minister, and had issued a proclamation.

THE PAPAL STATES.

Rome, Sept, 8. A panic prevails here. M. Merrode has left for the Neapolitan frontier.

The town of Frosinone has been declared in a state of siege.

The news of an insurrection at Ponte Corvo has been confirmed.

Sardinian troops are advancing through Tuscany and the Romagna, to be in readiness to enter the Papal States.

General Lamoriciere has concentrated his troops at Spoleto, and has denied the alleged order of the day, in which he was said to have directed his soldiers to plunder any town which should rise in insurrection.

Sept, 9. General Pianelli has arrived here to announce to the Pope the retreat of the King of Naples to Gaeta.

Monsignor Merode, with 200 gendarmes has proceeded to Frosinone, where 5000 workmen engaged on the railways threaten an outbreak.

Bologna, Sept. 10.—The town of Urbino has been fortified. The Provisional Government has proclaimed the annexation of the province of Urbino to Sardinia amid shouts of "Long live Victor Emmanuel!"

The Papal troops are discouraged, and are retiring. They offer no resistance, but commit acts of ferocity on their passage.

Sunday in Paris.—We hardly know the value of our Sabbaths till we witness the evils of Sunday desecration as developed in those lands where God's holy day is not devoted to his service. Rev. Dr. Leyburn spent a recent Sabbath in the French capital, and he thus writes to the Presbyterian of his impressions:

"Having reached Paris on Saturday evening, we had, at the outset, the opportunity for seeing a Parisian Sunday. And how striking and shocking the contrast with what we have been accustomed to in our own Sabbath keeping land. One sees nothing here to distinguish the Lord's day from any other day in the week, unless it be a greater excess of frivolity. The shops are open just as usual, workmen are hammering away at a new building adjacent, carts loaded with stone and lime are lumbering along the street, and just opposite us, at one set of windows, tailors are busy plying their needles, whilst at another women are working and knitting fancy worsted work. The military, of course, are parading, and the roll of drums and flash of bayonets, looks almost as if we were in the midst of one of those revolutions with which this gay and wicked capital has so much abounded. Verily, it would seem as if, in our short transit across the Channel, we had suddenly fallen upon a heathen land."

Is the Sun growing Cold and Dark?—There are now more spots on the sun than have been seen before for many years; some of these are visible through a smoked glass to the naked eye. Several stars—some of them of great brilliancy, which, from their ascertained distance, must have been as large as our sun—have totally disappeared from the sky; and the question has been raised among astronomers, whether the light and heat of the sun are gradually fading away. As this would be accompanied by the destruction of all the plants and animals on the earth, it is rather an interesting question. The sun's light and heat are diminished by the dark spots at the present time about 1 per cent.—Scientific American.

Horses for Louis Napoleon.—The French legation has lately visited Boston, to approve the purchase by a well known horse dealer of five superb Vermont horses for the stable of the French Emperor, who already possesses twenty-four specimens of the same breed. A correspondent of the New York Evening Post writes:

The new horses are fifteen hands high, having a fine action, and a speed of not less than 2: 50. They are of the emperor's favorite color, a deep bay, as are nearly all of the emperor's stock of four hundred, and their tails are of the natural length, with one exception. The cost was between $2000 and $3000 a pair. These horses will be taken to Europe in one of the Vanderbilt steamers.

Married.

In Providence, R. I., Sept. 17th, 1860, by Joseph D. Brown, Bro Albert C. Garner and Sr. Ann E. Arnold, both of River Point, R. I.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

Meeting of the "Christian Association."—Those interested in devising means to make a more earnest and effectual effort to arouse a wicked world and a sleeping church to the all-important truth that the Lord is soon coming, are invited to meet at Salem, Mass., Tuesday, Oct. 16th, 10 1-2 A. M., at the Union Street Chapel, for this purpose. Let those who cannot come, pray that the Lord may direct those who may assemble to adopt the best mode of action, and help them to do all things to his glory. For particulars, see Crisis No. 1, Vol. 12, Sept. 12th.

M. Grant, for the Committee.

☞ The Tract on the Rich man and Lazarus is now ready. This tract also contains the subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single 3 cts; 25 cts. per dozen; $1 50 per hundred. Postage 1 ct. To be had at the Crisis office, or of me, at East Boston, Mass. J. S. White.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a protracted meeting held in Foster, (Tabernacle,) commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 2nd, and continuing through the week and over the next Sabbath. Preaching brethren from abroad are expected. Let all who love the Lord and can, attend this meeting. Come praying. All preaching brethren are invited.

In behalf of the church,

M. R. Phetteplace.

Notice.

The Christian Chapel at Sandy Hill, N. Y., will be dedicated for religious worship on Thursday, the 4th day of Oct., at 2 o'clock, P. M. It is expected that Elder John Howell, of Poultney, Vt., will be present on the occasion. The meetings will continue evenings during the week. J. Parry.

Notice.

There will be a discussion at Frankfort Mills, Me, commencing Oct. 4th, at 7 o'clock, P. M., to continue three evenings, or longer if necessary. Question, "Does the Bible or philosophy prove that man has a spirit that has a conscious existence separate from the body?" M. Taylor, Affirmative; J. Hemenway, Negative.

Notice.

Elder J. V. Himes will preach in Boston, (Advent Chapel,) Sept. 30th; and Eld. Edwin Burnham (Sabbath) Oct. 7th, all day.

Conference in Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 5th, 6th and 7th. I shall be present and preach in the afternoon and evening of Friday, Saturday and Sunday, all day. All interested are invited to attend. Subject to be discussed,—the Time, and the signs of the Advent in 1868. J. V. Himes.

Eld. M. Grant in Canada East.

At the earnest request of the Christian Association in Danville, C. E., Eld. M. Grant will revisit, and hold meetings with the church in this place on last Lord's day in Sept. and first in Oct., the Lord willing. I would most respectfully recommend that the churches in these townships, viz., Melbourne, Hatley, and Barstown, etc., would endeavor to secure a portion of his labor for the good of their health, before he returns.

J. Porter.

Iowa, Minn. and Wisconsin Christian Conference.

Our fourth annual conference will be holden at Springville, Badax Co., Wis., commencing Oct. 4th, at 2 o'clock, P, M., and continuing over Lord's day. Springville is about thirty miles from La Crosse (on the Mississippi river,) from which the stage runs every Tuesday and Friday, and about thirty-five from Sparta (on the Milwaukee and Lacrosse R. R.,) from which place a stage runs every Wednesday to Viroqua, only three or four miles from Springville. Strangers can inquire for Wm. A. Morse, or W. Sheldon.

P. S. W. Deyo, W. Sheldon, } Evangelists.

Notice.

The brethren in Ohio, through their committee, Geo. W. Cherry, Bro. Southwick, Bro. Fish of Dayton, and P. Alling of Norwalk, have determined on holding a conference this fall in Northern Ohio. They choose as

The place North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio.

The time, so far as determined, is Oct. 26th, Friday, 11 A. M., and over the Lord's day, the 28th. The first, or morning meeting, may hold daily as long as needful. The second meeting early in the evening. Thus we shall not be hurried in our services, nor spend time needlessly in going and coming. All "who have an ear to hear" are invited to "hear" the proof positive, as holy writ and acknowledged fact, that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Those who believe are exhorted to come and help forward the objects of the conference. The Judge has said in relation to spreading the knowledge of his approach,—"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing!" "Now the just shall live by faith; but if he draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Come then, beloved, to dispense, as well as to "receive," more of "the manifold grace of God." To them that have shall be given, and they shall have more abundance.

In behalf of the brethren, and subject to their amendment if deemed needful.

J. B. Cook

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

Also, a tent meeting in Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill., near Bro. Larken Scott's, to commence Sept. 27th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday. We hope to see a general rally. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be there to preach the word.

Also, there is to be two tent meetings in Brown Co., Ill.; one at Mt. Pleasant, or Mt. Stirling, as Brn. Raymond and others may arrange, to commence Oct. 12th, 2 o'clock, P. M., (Wednesday) and continue over Sunday.

The other at Ripley, to commence Oct 3d, (Wednesday) at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield are to be in attendance at all of the above named meetings and preach the word. I expect God will bless his word to the salvation of souls. I hope the brethren in the different localities will make the meetings a special subject of prayer, that there may be much good done in the name of Jesus.

Moses Chandler, for the Church.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld J. B. Cook will preach in Boston, (Chapman Hall)............Sept. 30th

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren at the Axe Factory, Westford, Ct., Oct. 7th.

C. W. BAKER.

Bro. J. Hemenway appoints to preach in Portland, Me..............Oct. 4th

The Lord willing, I will attend meetings as follows:—

Great Works, Me..........1st Sunday in Oct.
Holden, Me..........Sunday, Oct. 7th
Milo or Sebec..........Sunday, Oct. 14th
3d Sunday in Oct., 21st, as the brethren may appoint.
4th Sunday in Milo or Sebec, as the friends may arrange.

THOMAS SMITH.

Sr. Sarah Higgins appoints to preach Sunday, Sept. 30th, at the Advent Chapel, Warehouse Point, Ct.

The Lord willing, I will preach at South Windsor, Ct., (Pleasant Valley) School-house, Oct. 7th.

Eld. S. P. BABCOCK.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portland, Me., Wednesday evening, Oct. 3d; and commence a four days meeting at Machias Port, Me., Oct. 5th, if the boat from Portland arrives on that day, or the first arrival after. HIRAM MUNGER.

Bro. J. T. Ongley appoints to preach near Bro. John Sherwood's, Waterford, Pa., evening, Oct. 2d.
Ravlin Hill, near Clymer, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Oct. 3d and 4th.
Findley's Lake, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., evening, Oct. 5th.
Ripley Hill, Chautauqua Co., three miles south of the State Line depot, Oct. 6th and 7th.

Providence permitting, I shall meet with the friends in Prospect, Ct., where Bro. Mix may appoint, Oct. 13th and 14th. Will Bro. Ira Morgan please meet me? Middlebury the 16th. At Bro. Porter's, Roxbury, the 17th. Wauraumaug the 18th. JOSEPH GREGORY.

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach, if the Lord will, at Cheshire Street..........Sept. 30th
North Canton..........Oct. 7th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Bro. L. C. Thomas.—"The Voice of the Prophets" is published quarterly by Eld. J. V. Himes, Boston, at 25 cents a year.

Cash Receipts.

M M Lewis 280, 30 cts; T W Titus 286, $4.00; W Simes, 3 copies, 289, $3.00; D Austin 293, $1.50; S P Whitney 260, 32 cts; N W Wait 21 copies, for the Sandy Hill Brn., 312, $33.33; I F Lovejoy 260, $1.62, G Brackett 277, 65 cts, E Hamlin 286, $3.00.

C Hallenbach 273, C W Ward 273, Mrs. M A Wasgatt 265,—50 cts. each.

H Shumway 286, J Thorpe 286, R Shepherdson 286, N Clark, Jr., 279, N D White 286, Mrs. L Howard 286, Capt. D Tripp 286, E E Miles 254, T J Philbrick 286, Mrs. B Herrick 273, I F Harden 273, Sav. Case 260, L McDuffee 262, L Bristol 280, H A May 286, O Crumbee 286, Mrs. M M Rose 273, W Stark 273, M Hamlin 286, L B Graham 286, J Morrison 273, Mrs. S B Stewart 280, H Haskins 286, J Palmer 286, C Shattock 286, E Allen 286, L R Gilman 314, N L Curtis 286, R J Church 286, E C Knight 286, J Tinkcom 286, G W Wiggin 286, J E Phelps 273, W F Collier 280, S Ayres 282, R Curtis 286, G L Makepeace 286, M Tewksbury 282, H B Baldwin 282, H M Thomas 257, T Wright 228, W Chapin 286, J McLeod 290, Mrs. L Burgess 286, C Fletcher 280,—$1.00 each.

N Grant 290, G Wells 286, J A Cole 276, R G Kirk 195, Dr. E S Robbins 305, J Lynn 283, E T Cheese 286, H Richardson 286, J Gregory, 403, G W Turner 221, H T Miller 322, O Rawson 279, G S Gates 256, W E Harris 286, A P Barringer 265, J B Mooney 286, J Morrill, Jr, 286, S K Fenton 286, E Butterfield 286, F Schellinger 286, O C Allen 286, E G Emmons 286, W Jackson 312, H Brightman 286, Al. Slocum 286, B Burlingame 286, A Browning 286, W Vreeland 286, P Pfeil 286, C Nichols 286, Mrs. L Horton 286, C Alarton 286, B B Estes 276, G W Thomas 286, W S Olmsted 299, W Rowarth 286, L Mills 286, M E Green 286, G Dunlap 286, M Young 286, C Bartlett 290, H D Reed 286, J Clifford 286, Eld. Jed. Raymond 286, E Melcher 286, P Blanchard 248, W McCherry 286, Mrs. A Stewart 255, W W Barnett 186, T Chambers 286,—$1.00 each.

S Holt 269, M H Irish 304, L C Wood 265, R Slayton 315, S Marsh 278, Mrs. J Allen 312, W Cowdry 273, J P Green 312, Amasa Lucas 304, Mrs. M Bellows 312, J Shattock 312, J D Swain 260, D C Tourtellott 312,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.—N L Robie $5.00, C Goodrich $14.00, S Hale 25 cts, W H Kendrick $1.00, R Slayton 10 cts, I Dimmick $1.00, J Emery $1.00, H B Baldwin 50 cts, Mrs. L Burgess $1.00.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. Isaac L. Allen, 10 Howard Street, Albany, N. Y., has an assortment of our books and tracts, and will fill orders at the same rates that are charged at this office.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Tracts from the Tract Fund.—Friends at the West can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.

H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant.—Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 3 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low, or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Brooks, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS
OF
H. L. HASTINGS,
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp. $1 00

The Great Controversy between God and Man: its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp. 60

Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 128 pp. Paper, 30 cts. Cloth 60

Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing 00

Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing 00

Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp., 50

Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp., 50

Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 320 pp., 75

The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt, 25

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm. Ramsey, D.D., edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth 40

Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper, 15

The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, 87 pp., 18

Tracts of 24 Pages.—3 cts. single; $1 for 1600 pages—by mail 1200 pp for $1.

The Church not in Darkness,	by H. L. H.	pages 24
The Three Worlds,	by H. L. H.	" 24
The Last Days,	by H. L. H.	" 24
Plain Truths,	by H. L. H.	" 28
Will all men be saved?	by H. L. H.	" 24
Voice of Warning	by D. T. Taylor	" 24
The New Heavens and Earth,	"	" 24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos.,	"	" 24
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H. &c.	" 36
Important Questions, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H.	" 36
State of the Dead,	by John Milton	" 24
The Intermediate State,	by H. G.	" 24
Destiny of the Wicked	by H. L. H	" 12
Future Punishment,	by H. G.	" 12
The Key of Truth,	by W. S.	" 12
Man's Future State	"	" 12
Letter on Dress	by Adoniram Judson	" 12
The Day of Judgment,	by St. Cyril	" 12
Outline of the Coast,	by A Voyager	" 8
The Night Cometh,	by John Adey	" 8
Gems, 9 Nos., poetry,	by H. L. H.	" 12
One Thing	"	" 8
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ,		" 4
The Duration of the Earth	by A. Clarke	" 4
Hope and Duty of the Church,	M. Henry	" 4
The Restitution.	by St. Cyril	" 4
A Warning Voice,	by Cotton Mather	" 4
Loving Christ's Appearing,	by Baxter	" 4
Little Children, Love one another		" 4
The One Resting Place,	by H. Bonar	" 4
My Friend,	by H. L. H.	" 4
Abundant Grace	"	" 4
Wondrous Love	"	" 4
Go in Peace	"	" 4
Living Water	"	" 4
The Banner	Anonymous	" 4
The Blood of Christ	"	" 4
Are you a Christian?	by H. L. H.	" 4
Why not Now?	"	" 4
Are you Pardoned?	"	" 4
Are you Safe?	"	" 4
Are you Saved?	"	" 4
Do you Pray?	"	" 4
When Will He Come?	by J. C. Ryle	" 4
Statement of Account	by H. L. H.	" 1
Man in Death	By Bishop Law	" 4
Forty Questions on Immortality		" 4

SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.

No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked		" 1
No. 2. The State of the Dead		" 1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus		" 1
No. 4. The Resurrection		" 1
No. 5. Plain Truths		" 1
No. 6. The Judgment		" 1

POETRY.

Brother, Shall we Meet?	by H. L. H.	" 2
Sister, Shall we Meet?	"	" 2
Stand up for Jesus!	"	" 1
The Harvest is Past	"	" 1
Beyond!	"	" 1
At Rest!	"	" 1
We would see Jesus	by Josephine	" 1
A Little While	by J. C.	" 1

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

Life Insurance, Envelope Size	H. L. H.	" 12
Home	"	" 12
Lost, Lost	"	" 8
Peace in Christ	"	" 4
Worth Knowing	"	" 4
All things are Yours	"	" 4
Now	"	" 4
Assurance	"	" 4
About God	"	" 4

The foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $8, with the order, shall receive $12. worth of books at the retail prices. Tracts are sent by mail, 1200 pages, on the receipt of a dollar. When sent by express, or at the expense of the buyer, 1600 pages will be sent for one dollar. Terms cash. Persons who desire to do good can obtain Four hundred tracts, of four pages each, for $1. These may be widely distributed and open the way for religious conversation. Persons may thus be a blessing to those around them. The poor can have any of these tracts sent to them free, by remitting stamps to pay the postage. Ministers can have specimen copies of the tracts and pamphlets sent free. All letters, orders, and remittances should be addressed to the Publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 43 Weybosset St., Providence, R. I.

January, 1860.

 These publications can be obtained in Boston, of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York: G. W. Young, 138 William st.; Philadelphia: A. F. Porter, 725 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publisher through all Booksellers.

Bibles of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Minion, references between the verses, $1.00 to $2.25; Nonpareil, marginal references, or references between verses, $1.20 to $2.12. Pearl, references between verses, $1.75. Marginal references, $1.25 to $1.75. Diamond, marginal references, 75 cts. to $2. Bindings, Roan, Calf and Morocco; these make the difference in price.

For the Crisis.

"No Room."

"There was no room for them in the inn."—LUKE 2: 7.

No room: for Bethlehem's streets were thronged with those
Who came from various parts, at Cæsar's word,
To pay their customed tribute. Gathered there
The rich, the poor, the young, the old—and in their thoughts
None seemed to care but for himself. The busy mart,
The crowded inn, the throng, gave constant proof
The poor and weak must suffer. Such the scene and such
The day our Lord was born. Therefore the manger
Was his bed; and when the wise men came
To worship him, they found him there, the child
Of poverty.
"There was no room." And thus it was
When o'er Judea's plains he roamed, without
A home or place to lay his head. The mount
At night beheld his grief—the voiceless night
Witnessed his prayer—the garden saw his agony—
The tree drank of his blood—the earth
Heaved at his dying groans—the grave
Received his corse—cast out of men, despised
And crucified. Owning him God, the earth,
The air, the sea, his word obeyed.
Yea, demons gave him room whom man thrust out.
His servants too—pilgrims they wander o'er
The earth, by men despised. There is no room.
There shall be room. Again to earth he comes,
Heaven's armies follow in his train. "Make room,"
He cries; "Bring forth the dead!" From far are seen
God's Israel coming through the air to meet
Their welcome Lord. The last great battle's fought,
The victory won. The kingdoms of this earth
Are now become the kingdoms of our Lord
And of his Christ; forever he shall reign.

FRANK BURR.

Honeoye, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

My Experience.

For twenty-three years I have been a lover of this world and its vanities. Although not what the world called a bad person, I was self-righteous, and thought I had religion enough of my own that was better than the Bible. I believed that, as God created man, he would surely save him. I knew that I did not serve him,—did not obey him. I seldom prayed, but was quite attentive to church. I could read the Bible in order that I might show others how to live; in this way, I let worldly morality be the tree to bring forth its own peceptive fruit. Once during this period, I attempted to follow one of my associates to the anxious seat to be prayed for by the people of God; but while there, I felt no change, and thought that it was a delusion; yet I never could deny but there was something in religion, and if it was for me, I wished I might get it sooner or later. Thus I went on sinning against God with a high hand, rolling sin as a sweet morsel under my tongue, profaning the name of the Most High, exerting that influence among all my associates which would have a tendency to draw them off from every thing that was good and right, not willing to own up to conviction. About four months since, while at work in the field, something ran through my mind to this effect: "Why do you insult the spirit of GOD?" for it is appointed unto man once to die and after death the judgment. I thought for a moment, and tried to drown it by worldly thoughts, but all in vain. Not a single day from that time to my conversion came, but some of my past life would come up before me, and show me my lost and undone condition while out of Christ. But finally, I drove it off with the idea that by and by would do; but that conviction still grated throughout my unbelieving heart.

Just after the campmeeting had commenced, while at work in the field, I was accosted by a gentleman in this manner,—"How do potatoes turn out?" I answered, nothing extra; in the meantime he was at my side. After a little conversation with him, I found that he was from the campground, and we conversed for nearly an hour, during which time he made such an impression upon my mind that I had to acknowledge to him that I was a sinner, and would like to be a christian. He told me how to go to work, and what to do, and if I would attend the meeting in the evening it might be the starting point for me to decide either for life or death.

Time will not permit me to give all the details. But I went to looking for myself. I obeyed my convictions, and was led out of darkness into God's wondrous and marvellous light. I now hate the things that I once loved and love those things that I once despised. My sins have been washed away in the precious blood of Jesus.

And now, dear brothers and sisters in Christ, I am determined, by the grace of God, to live a humble, meek, and lowly follower of that Jesus who is to come and establish his kingdom upon this earth, and give his saints who shall have done his will an inheritance therein. My prayer is, that my life may be well ordered, and my conversation godly; that I may be watching unto prayer for the appearing of my Lord and Master, when he shall come to judge the world, and that my reward shall be, "come ye blessed of my Father." May I have the prayers of Christ's people, as I feel that I am but a babe in Christ.

ANDREW J. BOIES.

Westford, Mass.

IRISHMEN.—Historians assert that during the ninth century Ireland produced the most learned men of which the world could boast, and the greatest number of them. It will also be remembered that the two first Methodist societies in America were formed under the zealous labors of two Irishmen, viz., Philip Embury and Robert Strawbridge,—one society in New York, and the other in Maryland, the same year.

For the Crisis.

Brief Sayings.

Truth, like the light, appears more luminous after a night of error. What thou doest in God's service, thou doest for thyself, as well as for him and his people; grudge not them, for thereby thou thyself shall also suffer.

If thou art weary in a time of peace, what wilt thou do when troubles compass thee even to the neck? The sword religion will be rejected at the last, and meek subjection alone shall save thee; therefore learn to keep thyself under, while yet thou mayest.

Truth would sicken at thy covetousness and love of power; yea, would spue thee out utterly, wert thou not sweetened by its proximity to thee.

When the last series of consecutive truths come, dost thou well to say the full end hath not come, though only in its beginning? Say not that the time is a mistake, but that it only fulfilleth itself less rapidly than thou lookedst for. Feed not thy friend with stones who bringeth cooling waters to thee, lest when thou wouldst, thou find no place for repentance.

If thou wouldst know the year of God's full judgment, confess thy ignorance and thy dependence upon him for light. Yet if thou asketh to know the time, thou art not wise, for his word shall never fail.

When God calleth one to work in his vineyard, doth he ask a permit from thee, or that the servant's gifts should be like thine? Know that all gifts are not alike, and be content that thou art free from the burdens of those whose gifts thou art insufficient for.

If we complain that we are not equally honored with others, while we show not an equal control over our appetites, we complain at the only means of knowing each other's worthiness. So also is it in other respects, such as diversities of gifts. Though thou art superior to another in the one respect, yet he may be equal, yea more than equal to thee, by his superiority in the other.

He that useth that which offendeth a weak brother, walketh not charitably, yet not utterly, if he is fruitful in other good works. For verily though by one fault a man is guilty of all, yet to no greater degree than the fault is sinful. If thou lovest thy brother, thou wilt show it by thy works; and as far only as thou usest the means in thy power to do him good, canst thou claim to love him.

H. D.

For the Crisis.

Confidence.

What would this life be if we had not some kind friend in whom we could confide. when this weary, care-worn heart is overburdened with the grief and strife of every day life? What a solace to have one sympathizing heart that beats in unison with ours; one to whom we can open the pages of this every day history of our inmost soul.

When the calm of life is ruffled by the waves of adversity, or the heart is rejoicing in the gladness of success, it is then with implicit confidence we pour into the willing ear our griefs or joys; it is then we meet a sympathetic return, which seemingly relieves us of half our burden. Such confidence should be cherished with something akin to holiness. It is a pearl of inestimable worth.

ANNIE.

Amboy, Ill.

For the Crisis.

Gem Jottings.

[Selected from diverse authors, by a Book-worm.]

THE LAND ELYSIAN.

Beyond these chilling winds and cloudy skies—
Beyond death's gloomy portal—
There'll be a land where beauty never dies,
Where saints shall live, immortal.

"TRIBULATION."—We all know, in a general way, that this word—"tribulation"—which occurs not seldom in Scripture and in Liturgy, means affliction, sorrow, anguish; but it is quite worth our while to know how it means this, and to question the word a little closer. It is derived from the Latin "tribulum,"–which was the thrashing instrument or roller whereby the Roman husbandman separated the corn from the husks; and "tribulatio," in its primary significance, was the act of this separation. But some Latin writer of the christian church appropriated the word and image for the setting forth of a higher truth; and sorrow, distress, and adversity, being the appointed means for the separating in men of their chaff from their wheat, of whatever in them was light and trivial and poor, from the solid and the true; therefore he called these sorrows and griefs "tribulations,"—thrashings, that is of the inner spiritual man, without which there could be no fitting him for the heavenly garner. —R. C. FRENCH, Prof. of Div., King's College.

SELF-WISE MAN.—There is a class of aspirants to gentility who refuse to recognize any person not dressed in the style which they suppose fashionable among the higher classes. A Glasgow butcher's wife, in the Highlands, attired in all the magnificence of her satins, laces and jewelry, returned the courteous salute of the little woman in the gingham dress and gray shawl with a contemptuous toss of the head, and flounced past, to learn, to her great mortification, that she had missed an opportunity of forming an acquaintance with the Queen. So a large class of pretenders to science refuse to become acquainted with Bible truth, because it is not shrouded in the technicalities of science, but displays itself in the plain speech of the common people to whom it was given. They will have it, that, because its author used common language, it was because he could not afford any other; and because he did not contradict every vulgar error believed by the people to whom he spoke, it was because he knew no better; and because the Hebrews knew nothing of modern discoveries in astronomy, geology, and the other sciences, and the Bible does not contain lectures on these subjects, the God of the Hebrews must have been equally ignorant, and the Bible consequently beneath the notice of the philosopher.—FABLES OF INFIDELITY, by R. Paterson.

GRACE SUFFICIENT.—And God is able to make all grace abound towards you; that ye, always having all sufficiency, in all things, may abound to EVERY GOOD WORK.—PAUL.

For the Crisis.

Steady Work for Idle Moments.

Nothing to do, say you? You have the grain threshed, wood drawn, fencing stuff got out, the pork and beef marketed, and now nothing to do; but you want steady work. Be up and doing then. There's a swarm of bees settling down around you; one by one and hour by hour they are to be taken. Hive them, feed them, make them the inmates of your home, and partners of your every act. They will fill your heart with nectar, delicious and unalloyed. Lest you should mistake any of them, please find below a list of the queens.

B patient, B prayerful, B humble, B mild,
B wise as a Solon, B meek as a child;
B studious, B thoughtful, B loving, B kind,
B sure you make matter subservient to mind.
B cautious, B prudent, B trustful, B true,
B courteous to all men, B friendly to few;
B temperate in argument, pleasure and wine,
B careful of conduct, of money, of time.
B cheerful, B grateful, B hopeful, B firm,
B peaceful, B benevolent, willing to learn;
B courageous, B gentle, B liberal, B just,
B aspiring, B modest, because thou art dust.
B patient, B circumspect, sound in the faith,
Be active, B devoted, B faithful till death;
B honest, B holy, transparent and pure,
B dependent, B Christ-like, and you'll B secure.

P. C. W.

For the Crisis.

One of the Beauties of Dr. A. Clark, on Heb. 2: 9, last clause.

"That he by the grace of God should taste DEATH for every man."—PAUL.

See Clark's Note.—"In consequence of the fall of Adam, the whole human race became sinful in their nature; and in their practice, added transgression to sinfulness of disposition, and thus became exposed to endless perdition. To redeem them, Jesus Christ took on him the nature of man, and SUFFERED THE PENALTY DUE TO THEIR SINS."

Query,—Did he suffer "endless perdition?" "It was a custom in ancient times to take off criminals by making them drink a cup of poison. Socrates was adjudged to drink a cup of the juice of hemlock, by order of the Athenian magistrates. The sentence was one of the most unjust ever pronounced on man," etc. After alluding further to Socrates' conduct under the unjust sentence of the Athenian court, who hastened to drink his poisoned cup cheerfully, he adds the following:—"The reference in the text seems to point out the whole human race as being accursed, tried, found guilty and condemned; each having his own poisoned cup to drink; and Jesus, the wonderful Jesus, takes the cup out of the hand of each, and cheerfully and with alacrity drinks of the dregs! Thus having drunk every man's poisoned cup, he tasted THAT DEATH which they must have endured had not their cup been drunk by another." Does not Clark unwittingly support Universalism here? and besides, is it not beautifully absurd? What! Christ taste "eternal torment," eternal perdition for every man?

C. P. DOW.

Selections.

Parental Patience and Perseverance.

"Oh dear!" exclaimed a young mother, "how many times have I corrected Ellen for that one thing, and she does not remember it!"

This was said in the presence of her own aged mother, who had reared a large family of children, and thus "been through the mill," as we say, and the old lady replied in words of wisdom, learned from a long and eventful experience:

"Yes!" and you will have to keep correcting her for this one thing until she is twenty-one years of age."

This was "cold comfort," it is true, but the reply involved a great fact. The mother who expects to discipline all the evil out of a child's heart in a few months, has yet to learn a very important part of family government. A little boy may learn his letters in four weeks, by studying them only fifteen minutes in a day; but try him on saying "please," when he asks for anything at the table, or elsewhere, and see if it be not "line upon line, and precept upon precept." How is it with the respectful "yes sir!" and "no sir?" We have heard parents complain that their children were so prone to forget the use of these euphonious replies, even after instruction and correction for a season, but they soon forget, and out comes the blunt "Give me this," or "give me that," and the equally rough "yes" or "no." There appears to be more inclination in children to forget the good lessons of home than the bad things which they learn in the street, and it is proof of the natural bias of the heart to evil. A very little child will catch some vulgar or profane word from another, which the counsels and whippings of months will not correct. In some unguarded moment it will drop from his lips, notwithstanding all previous chastisements. It is not so with good lessons. How prone he is to forget them! They appear to slip from the mind as an eel slips through the hand. The parent wonders, and perhaps the child too. But it is strange only when we do not consider what the human heart is, that it is naturally inclined to sin as the sparks to fly upwards. A correct view of the heart ought to prepare us to expect that the young will learn the bad more readily than the good.

All these things, however, demand patience and perseverance. It is not one year, nor two, that is always long enough to establish the habit of saying "yes, sir," or "please." The mother must make up her mind to very unpleasant and tedious repetitions, ere she can realize the consummation of her hopes in this and other respects. It is of no avail to say, "I am discouraged," or to conclude that a child never will learn. Patience and perseverance will achieve happy results.—Home Monthly.

Above Work? Are You?

Well, take the easy chair—sit down, fold your arms. Bro. J. Lawrence of the "Religious Telescope" says:—

Of all the contemptible mortals under the sun, the lowest and meanest are the young gents with down on their upper lips, and the young ladies with bare necks, bare arms, and immense hoops, who are above work and working people. The highest culture may be associated with the very best possible performance of domestic duties. Education only spoils fools.

An industrious woman should never work a day or an hour for a lady who is raising her daughters to despise work. Never. What a shame! The hired girl, away back in the hot kitchen, washing, ironing, cooking, scrubbing, from early morn till late at night, for $1,00 a week, three or four young ladies in the parlor, thumping on the piano, or receiving the calls of idle and dissipated young men, while the father is at his wits' end, in the shop or store, to provide support for his expensive establishment! Again we say, let no girl who respects herself ever work a single week for a woman who is raising her daughters to despise labor and laborers. We would never suffer a friend or a daughter of ours to go into such a house; and we want no one to sit down at our table as a social visitor, who considers herself too good to associate with our hired girl, if we have one. We covet no idler's society, and have no especial admiration for "lily-white hands." We have long since found out that the honor, intelligence, virtue,—in a word, the true worth of the world is to be found among the working people—the people who heard our Lord gladly.—Golden Rule.

Time and Eternity.

We step the earth; we look abroad over it, and it seems immense—so does the sea. What ages had men lived—and knew but a small portion. They circumnavigate it now with a speed under which its vast bulk shrinks. But let the astronomer lift up his glass, and he learns to believe in a total mass of matter, compared with which the great globe itself becomes an imponderable grain of dust. And so to each of us, walking along the road of life, a year, a day or an hour shall seem long. As we grow older, the time shortens; but when we lift up our eyes to look beyond this earth, our seventy years, and the few thousands of other years which have rolled over the human race, vanish into a point, for then we are measuring Time against Eternity.

TIME.

I came in the morning—it was Spring,
And I smiled;
I walked out at noon—it was Summer,
And I was glad;
I sat down at even—it was Autumn,
And I was sad;
I lay down at night—it was Winter,
And I slept.

No Middle Course in Religion.

Often do we hear remiss professors strive to choke all forward holiness by commending the golden mean. A cunning discouragement; the devil's sophistry! The mean of virtue is between two degrees. It is a mean grace that loves a mean degree of grace; yet this is the staff with which the world beats all that would be better than themselves. What! will you be singular,—walk alone? But were not the apostles singular in their walking, a spectacle to the world? Did not Christ call for this singularity? What do ye more than others? You that are God's peculiar people, will you do no peculiar thing? Ye that are separate from the world, will ye keep the world's road? Must the name of a Puritan dishearten us in the service of God? St. Paul said in his apology, "By that which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers;" and by that which profane ones call Puritanism, which is indeed zealous devotion, so let my heart desire to serve Jesus Christ.

Description of Christ.

[Re-published by request.]

This was found in an ancient manuscript, sent by Publius Lentulus, President of Judea, to the Senate of Rome:

"There lives at this time in Judea a man of singular character, whose name is Jesus Christ. The barbarians esteem him as a prophet, but his followers adore him as the immediate offspring of the living God. He is endowed with such unparalleled virtue as to call back the dead from their graves, and to heal every sort of disease with a word or touch. His person is tall and elegantly shaped; his aspect amiable and reverend. His hair flows in those beautiful shades which no united colors can match, falling in graceful curls below the ears, agreeably couching on his shoulders, and parting on the crown of his head, like the head dress of the sect of the Nazarites. His forehead is smooth, and his cheeks without a spot, save that of a lovely red. His nose and mouth are formed with an exquisite symmetry; his beard is thick and suitable to the hair of his head, reaching a little below his chin, and parted in the middle like a fork. His eyes are bright, clear and serene. He rebukes with majesty, counsels with mildness and persuasive language; his whole address, whether in word or deed, being elegant, grave, and strictly characteristic of so exalted a being. No man has ever seen him laugh; but the whole world has frequently beheld him weep; and so persuasive are his tears, that the multitude cannot withhold theirs from joining with him. He is very modest, temperate and wise. In short, whatever this phenomenon may be in the end, he seems at present a man of excellent beauty and divine perfection, every way surpassing the children of men."

Charity.

Give! let the gift be ever so small;
Better do little than nothing at all;
An act of kindness, a word, a prayer
To lighten the burden of sorrow and care.

Little hands, little hearts, their little may do;
Little works of advice, so kind and so true;
Little errands of mercy and actions of love;
Little prayers prayed in earnest for help from above.

The cheerful giver is loved of the Lord,
And Charity never shall lose its reward;
E'en the poor widow's mite was better than all—
'T was the best she could do, though the gift was small.

The Quarter Dollar Sin.

Rev. Daniel Lindley, after an absence of forty years—more than half of the time passed as a missionary in Africa—returned to this country, and recently visited Athens, Ohio—the home of his youthful days. He examined the old paths and inquired for the companions of his youth. Changes had passed upon every scene, and few, indeed, were the associates of early life he could recognize there. But his name and presence was known, and he was asked to preach at night, and to give some account of his life in Africa. At the close of the services, a very respectable and aged gentleman approached and desired him to take a walk.

When they reached a somewhat retired place, the gentleman turned and said:

"Bro. Lindley, if a man has ever done wrong—has committed sin—don't you think he should confess it?"

"Why yes," said Mr. Lindley, "if thereby he may glorify God; if it will make amends to the party wronged, or do good to the party who sinned."

"Well, that is just what I think. I am in that predicament. I have long desired and prayed for an opportunity to make a confession and amendment to you. When we were boys together, fifty years ago, we were playing together. You dropped a quarter of a dollar, and I snatched it up and put it in my pocket and claimed it as my own, and kept it. It was, perhaps, a little, mean, dirty trick; and it has worried and troubled me ever since."

"O, it was a small matter, and I have no recollection of it," said Mr. Lindley.

"Ah, you may call it a small matter, but it has been a mighty burden for me to bear. I have carried it now fifty years; I would not carry it for fifty more for all the gold of California. And, suppose I had to carry it for fifty thousand years, or to all eternity. No, sir, it is no small matter; it has been growing bigger, and heavier and heavier, and I want to get rid of it. I have no doubt you have forgotten it, but I could never forget it. I have not for the last fifty years, heard your name mentioned, or the name of your father, or any of the family, but the quarter has come in connection. Why the very buttons on your coat—everything that is round represents a quarter. Sun, moon and stars are magnified and illuminated quarters. You need not call it a little sin; if it was, it has grown mightily to plague me; and deservedly too."

With this the gentleman took from his pocket book a five franc piece, worn bright and smooth, and said:

"I wish you to take this; it belongs to you, it is rightfully yours, and will be no burden to you. And if this is not enough I will give you more."

Mr. Lindley accepted it, and the gentleman raised himself and drew a long breath as a man would who has thrown off a heavy load. He was at last relieved.

The sense of guilt is enduring and tormenting, and can only die or be relieved by repentance, confession, amendment or atonement. It needs not that it be the theft, fraud or wrong amounting to a thousand dollars in order that the soul be oppressed by its burden; a twenty-five cents—a quarter of a dollar sin, may become larger than the globe, weightier than many worlds, with a punishment like the sin of Cain—unendurable.—N. Y. Observer.

A Contented Farmer.

Once upon a time, Frederic, king of Prussia, surnamed "Old Fritz," took a ride, and espied an old farmer plowing his acre by the wayside, cheerfully singing his melody.

"You must be well off, old man," said the king; "does this acre belong to you, which you so industriously labor?"

"No, sir," replied the farmer, who did not know that it was the king, "I am not so rich as that; I plow for wages."

"How much do you get a day?" asked the king.

"Eight groschen," (about twenty cents,) said the farmer.

"This is not much," replied the king; "can you get along with this?"

"Get along, and have something left."

"How is that?"

The farmer smiled, and said:

"Well, if I must tell you, two groschen are for myself and wife; two I pay my old debts; two I lend away; and two I give for the Lord's sake."

"This is a mystery which I cannot solve," replied the king.

"Then I will solve it for you," said the farmer:

"I have two old parents at home, who kept me when I was weak and needed help, I keep them; this is my debt toward which I pay two groschen a day. The third pair of groschen, which I lend away, I spend for the children, that they may receive a christian instruction; this will come handy to me and my wife when we get old. With the last two groschen I maintain two sick sisters, whom I would not be compelled to keep; this I give for the Lord's sake."

The king, well pleased with this answer, said:

"Bravely spoken, old man! Now I will give you something to guess. Have you ever seen me before?"

"Never," said the farmer.

"In less than five minutes you shall see me fifty times, and carry in your pocket fifty of my likenesses."

"This is a riddle which I cannot unravel," said the farmer.

"Then I will do it for you," replied the king.

Thrusting his hand into his pocket, and counting him fifty new gold pieces into his hand, stamped with his royal likeness, he said to the astonished farmer, who knew not what was coming, "The coin is also genuine, for it also comes from our Lord God, and I am his paymaster."

Reading for Youth.

Break every Bone in his Body.

Revenge is one of the strongest passions of the unrenewed human heart, and among heathen nations has often been enjoined as a sacred duty. But it is forbidden by the christian religion, and those who are injured are enjoined to return love for hatred and blessing for cursing. The gospel method is a difficult one to practice oftentimes, but it secures the result of heaping coals of fire on the offender's head. The following incident is a capital illustration of the power of christian revenge to break every bone in the body of one's enemy:

"What would you advise me to do, grandpa? Jim Blake does everything he can to vex me. He hides my books to make me miss my lessons, trips me when we run races, and brags how big he is beside me, and how easily he can take me down; and to-day he broke the snapper off the new whip you gave me, and when I ran to tell the teacher, he called out 'tell tale.' I wish I could leave the school, or get him turned out."

All this was said by little Sammy Halsey, on his way from the large front gate, where his grandfather had taken him in his carriage on his way to the barn. Imagine his surprise when the white-haired old man, whose quiet temper had always been held up as a model for imitatation, turned about and said:

"I don't know, Sammy, unless you contrive in some way to break every bone in his body; that is the way my father once conquered an enemy."

"Why, grandpa, I thought your father was a minister."

"So he was, and at the time that I refer to was a christian boy, just beginning to turn his attention to the subject of studying for the ministry."

Seeing Sammy's wondering, dissatisfied look, grandpa said:

"Take hold and help me unharness Bill, and while we are at work I will tell you about it. When my father, whose name was Robert, was a boy, he and his brother Richard used to have some differences. They loved each other, but still their high temper sometimes led them astray. After a while my father became a christian, and by his godly example reproved many of the wicked and thoughtless practices of his companions. He refused to accompany them when going to rob an orchard, break the Sabbath, or disobey their parents, and persisted in reproving their conduct on all proper occasions, so that even his own brother was for some time turned against him.

"By-and-by," I heard my uncle say, "we couldn't stand Robert's pious ways any longer, particularly as he had told father of some of our wrong doings, and got us punished. So one day I caught him alone in the orchard, got a horsewhip, and gave him a regular thrashing; and knowing that he would tell my father and get me whipped in return, I gave him several extra cuts on that account. I came in rather slowly when the horn was blown for supper, for I dreaded father's angry looks, and besides I began to be ashamed of my disgraceful conduct. As Robert had not tried to resist me, but had walked away without speaking, I felt sure that he would make up for it by telling of me as he reached the house. To my surprise, no one seemed to know about it, and Robert greeted me as kindly as if nothing had happened, though I knew his back was so sore that he could hardly sit up. Just before bed-time I said, in a kind of sneaking way,

"Didn't you tell father of me, Bob?"

"No, Richard, no one but my Father in heaven, and he has helped to forgive you."

"That remark, and the kind look of his face, broke every bone in my body. I begged his forgiveness alone and before the whole family, and from that day was a changed boy. I never again did anything to grieve him, and before long, began, I trust, to walk the strait and narrow path with him."

"Poor, dear Robert, after many sufferings and toils, he has gone to that bourne from which no traveler returns."

Sammy's grandfather added, "I have frequently heard uncle Richard say, in a trembling voice, 'That time he broke every bone in my body.'"

By this time the horse was turned into the field, the wagon-house closed, and Sammy walked by his grandfather's side in a different mood from that in which he had entered the carriage.

As grandpa went into the house, he said:

"Sammy, don't you think you had better try Robert's way of subduing an enemy? Take my advice; try it; 'heap coals of fire upon his head,' and he will be apt to surrender."—Ex.

A Letter from Hon. Horace Mann.

[Addressed to children, on the use of Tobacco.]

MY YOUNG MASTERS:—Did you ever see a moth fly into a candle and burn its wings off? You say, "I have; and a foolish creature he was, too." But why do you call the moth foolish? Did he mean to burn off his wings? "O, no," you say; "but he saw how bright the candle was, and he had no more brains than to think it would feel as pretty as it looked." Ay, that was the mistake, was it? The bright candle was a temptation to him, and he only did what people who have a thousand times more brains do,—he fell into temptation.

I wish to call your attention to one of the lowest and poorest of tempters. It is called Tobacco by those who use it; but wise men call it the "vile weed."

Tobacco is a poison most virulent and fatal. It is not poisonous to man only, but it will kill an ox or a horse.

I said that Tobacco was a poison. In one of the Reports of Dr. Woodward, the late excellent Superintendent of the Massachusetts Hospital for the Insane, at Worcester, when speaking of Tobacco as one of the causes of insanity, he quotes the opinions of a large number of the most eminent medical men, who pronounce the same opinion. God probably gave it as a medicine to be used in very extreme cases, where all common remedies would fail. When first taken into the system it produces nausea, vomiting and a deadly sickness; and puts all the organs into a perfect agony of effort to expel the invader. The heart beats to arms. The stomach cascades. The lungs pant. The eyes overflow with rheumy tears; the mouth with saliva; the nostrils with mucus, and the skin with offensive perspiration. Every organ is put on tenfold duty that the enemy may be driven out.

Tobacco is highly injurious to the brain. Those who indulge in its use, indeed, sometimes pretend that Tobacco does not injure the brain; but this must be in the sense of the anecdote told of the old woman, who asked her physician if snuff ever injured folks' brains. "O no, madam," said he, "for folks who have any brains don't take it."

Even if the use of Tobacco were decent, its costliness would render the indulgence criminal. For the single item of cigars there is more money spent in these United States, every year, than for the education of the children in all its Common Schools. Yes, all the Common Schools in our whole Union, do not equal in expense what is puffed away to pollute God's atmosphere, every year of our lives, whilst two millions of children are growing up in brutish ignorance around us. Now is he a christian man, who is not willing to forego this dirty gratification in order to double the educational privileges of the youth of his country?

I must not omit to allude to Misses as well as Masters in this connection; but I do not address the former to dissuade them from the filthy habit, for I rejoice in believing that it is a habit so contrary to cleanliness, to decency, and to all notions of propriety and good taste, that, with very few exceptions in this country, the female sex enjoy an immunity from it. Dissuade your associates of the other sex from this pernicious practice, and punish them by your neglect, if your admonitions are unheeded. You can let every young man know that if he will have Tobacco in his mouth, he cannot have you by his side.

Table Manners.

A WORD TO OUR YOUNG READERS.

Young friends, good behavior at table is a crowning grace. Please observe the following rules:

1. Always be in time. The moment the signal is given, drop all, never wait to finish what you are doing, or delay till after the blessing.

"In silence take your seat,
And give God thanks before you eat."

2. Talk very little, keep quiet. Interrupt no one. Are you in want of any article of food, ask for it modestly and politely.

3. Observe the wants and movements of others at a single glance. Some young folks render themselves ridiculous and disgusting by making remarks while older persons are talking.

4. If need be, help others to any dish or article that stands nearest you.

5. Eat slowly, masticate well your food. Some ill-mannered voracious children and youths, devour their food like the pigs or a starved wolf! Awful!

6. Never complain, find fault, put on sour looks, at table, or turn up your nose at food. Such habits are clownish, disgraceful. Be thankful to God for every article of nourishment bestowed.

7. Use your knife and fork easily, in a proper, gentlemanly manner.

8. Never rest your elbows on the table, nor lay your arm upon it, or make any disagreeable noises with your mouth or nose. Keep quiet.

9. Be careful that you drop or spill nothing. A beautiful white table cloth looks badly soiled with liquids or things from your plate.

"The table cloth you must not spoil,
Nor with your food your fingers soil."

10. Keep your seat till all rise from the table. It is ill-manners for children or the younger members to rise up and leave the table before others are done. And what, if possible, is still more ungenteel, is lingering to finish your meal and keep others waiting.

When told to rise, then you must put
Your chair away with noiseless foot,
And lift your heart to God above
In praise for all his wondrous love.

Children, truly polite at table, are almost sure to be polite every where.—Golden Rule.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or nearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 263. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 4.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED

EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

AT

No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Sing to Me!

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

Sing to me, for I am weary,
While my vision dimly scans
Future scenes, whose shadows dreary,
Pain my heart and chill my hands.
Let it be a song of pity,
Angel music, soft and low,
And its breath of love so near me,
It may sweep my throbbing brow.

Sing a dirge for earth; bemoaning
Her bright gems, grown dim and rare;
Trees of righteousness once blooming,
Stretch their branches cold and bare.
There is no redeeming feature
Marks this mercy-deluged age;
Prayers and Bibles sink her deeper,
While she writes her darkest page.

Jesus save! the "hour of trouble"
Circles 'round thy little flock;
Earthly peace is but a bubble,
Broken with the lightest shock;
Sacred bonds are lightly broken;
Perjured priests at every post;
Trust betrayed; no hopeful token
Lingers 'round this bankrupt host.

Sing to me—the vision brightens,
O'er the wave is a starry shore;
One glad smile that land enlightens,
Where the gathered weep no more.
Far beyond this night of sadness,
Far beyond the day of doom,
Man shall walk in native gladness,
Earth shall smile in Eden bloom.

Zoar, Mass.

For the Crisis.

The Soul.

Much has been and is being said at the present day concerning the soul of man. Perhaps it will not be out of place for me to throw in my mite with the rest.

First, what is the soul? The popular voice terms it the intellect or mind, which they say is a living principle, eternal, immortal. Let us examine Webster in regard to the mind, intellect, talent, soul, etc. He defines the mind to be the intellectual power of man. Talent is defined to be a faculty or power of the mind. Consequently the mind is powerless without talent. If powerless, then it must be inactive; if inactive, it is insensible; if insensible, it is unconscious. Webster also defines talent to be genius. Genius, he defines to be vigor. Vigor signifies strength. Hence, to be a talented man, would be to be strong of mind. Now for the application. To be a talented man according to the popular view, is to be strong of soul, (mind.) Then one a little talented, would be weak of soul, (mind.) Consequently, the idiotic are void of talent, mind or soul!

We now come to Webster's definition of the term soul, which he says is the spiritual, rational part of man—life, vital principle, etc. Can a man be a rational man, and be void of the power of mind (the soul)? Question. Did Noah Webster understand the use of the English language? By tracing Webster through, we find that talent, mind, intellect, amount to the self-same thing; and neither of the three can exist separate from the other, for there is no mind without an equal amount of talent. But again, if the soul is the life of man, or vital principle, it cannot be immortality; for to lose the vital principle, would be to lose immortality at death, instead of gaining it in a higher degree. The result is, "the dead know not anything."—Eccl. 9 : 5.

But for the sake of argument only, we will admit the popular sentiment, that the mind, or talent, for they are the same, is the soul. This brings us to another question. How many immortal souls is a human being capable of containing? We answer, that depends entirely upon the cultivation of the mind, or improvement of the talent. This calls our attention again to those who have no mind to cultivate, no talent to improve, or, in other words, no soul; but still they are not void of vital principle. Perhaps their physical powers are equal to that of Noah Webster's.

We now turn to a parable spoken by our Savior to his disciples upon the Mount of Olives (Matt. 25 : 14), in order to show the absurdity of the generally received opinion of the soul of man. "For the kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods. And unto one he gave five talents (powers of mind), to another two, and to another one" (power of mind). Perhaps to one he gave the power of healing, raising the dead, casting out demons, exhortation and prophesying; to another, he only gave the power of healing the sick, and exhortation. By trading with the same, I understand to be the improvement of the power already given; and thereby gaining a deeper knowledge of what they have received. This, to me, seems to be the common sense view of the subject. But now let us look at it in the light of popular theology. And unto one he gave five souls, (powers of mind); to another two souls, to another but one soul, etc. Then he that had received the five souls went and traded with the same, and gained other five souls also; so that he now has ten souls! Likewise he that had received the two gained other two; but he that had received the one soul, went and digged in the earth and hid his Lord's soul. So it did not belong to him after all, but to his Lord. O, what an absurdity! But still further. "After a long time, the Lord of those servants cometh and reckoneth with them." And so he that had received five souls came and brought other five souls, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five souls; behold, I have gained besides them, five souls more. His Lord said unto him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Likewise the one that had received two souls received the same blessing, "enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." But he who had received but one soul was not satisfied, but complained of the partial dealings of his Master. What is the result? Take therefore the soul from him, and give it unto him that hath ten souls, "and cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Hence we see the wicked servant is cast out after his soul (power of mind) is taken from him. Then the bodies are capable of suffering when the power of the mind is taken from them. Do you not suppose the idiot could suffer from the flames of fire, although he has not enough power of mind to remove himself from the burning element? Here, again, we see that their theory proves too much for them; for instead of the suffering of that never-dying principle, it is but the body after all; and they admit that the body cannot suffer the pangs of eternal fire, separated from the soul (power of mind).

Then again, according to their own mode of reasoning, they would prove the universal salvation of the power of the mind (soul), for the talent was taken from him, and given to him who was more worthy. Surely the doctrine of natural immortality makes awful havoc of the word of divine inspiration! It charges the God of mercy, love and justice, with being a God of eternal vengeance and wrath; counts the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and robs Christ of the glory which belongs to him for purchasing man's redemption by his death and resurrection. God only hath immortality. A. N. BOSTWICK.

Green River.

For the Crisis.

Exhortation.

We copy the following from an old Baptist Magazine of 1840. We believe it to be conformable to the spirituality and zeal manifested in the New Testament by the disciples. The Lord speaketh to us as well as to those of old: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." The apostle John saith, respecting himself and his fellow apostles, "We are of God: he that knoweth God, heareth us: he that is not of God, heareth us not. Hereby know we the spirit of truth and the spirit of error." M. H. M.

New Glasgow, C. E.

"On Exhortation."

ADDRESSED TO THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

BRN.:—That mutual exhortation is an ordinance which the disciples of Christ ought to observe in their assemblies on the first day of the week, appears to me founded on the word of God. It is for you to judge how far the following proof of it is conclusive.

The church of Christ is commanded to exhort one another in their associated public capacity. The Epistle to the Romans is addressed "to all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called saints." These are exhorted in the 12th chapter, 3d verse, in language that leads me to conclude, that the believers at Rome over-stepped the mark, like the Corinthians, by making an ostentatious display of their gifts; and, therefore, they are cautioned to "think soberly," and as members of one body in Christ, and "one of another," exhorted to a faithful and conscientious discharge of the duties incumbent on them, in proportion to the grace that was given to each, whether prophecy, ministering, teaching, or exhorting. And in the confidence of their qualification for this duty and their ready obedience, the Apostle adds, Romans 15 : 14, "And I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another."

That the churches are enjoined to exhort one another, seems apparent from what is recorded in Heb. 3 : 13, "Exhort one another daily, while it is called to-day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin." If any presume to say this refers to private conversation, surely this cannot be said of Heb. 10: 25;—"Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Here the duty of assembling together is enjoined; and with this is immediately connected the duty of exhortation. They are joined together by the inspired apostle. "What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. It is worthy of notice, that this injunction is addressed to the churches in Judea, which were in Christ Jesus. And the church in Thessalonica is commended in the 1st Epistle, chap. 2 : 14, for becoming "followers (imitators) of the churches of God which in Judea are in Christ Jesus." This church is enjoined and instructed in certain duties and truths, chap. 4 : 4–18, and the Apostle directs,—"Wherefore comfort (exhort) yourselves together, and edify (build up) one another, even as also ye do." When such injunctions and commendations are addressed "unto the church of God," it is surely matter of serious consideration for those churches who lay claim to submission, without reserve to the word of God, whether they be imitators of the primitive churches.

The whole of the 14th chapter of the 1st Epistle to the Corinthians, is conclusive on this subject. By prophecy, it seems evident that it did not mean foretelling future events, but speaking in a known language "unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort."—See ver. 3; and in the 31st verse, the apostle says: "Ye may all prophecy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted." The advocates for silencing the brethren in the church on the first day of the week, throw a veil on the plain instructions contained in this chapter and the other parts of God's testimony, where this duty is enjoined, by telling us that the primitive christians had miraculous gifts bestowed on them. True, the primitive disciples, at least several of them, had gifts conferred on them of various kinds, for the accomplishment of one grand purpose; viz., the spreading of the knowledge of salvation by believing in Jesus. But they were not universally or generally bestowed, and in no case were they bestowed for the edification of the church. See 22d verse of this chap. Throughout this chapter, the Apostle is instructing "all who in every place call on the name of the Lord Jesus," to speak, pray, and sing in plain, intelligible language; that with the former the church might be edified, and with the latter they could join and say, Amen. The gift of tongues, that is, being capable to speak various languages which they never learned, was a sign to unbelievers, showing them in the clearest manner that the mission and qualifications were of God. Again, that the directions here given refer particularly to the churches assembling together on the first day of the week, appears from the following considerations:

We are informed, Acts 20 : 7, "And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread," etc. In 1 Cor. 11 : 18, the Apostle corrects their abuse of the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, and says, "That ye come together not for the better," etc.; "for, first of all, when ye come together in the church," etc., (or as a church). And verse 20: "When ye come together, therefore, into one place." Let us compare the above cited quotations (which undoubtedly refer to the assembling of the believers on the first day of the week) with the 23d verse of the 14th chapter of the Epistle to the Corinthians. "If, therefore, the whole church be come together into one place," etc. Here the phraseology is literally the same; and it requires much ingenuity, and a fearful degree of hardihood, to make the meeting for the observance of the Lord's Supper distinct from that of meeting for exhortation. Again, the relation in which the members of a church are represented to bear to each other as members of the human body. See Ephesians 4 : 15. The christians at Ephesus are cautioned against instability in the truth. "But speaking the truth in love, may grow up unto him in all things which is the head, even Christ, from whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, making increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." The Lord, who ascended on high, gave gifts of various kinds to the collective members of his church, for the edification of his body, and still continues to communicate the spirit of wisdom in the knowledge of his will; and having given to each his one, two, or five talents, has also given the solemn command, "Occupy till I come." The frequent and repeated injunctions to the believers, in the Epistles, to make progress in knowledge, for the purpose of being fellow-helpers of each other's faith and comfort, establishes beyond a doubt the propriety and necessity of the duty. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another."—Col. 3 : 16. This is addressed to a church; and it is indisputable, that every command that is given by the apostles to a church, as such, is binding on all the churches that "are built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets," and on Christ the foundation, till the end of time. The assembling of the believers is by Apostolic authority, and being commanded not to forsake the assembling of themselves together, but exhorting one another, seems to make the duty to exhort as binding as meeting together. Hence, when Jude wrote to the sanctified in Christ Jesus, warning against the prevailing apostasy of some sensualists who separated themselves, he adds, "But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith," etc. To the same effect the Apostle says to the Hebrews, chap. 3 : 12, "Take heed, therefore, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God; but exhort one another daily, while it is called to-day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin."

Brethren, the duty of mutual exhortation to a mind imbued with the truth, is neither difficult nor complex. The truth God revealed in his word, needs no varnish. "When unadorned, is adorned the most." The most singularly gifted of mere human beings says, 1 Cor. 2 : 4, "And my speech, and my preaching, was not with enticing words of man's wisdom." "Which things we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit teacheth, comparing spiritual things with spiritual." Standing up among our brethren, and those who may come in amongst us, has necessarily a beneficial effect on our minds, inasmuch as our repeated profession of the truth has a tendency to excite to our adorning that truth. To exhort, does not require that we make a long and eloquent discourse; it is only to stir up the pure mind by way of remembrance, to bring to our notice things which we know, and forewarning us of the evil tendency of departing in the least degree from the straight path. Thus, by exercising any talent bestowed upon us, it may grow and increase, that we may render an account to Him who is ready to reckon with us, and be received with, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

For the Crisis.

Pago-Christianized Poetry.

"Vital spark of heavenly flame,
Quit, O quit this mortal frame!
Trembling, hoping, lingering, flying—
O the pain, the bliss of dying.

Hark they whisper! angels say,
Sister spirit, come away;
What is this absorbs me quite,
Steals my senses, shuts my sight,
Drowns my spirit, draws my breath?
Tell me, my soul, can this be death?

The world recedes, it disappears;
Heaven opens on my eyes; my ears
With sounds seraphic ring;
Lend, lend your wings—I mount, I fly;
O grave, where is thy victory?
O death, where is thy sting?"

Here we have the theology of Plato in all its sublimity! In this death scene we have the vital spark, or immortal soul of heavenly flame of the divine essence, or part of the Deity. Then follows an injunction for this vital spark to quit this mortal frame; then the attitudes of the vital spark, which is represented as trembling, hoping, lingering, flying, and exclaiming,—"O the pain, the bliss of dying!" This may be good poetry, but it is miserable theology. For if it have any meaning at all, the body is represented to address the spirit thus:—

"Vital spark of heavenly flame,
Quit, O quit this mortal frame."

To which the spirit replies,—I am "trembling, hoping, lingering, flying." And then exclaims,—mind, the spirit exclaims,—"O the pain, the bliss of dying." According to this, therefore, the spirit trembles, lingers, hopes, flies, and finally dies. For it is represented as saying, "O the pain, the bliss of dying!"

The spirit is then represented as addressing the body thus:—"Hark!" did you not hear the "whisper? Angels say, sister spirit come away." The poor body, then already crumbling to dust, is made to say,—"What is this drowns my spirit, draws my breath? Tell me, my soul, can this be death?" Both dead. Platonists, teach your poets better, or they will make sad havoc of your theology.

But now comes the crisis—the eventful period. When the soul takes its flight, and gains kingdoms beyond the skies, the spirit exclaims:—

"The world recedes, it disappears;
Heaven opens on my eyes; my ears
With sounds seraphic ring."

An appeal is then made to the attending angels,—"Lend, lend your wings," with the annunciation, "I mount, I fly." And as the ghost leaves the world, and passes through the bounds of time and space, (as another poet has it) it looks back to the grave, where its "mortal coil" is deposited, and shouts,—

"O grave, where is thy victory?
O death, where is thy sting?"

Such is the teaching of our day. And such is modern theology, proclaimed from the sacred desk as God's truth, and palmed off on the people as the gospel of God's dear Son. Our children are educated to believe it, and it becomes as it were woven into our very being. We read the very sentiments upon tomb stones and in religious newspapers. We hear them in almost every religious newspaper of the day. Heaven for the saints when they die, and endless torment for the sinner, upon which they enter at death. They will tell you,—"We have an immortal soul that must live forever, either in heaven or hell, and that we go to one of those places at death. The poet says:—

"Beyond the bounds of time and space
Look forward to that heavenly place,
The saints' secure abode."

But when we turn our attention to the word of God—to the inspiration of prophets and apostles, we find no such teachings there. That sacred volume does not point to the day of one's death, as the time when the song of victory will be sung; but to the period when the dead shall be raised incorruptible. The apostle Paul fixes it at the second appearing of Christ; then and not before, will be brought to pass the saying,—"Death is swallowed up of victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?—1 Cor. 15 : 55. "At the sound of the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound; and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."—1 Cor. 15 : 51–55. Neither do the Scriptures teach that any of us shall ever inhabit a region beyond the starry skies. Hear what they do say. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."—Matt. 5 : 5. Again, "But the meek shall inherit the earth."—Ps. 37 : 11. "The wicked shall perish," "for evil-doers shall be cut off; but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth."—Ps. 37 : 20, 9.

"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." They will judge us at the last day; for by them we shall be acquitted, or by them condemned. Remember we shall be judged at the day of judgment, and not at the day of our death. And remember you cannot find the words jointly—immortal-soul—in all the Bible. Plato and Socrates are said to be the first who brought the doctrine of immortality to light. But my Bible says Jesus Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. It becomes us, each and all, to search the word of God for ourselves, and know these things for ourselves. I hope by the light of the divine Spirit, many will break away from the dogmas of the age, and be brought to see and believe the truth of the pure gospel of the Son of God. That many thousands of poor, deluded, blind men and women, who deny the word of God, and say there is no God, may be brought to know the love of Christ, and the reality of his religion. Soon the day of grace will be past, and the awful day of judgment will meet us in the face. Prepare to meet thy God.

J. E. C.

For the Crisis.

"Ye must be born again."

Our Lord did not say to Nicodemus he must be baptized again, or otherwise he could not see the kingdom of God. This is the testimony, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Well, that is plain. Mark; it don't read "baptized again." It was evident to Jesus, and likewise to Nicodemus, that he had been a participant of the first birth; but Nicodemus did not comprehend how he could be born again when he was old! He could not think that our Lord referred to baptism, for he exclaimed, "Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" No, that is not it, Nicodemus; but, you must be born again. Jesus repeats the assertion, but with additional instructions, thus: "Except a man be born of water (natural birth) and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God!" "That which is born of the flesh is flesh,"—the natural birth, the production of which is corruption, flesh and blood, and cannot inherit the kingdom of God. But that which is born of the spirit is spirit, being the new birth, which qualifies its possessor for the kingdom of God.

Our Lord compares the second, or spiritual birth, to the blowing of the wind. He says, it can be heard, and also felt; the results of which are tangible, although the precise point from whence it arises cannot be accurately ascertained: but not so with baptism; that we can comprehend. But as it regards the dead saints, the precise chemical process which Jehovah shall institute in their resurrection, we cannot at present comprehend. All we can understand of it is founded upon the inference, that the same power by which man was formed originally from the common dust of the earth, is sufficient to bring the dead forth again to a second life; and also the fact, as here stated, that this work is to be effected by the Spirit or power of God, by which he created and destroys worlds, and governs all his works. But when that event takes place, it will be known as truly, as we may now know whether the winds of heaven blow; and when the breath of the Almighty comes rushing forth from the four winds and breathes its immortal vitality into the chambers of the sleeping saints, then they "that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth." Then a nation shall "be born at once!" We must be born again. S. MASON.

Northfield, Ct.

For the Crisis.

Gem Jottings.

[Selected from diverse authors, by a Book-worm.]

A GOOD CONSCIENCE.

What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted?
Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just;
And be but naked, though locked up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.
—Anon.

ARE WE READY?—We must, on all these great questions, not ask what the Rabbi's say, but try to ascertain what God has revealed in his holy word. Let me ask, if that lightning were to stretch from east to west; if the warning voice, "Behold, I come as a thief," told to-day, were to-morrow to be a reality; if the shout were to be heard going from earth to heaven, and from heaven to earth, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh;"—are we ready? are our lamps burning? are our loins girt? Can we say, "I know in whom I have believed, and that he is able to keep that I have committed to him against that day?" Have I settled the great question of personal acceptance before God through Jesus Christ? If not, we dream upon the edge of a tremendous precipice; we sleep upon the margin of the sea on which the flowing tide is rolling inwards with irresistible force.—Dr. Cumming.

DUTY IS DUTY.—If you are not faithful in that which is "least," would you be so in that which is greater? If you owe but a single dollar, are you not as much bound to pay this, as you would be bound to pay if you owed a hundred dollars or more? Allow that your position, in life or church, is the most humble; you are as fully bound to discharge the duties of that position, as you would be those of one far higher, and having far more depending upon it.—The Pastor's Gift.

THE WORD "HEAVEN."—With how lively an interest shall we discover words to be of closest kin which we had never considered till now but as entire strangers to one another! What a real increase will it be in our acquaintance with and mastery of English, to become aware of such a relationship! Thus "heaven" is only the perfect of "to heave;" and is so called because it is "heaved" or "heaven" up, being properly the sky as it is raised aloft.—Richard Chevenix French, professor of Divinity in King's College, London, Eng.

DILIGENCE.—What a lesson the word "diligence" contains! How profitable is it for every one of us to be reminded,—as we are reminded when we make ourselves aware of its derivation from "diligo," to love,—that the only secret of true industry in our work is love of that work!—Ibid.

☞ He that borrows, binds himself with a neighbor's rope.

☞ Moderation, fairness and dignity are prominent in christian character.

The Judge standeth at the Door.

Church of the living God! hast thou heard the voice which spoke from heaven, "Surely I come quickly?" And hast thou responded to it gladly, "Even so, come Lord Jesus?" Does his absence lie heavily upon thy spirit? Does the promise of his return cheer thee? And is the thought of his speedy coming a most welcome hope in these days, when men's hearts are failing them for fear? Then how is this prospect operating? Is it full of quickening, animating, stimulating power? Is it kindling up your love into greater warmth? Is it increasing the intensity of your earnestness? Is it making the separation between you and the world a more decided thing? Is it imparting a deeper solemnity to your deportment, and attaching an unutterable importance to every word and action? Is it rebuking idleness, and sloth, and vanity, and frivolity, and levity, and selfishness? Has it uprooted and destroyed in you covetousness and worldliness, those two master-sins of the evil age? And has it made you liberal and generous, enlarging your heart to give,—to give with no sparing hand so long as the time remaineth? Ah, brethren in Christ, we are surely far behind! Our religion is a poor, second-rate, ineffective thing! We are dreaming when we should be working; we are pleasing self and indulging the flesh when we should be serving the Lord. We are indolent and yielding when we should be energetic and indomitable. We are shrinking and fastidious when we should be resolute and hardy. We sit idly in our tents, with weapons sheathed and banners folded, when we should be in the thickest of the fight, for the world's last conflict is begun, and the armies are mustering for the battle of the great day of God Almighty.

And you, ye men of the earth, whose portion is not among the things unseen, have you heard the voice that speaks to you from heaven,—"Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come?" Has the warning pierced your ears and broken your mad security? How long do you count it safe to remain unreconciled? And what short of reconciliation with God will avail you in the day when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth? And when is he to arise? Have you ascertained the time, that you sit so easy and unalarmed? The long pent-up winds are beginning to break loose; and the sudden bursts of tempest that have swept over Europe these few years past, are precursors of the world's last desolating storm. At present there is a lull, but it will be brief; and behind that lull there is the more terrible tempest; and behind that tempest there is the Judge of quick and dead; and behind the Judge there are the everlasting burnings! Has this prospect no terrors for you, and have these terrors no urgency to compel you to consider the overwhelming necessity of betaking yourselves to the provided shelter, ere another day, with all its gloomy uncertainties, shall have dawned upon you?

Are you ready? Are you hidden in the clefts of that rock to which no weapon, no storm, no fire can reach? He alone is safe who has reached the hiding place; and that hiding-place stands with its unfolded gates ready to receive you now. Will you enter? Or will you remain without? Remain without, and perish in the fiery storm!—"For every battle of the warrior is with confused noise and garments rolled in blood, but this shall be with burning and fuel of fire." It is now, in these last days, as in the days of Noah. God's purpose of vengeance has been declared, the warning has come, and the judgment is making haste to follow. But the ark is still open, and the preacher of righteousness beckons you in. For one hundred and twenty years Noah preached, but the unheeding world heard him not. Then he entered the ark, and for seven days he remained there before the deluge came, and standing at the open door of the ark, he delivered God's last message of grace, entreating men to come in. It seems as if we were now in the period corresponding to those seven last days,—proclaiming God's last loving message to long-resisting man! For what, then, are you waiting? Are you lingering in the hope that the millennial day will softly steal in upon the world, and that then you will be converted with all the rest? Alas for you! Do you not know that between you and that glory there lies a region, as dark as midnight, and strewed with terrors such as earth has not yet witnessed? Why, then, do you wait without? There is room enough within, and will you not go in and occupy it? There is love enough, and will you not go in and enjoy it? It will cost you nothing; and you are welcome! The Father bids you welcome; and the Son bids you welcome; and the Spirit bids you welcome; and angels bid you welcome; and every saved one bids you welcome; and with so many welcomes will you still hesitate or delay?—Tracts [illegible]—No. 2.

For the Crisis.

Christian, or Advent: Which Name shall we have?

There was a time among us when all, or nearly all, were partial to the name Adventist, as the most proper designation in view of our position on the coming of Christ. Nor was it understood by us then, nor by our opponents either, that we regarded nothing as essential in religion but what was suggested by our name. Our name was chosen rather, because we thought a special prominence due to the coming of Christ, signs of the times, and other associated truths; and the more so, because other professors of religion chose to be carelessly indifferent, yea, prided themselves in their indifference, even at this critical hour, when the solemn realization of these things was immediately impending. And what name should we choose? One by which our position should be known, or unknown? The former was immediately and almost unanimously adopted; not that we would have people forget that Christ was crucified, but would have them remember that he is soon to be glorified.

Our name is, in a measure, our banner; and people look upon it, as suggesting our leading principles. If, then, it is right for us to give prominence to "that blessed hope the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ," it is wrong for us to choose a name in which a careless church will read nothing but their own position, and the unbelieving world will find nothing to distinguish us from the careless. Our name should indicate our position, and should distinguish us as much from others as our position should. Hence, if it is our duty to make these truths which we hold an important matter of consideration for the church, we cannot yield our significant name and choose an indifferent one, without betraying our trust, and periling our faithfulness toward God and our fellow men. No one expects God to know us by our name, but only our fellow men. Therefore, if we would have them know us by our position, we must have a name to indicate that position.

If God were to save those who are designated by the denominational name of Christian, and those only, he would save thousands who never had the wisdom, the spirit, nor the character of a follower of Christ; and would have to damn nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand who have borne that character.

And, if the name Christian were God's choice under all circumstances, he would have expressed his choice in revealing to us his will, and we should have found this distinguishing name as prevalent as the distinguishing character of his people. God's word demands of all his children a uniformity in character and spirit; and wherever we find this uniformity, there we find the children of God.

But this uniformity of character is found under a great variety of names, and is in every case the result of a divine superintendence, as none can become "new creatures in Christ Jesus" but by the direct agency of God. Is it likely that God would superintend a uniformity in character, but leave the name as varied as we find it, if he chose uniformity there also. Is it not rather more likely, that since he superintends a uniformity of character, but not in name, leaving it to be dictated by circumstances and generally to indicate "present truth," the latter is no less an expression of his will, than the former?

It is said that "the disciples were first called christians at Antioch,"—but there were thousands of believers at Jerusalem, and it seems that several years had elapsed before Christ was preached at Antioch. It was not, at least, till after Stephen's death; for those who preached Christ there, were those who were "scattered because of the persecution which arose about Stephen."—Acts 11 : 19. And we know not how long after this, before the name Christian was given to them. Nor do we know who gave them the name, whether friend or foe. I think it most likely, however, that it was chosen from among themselves.

Does it seem likely that the name Christian, chosen under these circumstances, was divinely selected, and demands our acceptation to the exclusion of all others? If so, why did God leave the thousands of believers in Jesusalem these several years without this name? And why did he communicate his choice, or introduce the name first, at Antioch, among the ordinary believers, instead of Jerusalem, where were the apostles and elders who were especially chosen to declare the counsel of God? And why does Luke allude to the matter with as little interest, as if given accidentally, not mentioning by whom it was given, if he thought it given by divine authority? Why did he not make use of the word himself, instead of "disciples," "saints," etc., if he endorsed the name as divinely chosen. It is evident that he used these names, in the same way that the name Christian was used at Antioch.

The New Testament writers do not show any special preference for this name, for it is used but once, besides this, in the Bible. Nor do they show a partiality for any name in particular. They sometimes speak of "believers," sometimes "saints," and sometimes "disciples." Yes, and sometimes the church of God. We cannot say, from the New Testament writings, that it was endorsed then, nor from the history of the church that it has been endorsed since. Since the days of the apostles, the names have been various and generally proper, in view of the circumstances which gave rise to each particular party.

The Reformers, or Protestants, are justified in choosing a name to distinguish them from others who professed to be christians at that time; on the ground that God's people should not be identified with the Papacy, but should be distinguished as protesting against the iniquities of that system, and desiring a reformation.

The early Puritans are justified in choosing a name to distinguish them from others who claimed to be christians at that time where they arose; on the ground that the Protestant church should be purified from the corruptions of the Papacy, many of which the Church of England still retained.

The Baptists are justified in choosing their name, since there was, at that time, such a general tendency to sprinkle adults, and infants as well, among most of the English Protestants, who retained the custom when they claimed to renounce the Catholic religion.

The Friends, in view of their disposition to be friends to all, reminding all of their danger in the sight of God, and harming no one, but willing rather to suffer wrong than do wrong, were justified in the choice of their name.

The Methodists, in view of the loose manner of life at that time prevalent among professed christians, were justified in accepting the name so generally bestowed upon them by their opponents, as indicating a stricter method of life than was generally accepted.

The Free Will Baptists were justified in choosing their name, since they would be distinguished from those christians who thought sprinkling sufficient for baptism; and from those Baptists who regarded man as having no power of choice, but subject in all things to the direction of God.

The Christian Connexion were justified in choosing their name, since they had a position to distinguish them from other religious bodies; and were right in taking that position. But who will say that they were any better christians because of their name; or, that the other religious bodies were any worse for not having that name? The name denominates a party, as much as either of the other names above mentioned; and if we as a people adopt the same name, it will only make another party. For as long as our position differs from other people, just so long shall we be a distinct party from others, though we might acknowledge every name in Christendom.

Whoever will contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, will be known by his position, and cannot hide himself under any indifferent name. This is illustrated in the many instances where our brethren have been turned out of other churches, as soon as they have embraced the sentiments which we hold; and this before they have assumed any other name.

And very often too, in such cases, they expressly acknowledge their christian character, but refuse to fellowship them because of their sentiments. We know well that we cannot unite with others but at the expense of truth, and when we are willing to accept of such a union as this, we may as well have one name as another. But we must remember that God will not be without a people; and when we get tired, he will call up another people, who are not ashamed of their position. As for me, I choose a name by which our position may be known,—I am an Adventist.

I. K. Lombard.

Stoneham, Me.

For the Crisis.

"Collection for the Saints."

Bro. Grant:—In the Crisis of July 25th, W. D. Crosfield, of Beverly, Mass., asked the meaning of 1 Cor. 16 : 1, 2, 3. Will you please insert the following extract from I. W. Morton's "Vindication of the true Sabbath," for the consideration of the above named individual, or any one else whose eye may chance to fall upon it.

He says: "The apostle simply orders that each one of the Corinthian brethren should lay up at home some portion of his weekly gains on the first day of the week. The whole question turns upon the meaning of the expression, 'by him;' and I marvel greatly how you can imagine that it means 'in the collection box of the congregation.' Greenfield in his Lexicon translates the Greek term—'by one's self, i. e., at home.' Two Latin versions, the Vulgate and that of Castellio, render it 'apud se,'—with one's self, at home. Three French translations, those of Martin, Osterwald and De Sacy, 'chez soi,'—at his own house, at home. The German of Luther, 'bei sich selbst,'—by himself, at home. The Dutch, 'by hemselven,' same as the German. The Italian of Diodati, 'appresso di se,'—in his own presence, at home. The Spanish of Felipe Scio, 'en su casa,'—in his own house. The Portuguese of Ferreira, 'para isso,'—with himself. The Swedish, 'nær sig sielf,'—near himself. I know not how much this list of authorities might be swelled, for I have not examined one translation that differs from those quoted above."

A. P. Patten.

Brewerton, N. Y.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 3, 1860.

A Pilgrim's Notes.

Friday, Sept. 22nd, we left Boston at three o'clock, P. M., en route for Canada East, and stopped at Portsmouth over night, and spoke to a large and attentive audience in the convenient chapel in Hanover street. Here is a goodly number who love the truth, and the appearing of Christ, and are striving to be ready to meet him. They are expecting him soon, and are not ashamed of the "blessed hope."

Here we met two faithful pilgrims—Bro. and Sr. Brewer,—who are on their way to Mt. Zion; well satisfied that the land is very near. In their songs, they have already anticipated the glad day, when lovely sleeping ones rising from their graves will greet father and mother in fond embrace around the King of glory. How cheering to meet such pilgrims on our way to the land of Emmanuel.

From Portsmouth we went to Portland and spent the Sabbath. The church in this city is holding fast, and looking for the "blessed hope," expecting its consummation soon. Their hall was crowded with attentive listeners. We think a little extra effort would lead several more into the truth. This is an interesting field for a good pastor. Portland is one of the most pleasant cities in the union, occupying a very healthy location, overlooking a wide field of delightful scenery, containing three hundred and sixty-five islands, which are a favorite summer resort for those who seek traveling pleasure.

From Portland we went to Bryant's Pond, on the Grand Trunk R. R., sixty-two miles from P., to attend a discussion with Luke P. Rand. We met at the Universalist meeting-house, and discussed the following question:—"Is the doctrine that departed human spirits hold communion with men in the flesh, sustained by the Scriptures, philosophy and fact?" Mr. Rand affirmed; we denied. By the way, this L. P. Rand is the one who was confined in jail with the Davenport boys, in Oswego, N. Y., and claims that the spirits unlocked the prison and let him out. He was formerly a Universalist preacher.

We commenced our discussion Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 25th, at 1 1-2 o'clock, and continued two hours and forty minutes, when, on account of the rain, we adjourned to 9 1-2 o'clock, Wednesday A. M. At the time appointed we met again and continued the debate till a few minutes past 12 o'clock, when Mr. Rand proposed to close the discussion of the first question, to which we agreed.

We then adjourned to meet at 1 1-2 o'clock to discuss the following:—

Resolved, "That immortality is a gift from God, dependent upon the character of the receiver." We affirmed, Mr. Rand denied. We continued our discussion for three hours, when, in compliance with his wish, we brought it to a close. The house was well filled with attentive listeners, who continually manifested an increasing interest to know the truth. Prejudice gave way, and those who at the first thought, of the two, our position was the worst, became satisfied that we were sustained by the Bible, and were anxious to hear more. Accordingly, at the conclusion of the discussion, we were invited to preach in the Baptist meeting-house in the evening, to which we consented, and addressed quite a large audience. At the close of this meeting it was concluded best to have us spend another evening in the same place. We learned that some, who had not been in the habit of attending meeting anywhere, had become deeply interested.

We will now notice some of the sayings of Mr. Rand. Among others are the following:—"The spirit of Elias was in John the Baptist." "Angels are the spirits of men, and the first ones came from other worlds than ours." "Angels do not have a physical form." "I have shaken hands with them, and have frequently had their hands upon my forehead, and know that they have eaten corn and other food prepared for them." "Our bodies will not be raised." "The angels probably carried off Christ's body." "We have a spirit-body in us." "We know that Job did not teach the truth, because he said, 'Man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep,' and Christ is risen before the passing away of the heavens." "It said God took Enoch; so a bear might have taken him." "Seventeen spirits came and spoke through the apostles on the day of Pentecost." "A belief in the resurrection of the dead is from the old fang of the rattlesnake." "The new Jerusalem is descending in Spiritualism." "The Spiritualists believe the Bible more fully than any other class," etc., etc.

We are more and more satisfied that Spiritualism, and the spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures have become the curse of this age, and have struck a death blow to the effective power of truth and christianity. Who will "stand up for Jesus" and his word? May the Lord give new courage to his faithful children, in sounding the last alarm to a guilty world.

"Lovers of Pleasures."

The apostle Paul has given a prophecy to be fulfilled "in the last days," in which he says, when describing nominal church members, that they are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." We have daily evidence that this prophecy is now fulfilling. If it were not so, we should not believe we were "in the last days." When we come near to the close of the present dispensation, the political, physical and moral signs, and chronological periods will all combine to prove that the coming of Christ is at hand. Such is the case now. We see no room to doubt that within a brief period we shall see "the sign of the Son of man in heaven," followed by the personal appearing of the King of kings.

It is a sad fact for consideration that large numbers of prominent church members are found associated with the popular amusements of the day. Only make the entertainment FASHIONABLE, and we are sure to find ministers and laymen participators in the merry scene. But few will go, even for the truth's sake, where they cannot enjoy the popular favor. They seem to have adopted the sentiment advanced by a distinguished minister, when he said, "The church must float with the great current or she will sink;" "she must conform to the spirit of the times, or she will lose her influence." Truly these are "PERILOUS TIMES." We think Satan cares not how many ministers and churches there are, if they will only adopt the opinion of this minister. Prayer meetings are scarcely in the way of the enemy of all righteousness, if he can persuade the members to attend his scenes of amusements.

We learn from the New York papers that "prominent church members of that city . . . . are concerned in the preparations for the ball" to be given in honor of the Prince of Wales. And yet, no doubt, these very men would not keep in the church a member that should attend a common country dance. But where is the difference, unless it is in favor of the latter? Truly men have stolen the livery of heaven to serve the devil in, and cover their self-righteous rags. We need scores of Luthers to cry against these abominations. Men of God, arouse, and sound the alarm.

"Oh! let all the soul within you
For the truth's sake go abroad;
Strike! let every nerve and sinew
Tell on ages,—tell for God."

Horrible Fruits.

Fruits of what? Satan's lie. What lie? The one he told Eve. When? At the time he met her in paradise. What did he say? "Ye shall not surely die." If Eve had an immortal soul, which was the real Eve, that would never die, did he not tell the truth? Most certainly. But he was a liar, therefore Adam and Eve were mortal, and so the sequel proved, for they both died. But what about the fruits of that lie? Why here is one just following. News from the coast of Africa states that, "The king of Dahomey was about to sacrifice two thousand men to the memory of his late father." In Mexico hundreds have sometimes been sacrificed in a similar manner, so that their souls can go and wait on the soul of some distinguished individual, who was said to be in the "spirit land."—"HORRIBLE FRUITS." Let us lay the axe "at the root of the tree."

Is it Right?

Is what right? Read the following from a faithful and intelligent young man who feels that the Lord would have him preach his word, and then answer. After laboring for awhile he writes:—"The young have trials that the more experienced do not. The greatest barrier I have found is that the more advanced forget to 'strengthen the weak.' This has been a source of trial to me, but the good Lord has granted me sustaining grace. Our people forget that children must first creep before they can walk; and walk before they can run; and therefore if they cannot have a 'big gun,' they do not want any."

Brethren, is this right? There are but few young men who enter the ministry that can stand up under the cold reception which is too often the only assistance received. This withering, Argus-eyed criticism abounds most in backslidden churches. They then become tenacious for all their peculiar forms of expressions and doctrinal sentiments, and will make a man an offender for a word; and as soon as he leaves the pulpit, they are ready to pick him as unmercifully as vultures do lambs. He at once becomes confused, disheartened, and spends wearisome nights in groaning prayer; and if he got no more sympathy from the Lord than from carping, lukewarm professors, he might well say with Job, "O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave." If it were not for the woe upon him if he refuses to sound the alarm, he would return at once with a glad heart to the most toilsome manual labor. But what will be the portion of those professors of religion, who have thus crushed the messengers sent them by the Lord? When we look over the Scriptures we find that those who have not co-operated with those whom the Lord has sent to warn the people, have lost the favor of the Most High. It is rare that a very learned and eloquent man will be sufficiently humble to be guided by the Lord; hence but few such have ever been employed by him in the proclamation of his word. Men send out such, and set a price on them as upon other wares that are bought and sold; and, as the prophet says,—"They are greedy dogs which can never have enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand; they all look to their own way, every one for his gain from his quarter." This class get an abundance of sympathy among the popular sects of the day; but God's faithful watchmen that go forth to sound the last alarm to a guilty world, not for the praise of men, or the love of filthy lucre, but because the Lord hath sent them; though they be as ignorant as the apostles Peter and John, and are reproached as they were, by a proud, fashionable church; yet, they should be sustained by all that love Jesus and his word, if they wish to enjoy his smiles. Remember, he has said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—Matt. 25 : 40.

Read the following, and see what kind of treatment Jesus receives at the present day, from those who profess to be waiting for his second coming. The writer says:—

"How many efficient gospel preachers have left the field from necessity, while the woe rings constantly in their ears, if they preach not the gospel of Christ; while, on the other hand, they are perplexed with the apostle's declarations, 'Owe no man anything; and, He that provides not for his own household is worse than an infidel.' Others, that have loved these great truths as well as any of us, have got discouraged, and gone to other denominations. O, my heart aches to-day, while I think of these things.

I knew one preacher who has the seal,—yes, I ought to say many seals—of a true gospel preacher; he labored through poverty and distress. On one occasion, after being absent from his family for some time, on a cold winter evening he returned to his home, his wife on meeting him burst into tears, his children, with little sad faces gathered around him, he took his little boy upon his knees, he read in their sad faces that they had no food, it was too much to bear, and the little boy's hand wiped the tears from his father's face, as he said, Don't cry, papa. How did he feel as he thought of those he called brethren, for whose welfare he had spent his time, and offered his prayers and tears? Their houses and barns some of them, were full to overflowing, and when he left them, they told him to trust in God, and he would take care of him!

O I would not write this in a spirit of bitterness, as God bears me record. To-day my heart, thank God, is at peace with all men; but I do fear our brethren, that have means, will meet, in the day of the Lord Jesus, with a great loss, if they do not lose their souls. Preachers' lips are sealed on this subject, because men get offended. Writers' pens are paralyzed, because it is called begging. Well, be it so, I am a beggar. I do beg of our brethren who have the means, to use it freely to save your own souls; use it freely to feed the hungry, and to clothe the naked; use it freely to magnify the riches of Christ's gospel, and glorify God; use it freely, to speed on his way the angel that is flying with the message, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come. Brethren that have this world's goods, this responsibility is upon you, whether you realize the fact or not."

The foregoing is no fancy sketch, or isolated case, but one of common occurrence. "IS IT RIGHT?"

The Pope's Allocution.

The following extract from what the Catholics denominate the "Allocution of our holy father, Pope Pius IX," dated July 13th, shows that he there had fearful forebodings relative to coming events. He says:—

"Venerable brethren, we are borne down with heartfelt grief. . . . We doubt not that our venerable brethren, with the piety, devotion and sacerdotal zeal which distinguish them, will persevere with still greater courage and energy, together with the faithful entrusted to them, in defending with constancy the cause of the church and of the apostolical see, and in confidently approaching, together with us, the throne of grace with their most fervent prayers and those of the faithful, and imploring the most powerful patronage of the Immaculate and most Holy Virgin Mary, Mother of God, that this great and violent storm may be dispelled—that the Catholic Church may obtain the peace she sighs for, and everywhere enjoy her own liberty."

Here we see the fruit again of Satan's lie to our first parents, which has been adopted by the "mother of harlots." In consequence of believing this, we find a whole church, numbering many millions, all praying to a dead woman, whom the Devil affirms to be alive. O that the eyes of Protestants might be open to see the fruits of the great error which teaches that a dead man knows more than a living one! When will men turn from fables to the truth in the word of the Lord?

The Pope.

Says "The Catholic," a Roman Catholic paper published at Pittsburgh:—

"It were idle to dissemble that the Pope is in great danger of being obliged for a time to abandon his dominions . . . . Now is the hour of darkness."

We think the Pope will soon "abandon his dominions" for ever. It is very evident that the harlot woman on "the seven hills" is about to receive her plagues. The hatred of "the ten horns" is intense and constantly increasing. Says the prophet, "These shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire; for God hath put in their hearts to fulfill his will." They are to Rome—the modern Babylon—what Cyrus was to ancient Babylon,—the instruments in the Lord's hands for her destruction. She must soon fall "like a great millstone" to rise no more. Ere long, the triumphant song of the martyrs, whose blood filled her to intoxication, will be heard in swelling strains, saying, alleluia; for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

The "Seven-hilled City."

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, in one of her late pen-pictures of Rome, says:—

"Rome! Rome the mystery—Rome the strange enchantress, gorgeous, gloomy, sullen, yet sublime. It is even now that the shadow of an awful prophecy rests on her, that all her miseries, cruelties and crimes which have been accomplished here for two thousand years, are rolling up like storm-clouds to some mighty fate, awful and sublime, worthy her wierd history! There is a dread old book that has words in it of some seven-hilled city, that come strangely over our mind."

Ay, the prophetic words of that "dread old book," relative to the "seven-hilled city," must soon be a matter of thrilling history.

For the Crisis.

Important Meeting.

Dear Brethren:—I wish to call your attention to the call of the "Christian Association," to meet at Salem, Mass., Oct. 16th. Please read it again, and notice what is proposed in the call. All that have the interest of the cause at heart, will feel it a privilege to do what they can to spread the truth. We can do more to act together than we can single-handed. We are responsible to God for the talent committed to our trust. I am aware that many have fears that those interested in the association will pursue a course that will tend to restrict the liberty of others and result in evil. If our brethren will have interest enough to send delegates to help by their counsel, I think we shall be able to accomplish something that will be for the good of all. Something must be done in relation to the tract enterprise, and much good will be the result of a right action. Then again, some complain that our paper is not conducted as it should be. Now, brethren, it is not just that you should complain, and then refrain from acting. Come and tell us what would be a better course to pursue, and show by your acts that you are interested for good, and not for evil.

But you are not satisfied with the name that the association have taken. Then send on your delegates to act in relation to the matter. If you leave the work for a few to do, you should not complain when they have done the best they can. This meeting should be the voice of the church, saying what she will do for the interest of the cause of truth. If you choose to neglect this matter, you must expect that those that do act will act as they think best, and you ought not to complain.

Now let every church in New England give us a delegate, or letters expressing what they want. If you want the association to change the name, then send your delegate with instructions, so that we may hear the voice of the church in the matter.

Do you want tracts published that shall present the truth, to scatter for the benefit of your fellow men? Then come and help in the work. Do you want a paper that shall do good? Then let us have help in the work by your counsel and means. Do you want the gospel preached in new fields? Then come and advise with us how it can best be done. Do you want the preachers to visit the little churches that have been neglected? Then let your wants be known by assisting your brethren in the missionary enterprise.

Let EVERY PREACHER be at the meeting; let EVERY CHURCH speak some way, either by delegates or letter. Wake up! brethren. The cause of God languishes through the neglect of the use of means that are in our reach to do much to strengthen and build up the cause of truth. Will you act, and act NOW? or will you let a few brethren bear the burden and do the work to be done, and then complain because they have not done it better? Let us have your prayers and help in this matter.

If any should want to send letters to the conference, they can direct them to the care of F. H. Berick, Salem, Mass.

J. Hemenway.

For the Crisis.

Counterfeit Coin.

The world and the church are full of it. It is passing current in this place. I know men and women who are in the daily habit of passing it, knowing it to be counterfeit. Truth is the current coin of the kingdom—error is the counterfeit. The personal reign of Christ—the sleep of the dead—the destruction of the wicked, are the current coin of God's mint—the Bible. Whatever opposes these doctrines is spurious. The spiritual reign of Christ—the conscious state of the dead—the eternal torment of the wicked, will not bear the test of God's word—they are all counterfeit coins. Yet they pass current in our day, even by those who know they are spurious. According to the laws of the land, the man who knowingly passes counterfeit coin, is guilty of a crime punishable by fine and imprisonment. Are they not equally guilty, who circulate and support what they know to be false for their own personal profit and advantage, and thus aid in defrauding God and man of their just demands? But, my these pawners of false coin, the counterfeit is as good as the true, as long as it passes current, and the people do not find it out; let it go—it will make a sad muss if the fraud should be discovered. Better keep the "detectors" out of sight as much as possible, and all will come out right.

Very well, brothers; your doctrine may do for Rome—"let us do evil that good may come." But a day of trial is at hand, that will try every man's work of what sort it be. In that day I would much rather be ignorant of the truth, than having known it, pocket the good coin, and continue to circulate what I know to be counterfeit.

If truth is more precious than gold and silver, who is most guilty in the sight of God; the poor wretch who circulates base coin for a living, or the flaming deacon of the church of Christ who holds the truth in unrighteousness, and willfully circulates what he knows to be false?

J. Parry.

For the Crisis.

Correction.

Bro. Grant:—Allow me to say that the price of my book will be two shillings, instead of "two dollars." I design it to be a book that shall instruct the weak in faith; present the Bible standard of christianity; give incidents of religious experience, and elucidate the gospel hope.

Mary D. Wellcome.

For the Crisis.

Volunteer Testimony.

The article below is from a Presbyterian clergyman in New Jersey, who has been giving two series of articles, and has come to the conclusion here stated. We also learn that two Baptist ministers in Philadelphia have come out boldly in the same views. They see that Christ's second coming is now near. Through opposition and persecution, they have both left their congregations. One has hired a hall, and is preaching the truth of the Word. About half of his former congregation cleave to him. There are open signs of progress in sight. The article appears in the Christian Observer—Presbyterian. J. B. C.

THE FUTURE OF THE UNREDEEMED.

The salvation of Jesus was provided for our whole being, body, soul and spirit. It extends to our whole being, because sin reaches our whole being. It undoes what sin has done. It delivers man from all the effects of the fall, in body, soul and spirit. It renovates his entire being, and makes him like his Maker. . . .

Redemption has been provided for man—provisions of mercy have been made by which he may be saved; hence the entire human family will be resurrected. Even the impenitent sinner will be raised; but only raised in order to be tried, condemned and executed, for he has rejected all the provisions of mercy. So guilty criminals, known to be criminals, are brought forth from cells, not to be released, but to receive a just trial, condemnation and execution. . . . Man's second death will, in every sense, be analogous to the first, only it will be eternal. As Christ has died for man, and his blood extends as far as Adam's sin, every man will be resurrected, and every man will be tried. But if in the great trial he is condemned, he will die again. And from that death there will be no resurrection. Hence their death will be eternal. They die to live no more. . . .

Paul says in 1 Cor. 15 : 53–55,—"For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" From this passage we learn that the complete victory is not gained by any one until incorruption and immortality are put on. The glorious victory is not gained at death, but at the resurrection. Then the apostle puts the triumphant song into their mouths. When mortality and corruption are exchanged for immortality and incorruption, then they sing, "O death, where is thy sting?" The sting of death is forever lost. As "the sting of death is sin," consequently those only who are saved from sin, can escape death's sting. Those who put on incorruption can sing that triumphant song; hence it is evident to me, that none will put on incorruption except those who are saved from sin. As "the sting of death is sin," death cannot kill where there is no sin, and can and will kill where there is no sin; hence all those who put on immortality must be free from sin and therefore those who are not free from sin, are not immortal. There is no life, no immortality, out of Christ. I can only write darkness on all the prospects of every Christ-rejecter. My only hope is in that blood which cleanseth from all sin. . . .

At the close of the thousand years, and of the second resurrection, when those whose names are not found written in the book of life, are condemned and cast into the lake of fire, thanatos and hades are also cast into the lake of fire.—Rev. 20 : 14, 15. There being no more sinners on earth there will be no more work for death and hades here; they will be cast into the lake of fire. But why are they cast into the bottomless pit? . . . Certainly no one will contend that death and hades, like guilty conscious beings, will be cast into the lake of fire for their punishment. As they do not possess personality, they cannot endure personal punishment. But they have their appropriate work to perform—a work analogous to their work here; and when that work is done, the wicked, having died again, "death itself shall die"—die for want of victims. . . . s. s.

For the Crisis.

One Hundred Ministers—Two Hundred Laymen.

Where? Wanted in Salem, Mass., Oct. 16th. Why? Because some of the brethren have waked up to the importance of having some body own the Crisis and be responsible for it. Also, that some body, or the same body, own the tract interest, and make both more efficient, and less burdensome to a few. I am glad to see it—have wished to see it long ago.

Again, because at a convention of a few, held in Providence, R. I., last July, a committee was chosen to appoint a conference to fix the thing wanted, and that committee has appointed said conference, to be holden in Salem, Oct. 16th; and very frankly and freely set forth its object, and called for a general rally, and written advice. And because some of said brethren seem to have become wearied of the name by which we have been so often and so vilely reproached, or else become conscientious about bearing any name but christian. And certain other brethren have come among us, because they hold to and teach one or two prominent points which we do, and find sympathy and aid among us to help along their work, and give room for their publications, whose "brow seems not to have been made of brass, and neck as an iron sinew," in facing a scoffing world, as we have, because of our faith that our blessed Lord was soon to come. They have never learned the blessedness of being everywhere known as the "world burners," the "going up class," nor met the scornful taunt, with pleasure, "Where is the promise of his coming?" "When are you going up?" "You have'nt gone up yet," etc. They have not endorsed "our specific work," but we are glad to unite with them in every good work, and glad they are learning, also, the importance of the Advent message. But we are not ready to lose our identity as that same people who have been a sign to this generation. And if a discussion is to issue about a name, then we all want to be there to act or hear, for if Bible names only must be used, we want it settled which. It will probably turn out that we must adopt the Quaker's real name—"Friends," for so Christ named his followers.

Lastly, be at the conference, because somebody will be there, and something will be done; and if you are not there, or do not send your mind in writing, you should not complain of what is done. And we should not let our old and faithful brethren be slid off from our conspicuous position, or be led to adopt unscriptural measures, without an effort to counsel with them. I may not be there because my ill health, or scanty means, may not allow me to be. But, if I think the Lord would have me, I shall go. Yours in the faith.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Richmond, Me., Sept. 22, 1860.

Correspondence.

From Bro. F. Douglas.

BRO. GRANT:—As week after week passes by, the Crisis is truly a welcome visitor to us. Deprived of the privilege of meeting with christians, my companion finds its stirring scriptural thoughts solacing and strengthening. Though still unable to walk, and almost helpless, yet she has a strong voice and good eyesight, and occupies much of her time in reading moral and religious pieces, to my, as well as her own mental advantage. Though not permitted to meet with the loved ones who worshiped once again in that heaven-blessed grove in Wilbraham, yet we often thought of and prayed for them. We are glad that so many pilgrims journeyed thence, for the history of its daily services indicates that much good resulted therefrom. The associations that hallow that spot to me, are yet fresh in my mind.

Dear brother, you, with other brethren, may like to know whether I am performing the Lord's work. I answer, yes. Daily caring for the sick, and otherwise doing the good in my power, besides a short time occasionally spent in bookkeeping, to assist in supporting us, make up my life's passing hours. I am generally confined Sunday as other days in the week, and seldom have the privilege of attending church. Brethren of our faith are far and scattering in this city; but are active in doing good—not shy like the partridge. Our dear Bro. Dillebaugh must have been misinformed, or have drawn his conclusions from not having seen any of the brethren. My companion and self have, in our long affliction, received from most of them substantial tokens of sympathy, and active evidence of their self-denial for others' good. Bro. C. B. Turner has appointments in other localities, and has done much good wherever he has preached.

I am heartily glad that Bro. Rufus Wendell is doing battle for the Lord. May his heart be cheered by seeing the wayward reclaimed by his efforts through grace. To the brethren in Muscatine, Iowa, I would say, I am still a "prisoner of hope," temporally speaking; spiritually, free, through the truth, in Christ. To all who wait for our Lord, I would send assurance of kindred efforts. I would ask the wanderers, what of their oft-told hope? Is it yours now? May sober reflection cause you to turn again and live. Of sinners I would inquire, are you satisfied with your condition, when examined by the light of revelation? It cannot be that you feel secure. Whether you see it or not, the truth reveals your danger. As a fellow mortal, once occupying the same dangerous ground, let me exhort you to heed wisdom's voice, when she says, "Be not wise in thine own eyes: fear the Lord, and depart from evil." Prov. 3: 7.

Syracuse, N. Y.

From M. A. Belding.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Having just returned home from the campmeeting at Wilbraham, and feeling something as I think one of a family would that loved each other and were separated, with the prospect perhaps of never all meeting again in this life, I felt constrained to write a few lines for the Crisis. I can truly say the week that has just past has been the best week of my life. But what is our enjoyment here compared to the joys that await the faithful, in the world to come? We cannot comprehend what is in reserve for us, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive these things, but Paul says, it is an "eternal weight of glory." I truly feel that we are all of one family, and I trust and hope, are striving for one home, even the kingdom; and I think it is our Father's good pleasure to give it to us. When I read the article from Brother Grant, that the campmeeting was one of the best places in the world for those that were cold and half backslidden; and also read the good advice given, I resolved that I would be one of that number that would work for the Lord, let others do as they would, and I was blest in so doing. There is enough to do in the vineyard, and but a short time to do it in. Oh brethren and sisters, let us gird on the armor anew, and stand as way-marks for Mount Zion. It is the willing and obedient that will eat of the good of the land.

I felt while I was on that mountain, that I gave all to the Lord, and I expect in a little while from this, I shall see my Savior coming in the clouds of heaven with all his holy angels, to gather his elect from the earth; and can it be that there will be one that I met on that camp ground that will not have on the wedding garment, and go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb? I desire to meet you all there. I love you all as brethren and sisters, and I long to meet you all where partings will be no more. Let us pray for one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Is not eternal life worth laboring for, worth suffering for, and worth dying for, if need be? Then let us endure unto the end, for such alone will be saved.

South Windsor, Ct.

From Sr. M. J. W. Sober.

BRO. GRANT:—While perusing the second number of the "Voice of the Prophets," I could not help asking myself these questions:—Is it possible these things are so? Are we living so near the end of all things? Is our King so soon to come? our rewards so soon to be given? these vile bodies so soon to be changed, and fashioned like Christ's glorious body? Shall we so soon behold our loved ones, now sleeping 'neath the cold clods of the valley, clothed in immortality? Shall we so soon behold the earth, now groaning under the curse, robed in more than Eden beauty, with the throne of God and of the Lamb in it? Can it be possible that soon the voice will be heard saying, "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." O God, are these things so? and yet thy professing church living at so great a distance from thee? all the avenues by which they can reach a fallen world closed or partially so? thy servants, whom thou hast sent to preach thy word, driven from the field for want of the necessaries of life? O God, are there not means enough that thou hast given into thy children's hands sufficient for all these things? Awake thy slumbering church.

My brother, my sister, what think you? Could you rejoice at this moment to behold Jesus in the clouds of heaven? Could you say, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him ... we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation," "this is the Lord," "he will save" me? Where are your treasures? on earth, or in heaven? Which do you love most, God or mammon? Remember, God will have your whole affections, or none? He wants no half services. Without holiness of heart no man can see the Lord and live. Paul says a crown of righteousness is laid up for all those "that love his appearing." Do you love the appearing of Jesus? Do not hastily answer this question; too much is involved. If you love the appearing of Jesus, then you love Jesus himself, and are willing to sacrifice for the advancement of his cause.

Behold he cometh "as a thief;" sudden as the lightning. Are you ready? Have you presented your bodies "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God?" or are you keeping back part of the price? O, deal not treacherously with thyself; behold the Judge standeth before the door. Do not forget that the world will be found, when Jesus comes, as it was in the days of Noah and Lot,—they were eating, drinking, marrying, ploughing, sowing, reaping, trading, frolicking; in short, everything was moving on as usual; no sign of any danger visible. Noah and Lot had been warning them of approaching danger, but they heeded not the warning. So shall it be when the Son of man cometh; everything will be moving on as usual, when lo! and behold the sign! it is unmistakable. The heavens are parted as a scroll, and Jesus is seen to descend; ten thousand angels escort the King of glory down the burning pathway of the heavens. Ye waiting ones, lift up your heads and rejoice; behold, your redemption draweth nigh. Put on thy beautiful garments, and go forth to meet thy Lord; thou hast been faithful over a few things, thou shalt be made ruler over many; enter into the joys of thy Lord. But thou slothful one, where, oh where will you hide your guilty face? Thou hast had a name to live, and art dead; thou wast numbered with God's children by the world, but God knew thy heart. Thou didst love the world and its pleasure better than Him whom thou professest to love; verily, thou shalt have thy reward. O my brethren! in view of these things, what manner of persons ought we to be, making every sacrifice in our power for the cause of God; living without spot and blameless, holy, acceptably in the sight of God, with all watchfulness and prayer, ready to be delivered at any time. May God help us all to be ready. Amen.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

A correspondent from Denton, Texas, Sept. 2d, writes:—"This country is in a dreadful state of excitement. Insurrections are all around us. Men's lives and property are not safe. Incendiary fires have burnt whole villages. Barns and stacks of grain are destroyed daily. The negroes are whipped and often hung. White men who excite the blacks, are hung; others are ordered to leave the State. Surely we are in 'perilous times,'—'the time of the end.'"

BRO. EDWARD BROWN, Manannah, Minn., writes:—"I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to some of the preaching brethren west. The blessed Lord is at work in this place, and some have been led to believe the truth as it is in Christ, and wish to be buried with him in baptism. There has been no preaching here except through the Crisis, and some of H. L. H.'s tracts, which are good preachers, but can't bury the dead. We hope the Lord of the harvest will send some of his laborers to do the work. We can pray for you, but we cannot promise you money. The brother who will come, will please write to me, or give the notice in the Crisis."

Obituary Notices.

Died, in Springfield, Mass., Sept. 24th, of cholera infantum, little FRANKY, infant son and only child of G. L. and Carrie E. Rice, aged five months, twenty-three days.

He was a great sufferer during his sickness; but his sufferings are over; he sweetly sleeps in Jesus, and will come again from the land of the enemy. He was a lovely babe, and manifested great love for his mother, although he was so young. Dr. Higgins ministered words truly comforting and consoling to the bereaved family. We sorrow not as others who have no hope.

Sweet Franky now sleeps,
In Jesus secure.
In sorrow we weep,
But the promise is sure.

His sweet prattling voice
Is silent in death,
We bow to God's choice,
His word hold in faith.

He'll soon come again
From the enemy's land,
Then free from all pain
In beauty he'll stand.

His sweet voice we'll hear,
His smiles we'll behold,
Not a sigh nor a tear,
But pleasures untold.

No more will we part,
But forever we'll be
United in heart
With the blest company.

We'll join with the blest
In praising our King,
In that land of rest
Our voices will ring.

G. L. R.

The only daughter of Henry H. and Levina M. Waugh, deceased, at their family residence, Bro. Geo. Waugh's in Stoughton, Sept. 27th, aged four months and a few days.

The funeral services were attended by sympathizing friends. The occasion was improved to show the origin of evil and of death to man, and also the remedy brought by Him who is "the Resurrection and the Life." As death is personal, so is the resurrection. The reality of death and resurrection renders the restitution of the earth a positive necessity, to maintain coherency, and meet the emergency of the case. "Wherefore comfort one another," saith the Holy Ghost, "with these words."—1 Thess. 4: 18.

J. B. C.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Per Steamer Glasgow. Advices of the 20th ult.

It is reported from Toulon that Louis Napoleon was fired at by an insane man in that city. The man's aim was averted by a bystander, and no harm done. The French journals are silent on the subject.

The attempt to lay a submarine cable between Toulon and Algiers had proved a failure.

The Sardinia troops took Perugia after a hot fight, and made 1500 prisoners, including General Schmidt.

The citadel of Spoletta had capitulated, and its garrison, 600 strong, were taken prisoners.

The Sardinians also occupied numerous other places.

General Cialdoni was advancing against Ancona, at which place the late Neapolitan fleet had arrived to assist him in the attack.

There is an unconfirmed rumor that the Pope had fled from Rome, an event which is generally speculated upon.

There are also unconfirmed rumors that General Lamoriciere, with 9000 men, was moving from Ancona towards the Neapolitan frontiers, with a view of effecting a junction with the Neapolitan troops.

It is reported that Garibaldi is exclusively occupied in organizing his army and navy. The army is to consist of 150,000 men, and five hundred vessels are to be made for war purposes.

These are considered indications that he intends going to Venetia.

Kossuth was expected at Naples.

General Lamoriciere and troops had been defeated with great loss by the Sardinians.

Several officers of high rank had been shot at Damascus.

A Russian envoy had arrived at Vienna with a formal invitation to the Emperor of Austria to visit Warsaw.

The Italian Revolution.

The Florence correspondent of the Providence Journal furnishes the following interesting intelligence respecting the state of affairs in Italy. The letter is dated September 10.

"Since last year, the excitement among the population has not been so great as at this moment. Happily, it is not of dissension, but of ardent hope for, and enthusiastic confidence in, the success of a common cause. The city of Arezzo, only forty miles from us, is the centre of the movement which has for its object the immediate occupation of the towns and cities in Umbria and the Marches, two provinces of the Pontifical States. Pesaro, Citta di Pieve, Urbino, Montefeltro and Sant' Agata Feltria have already declared for Italy and Victor Emmanuel, and shaken off the Papal yoke. At Perugia extraordinary agitation prevails. The report comes that many thousand pounds of pitch are collected in the Pauline fortress, and that an order will be given by the general in command to burn the town if the population venture to revolt. Such an act would be so atrocious that one, in charity, can hardly believe that it is the intention of Lamoriciere to resort to it. But after the massacre of a year ago, one is prepared to believe in the possibility of any enormity to be committed by the Roman authority.

It would seem as if Lamoriciere was ready to use measures as extreme in their severity in this unholy war in the heart of Italy, as he would be if he were once more contending with tribes of savage Africans. Another report, which has just now been received, says that the Papal soldiers, to the number of about 1500, stationed at Perugia, will make no opposition to revolt, and march out of the town on the payment to them of $20,000. The proposal is consistent and legitimate. Mercenaries they are, and fighting to them is purely a trade, and they must wish to make the best market they can in compromising their services.

Different towns in the Pontifical States are sending committees to Turin, praying the king to assume the protection of them in that independence of their present rulers, which they are ready to declare, and offering to him their hearty allegiance. Now that France has defined the line and the limit of defense which she will accord to the Pope in his dominions, the opposition of the Papal army to the national movement beyond those limits will prove ineffectual and useless. Without doubt, within a few days, the insurrection will be general. The populations will stretch out their hands for protection to Victor Emmanuel, and there is but one course for his government to pursue. A state of war between Rome and the Italian Kingdom will shortly exist, and events must follow each other to their natural end. About the character of the issues, or which of the party will triumph, there can be no doubt.

Married.

August 29th, at Brewer, Me., by Eld. T. Smith, Mr. CHARLES G. REED, son of Eld. N. G. Reed, and Miss EMILY C. CLEWLEY, both of Holden, Me.

Also, by the same, at Lincolnville, Sept. 2d, Moses YOUNG, Esq. and Miss HENRIETTA MORSE, both of Lincolnville, Me.

Notices, &c.

Notice.

TOUR WEST.—I contemplate a tour West, as far as Cincinnati, Ohio, in the months of October and November.

The following are my appointments, as far as Springwater, N. Y. Other notices will be given duly. In the mean time, I will be glad to hear from any who wish for a visit, or single lecture, on my way out, beyond Springwater, or on my return. I go by way of Buffalo and Cleveland. Address me, Boston, Mass.

Worcester, (Thomas St.,) Monday evening, Oct. 15th.

Springfield, Tuesday evening, Oct. 16th.

Albany, N. Y., Wednesday eve., Oct. 17th.

Syracuse, N. Y., Thursday eve., Oct. 18th.

Homer, N. Y., Friday evening, Oct. 19th.

Auburn N. Y., Sabbath, Oct. 21st.

Senaca Falls, N. Y., Monday and Tuesday evenings, Oct. 22d and 23d.

Lockport, N. Y., Wednesday evening, Oct. 24th.

Lewiston, N. Y., Thursday, Oct. 25th.

Springwater, N. Y., Saturday and Sabbath, Oct. 27th and 28th.

While in this vicinity, I shall visit Dansville, Conesus, Honeoye, etc., and will give due notice of appointments further west.

J. V. HIMES.

Notice.

MEETING OF THE "CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION."—Those interested in devising means to make a more earnest and effectual effort to arouse a wicked world and a sleeping church to the all-important truth that the Lord is soon coming, are invited to meet at Salem, Mass., Tuesday, Oct. 16th, 10 1-2 A. M., at the Union Street Chapel, for this purpose. Let those who cannot come, pray that the Lord may direct those who may assemble to adopt the best mode of action, and help them to do all things to his glory. For particulars, see Crisis No. 1, Vol. 12, Sept. 12th.

M. GRANT, for the Committee.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a two days' meeting in Gilead, Branch Co., Mich., in the school-house near Humphrey Foster's, to commence Oct. 27th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Bro. Greenleaf, Robison and Sober may be expected to be present to assist in preaching the word of life. Let all the friends of Jesus interested in this meeting, be present at the commencement of the meeting. Brethren and sisters, come with overflowing hearts of love to God and one another, and labor for the salvation of sinners. We desire earnestly to see a general waking up to a full preparation to meet the soon coming Savior.

In behalf of the friends of Jesus,

A. N. SEYMOUR.

☞ The Tract on the Rich man and Lazarus is now ready. This tract also contains the subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single 3 cts; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 ct. To be had at the Crisis office, or of me, at East Boston, Mass.

J. S. WHITE.

Notice.

The brethren in Ohio, through their committee, Geo. W. Cherry, Bro. Southwick, Bro. Fish of Dayton, and P. Alling of Norwalk, have determined on holding a conference this fall in Northern Ohio. They choose as

THE PLACE North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio.

THE TIME, so far as determined, is Oct. 26th, Friday, 11 A. M., and over the Lord's day, the 28th. The first, or morning meeting, may hold daily as long as needful. The second meeting early in the evening. Thus we shall not be hurried in our services, nor spend time needlessly in going and coming. All "who have an ear to hear" are invited to "hear" the proof positive, as holy writ and acknowledged fact, that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Those who believe are exhorted to come and help forward the objects of the conference. The Judge has said in relation to spreading the knowledge of his approach,—"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing!" "Now the just shall live by faith; but if he draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Come then, beloved, to dispense, as well as to "receive," more of "the manifold grace of God." To them that have shall be given, and they shall have MORE ABUNDANCE.

In behalf of the brethren, and subject to their amendment if deemed needful.

J. B. COOK.

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

MOSES CHANDLER, for the Church.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a prayer and conference meeting held on every Friday evening at Bro. Elijah Skinner's house, Sandwich Centre, N. H. Preaching brethren when convenient are invited to call and preach the word. For the brethren,

JAS. WM. NUTE.
TRISTRAM C. MASON.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. John Couch will preach in
Boston, (Chapman Hall)........Sunday, Oct. 7th
Eld. P. B. Morgan..............Sunday, Oct. 21st

Sr. Locke.—I will preach at your house Oct. 6th. Circulate an appointment for me on Sunday, the 7th.

J. G. SMITH.

I have appointments to preach at
Springfield, Mass..........Oct. 7th
Hartford, Ct..........Oct. 14th, 21st and 28th

☞ When I see my way clear to visit Milton, N. Y., to hold meetings, I will write Bro. N. S. Latimer to that effect.

RUFUS WENDELL.

L. Wetherbee appoints to preach in
Levant..........Oct. 7th
South Hermon..........Oct. 14th
South Orrington..........Oct. 21st
East Grate Works..........Oct. 28th
Belmont, (school-house)..........Nov. 4th

Bro. John W. Crabtree will preach at Southington, Ct..........Sunday, Oct. 7th

Bro. Elnathan Hawse is engaged for the present to preach at the new Advent Chapel in Acushnet, formerly North Fairhaven.

HURVEY REED.

H. B. Sevey appoints to preach in
Augusta, Me., Oct. evenings 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th.

J. K. Bellows appoints to preach in
Wells' Forge..........Oct. 14th
At Bro. Wm. Fenn's..........Oct. 17th
Pine Swamp..........Oct. 21st

The Lord willing, I will preach in Concord, Oct. 12th, Friday and Saturday evenings, and over Sunday.

Rochester, N. H., (Shory Mills) Oct. 20th, and over Sunday.

Great Falls, N. H., Monday evening, Oct. 22d.

Kennebunk Port, Me., Oct. 27th and over the two following Sundays.

Cumberland, Me., Tuesday eve, Nov. 6th.

Woolwich, Me., Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 8th and 9th.

Round Pond, Saturday evening, Nov. 10th, and over Sunday.

SAMUEL BRAGG.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren at the Axe Factory, Westford, Ct., Oct. 7th.

C. W. BAKER.

The Lord willing, I will attend meetings as follows:—
Great Works, Me..........1st Sunday in Oct.
Holden, Me..........Sunday, Oct. 7th
Milo or Sebec..........Sunday, Oct. 14th
3d Sunday in Oct., 21st, as the brethren may appoint.
4th Sunday in Milo or Sebec, as the friends may arrange.

THOMAS SMITH.

The Lord willing, I will preach at South Windsor, Ct., (Pleasant Valley) School-house, Oct. 7th.

Eld. S. P. BABCOCK.

Bro. J. T. Ongley appoints to preach at Ripley Hill, Chautauqua Co., three miles south of the State Line depot, Oct. 6th and 7th.

Providence permitting, I shall meet with the friends in Prospect, Ct., where Bro. Mix may appoint, Oct. 13th and 14th. Will Bro. Ira Morgan please meet me? Middlebury the 16th. At Bro. Porter's, Roxbury, the 17th. Waterbury the 18th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach, if the Lord will, at North Canton..........Oct. 7th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

The Jubilee Harp is now out of print.
A. Storey.—All right, pays to 300.
Rachel S. Griffin.—All right.
J. S. Arnold.—All right, pays to 268.
H. W. Dann.—Paid to 262.
Wm. Brown.—Money received and credited.
H. B. Sevey's P. O. address is Mt. Vernon, Me.
Ezra Baker.—All right.

Cash Receipts.

Ph. White, 2 copies, 267, $4.00; B H Couch 260, $2.70; H W Dann 15 cts, S Parker, p. pd., 312, $2.26; H G Smiley for poor, 50 cts; S Gay 273, 50 cts; Ed. Wolcott for Portsmouth brethren, $3.00; A J Bois 273, 50 cts.

J B Richardson 260, Mrs. L Bills 286, E A Sackett 291, E Oakes 253, H Wheeler 283, C Haskins 286, L Moran 286, N McCulloch 286, ? Curtis 286, L Watrous 286, R Burdett 286, G R Baker 286, W W Doughty 286, W Howard 286, A Chamberlin 286, J W Buckland 286, N Fogg 244, H T Holton 260, R S Griffin 270, C Farrington 260, S Sanderson 286, W Moore 286, A Ash 286, D B Rogers 286, C Avery 286, H Pettingell 286, W Colbath 288, Syl. Neal 286, B E Dennett 286, J McGowan 286, J S Brooks 286, Jos. Harris 283, P Johnson 286, F Granborn 286, J Clifford 312, S H Waldron 248, J West 234,—$1.00 each.

L L Leach 263, A H Liswell 265, Mrs. J P Darling 286, J Capen 314, E A Walker 293, Dr. J Maramore 312, Or. Hodge, 2 copies, 286, D N Kidder 312, C W Nelson 286, E Wakeman 296, Al. Martin 182, G H Rich 263, E G Osgood 260, C Robinson 357,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

H G Smiley $3.50, B H Stuart 30 cts, C Colburn $1.00, T White 11 cts, F Perry 18 cts, J Parry $1.00, J S Brooks $10.00, R Wendell $5.40.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. ISAAC L. ALLEN, 10 Howard Street, Albany, N. Y., has an assortment of our books and tracts, and will fill orders at the same rates that are charged at this office.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

TRACTS FROM THE TRACT FUND.—Friends at the WEST can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.

H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Sheppard. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger [illegible] —postage 10 cents.

Church Debt. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and [illegible] of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 1 ct.

Words of Warning. 8 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent collection of texts from the Scriptures, and upon the theological crisis of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred;—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 10 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. BROOKS, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS
OF
H. L. HASTINGS,
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp. $1 00
The Great Controversy between God and Man: its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp. 60
Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 128 pp. Paper, 30 cts. Cloth 60
Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing.
Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings 12mo. Preparing.
Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp. 60
Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp. 60
Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 320 pp. 75
The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt, 25
Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm. Ramsey, D.D., edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth, 40
Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper, 15
The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, 87 pp. 15
Tracts of 21 Pages.—3 cts single; $1 for 1600 pages by mail 1200 pp for $1.

The Church not in Darkness,	by H. L. H.	pages 24
The Three Worlds,	by H. L. H.	24
The Last Days,	by H. L. H.	24
Plain Truths,	by H. L. H.	24
Will all men be saved?	by H. L. H.	24
Voice of Warning	by D. T. Taylor	24
The New Heavens and Earth,	"	24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos.,		[illegible]
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos	by H. L. H.	[illegible]
Important Questions, 9 Nos	by H. L. H.	[illegible]
State of the Dead,	by John Milton	[illegible]
The Intermediate State,	by H. G.	[illegible]
Destiny of the Wicked	by H. L. H.	12
Future Punishment,	by H. G.	12
The Key of Truth,	by W. S.	12
Man's Future State		[illegible]
Letter on Dress	by Adoniram Judson	8
The Day of Judgment,	by St. Cyril	8
Outline of the Coast,	by A Voyager	8
The Night Cometh,	by John Adey	8
Gems, 9 Nos., poetry,	by H. L. H.	8
One Thing		4
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ,		4
The Duration of the Earth	by A. Clarke	4
Hope and Duty of the Church,	M. Henry	4
The Restitution.	by St. Cyril	4
A Warning Voice,	by Cotton Mather	4
Loving Christ's Appearing,	by Baxter	4
Little Children, Love one another		4
The One Resting Place,	by H. Bonar	4
My Friend,	by H. L. H.	4
Abundant Grace		4
Wondrous Love		4
Go in Peace		4
Living Water		4
The Banner	Anonymous	4
The Blood of Christ		4
Are you a Christian?	by H. L. H.	4
Why not Now?		4
Are you Pardoned?		4
Are you Safe?		4
Are you Saved?		4
Do you Pray?		4
When Will He Come?	by J. C. Ryle	4
Statement of Account	by H. L. H.	4
Man in Death	by Bishop Law	4
Forty Questions on Immortality		4

SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.

No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked	1
No. 2. The State of the Dead	1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus	1
No. 4. The Resurrection	1
No. 5. Plain Truths	1
No. 6. The Judgment	1

POETRY.

Brother, Shall we Meet?	by H. L. H.	2
Sister, Shall we Meet?		2
Stand up for Jesus!		2
The Harvest is Past		2
Beyond!		2
At Rest!		2
We would see Jesus	by Josephine	2
A Little While	by J. C.	2

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

Life Insurance, Envelope Size	H. L. H.	12
Home		12
Lost, Lost		12
Peace in Christ		12
Worth Knowing		12
All things are Yours		12
Now		12
Assurance		12
About God		12

The foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $8, with the order, shall receive $12. worth of books at the retail prices. TRACTS are sent by mail, 1600 pages, [illegible] for $1. [illegible]

H. L. HASTINGS, 43 Weybosset St., Providence, R. I.

January, 1860.

* These publications can be obtained in Boston of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York: G. W. Young, 138 William st.; [illegible] Porter, 725 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publishers through all Booksellers. [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Trust in Jesus.

DEDICATED TO MY BRO. ANDREW, ON THE OCCASION OF HIS BAPTISM.

BY M. MATHEWS.

My brother, thou hast made such vows
As holy ones alone can keep;
And keeping them, the saints rejoice,
But breaking them, the angels weep.

Now in thine infancy of love,
To Him who let thy soul go free;
The heart seems filled with heavenly light,
Nor dreams that darkened it may be.

Remember, then, nor think it strange,
That gloom shall cast its fearful shade,—
Nature will sink,—O then look up,
On Jesus let your hopes be staid.

The little one steps boldly forth,
And thinks to walk, or even run;
But must discover need of help,
Ere ought of worthiness is done.

Rely on Jesus,—trust his word,—
Walk forth in his Almighty power;
He'll guide thee in the paths of peace,
He'll save thee in each trying hour.

The vineyard of the Lord is great,—
But few the laborers therein;
Wilt thou not enter it and snatch
Some precious ones from vice and sin?

Go tell the world that Jesus comes,
To give to every one their doom;
Go tell the mourning widow lone,
That soon her loved will leave the tomb.

Go tell the sick of realms of health;
Go tell the weary ones of rest;
Go tell the starving poor of wealth,—
Tell them of Jesus and be bless'd.

Be faithful in thy Master's cause,
Nor lay thy sword once careless by;
O, wage the war in mighty power,
Till Jesus comes in yonder sky.

Then as He comes in glory bright,
Thou can'st exclaim, "Behold! behold!
I leave the realms of death, of night,
And claim a crown of fadeless gold."

Westford, Mass.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. H. Hall.

BRO. GRANT:—Doubtless many of your readers will be glad to hear that a little is being done for the advancement of the truth in this region. I reside, at present, about seven miles south-east of Peru, my former place of residence, on the beautiful Mississenawa river, in the Reserve of the Miami tribe of Indians, the most of whom have been removed by our government west of the Mississippi. There are about fifty or sixty left here, and some thirty of these are members of the Baptist church. The most of them, who formerly paid their devotions to the white man's "fire-water," are truly christians, and very devoted to the "Great Spirit."

Old Capt. Brouillette, (about seventy years old,) formerly a very influential man in the tribe, a man of fine talents, and an orator, is their preacher. The church to which these Indians belong, have their stated monthly meetings, and a white minister. At every meeting, when the regular preacher closes his sermon, Brouillette addresses his Indian brethren in their own language. He commences in a low, conversational tone of voice, as most orators do; and, as he proceeds, gradually warms with the subject. His eyes dilate, his arms extend. His voice, tremulous with the deepest emotion, is now raised to the highest pitch. His swimming eyes, his agitated manner, his erect form, his forcible gestures, all convince you that you are listening to a man who deeply feels his all-absorbing subject; that he believes what he says, and that he is not only driving conviction home to the consciences of his red brethren of the forest, but even to others who understand scarcely a word he utters. I observed that while the white preacher made little or no impression on the minds of his audience, the red man convulsed nearly the whole congregation,—not by his fine language, for that was not understood by the whites; not his rhetorical flourishes, nor well rounded periods, for these could not be appreciated; but by the deep, tremulous intonations of his voice, his heaving frame, his falling tears, his dignified bearing, all produced by his pungent feeling for the souls of men. Is not this, then, the great secret of success in the gospel ministry?

My brethren, is it fine words, fine language, and splendid sermons, as they are sometimes called, that produce an abiding effect, and leads souls to Christ? Is it not rather a warm heart, intensely devoted, and deeply imbued with the love of Christ and his precious gospel; a heart that can feel for others' woes, that can and does sympathize with, and weep over, perishing men? When the heralds of the cross stand up to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ, they must themselves feel if they would have their hearers feel. And if they would thus feel, they must be men of prayer; they must always pray, watch, strive and labor to be "workmen" approved of God, "that needeth not to be ashamed; rightly dividing the word of truth."

But I am wandering from what I intended to communicate. Eld. Blain was here last winter, and spent about ten days with us, preaching every evening and two Sabbaths to attentive audiences, and making a deep impression. A number of christians embraced the truth, and, as near as one could judge, a majority of non-professors believed it. The whole church (church of God) I believe, would have received the truth, if their leader—the owner of the house of worship, who was absent at the time—had been here and embraced it with them. But when he did come he opposed it, and thus stood directly in the way, refusing to enter himself, and not suffering others to enter that would. O, how much will cold professors have to answer for in the day of judgment for their opposition to the glorious truths of the gospel! I envy not their position.

I am now giving a course of lectures on the state of the dead, and destruction of the wicked, by request, about five miles from here. This reminds me of a circumstance that shows how liberal some of the professed ministers of Christ are in the West. The several Baptist ministers belonging to the association, were holding a ministerial conference with the Baptist church I have before spoken of;—and on Sabbath I went over, (having been a Baptist myself, and being personally acquainted with some of the preachers,) to hear the preaching. But I must say I was very much disappointed, after listening to three sermons, (for there was no life, nor power, nor point in them) until Brouillette, the Indian preacher, got up and gave us something warm and refreshing, and which melted the most of the congregation to tears; and although I did not understand a single sentence, I found myself weeping with the rest. Glory to God for a religion that takes hold of the affections, and for an utterance that comes from the Holy Spirit, which breaks up the fallow ground of the heart, and leads to repentance. But I was going to say that I had requested a member of this Baptist church, who has embraced the truth, to get his pastor to give out an appointment for me to speak on the penalty of God's law, at a schoolhouse, about three miles distant, and at a time when it would not interfere with any other meeting. So the pastor came to talk with me about it; and he finally agreed to consult with his ministerial brethren, and that, if they would not consent to announce it, I should have the privilege of doing so. But on consultation they decided, it seems, not to have my appointment given out. Accordingly, after the benediction was pronounced, I called the attention of the audience, and gave out my appointment. After which, Eld. Surl stated to the congregation—probably with the view of bringing me into disrepute—that I was an excluded member of the Baptist church—had been excluded with Eld. Richmond, the pastor, for erroneous doctrines,—that we had been faithfully labored with, etc., and a council had advised the church to exclude us. As the Elder did not state the facts in the case correctly, I made the correction, stating that the church did not labor with us at all, and that they secretly called a council to decide what should be done with us, and that we did not know of the council till the very day it convened, and that it was then found out by accident,—that they met, myself being present, (Eld. R. having gone to Lafayette,) and decided that the church ought, forthwith, to exclude us without any trial whatever, which was accordingly done, there being only four members present, some of the other members not having been notified, for obvious reasons. While I was speaking, the large congregation, which had convened in a grove, was spell-bound; and as I alluded, in the language of scripture, to the "erroneous doctrines" I was excluded for embracing, the interest seemed overwhelming, and I was sure I should get a good hearing at my appointment; nor was I disappointed. I have spoken in the same place three times, the congregation increasing every time, and the interest deepening. Only a few christians come out who seem to listen candidly; while the most who profess christianity stay at home, preferring, I suppose, to still read (if they read at all) the Bible through their sectarian spectacles.

They are evidently afraid to hear on these subjects, lest their minds be discomposed by hearing something they cannot in their own minds answer by a reference to the Bible, but which they would be unwilling to embrace, though it might be truth, at the expense of losing caste among their brethren, and enduring persecution at their hands. They ought not to forget the words of the Master, who says, (Mark 8: 38) "Whosoever, therefore, shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels."

O, how precious to me are these glorious truths of the gospel; and especially are they so, when I think that Jesus will soon come and reward us for all we have suffered from cold hearted and worldly minded professors, for all our trials, our deprivations, our anxieties, and above all our love for Him and his glorious gospel. Speaking of deprivations—O, how often have I wished I could enjoy the blessed privilege of your Wilbraham campmeetings, and hear the thrilling sermons, the soul-stirring prayers, the heavenly singing, and, best of all, to see perishing sinners seeking for glory, honor and immortality, and hear their cry, "What shall I do to be saved?"—and then the glad shout, "Glory to God in the highest!" O, these are scenes I would rejoice once more to witness and enjoy. Glory to God, we shall soon enjoy something that far surpasses all this. The King, in his beauty, will soon meet our eyes; the golden harps, attuned to the symphonies of heaven, will greet our ears; "sweet fields, arrayed in living green" will ravish our unbeclouded eyes; while that innumerable company that shall have come up through great tribulation, and shall have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, shall strike up the heavenly chorus, and make the heavenly arches ring. Then indeed shall we enjoy the full fruition of all our hopes, and rejoice forevermore.

"O glorious day, O blessed hope,
My heart leaps forward at the thought;
When in that happy, happy land,
We no more take the parting hand."

Let us "stand up for Jesus."

H. H. HALL.

Reserve, Ind.

From C. G. Carre.

TO THE MINISTERS OF GOD SCATTERED ABROAD:—There are circumstances in real life that in themselves deserve all honor and unlimited encouragement. Among these there is one fact that absolutely urges itself upon the ministers of God.

About two miles from Blackstone, there is a beautiful rural district called "Chestnut Hill." Here, only eighteen months ago, there was but one Advent believer; and as far as the Bible was concerned, chaos reigned. There were, however, a few—a very few—who styled themselves Restorationists; but, in the intervening time, God has worked by his divine agency, through that zealous Bro., in convicting and converting some twenty souls to the truth as it is in the Lord Jesus.

I know that good Bro. will not deem this presumptuous boldness, if I impute to him all honor and credit for his devotedness and manifest interest in laboring with untiring zeal in the cause of his coming Lord. Through his earnest endeavors, there has been a little church organized, which is at this time in a prosperous condition, considering how severe is the struggle in encountering and overcoming that Demon, SPIRITUALISM.

We have no desire to conceal the fact that we are reckoned the filth and offscouring of the region in which we dwell; but while these emissaries of Satan are thus critically employed, we also "reckon (with Paul) that the sufferings of this present time are not to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us."

We have every reason to be grateful that the star of our blessed hope is in the ascendant, rising higher and higher, grasping the promises, and applying them with all their healing balm to our wayward hearts; while they point us onward beyond the tainted trail of the serpent, beyond the animosity and malignity of a reviling world, to that bright spot amid the new earth's bloom, where the angels of God shall be the consorts of the just through that eternity of golden hours which shall outlive all sorrow.

But what we want is, bread—the BREAD OF LIFE. A hungry church has but little vitality, and no vigor. It degenerates in the same ratio that this invigorating element is withheld from it. In plain words, we want this gospel of the kingdom preached among us, and we must have it. I am not a casual observer of the appointments of our preaching brethren, as from week to week they notify the public, through the Crisis, of their intentions to preach in this or that place; but I do observe, with extreme concern, that Chestnut Hill is seldom, if ever, mentioned, as demanding a passing notice.

Now this ought not so to be. It is here that we are few and poor; but, thank God, we have enough to eat, and we will gladly contribute for this inestimable blessing, to him who shall come among us, and perhaps pay his expenses; (but will not promise that). At any rate, he shall be received by willing hearts and willing hands. Let us remember that "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called," but, says Christ, "the poor have the gospel preached to them." Paul also says, let there "be equality."

Now let some minister of God turn his attention to this part of the Lord's vineyard, and he may rest assured that the seed sown will not fall by the wayside, or among thorns; for God will take care of it, and in his own good time, will bring forth fruit to his glory.

Let him who shall come, not be heedless or inattentive to the words of our Savior, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Let us be watching. Already the rumbling wheels of the chariot of the Lord are heard in the distance; and ere long, like the spring of the trap upon the encaged animal, he will descend the burning pathway of heaven, in wreath of flame, and robe of storm. O that our little church, in that fatal hour, may have on her bridal robes, and pass in triumph through those golden gates, unto the marriage supper of the Lamb—

"Where every severed wreath is bound;
Where none shall hear the knell
That smites the heart with that deep sound,
'Farewell, beloved, farewell.'"

☞ Light will blind a man sooner than darkness. Are we, then, to pray that we may be left in darkness? Oh, no! but beware, ye who walk in light, lest ye turn your light into a curse.

For the Crisis.

My Experience.

"I beseech you, therefore, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable serv ce."—ROM. 12: 1.

In the spring of 1837, I was brought to believe that we have life only through Christ; also, to believe in his coming to reign on the earth. Since that time, I have been trying to live a disciple of Jesus. I wish to tell you a little of my experience since then. I had thought of saying something on tobacco. I can speak from experience. I had used it for many years. After I had been a believer in the "Advent faith" for a short time, Bro. H. L. H. came to my house and kindly admonished me to leave it off. I then thought it no sin; but on reading the word of the Lord, I found the words which head this article. The thought came to me with force, can I use tobacco and be a disciple of Jesus? The text came up before me, can I present my "body a living sacrifice," and "holy" before God, and use tobacco? Thus and thus the text came into my mind for three months or more before I yielded to the WORD OF TRUTH. I stopped using it two years ago the 31st of last January. I am not sorry I left it off, but rejoice in God that he gave me strength to do so, that I might not sin away the day of grace, but present myself before God "holy," which is my "reasonable service."

My brethren in the Lord, and readers of the Crisis scattered up and down the earth, can you use tobacco and not defile your bodies before God? Can you present yourselves holy before God and use the noxious weed? Can you set godly examples before your fellow men as becometh disciples of the meek and lowly Lamb of God? Some of our brethren that try to preach are not free from this destructive habit.

Are any of our sisters sinning against God by the use of tobacco? If so, I beseech you to leave it off and present yourselves holy before God. Let us, my brethren and sisters, live as becometh followers of Jesus in all things as near as we can, the Lord helping us. Amen.

T. F. FANSWORTH.

Conesus Centre.

Selections.

John Wesley.

We take the following interesting account of John Wesley's life from the American Missionary:—

"John Wesley was a man of small stature, weighed but one hundred and thirty, and his constitution was naturally feeble; still, by the grace of God, his self-control, his temperance, his method, his economy of time, his industry, his power of comprehending and managing at once the outlines and the details of plans, his genial disposition, his fearlessness, his intuitiveness, his faith, his prayerful spirit, his long and healthful life, enabled him to accomplish more than has been permitted to any other man in modern times. The utmost neatness and simplicity were manifest in every circumstance of his life; in his chamber and study not a book was misplaced, or even a scrap of paper left unheeded; he could enjoy every convenience of life, and yet acted in the smallest things like a man who was not to continue an hour in one place; he appeared at home in every place, settled, satisfied, and happy, and yet was ready any hour to take a journey of a thousand miles. In his dress, he was a pattern of simplicity, while an air of neatness was diffused over his whole person.

Wesley was pre-eminently distinguished by the practical energy with which he prosecuted the great variety of his labors. He was perpetually traveling and preaching, studying and writing, translating and abridging, superintending his societies, and applying his great conceptions. He traveled usually four thousand five hundred miles a year, when traveling was quite a different thing from what it is in this day of steamers and railroads, when most of his journeys were pursued on horseback, preaching two, three, and sometimes four sermons a day, commencing at five o'clock in the morning. He kept the press teeming with his publications; and his works, including abridgements and translations, amounted to about two hundred volumes. He wrote as he preached, ad populum. His temperament was warm, but not fiery. His intellect never appeared inflamed, but always glowing—a serene radiance. His maxim was: 'Always in haste, but never in a hurry.' He generally blew the gospel trumpet and rode twenty miles before most of the professors who despised his labors had left their downy pillows. One wonder of his character was, the self-possession by which he preserved himself calm, while he kept all in excitement around him.

Like most men who have reached old age, Wesley was careful in his physical habits. His regularity produced a vigor and equanimity which are seldom the accompaniments of a laborious mind, or of a distracted life. Often did he declare that he had not felt lowness of spirits one quarter of an hour since he was born—that ten thousand cares were no more weight to his mind than ten thousand hairs to his head, and that he never lost a night's sleep in his life before his seventieth year. At the end of his eighty-second year, he recorded: 'I am never tired with writing, preaching, or traveling.' His congregations sometimes amounted to more than thirty thousand. He preached forty-two thousand four hundred sermons after his return from Georgia, more than fifteen a week. He died Feb. 1791, in the eighty-eighth year of his age and sixty-fifth of his ministry, having passed his long life, intent upon extensive services for the glory of the Redeemer and the good of souls. [The passage beginning "and preach at five o'clock" is printed in the column before "his age".]

and preach at five o'clock, to scatter books and tracts, to live by rule, and to die without fear. He found that some became 'nervous' by too little work rather than by too much, and by neglect of their physical habits. He gave them advice on the subject: 'Touch no intoxicating drink, or tobacco, eat very light if any supper. Breakfast on nettle, or orange-peel tea. Lie down before ten; rise before five. Every day use as much exercise as you can bear, or murder yourself by inches.'

Wesley taught the itinerant preachers to manage difficulties in the societies, to face mobs, to brave any weather, to subsist without means, except such as might casually occur on their routes, to rise at four

He advised his itinerants not to continue public services beyond one hour, and seldom to pray longer than eight or ten minutes at a time; not to allegorize their subjects; to stick to their texts, and never to select such as are obscure. He denounced clamorous preaching. To one of his American preachers he wrote, 'Scream no more at the peril of your soul. Speak as earnestly as you can, but do not scream. Speak with all your heart, but with a moderate voice. It was said of our Lord, 'He shall not cry:' the word properly means, He shall not scream. I often speak loud, often vehemently, but I never scream; I never strain myself; I dare not; I know it would be a sin against God and my own soul.'"

Signs of the Times.

At the anniversary of the American Society for ameliorating the condition of the Jews, celebrated in the city of New York, the Rev. Dr. Tyng recited a remarkable poem of Charlotte Elizabeth, with the foregoing title. The Reverend Doctor offered a resolution "that the signs of the times are such as should arouse all who love the Lord Jesus Christ, and wait for his salvation, to renewed and enlarged effort in this holy enterprise"—and concluded an eloquent speech upon the subject by the remark that this poem embodied the whole of all he had further to say.

When from scattered lands afar,
Spreads the voice of rumored war;
Nations in tumultuous pride,
Heaved like ocean's roaring tide;
When the solar splendors fail,
When the crescent waxeth pale,
And the powers that starlike reign,
Sink dishonored to the plain;
World! do thou the signal dread.
We exalt the drooping head,
We uplift the expectant eye,
Our redemption draweth nigh.
When the fig-tree shoots appear,
Men behold the summer near;
When the hearts of rebels fail,
We the coming conqueror hail.
Bridegroom of the weeping spouse,
Listen to our longing vows;
Listen to her widowed moan,
Listen to creation's groan;
Bid, O bid Thy trumpet sound,
Gather thine elect around,
Gird with saints Thy flaming car,
Summon them from clime afar,
Call them from life's cheerless gloom,
Call them from the marble tomb,
From the grass-grown village grave,
From the deep, dissolving wave,
From the whirlwind and the flame,
Mighty Head, thy members claim.
Where the cross of anguish stood,
Where Thy life distilled its blood,
Where they mocked Thy dying groan,
King of nations! plant thy throne.
Send Thy law from Zion forth,
Speeding o'er the willing earth—
Earth, whose Sabbath glories rise,
Crowned with more than Paradise.
Sacred be the impending veil,
Mortal sense and thought must fail;
Yet the awful hour is nigh,
We shall see Thee eye to eye;
Be our souls in peace possessed,
While we seek Thy promised rest,
And from every heart and home
Breathe the prayer, "O Jesus, come!"
Haste to set the captive free,
All creation groans for Thee.

Getting Time.

Some years ago I numbered among my friends a gentleman of high social position, who was possessed of much benevolence and kindness of heart. He enjoyed uninterrupted health, and rejoiced in the prospect of a long life. I often spoke to him of things pertaining to eternal life, but he met all my appeals with light words and his own peculiar smiles. One day in company he made a remark so irreverent that I instinctively drew in my breath with such force as to arrest his attention. Quickly turning to me, he said, in a low tone, with more seriousness than he had ever manifested,—"I suppose you think I never care for these serious matters that you have urged upon me, but I do think of them, often I think seriously, and when I get time I am going to read my Bible and study into them."

"Get time!" and he looked earnestly at me as if to read the rush of thoughts that swept through my mind. But I said no more, and with a smile he turned away. O! had I known that those two words of warning were the last I should ever give him, I could not have said to myself as I then did, "It can do no good to admonish him." Not long after, my friend stood upon a wharf, giving directions to men in his employ. He was in the strength of manhood, and the ruddy flush of health was on his cheek. But the winds of heaven tore a derrick from its apparently firm setting, and the ponderous shaft struck his spinal column, crushing together the vertebræ and "silver cord."

So he who could not get time to prepare to die, was laid away in the tomb. Thus suddenly did his time of probation cease. And with many equally solemn warnings before them, how many continue to delay the most important action of their lives. "Now is the accepted time."—Congregationalist.

An Incident in the Cars.

On the whole, pleasant traits and incidents are not common in the cars, I think. This opinion I expressed to my friend Somers the other day. In reply to my remark he related a little adventure, which, as it is apropos, and moreover involves a little love and sentiment, I give it without apology, in his own words. It appears that in the most unlikely places love and sentiment may be discovered.

"I was escorting home the lovely Charlotte D——, to whom I was at the time quite devoted; we got in one of the crowded avenue cars. Charlotte could scarcely find room to spread her crinoline and arrange her voluminous flounces; I stood up near her, there being no vacant seat.

After a few minutes came in a poor woman, who deposited a basket of clothes on the platform, and held in her arms a small child, while a little girl hung to her dress. She looked tired and weary, but there was no vacant seat; to be sure, Charlotte might have condensed her flounces, but she did not. Beside her, however, sat a very lovely and elegant young woman, who seemed trying, by moving down closer to others, to make space enough for the stranger between herself and Miss D——. At last she succeeded, and with the sweetest blush I ever saw, she invited the poor burdened female to be seated. Charlotte D—— drew her drapery around her and blushed too, but it was not a pretty blush at all, and she looked annoyed at the proximity of the new comer, who was, however, clean, and decently though thinly clad.

The unknown lady drew the little girl upon her lap, and wrapped her velvet mantle around the small, half-clad form, and put her muff over the half-frozen little blue hands.

So great was the crowd that I alone seemed to observe. The child shivered—the keen wind from the door blew upon her unprotected neck. I saw the young lady quietly draw from under her shawl a little crimson woollen shawl, which she softly put on the shoulders of the little one. The mother looked on with confused wonder. After a short time she rose to leave the car, and would have removed the shawl, but the unknown gently whispered, 'No; keep it for her.' The woman did not answer, the conductor hurried her out, but her eyes swam in tears, which no one saw but me. I noticed her as she descended to a basement, and I hastily marked the house.

Soon after my unknown also rose to depart. I was in despair, for I wanted to follow and discover her residence, but could not leave Miss D——.

How glad, then, was I to see her bowing as she passed out to a mutual acquaintance who stood in the doorway. From him, ere many minutes, I had learned her name and address.

To shorten the story as much as possible, that lady is now my wife. In the small incident which introduced her to me she showed her real character. A few days after our marriage I showed her the blessed crimson shawl, which I had redeemed from its owner, and shall always keep as a memento. There are sometimes pleasant things to be found even in unexpected places. Certainly, I may have said, to have picked out my wife in the cars."

English Women.

"So far as health, comfort, and fitness are concerned, the American ladies have much to learn from the English, especially in their traveling costume. We see no finery or frippery here in the railway carriage; and silks and satins in the street are apt to excite rather uncomplimentary suspicions of the wearers. The 'Balmoral' is almost universally worn; and even fiery red stockings are by no means uncommon. Long dresses are never seen out of drawing rooms.

One-half of the consumption cases among the American women are owing to wafer-soled shoes, which render walking both difficult and dangerous. And so they sit pining in satin chairs in their over-heated rooms, sucking cough candy, and waiting for the doctor, and his shadow—the undertaker; while these buxom English beauties are trampling about in their water-proof boots, or darting through lanes or parks in their saddles. To appear delicate or lackadaisical is no part of an English woman's ambition. Health and vigor of body are considered of primary importance, not only for comfort's sake, but as the most essential qualifications for satisfactorily and successfully performing the duties of wives and mothers. And they dress, and eat, and exercise accordingly. On calling on Lady —— the other morning, one of the most beautiful and accomplished ladies in London, I found her dressed in a plain, purple colored woolen robe, made of cheap and coarse material, and yet so tastefully fitting her fine figure, that I was struck with the elegance and comfort of the ensemble. An ultra fashionable of the Fifth avenue would hardly 'come down' to her visitor in so simple a costume; or if she did, it would be with a confusion of apologetic words and blushes."

Speak Gently to the Erring Ones.

How often as we pass along through this life do we meet with the erring ones. And we pass by them as worthless creatures without a kindly look or a bow of recognizance. Ah! we little think of what one gentle and kindly word might do towards bringing them back into the path of virtue, from which they have strayed. And we little know the thoughts that fill their bosom as they turn from us.

Perhaps once we were loved friends, schoolmates it may be, but now we turn from them—for the finger of scorn is pointed at them, and we dare not, if we would, linger by their side or mingle our voices with theirs; and why? Because the world would, we fear, cast her withering blight at us. Is this right? Should we fear the finger of scorn more than our duty? Did not our Savior while on earth teach us by his example to seek the erring ones, and bring them to his love? Has he not died for all? Ah yes. Then let us be faithful, do unto others as we would that they should do to us, and God will bless us.

"Go seek the erring ones;
Teach them the Savior's love,
And in that world to come
We'll reign with them above."

—M. T. P.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Hygiene.

"THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

For the Crisis.

Keep Clean.

"Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water."

Who that believes in experimental religion, does not attach vast importance to having the heart sprinkled from an evil conscience? Let all such remember that it stands in immediate connection with having the body washed with pure water. And the context shows that they are a part of the qualifications for entering into the holiest by the blood of Jesus.

In time long past I practiced the daily washing of the body for the sake of the comfort, the vigor it gave to the mind, and the energy it afforded to the body. I am well satisfied that the constitution may be greatly changed by a knowledge of, and a proper attention to, the laws of our being. More than that, if we do it to please our Heavenly Father, we can with boldness and full assurance of faith draw near to God.

To call attention to early rising, which will give time for washing, I will refer to two items in an extract from "Hall's Journal of Health." See Crisis May 18, '59.

"Besides, emanations aerial and more or less solid, are thrown out from every person—thrown out by the processes of nature, because no longer fit for life purposes, for they are dead and corrupt; but if breathed into another living body, it is just as abhorrent as if we took into our mouths the matter of a sore or any other excretion."

It is the bodily emanations collecting and concentrating under the same cover, which are most destructive of health,—more destructive than the simple contamination of an atmosphere breathed in common. To avoid the aerial emanations partly, we can keep the head uncovered, and start from the bed at first waking, and wash off the solid with pure water.

E. J. MARDEN.

For the Crisis.

Effects of Tea.

I deem it duty to write a few lines on the effects of tea. I know of a family of seven children; five have been fed strong tea ever since they were old enough to drink from a spoon, and all five of them are stupid, willful, and indisposed to eat any food without the aid of tea to wash it down. One of the number has such a morbid appetite, that almost all kinds of filth picked up from the street and gutters, and back-door slops, are greedily swallowed. Two of them have a kidney disease, which causes much trouble. The children are allowed to have their own way in every thing, and are ugly and disobedient.

RHODA.

Early Rising.

We have somewhere seen remarks against the habit of early rising; but think the following remarks, published in the Herald of Progress much the most sensible:

"Now, so far as my experience and observation extends, (and I am in my seventieth year,) I must say that those of my acquaintance, who, from their early manhood, have been in the habit of rising early and laboring an hour or two before breakfast, have been the most healthy class of people, and have lived to the greatest age. My father was one of this class, and lived to be eighty-six years of age, and never was confined to a bed of sickness a day in his life, till a few days before his death. And the mother of my present wife was one of the pioneers of this western country, from 'the land of steady habits,' and always labored hard, not only before breakfast, but through the day; and she lived to be one hundred years old, wanting four days, and always enjoyed excellent health up to the time of her last sickness. These are but two instances among hundreds which have come under my observation. Indeed, I find that those who rise early and labor before breakfast, and are of temperate habits, are generally the most healthy and best citizens. People who live in large cities, and never know what it is to breathe the pure air which is enjoyed by the farmers in the country, are illy qualified to give lessons of health to those who cultivate the earth."

FRESH AIR.—Give your children plenty of fresh air. Let them snuff it until it sends the rosy current of life dancing joyfully to their temples. Air is so cheap, and so good, and so necessary with all, that every child should have free access to it. Horace Mann beautifully says: "To put children on a short allowance of fresh air, is as foolish as it would have been for Noah, during the deluge, to have put his family on a short allowance of water. Since God has poured out an atmosphere of fifty miles deep, it is enough to make a miser weep to see our children stinted in breath."

CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.—Bathe the parts affected in water in which potatoes with their skins on have been boiled, as hot as can be borne, just before going to bed. By the next morning the pain will be much relieved, if not removed. One application of this simple remedy has cured the most obstinate rheumatic pains.—English paper.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to ELD. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; [illegible] $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 264. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1860. | VOL. XII. NO. 5.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Savior, Come!

BY C. T. DOW.

Come! O come! thou hast tarried long,
Come with the bliss of joy and song;
Saints pine for thee on a thousand shores,
Where the billows break, and the wild wind roars.
There's a voice of wail from the ages past,
That tells of the storm, the wild wind's blast;
Gloom hath shrouded earth's pleasant bowers,
Sin hath cursed, and death devours;
And every hour on its fleeting wing
Sends up the cry—Come, heal its sting.

Come! Savior, come! we sigh for thee,
To hear thy voice—thy glory see;
We wait as lonely captives here,
But will rejoice, for thou art near;
Come, put an end to war and strife,
Come, bring the joys of endless life;
Come, heal the breach that sin hath made,
Restore the forms that death hath laid;
And let the darkness flee away
Before the beams of endless day!

For the Crisis.

Sacrifice.

An article on this subject in the Crisis of Sept. 19th, is to my mind exceedingly apt, and worthy of consideration. Yet I doubt not, like this and many other presentations of duty, it will pass unheeded by numbers who ought to receive it as a well-intended rebuke and admonition expressly for themselves. The writer suggests the idea that the impression generally received with regard to the sacrifice required in the cause of Christ is, that ministers and their families are the persons upon whom this responsibility falls. It is expected of them that they go forth in heat and cold, day and night, to labor earnestly in proclaiming the gospel message,—while their families are to subsist on the plainest fare, and very scant at that, denying themselves not only the luxuries, but even the comforts of life, in order that this work shall be done. This is expected, nay, even demanded of them, while the church may live very comfortably and at their ease, doing for the cause simply that which is perfectly convenient for them to do.

Now let me ask if this is not a fact that cannot be gainsayed? And, is it not contrary to reason and Scripture? Listen to the word: "Whosoever there be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, cannot be (my minister? No.) my disciple." And whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after me, cannot be my disciple. All will admit that this was not intended for ministers alone, but for all who profess to be the followers of Christ. There must be sacrifice on the part of every one who would gain admittance into the kingdom. Why, then, this mistaken idea?

We hear a great deal said about ministers being obliged to leave the great harvest-field of gospel labor, to engage in business for the support of their families. And many are found fault with for so doing. How often the remark is made about Bro. A., or Bro. B., "I fear he is losing his interest in the cause, for he is not devoting all his time to preaching, but is engaged in some kind of business." Now brother, or sister, who say such things, let me put a question home to you. How much have you given for a year past to support the preaching of the gospel? And one more. How many privations have you endured, or, in other words, how much sacrifice made in order to sustain the ministry? Just look the matter over and make an estimate, and see if your conscience is perfectly satisfied before God.

Again, the church can enjoy their fine houses, nice furniture, nice clothing, etc.; but if a minister's family perchance have any of these things (a case rare indeed,) the remark is made, "They seem to be very worldly, and not living much as ministers ought." Now there is evidently a wrong in these things, which I do not know will be ever righted in the present age of anarchy and wrongs. But, so far as duty is concerned, it is well to speak out upon the subject, and admonish those who are in the wrong, leaving the result with Him who is infinitely right, and whose aim is, the harmony of all things in his universe.

A word more relative to the reason, or one reason of ministers leaving the field to engage in worldly business. God is a lover of order, which is manifested through his entire universe. And but little is accomplished in any thing without some plan or system. Now it is well known that among those who are usually denominated Adventists, there is almost an entire want of system in regard to meeting the expenses of the ministry. They so much dislike the idea of a "salaried clergy," that all is left to chance, whether a minister receives anything or not. And it is very easy to get along in our churches in this matter; for one who loves his money can hold on to it. He is not required to give, as in other churches, and so can slide easily along; while others who are free-hearted, and love the truth ardently, often do more than they are able, because they are not willing to see those who proclaim the truth suffer for the necessaries of life. Some therefore are "eased, and others burdened."

Now if, when a preacher of the gospel goes into a region of labor, each brother would state how much he would give towards his support, and therefore obligate himself in that way, it does seem as though those difficulties that now cripple and harrass the ministry might be removed, and more laborers go forth into the great harvest field of the Lord. Only let there be some system in this matter, and the cry would not be so frequently heard, "Ministers are leaving the field to attend to temporal things."

O! brethren, if you knew the anguish of these ministers in secret,—if you could witness their groans and tears, and hear them saying, "Must I leave this great work which my Master has given me to do—a world perishing, and the Judge standing even at the door!"—methinks you would arouse, and ask yourselves whether there were anything lacking on your part, that caused such an evil as this. Shall we who believe the Lord is coming speedily, be just as eager for worldly ease, comfort and riches even, as the great mass who walk only by sight?

Alas! how little is realized of the position in which we stand. The Lord send truth to the heart, and let those who are deceived be awakened to their true condition, before it is too late. A. C. J.

Lockport, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Evening and morning Visions of Daniel.—No. 2.

As we proceed to notice the evening vision of Daniel, in chap. 7, it is well to bear in mind that the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, of the 2d chap., runs parallel with Daniel's dream. The interpretation of the former was given while Daniel was yet a youth, having been in Babylon but three years, being about sixty-seven years before he was cast into the lions' den.

The imagery of this vision of the king, made a magnificent appearance before the mind of a heathen prince; while to Daniel, the same events are afterwards represented under the appearance of four fierce and devouring wild beasts. It is only necessary for the reader to turn to and read the 2d chap. of Daniel, from the 31st verse to the close. The readers of the Crisis are so well posted in all these matters, it is only necessary to allude to these grand outlines of all subsequent history both of the church and the world; all comprised under the reign of four great monarchies, to be superceded by the "kingdom of heaven," or, in the language of the angel to Daniel, when "the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting," etc.

The duration of this long rule of persecuting power, must always have been of great interest to believers in divine revelation; but especially to us, living so near the termination, it becomes a matter of vast importance. To determine the date, we must ascertain the commencement of the four great empires. I have assumed the whole period to be 2520 years; but Daniel, in his evening vision, has only one term of duration given—and that is only one-half the period I have assumed. This must have reference to the reign of the "little horn," and therefore be the last half, or final termination of the whole dynasty.

I will leave the chronology of this evening vision till the next number, in order to make a few remarks of a more practical bearing just now. Witness the great anxiety manifested by Daniel, at the conclusion of this vision, especially the signification of the fourth, which was "the dreadful and terrible" beast. He says, in the 7th verse, "After this, I saw in the night vision, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped with the feet of it; and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns." The "little horn" of that beast awakened his special inquiry. In the 8th verse, "I considered the horn, and behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots; in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things." All agree that the "little horn" of this beast denotes the Roman hierarchy, which grew up from small beginnings, and became a temporal kingdom, extending over the territory occupied by "three" of the "ten" kingdoms, "plucked up."

It is an interesting topic of inquiry just now, when it was the Pope took possession of "three" kingdoms in and about Italy; for he is soon to be dispossessed of the last remnant of his territorial possessions—if Garibaldi is as successful in Rome, as he has so recently been in Naples!

If it is true, as we read nearer the close of the 7th chapter, that "this horn is to make war with the saints, and prevail against them until the Ancient of days come, and judgment is given to the saints of the Most High,"—what is to follow the present diminution of the power of this "little horn" now manifest in Rome?

For the Crisis.

The Right Name.

Are you a Presbyterian, a Baptist, or a Methodist? No. I have heard many good gospel sermons from preachers of various denominations; but when they strike the key-note of ism, I find only husks—no gospel meat or sincere milk of the WORD. I rejoice in the name of CHRISTIAN, and am glad to meet with any who love CHRIST more than father or mother, brother or sister, or even their own sect.

A brother who had been converted very early in life under the preaching of a devoted christian, and who had afterward united with the M. E. Church in W—, Mass., eventually took up his abode in Perry county, Pa. He carried the usual certificate of regular standing in that church; but, as he held some views not found in the M. E. discipline, he would not present his certificate until he had first told the pastor candidly something of his belief. This he did on the first convenient opportunity, stating that some of his views were the result of Advent or "Millerite" influence. The brother humbly acknowledged the possibility of his being in error, but at present he did not believe in the immortality of the wicked. The pastor was a very stiff specimen of the class who say, "I am holier than thou," and "my way only is right."

After the brother had resided some months in the place, the pastor inquired of one of the neighbors how that man C— got along. The neighbor in turn inquired, "Are you going to receive him into the church?" The pastor said "No! he has too strange ideas to be admitted to our church."

Take courage, brother. Only make sure of being a CHRISTIAN, and let the proud Pharisee say, "Stand by thyself." Soon you will be admitted into the presence of the GOOD SHEPHERD, while those who despised you will be cast out. F. H. C.

For the Crisis.

"Be not conformed to this World."

Will not pure religion, the principles of Christ, lived out, dictate in relation to unnecessary expenditures for external appearances? Certainly. And that Bro. or Sr. who is understandingly exercised thereby, will cut off from those things which are incompatible with the gospel, and only calculated to gratify carnal nature, and to please a vainly admiring world. The church of believers should be as pilgrims and strangers.

"Conformed," says Webster, "is made to resemble; to reduce to a likeness of; made agreeable to." What is that resemblance, or likeness, to which they should not conform? That this conformation and transformation, if not spoken with direct reference to dress, or external appearance, does as fully and definitely embrace that, as any other position or principle adopted by this world, I most fully believe. But says one, "It is not a transformation of dress, but the renewing or changing of the mind, that is spoken of and urged upon the church." Pause one moment, while I ask what governs the man? Is it not the mind? Surely it is. Every act is only a development of some internal principle, or the mind acted out. It is true, the apostle speaks of being quickened, and being renewed by the Holy Ghost; and it is only through this divine agency, by yielding our mind and will to its renewing or changing influence, that this transformation is effected; and just so far as we have the mind of Christ, we shall act Christ-like, and no further. The stream can rise no higher than the fountain. "By their fruit ye shall know them." A fountain cannot send forth both sweet and bitter water.

Again, if we have the mind, the principle, or the spirit of the people of the world, do we not act like them? Most surely. If our mind is not in harmony with the world, do we act like them? Certainly not. While I would not condemn, or uncharitably judge any one, let me pursue this subject a little further, and inquire what can be the object of the lovers of this world in striving to adorn their persons with silver and gold and costly attire, not necessary for the comfort of life? or in building for themselves stately mansions, expensively furnished; having fast horses and gilded chariots? Is it that bread may be dealt out to the hungry? that the thirsty may have drink? that the naked may be clothed? that the sick and those in prison may be visited? Is it to fulfill the royal law,—thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself? Is it to follow the example of Christ, or his apostles, that they do this? No, never, never. Such things are opposed to the pure principles of the gospel, and never originated in love to God, or to our neighbor, but from love of self, and a desire to be admired by a world at enmity with God. Brethren and sisters, let us think of these things. Think of Him who was rich and for our sakes became poor. S. C.

For the Crisis.

The Rock of Ages.

I dare not meet the storms that rise,
And spread their rage from strand to strand,
Unsheltered by the mighty Rock
That rises in a "weary land."
Without my Captain at my side,
I dare not cross life's battle-field,
I'm all ungirded for the strife
Without my buckler and my shield.

I dare not cross life's stormy sea,
Nor dare unloose the rudder-band,
Without "my Father's at the helm,"
Without my Savior's guiding hand.
And when "the silver cord is loosed,"
And death's dark shadows compass me,
I'll rest until a Savior's hand
Unbinds my bonds and sets me free!

Pine Avenue. F. F.

Coming of Christ.

Is the second coming of Christ before or after the millennium? What saith the Scriptures?

That the Lord Jesus will come personally a second time, is firmly believed by all christians. It is almost as generally believed, that there will be a period when holiness will fill the earth. This glorious state is often called "the Millennium;" the Scriptures speak of it as "the kingdom of God and of his Christ."

The point to which we now request attention is this, Which of the two events just mentioned will occur first? Will the universal kingdom be established, prosper, and come to an end, while the Savior remains in heaven; or will Christ return in person, and rule the world in righteousness? Psa. 96: 10-13.

If we ask this question of the professing church, or inquire of her teachers, the answer generally is, "We look for the millennium first; we do not expect that Christ will come in person for many hundreds, or perhaps many thousands of years." If we turn from man, and inquire at "the oracles of God," we find that the personal advent of the Savior is the great event predicted. For this the people of God are directed to wait, to hope, and to watch. All the sacred writers who treat upon the subject, and who point out the relation between "the coming and kingdom" of Christ, agree with the prophet Daniel, who testifies that he "saw in vision one like the Son of man come in the clouds of heaven," at the time of the destruction of the fourth beast, or the Roman power. Nothing intervenes between that dreadful tyranny and the peaceful universal kingdom of Christ, besides his coming and acts of judgment. HE COMES, HE JUDGES, HE REIGNS!

That this coming "in the clouds of heaven," before the kingdom, is a personal coming, is evident from our Lord's own words in his last prophecy, (Matt. 24: 30;) his testimony before the Jewish High Priest, (Matt. 26: 64;) the declaration of the angels just after the resurrection of Christ, (Acts 1: 9-11;) and the prophecy of John, (Rev. 1: 7,) "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him."

This one passage in Daniel 7, compared with the texts above referred to, is sufficient to prove that the personal advent of Christ is before the millennium. O that christians would ponder God's simple testimony, and compare one portion of Scripture with another, in order to see whether these things are so.

I have searched the New Testament in vain to find one passage which asserts, or even fairly implies, that there will be a period of universal blessedness before the coming of the Savior. I can find no single instance in which the apostles expressed any hope that the whole world would be converted by the preaching of the gospel during the Savior's absence; but I have found many passages which, understood in their literal meaning, and interpreted in the same way as events have already interpreted other prophecies, directly oppose any such expectation as a universal conversion of the nations before the Lord's coming.—Tracts on the Prophecies, No. 4.

For the Crisis.

New Name.

That God has promised to call his people by a new name is true, as we find in Isa. 62: 2; and it is also true that in this connection he has declared what this new name shall be, (verse 4th)—"Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; . . . but thou shalt be called Hephzi-bah," (my delight is in her.) In verse 12th we have another name: "And thou shalt be called Sought out;" which together are significant both of position and character. But supposing we think Isaiah to be wrong in this matter, and seek for the new name under the new covenant, what do we find here?

1. Matt. 5: 9; "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God."

2. Jesus says, "I have called you friends." John 15: 15.

3. "Not ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. 2: 11.

4. "Called to be saints." Rom. 1: 7. "And when he had called the saints," etc.

5. "They shall be called the children of God." Rom. 9: 26.

6. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God."

Here is but a specimen of divine appointment, to say nothing of that doubtful call in Acts 11: 26, where the disciples were first called christian; names significant of our relation to God through Jesus Christ our Lord. God has ever chosen such titles to represent his people as were at once significant either of their character, relation or position.

1. As to character—called to be saints, eminent for piety and virtue.

2. Relation—sons of God—beloved—brethren—heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.

3. Position—"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins that took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom." In this position the church is found ready—"They that were ready went in with him to the marriage," etc. Matt. 25: 10.

Now as it is perfectly demonstrable and apparent that the Roman harlot is trembling to fall; and whereas in connection with her fall comes the marriage supper of the Lamb, it is certain that the church has taken her "waiting" position; therefore any name that is applicable to her character, relation, and especially her position, must be well pleasing to the Bridegroom and significant to all, and it will be time enough for the bride to take the Bridegroom's name when the marriage takes place. Is it not so?

Therefore, as the name "Second Advent" gives prominence to the first Advent, and the event is to be the completion of the christian's hope, for which we are now looking, and in fact is a confession of the entire plan of God in the resurrection and restitution, and as such sufficiently understood by the candid, I see no good reason to change the name unless to save reproach. And if believing in the Second Advent at hand entitles us to the name of Second Advent believers, and reproach comes in consequence, let us bear it with patience.

If we should assume the name of Christian, we fall back upon a name already assumed by a sect from which many of our brethren came out; and to distinguish ourselves to the inquirer, we should have to confess we were Advents, or something else significant of our faith, or be accused of going under false colors. If the Lord has called us out here to wait for his Son from heaven, then we are in fact, or ought to be, believers in the speedy second advent of Christ, and I think the man that wants to wipe out this reproach, is not the man for the times.

Then let us once more to the fight—fight manfully under a banner significant of our faith, and then invite others to join the virgin army,—"but return not unto them."

H. PRATT.

☞ Dust, by its own nature, can rise only so far above the road; and birds which fly higher never have it upon their wings. So the heart that knows how to fly high enough, escapes those little cares and vexations which brood upon the earth, but cannot rise above it into that purer air.

☞ A religious or holy life has a voice; it speaks when the tongue is silent; and is either a strong attraction, or a perpetual reproof to those around us.

For the Crisis.

Gem Jottings.

[Selected from diverse authors, by a Book-worm.]

RESIGNATION.

"Go! sendeth sun, he sendeth shower,
Alike they're needful to the flower;
And joys and tears alike are sent
To give the soul fit nourishment.
As comes to me or cloud or sun,
Father! thy will, not mine, be done."—
Sarah F. Adams.

THE LONG PROMISED DAY.—We can learn this lesson, at least,—that that man has no humanity, no philanthropy, and certainly no christianity, who does not long for that long promised day when earth shall be restored from its thraldom, when the groans of creation shall cease, when all things shall be made new, when Paradise shall return; and Christ shall reign over a happy, a holy, a peaceful world; and God shall have glory, and we shall praise him day and night, as the monuments of his love, and the purchase of a Savior's blood, and without ceasing. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen.—Great Tribulation, By Dr. Cumming.

FRIENDSHIP.

Small service is true service while it lasts,
Of friends, however humble, scorn not one:
The daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dew-drop from the sun.
Wordsworth.

TRUTH.—As the turning of our eyes from the sun, or the burying ourselves in caves, deep beyond its reach, does not blot the sun from the heavens, or obliterate its light, so our discarding the truth will not destroy that truth, nor diminish its binding obligations.—Rev. A. Joy, A. M.

LIVE NOT FOR SELF.

Play not the niggard; spurn thy native clod,
And self disown;
Live for humanity; live unto thy God;
Not to thyself alone! Anon.

OBLITERACY AND PERMANENCY.—The tomb of Moses is unknown; but the traveler still slacks his thirst at the well of Jacob. The gorgeous palace of the wisest and wealthiest of monarchs, with its cedar, and gold, and ivory,—even the great temple of Jerusalem, hallowed by the visible glory of the Deity himself,—are gone; but Solomon's reservoirs are as perfect as ever. Of the ancient architecture of the Holy City, not one stone is left upon another; but the pool of Bethesda commands the pilgrim's reverence at the present day.—Quar. Review.

Celebrities of the English Pulpit.—Spurgeon.

[Correspondence of the Amer. Monthly.]

LONDON, June 5th, 1860.

My Dear Friend at Home:—In answer to your eager upturned faces, as in imagination, we see you gather around the "household chair," listening to the last despatch from friends "far away," we say yes, we have heard Mr. Spurgeon, and many other celebrities of the English pulpit, of whom, if it please you, we may say something hereafter.

There is no name that flies from lip to lip so often as that of Spurgeon,—except it be the equally, and hardly more, popular name of Napoleon. It is a rare thing in the history of the Church, that a single voice can be heard so universally, even when the slumbers of a church "at ease" offer no resistance to the shrill sound of a reformer's rising in the power of an alarmed conscience, and the majesty of a renewed faith. Luther and Wesley arrested ears and hearts because there were none else to arrest them among a backslidden and God-forsaken priesthood. But, for a single voice in its first utterances, to rise above the accumulated war of trumpeters more numerous and more vigilant than ever covered the walls of Zion since the builders commenced the glorious task of "repairing her waste places," is an event too remarkable to be passed over without notice, and, after weighing all the circumstances, he will be a more wonderful man than the subject of our remarks, who does not do as every gazer on the wonderful pile at Stonehenge, does,—wonder how it came into its position, and turn away, wondering still.

A better idea of the popularity of Mr. Spurgeon in England cannot be given, than to say, that on going down on one of the river boats from Westminster to London Bridge, a boatman answered my inquiry, "Where is Mr. Spurgeon's chapel?" with singular promptness, staring at me the while, as much as to say, "art thou a stranger and knowest not these things?"—then pointing in the direction of the chapel, said, "It is close by Surrey Bridge, on the Surry side of the river, down a flight of steps in Park street. You can't miss it; anybody will tell you. He preaches there Sunday nights and Thursday nights." And yet, probably this man never saw the inside of a place of worship—living Sundays and all days on his boat.

To give greater effect to this, I may mention, that, on riding up "City Road" on the box with the driver of a "'bus" a day or two ago, when we passed Bunhill Burying Ground, the celebrated spot where lie the sacred ashes of the great and holy Bunyan, and the sweet moral singer, Isaac Watts, and a noble army of martyrs of cherished memory; I asked the driver to point out Bunyan's tombstone—(a modest, upright slab, known, one would suppose, to every child in London.) Looking over the burial ground a moment, and then turning his head directly across the way, where stands the famous "City Road Chapel," the Cathedral of English Methodism, the coachman replied, "he's buried there, sir, there somewhere," waving his whip conclusively. So little do these men know of the men and things that have moved the world! Yet they know of Spurgeon, albeit, it is but as they know of Jenny Lind. Nor does their knowledge of this great wonder arise from any intimate relation in which he has placed himself with this class, for, as far as I can gather, he has little to do with any movement, either religious, philanthropic, or otherwise, beyond the pale of his own denomination, and scarcely beyond his own individual position as a Baptist preacher, over the Park Street Congregation.

After a long walk across interesting streets, we at length came to the steps our boatman had pointed out, and landed by the blank wall of Barclay & Perkins' Brewery. A street back of this mammoth manufactory of "liquid damnation," as our teetotal friends here are fond of denominating it, stands the famed Park Street Chapel, a plain, unpretending old conventicle, whose walls could tell if they had tongues, full many a tale of puritanic fervor and stubbornness.

It was a little past six o'clock P. M., when we arrived at the door of the chapel, and the service was to commence at seven o'clock. Two or three ladies had entered within the iron railing separating the few feet of yard from the street, and by the iron gate leading to the vestry on the east side of the Chapel, stood lazily lolling a man, whom we supposed was the "chapel keeper," and probably occupied the house in the yard adjoining the vestry.

"Does Mr. Spurgeon preach to-night, sir?" we inquired of our friend just introduced.

"Yes," was the gruff reply, "at seven o'clock." he added, as though to avoid all further questions.

"When will you open the church," we asked.

"O! not till half past six."

"Then will you be kind enough to let this lady with me take a seat in the vestry until you open the doors of the church? We have traveled far and she is weary."

"O! you must wait awhile, the chapel will be open soon;—but I cannot let any one in until those who hold tickets are seated."

• • • •

A little before seven, o'clock a number of male candidates for baptism entered the vestry side of the church, wearing snuff-colored alpaca robes, seating themselves in a group of seats at the back of the pulpit, which stands some way in the body of the chapel, and is ascended by winding-stairs, after the ordinary English model. That staircase, by the way, has been the subject of much slander, as well as the minister it serves. It is untrue that Mr. S. descends to any such tricks as sliding down the rail; a feat which a mountebank would be crafty to perform on that rail!

A few minutes after the clock had struck seven, with a quiet, confident, and rather quick pace, enters the wonder of the world, and after a moment's silent prayer, in a seated, upright position, and with uncovered face, he rises and deliberately surveys his audience. What a face! so radiant and so young! Why, his portraits are miserable caricatures! That thick, pug nose, and those almost African lips, and great tusks which part them; that stiff, unintellectual look which his photographs and busts give us, are as foreign to him, at least as he now is, as they are foreign to some others we might name, who, without a tithe of his fame, would feel degraded by such embellishments. He stands a little below the medium height, firmly and rather stoutly built, dressed in ordinary clerical garb, preferring, however, the lappelled coat to the long frock, with a broader neckcloth, perhaps, than many of his brethren, and having a great deal of unbending starch in it, giving his neck the appearance of a hidden "wen" in his pictures. His hair is wavy and long, of a glossy, dark-brown color, while his skin is fair as alabaster, so that the delicate coloring of his cheeks plays on his features like the blushes of June roses. Inclined to flesh, his movements are sometimes awkward, and added to his short arms, gives him, in gesticulating, a stiff-

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 264. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1860. | VOL. XII. NO. 5.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

Savior, Come!

BY C. F. DOW.

Come! O come! thou hast tarried long,
Come with the bliss of joy and song;
Saints pine for thee on a thousand shores,
Where the billows break, and the wild wind roars.
There's a voice of wail from the ages past,
That tells of the storm, the wild wind's blast;
Gloom hath shrouded earth's pleasant bowers,
Sin hath cursed, and death devours;
And every hour on its fleeting wing
Sends up the cry—Come, heal its sting.

Come! Savior, come! we sigh for thee,
To hear thy voice—thy glory see;
We wait as lonely captives here,
But will rejoice, for thou art near;
Come, put an end to war and strife,
Come, bring the joys of endless life;
Come, heal the breach that sin hath made,
Restore the forms that death hath laid;
And let the darkness flee away
Before the beams of endless day!

For the Crisis.

Sacrifice.

An article on this subject in the Crisis of Sept. 19th, is to my mind exceedingly apt, and worthy of consideration. Yet I doubt not, like this and many other presentations of duty, it will pass unheeded by numbers who ought to receive it as a well-intended rebuke and admonition expressly for themselves. The writer suggests the idea that the impression generally received with regard to the sacrifice required in the cause of Christ is, that ministers and their families are the persons upon whom this responsibility falls. It is expected of them that they go forth in heat and cold, day and night, to labor earnestly in proclaiming the gospel message,—while their families are to subsist on the plainest fare, and very scant at that, denying themselves not only the luxuries, but even the comforts of life, in order that this work shall be done. This is expected, nay, even demanded of them, while the church may live very comfortably and at their ease, doing for the cause simply that which is perfectly convenient for them to do.

Now let me ask if this is not a fact that cannot be gainsayed? And, is it not contrary to reason and Scripture? Listen to the word: "Whosoever there be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, cannot be (my minister? No.) my disciple." And whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after me, cannot be my disciple. All will admit that this was not intended for ministers alone, but for all who profess to be the followers of Christ. There must be sacrifice on the part of every one who would gain admittance into the kingdom. Why, then, this mistaken idea?

We hear a great deal said about ministers being obliged to leave the great harvest-field of gospel labor, to engage in business for the support of their families. And many are found fault with for so doing. How often the remark is made about Bro. A., or Bro. B., "I fear he is losing his interest in the cause, for he is not devoting all his time to preaching, but is engaged in some kind of business." Now brother, or sister, who say such things, let me put a question home to you. How much have you given for a year past to support the preaching of the gospel? And one more. How many privations have you endured, or, in other words, how much sacrifice made in order to sustain the ministry? Just look the matter over and make an estimate, and see if your conscience is perfectly satisfied before God.

Again, the church can enjoy their fine houses, nice furniture, nice clothing, etc.; but if a minister's family perchance have any of these things (a case rare indeed,) the remark is made, "They seem to be very worldly, and not living much as ministers ought." Now there is evidently a wrong in these things, which I do not know will be ever righted in the present age of anarchy and wrongs. But, so far as duty is concerned, it is well to speak out upon the subject, and admonish those who are in the wrong, leaving the result with Him who is infinitely right, and whose aim is, the har- [illegible] engage in worldly business. God is a lover of order, which is manifested through his entire universe. And but little is accomplished in any thing without some plan or system. Now it is well known that among those who are usually denominated Adventists, there is almost an entire want of system in regard to meeting the expenses of the ministry. They so much dislike the idea of a "salaried clergy," that all is left to chance, whether a minister receives anything or not. And it is very easy to get along in our churches in this matter; for one who loves his money can hold on to it. He is not required to give, as in other churches, and so can slide easily along; while others who are free-hearted, and love the truth ardently, often do more than they are able, because they are not willing to see those who proclaim the truth suffer for the necessaries of life. Some therefore are "eased, and others burdened."

Now if, when a preacher of the gospel goes into a region of labor, each brother would state how much he would give towards his support, and therefore obligate himself in that way, it does seem as though those difficulties that now cripple and harrass the ministry might be removed, and more laborers go forth into the great harvest field of the Lord. Only let there be some system in this matter, and the cry would not be so frequently heard, "Ministers are leaving the field to attend to temporal things."

O! brethren, if you knew the anguish of these ministers in secret,—if you could witness their groans and tears, and hear them saying, "Must I leave this great work which my Master has given me to do—a world perishing, and the Judge standing even at the door!"—methinks you would arouse, and ask yourselves whether there were anything lacking on your part, that caused such an evil as this. Shall we who believe the Lord is coming speedily, be just as eager for worldly ease, comfort and riches even, as the great mass who walk only by sight?

Alas! how little is realized of the position in which we stand. The Lord send truth to the heart, and let those who are deceived be awakened to their true condition, before it is too late. A. C. J.

Lockport, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Evening and morning Visions of Daniel.—No. 2.

As we proceed to notice the evening vision of Daniel, in chap. 7, it is well to bear in mind that the dream of Nebuchudnezzar, of the 2d chap., runs parallel with Daniel's dream. The interpretation of the former was given while Daniel was yet a youth, having been in Babylon but three years, being about sixty-seven years before he was cast into the lions' den.

The imagery of this vision of the king, made a magnificent appearance before the mind of a heathen prince; while to Daniel, the same events are afterwards represented under the appearance of four fierce and devouring wild beasts. It is only necessary for the reader to turn to and read the 2d chap. of Daniel, from the 31st verse to the close. The readers of the Crisis are so well posted in all these matters, it is only necessary to allude to these grand outlines of all subsequent history both of the church and the world; all comprised under the reign of four great monarchies, to be superceded by the "kingdom of heaven," or, in the language of the angel to Daniel, when "the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting," etc.

The duration of this long rule of persecuting power, must always have been of great interest to believers in divine revelation; but especially to us, living so near the termination, it becomes a matter of vast importance. To determine the date, we must ascertain the commencement of the four great empires. I have assumed the whole period to be 2520 years; but Daniel, in his evening vision, has only one term of duration given—and that is only one-half the period I have assumed. This must have reference to the reign of the "little horn," and therefore be the last half, or final termination of the whole dynasty.

I will leave the chronology of this evening vision till the next number, in order to make a few remarks of a more practical bearing just now. Witness the great anxiety manifested by Daniel, at the conclusion of this vision, especially the signification of the fourth, which was "the dreadful and terrible" beast. He says, in the 7th verse, "After this, I saw in the night vision, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns." The "little horn" of that beast awakened his special inquiry. In the 8th verse, "I considered the horn, and behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots; in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things." All agree that the "little horn" of this beast denotes the Roman hierarchy, which grew up from small beginnings, and became a temporal kingdom, extending over the territory occupied by "three" of the "ten" kingdoms, "plucked up."

It is an interesting topic of inquiry just now, when it was the Pope took possession of "three" kingdoms in and about Italy; for he is soon to be dispossessed of the last remnant of his territorial possessions—if Garibaldi is as successful in Rome, as he has so recently been in Naples!

If it is true, as we read nearer the close of the 7th chapter, that "this horn is to make war with the saints, and prevail against them until the Ancient of days come, and judgment is given to the saints of the Most High,"—what is to follow the present diminution of the power of this "little horn" now manifest in Rome?

For the Crisis.

The Right Name.

Are you a Presbyterian, a Baptist, or a Methodist? No. I have heard many good gospel sermons from preachers of various denominations; but when they strike the key-note of ism, I find only husks—no gospel meat or sincere milk of the WORD. I rejoice in the name of CHRISTIAN, and am glad to meet with any who love CHRIST more than father or mother, brother or sister, or even their own sect.

A brother who had been converted very early in life under the preaching of a devoted christian, and who had afterward united with the M. E. Church in W—, Mass., eventually took up his abode in Perry county, Pa. He carried the usual certificate of regular standing in that church; but, as he held some views not found in the M. E. discipline, he would not present his certificate until he had first told the pastor candidly something of his belief. This he did on the first convenient opportunity, stating that some of his views were the result of Advent or "Millerite" influence. The brother humbly acknowledged the possibility of his being in error, but at present he did not believe in the immortality of the wicked. The pastor was a very stiff specimen of the class who say, "I am holier than thou," and "my way only is right."

After the brother had resided some months in the place, the pastor inquired of one of the neighbors how that man C— got along. The neighbor in turn inquired, "Are you going to receive him into the church?" The pastor said "No' he has too strange ideas to be admitted to our church."

Take courage, brother. Only make sure of being a CHRISTIAN, and let the proud Pharisee say, "Stand by thyself." Soon you will be admitted into the presence of the GOOD SHEPHERD, while those who despised you will be cast out. F. H. C.

For the Crisis.

"Be not conformed to this World."

Will not pure religion, the principles of Christ, lived out, dictate in relation to unnecessary expenditures for external appearances? Certainly. And that Bro. or Sr. who is understandingly exercised thereby, will cut off from those things which are incompatible with the gospel, and only calculated to gratify carnal nature, and to please a vainly admiring world. The church of believers should be as pilgrims and strangers.

"Conformed," says Webster, "is made to resemble; to reduce to a likeness of; made agreeable to." What is that resemblance, or likeness, to which they should not conform? That this conformation and transformation, if not spoken with direct reference to dress, or external appearance, does as fully and definitely embrace that, as any other position or principle adopted by this world, I most fully believe. But says one, "It is not a transformation of dress, but the renewing or changing of the mind, that is spoken of and urged upon the church." Pause one moment, while I ask what governs the man? Is it not the mind? Surely it is. Every act is only a development of some internal principle, or the mind acted out. It is true, the apostle speaks of being quickened, and being renewed by the Holy Ghost; and it is only through this divine agency, by yielding our mind and will to its renewing or changing influence, that this transformation is effected; and just so far as we have the mind of Christ, we shall act Christ-like, and no further. The stream can rise no higher than the fountain. "By their fruit ye shall know them." A fountain cannot send forth both sweet and bitter water.

Again, if we have the mind, the principle, or the spirit of the people of the world, do we not act like them? Most surely. If our mind is not in harmony with the world, do we act like them? Certainly not. While I would not condemn, or uncharitably judge any one, let me pursue this subject a little further, and inquire what can be the object of the lovers of this world in striving to adorn their persons with silver and gold and costly attire, not necessary for the comfort of life? or in building for themselves stately mansions, expensively furnished; having fast horses and gilded chariots? Is it that bread may be dealt out to the hungry? that the thirsty may have drink? that the naked may be clothed? that the sick and those in prison may be visited? Is it to fulfill the royal law,—thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself? Is it to follow the example of Christ, or his apostles, that they do this? No, never, never. Such things are opposed to the pure principles of the gospel, and never originated in love to God, or to our neighbor, but from love of self, and a desire to be admired by a world at enmity with God. Brethren and sisters, let us think of these things. Think of Him who was rich and for our sakes became poor. S. C.

For the Crisis.

The Rock of Ages.

I dare not meet the storms that rise,
And spread their rage from strand to strand,
Unsheltered by the mighty Rock
That rises in a "weary land."
Without my Captain at my side,
I dare not cross life's battle-field,
I'm all ungirded for the strife
Without my buckler and my shield.

I dare not cross life's stormy sea,
Nor dare unloose the rudder-band,
Without "my Father's at the helm,"
Without my Savior's guiding hand.
And when "the silver cord is loosed,"
And death's dark shadows compass me,
I'll rest until a Savior's hand
Unbinds my bonds and sets me free!

Pine Avenue. F. F.

Coming of Christ.

Is the second coming of Christ before or after the millennium? What saith the Scriptures?

That the Lord Jesus will come personally a second time, is firmly believed by all christians. It is almost as generally believed, that there will be a period when holiness will fill the earth. This glorious state is often called "the Millennium;" the Scriptures speak of it as "the kingdom of God and of his Christ."

The point to which we now request attention is this, Which of the two events just mentioned will occur first? Will the universal kingdom be established, prosper, and come to an end, while the Savior remains in heaven, or will Christ return in person, and rule the world in righteousness? Psa. 96: 10-13.

If we ask this question of the professing church, or inquire of her teachers, the answer generally is, "We look for the millennium first, we do not expect that Christ will come in person for many hundreds, or perhaps many thousands of years." If we turn from man, and inquire at "the oracles of God," we find that the personal advent of the Savior is the great event predicted. For this the people of God are directed to wait, to hope, and to watch. All the sacred writers who treat upon the subject, and who point out the relation between "the coming and kingdom" of Christ, agree with the prophet Daniel, who testifies that he "saw in vision one like the Son of man come in the clouds of heaven," at the time of the destruction of the fourth beast, or the Roman power. Nothing intervenes between that dreadful tyranny and the peaceful universal kingdom of Christ, besides his coming and acts of judgment. HE COMES, HE JUDGES, HE REIGNS!

That this coming "in the clouds of heaven," before the kingdom, is a personal coming, is evident from our Lord's own words in his last prophecy, (Matt. 24: 30;) his testimony before the Jewish High Priest, (Matt. 26: 64;) the declaration of the angels just after the resurrection of Christ, (Acts 1: 9-11;) and the prophecy of John, (Rev. 1: 7,) "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him."

This one passage in Daniel 7, compared with the texts above referred to, is sufficient to prove that the personal advent of Christ is before the millennium. O that christians would ponder God's simple testimony, and compare one portion of Scripture with another, in order to see whether these things are so.

I have searched the New Testament in vain to find one passage which asserts, or even fairly implies, that there will be a period of universal blessedness before the coming of the Savior. I can find no single instance in which the apostles expressed any hope that the whole world would be converted by the preaching of the gospel during the Savior's absence; but I have found many passages which, understood in their literal meaning, and interpreted in the same way as events have already interpreted other prophecies, directly oppose any such expectation as a universal conversion of the nations before the Lord's coming.—Tracts on the Prophecies, No. 4.

For the Crisis.

New Name.

That God has promised to call his people by a new name is true, as we find in Isa. 62: 2; and it is also true that in this connection he has declared what this new name shall be, (verse 4th)—"Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; . . . but thou shalt be called Hephzi-bah," (my delight is in her.) In verse 12th we have another name: "And thou shalt be called Sought out;" which together are significant both of position and character. But supposing we think Isaiah to be wrong in this matter, and seek for the new name under the new covenant, what do we find here?

1. Matt. 5: 9; "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God."

2. Jesus says, "I have called you friends." John 15: 15.

3. "Not ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. 2: 11.

4. "Called to be saints." Rom. 1: 7. "And when he had called the saints," etc.

5. "They shall be called the children of God." Rom. 9: 26.

6. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God."

Here is but a specimen of divine appointment, to say nothing of that doubtful call in Acts 11: 26, where the disciples were first called christian; names significant of our relation to God through Jesus Christ our Lord. God has ever chosen such titles to represent his people as were at once significant either of their character, relation or position.

1. As to character—called to be saints, eminent for piety and virtue.

2. Relation—sons of God—beloved—brethren—heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.

3. Position—"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins that took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom." In this position the church is found ready—"They that were ready went in with him to the marriage," etc. Matt. 25: 10.

Now as it is perfectly demonstrable and apparent that the Roman harlot is trembling to fall; and whereas in connection with her fall comes the marriage supper of the Lamb, it is certain that the church has taken her "waiting" position; therefore any name that is applicable to her character, relation, and especially her position, must be well pleasing to the Bridegroom and significant to all, and it will be time enough for the bride to take the Bridegroom's name when the marriage takes place. Is it not so?

Therefore, as the name "Second Advent" gives prominence to the first Advent, and the event is to be the completion of the christian's hope, for which we are now looking, and in fact is a confession of the entire plan of God in the resurrection and restitution, and as such sufficiently understood by the candid, I see no good reason to change the name unless to save reproach. And if believing in the Second Advent at hand entitles us to the name of Second Advent believers, and reproach comes in consequence, let us bear it with patience.

If we should assume the name of Christian, we fall back upon a name already assumed by a sect from which many of our brethren came out; and to distinguish ourselves to the inquirer, we should have to confess we were Advents, or something else significant of our faith, or be accused of going under false colors. If the Lord has called us out here to wait for his Son from heaven, then we are in fact, or ought to be, believers in the speedy second advent of Christ, and I think the man that wants to wipe out this reproach, is not the man for the times.

Then let us once more to the fight—fight manfully under a banner significant of our faith, and then invite others to join the virgin army,—"but return not unto them."

H. PRATT.

☞ Dust, by its own nature, can rise only so far above the road; and birds which fly higher never have it upon their wings. So the heart that knows how to fly high enough, escapes those little cares and vexations which brood upon the earth, but cannot rise above it into that purer air.

☞ A religious or holy life has a voice; it speaks when the tongue is silent; and is either a strong attraction, or a perpetual reproof to those around us.

For the Crisis.

Gem Jottings.

[Selected from diverse authors, by a Book-worm.]

RESIGNATION.

"God sendeth sun, he sendeth shower,
Alike they're needful to the flower;
And joys and tears alike are sent
To give the soul fit nourishment.
As comes to me or cloud or sun,
Father! thy will, not mine, be done."—
Sarah F. Adams.

THE LONG PROMISED DAY.—We can learn this lesson, at least,—that that man has no humanity, no philanthropy, and certainly no christianity, who does not long for that long promised day when earth shall be restored from its thraldom, when the groans of creation shall cease, when all things shall be made new, when Paradise shall return; and Christ shall reign over a happy, a holy, a peaceful world; and God shall have glory, and we shall praise him day and night, as the monuments of his love, and the purchase of a Savior's blood, and without ceasing. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen.—Great Tribulation, By Dr. Cumming.

FRIENDSHIP.

Small service is true service while it lasts,
Of friends, however humble, scorn not one:
The daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dew-drop from the sun.
Wordsworth.

TRUTH.—As the turning of our eyes from the sun, or the burying ourselves in caves, deep beyond its reach, does not blot the sun from the heavens, or obliterate its light, so our discarding the truth will not destroy that truth, nor diminish its binding obligations.—Rev. A. Joy, A. M.

LIVE NOT FOR SELF.

Play not the niggard; spurn thy native clod,
And self disown;
Live for humanity; live unto thy God,
Not to thyself alone!
Anon.

OBLITERACY AND PERMANENCY.—The tomb of Moses is unknown, but the traveler still slacks his thirst at the well of Jacob. The gorgeous palace of the wisest and wealthiest of monarchs, with its cedar, and gold, and ivory,—even the great temple of Jerusalem, hallowed by the visible glory of the Deity himself,—are gone; but Solomon's reservoirs are as perfect as ever. Of the ancient architecture of the Holy City, not one stone is left upon another; but the pool of Bethesda commands the pilgrim's reverence at the present day.—Quar. Review.

Celebrities of the English Pulpit.—Spurgeon.

[Correspondence of the Amer. Monthly.]

LONDON, June 5th, 1860.

My Dear Friend at Home:—In answer to your eager upturned faces, as in imagination, we see you gather around the "household chair," listening to the last despatch from friends "far away," we say yes, we have heard Mr. Spurgeon, and many other celebrities of the English pulpit, of whom, if it please you, we may say something hereafter.

There is no name that flies from lip to lip so often as that of Spurgeon,—except it be the equally, and hardly more, popular name of Napoleon. It is a rare thing in the history of the Church, that a single voice can be heard so universally, even when the slumbers of a church "at ease" offer no resistance to the shrill sound of a reformer's rising in the power of an alarmed conscience, and the majesty of a renewed faith. Luther and Wesley arrested ears and hearts because there were none else to arrest them among a backslidden and God-forsaken priesthood. But, for a single voice in its first utterances, to rise above the accumulated war of trumpeters more numerous and more vigilant than ever covered the walls of Zion since the builders commenced the glorious task of "repairing her waste places," is an event too remarkable to be passed over without notice, and, after weighing all the circumstances, he will be a more wonderful man than the subject of our remarks, who does not do as every gazer on the wonderful pile at Stonehenge, does,—wonder how it came into its position, and turn away, wondering still.

A better idea of the popularity of Mr. Spurgeon in England cannot be given, than to say, that on going down on one of the river boats from Westminster to London Bridge, a boatman answered my inquiry, "Where is Mr. Spurgeon's chapel?" with singular promptness, staring at me the while, as much as to say, "art thou a stranger and knowest not these things?"—then pointing in the direction of the chapel, said, "It is close by Surrey Bridge, on the Surry side of the river, down a flight of steps in Park street. You can't miss it; anybody will tell you. He preaches there Sunday nights and Thursday nights." And yet, probably this man never saw the inside of a place of worship—living Sundays and all days in his boat.

To give greater effect to this, I may mention, that, on riding up "City Road" on the box with the driver of a "Bus" a day or two ago, when we passed Bunhill Burying Ground, the celebrated spot where lie the sacred ashes of the great and holy Bunyan, and the sweet moral songster, Isaac Watts, and a noble army of martyrs of cherished memory: I asked the driver to point out Bunyan's tombstone—(a modest, upright slab, known, one would suppose, to every child in London.) Looking over the burial ground a moment, and then turning his head directly across the the way, where stands the famous "City Road Chapel," the Cathedral of English Methodism, the coachman replied, "he's buried there, sir, there somewhere," waving his whip conclusively. So little do these men know of the men and things that have moved the world! Yet they know of Spurgeon, albeit, it is but as they know of Jenny Lind. Nor does their knowledge of this great wonder arise from any intimate relation in which he has placed himself with this class, for, as far as I can gather, he has little to do with any movement, either religious, philanthropic, or otherwise, beyond the pale of his own denomination, and scarcely beyond his own individual position as a Baptist preacher, over the Park Street Congregation.

After a long walk across interesting streets, we at length came to the steps our boatman had pointed out, and landed by the blank wall of Barclay & Perkins' Brewery. A street back of this mammoth manufactory of "liquid damnation," as our teetotal friends here are fond of denominating it, stands the famed Park Street Chapel, a plain, unpretending old conventicle, whose walls could tell if they had tongues, full many a tale of puritanic fervor and stubbornness.

It was a little past six o'clock P. M., when we arrived at the door of the chapel, and the service was to commence at seven o'clock. Two or three ladies had entered within the iron railing separating the few feet of yard from the street, and by the iron gate leading to the vestry on the east side of the Chapel, stood lazily lolling a man, whom we supposed was the "chapel keeper," and probably occupied the house in the yard adjoining the vestry.

"Does Mr. Spurgeon preach to-night, sir?" we inquired of our friend just introduced.

"Yes," was the gruff reply, "at seven o'clock." he added, as though to avoid all further questions.

"When will you open the church," we asked.

"O! not till half past six."

"Then will you be kind enough to let this lady with me take a seat in the vestry until you open the doors of the church? We have traveled far and she is weary."

"O! you must wait awhile, the chapel will be open soon;—but I cannot let any one in until those who hold tickets are seated."

• • • •

A little before seven, o'clock a number of male candidates for baptism entered the vestry side of the church, wearing snuff-colored alpaca robes, seating themselves in a group of seats at the back of the pulpit, which stands some way in the body of the chapel, and is ascended by winding-stairs, after the ordinary English model. That staircase, by the way, has been the subject of much slander, as well as the minister it serves. It is untrue that Mr. S. descends to any such tricks as sliding down the rail; a feat which a mountebank would be crafty to perform on that rail!

A few minutes after the clock had struck seven, with a quiet, confident, and rather quick pace, enters the wonder of the world, and after a moment's silent prayer, in a seated, upright position, and with uncovered face, he rises and deliberately surveys his audience. What a face! so radiant and so young! Why, his portraits are miserable caricatures! That thick, pug nose, and those almost African lips, and great tusks which part them; that stiff, unintellectual look which his photographs and busts give us, are as foreign to him, at least as he now is, as they are foreign to some others we might name, who, without a tithe of his fame, would feel degraded by such embellishments. He stands a little below the medium height, firmly and rather stoutly built, dressed in ordinary clerical garb, preferring, however, the lappelled coat to the long frock, with a broader neckcloth, perhaps, than many of his brethren, and having a great deal of unbending starch in it, giving his neck the appearance of a hidden "wen" in his pictures. His hair is wavy and long, of a glossy, dark-brown color, while his skin is fair as alabaster, so that the delicate coloring of his cheeks plays on his features like the blushes of June roses. Inclined to flesh, his movements are some-ness of manner sometimes very disagreeable.

But his voice!—what did ail our friend, Rev. Mr. Milburn, when he heard him two years ago, to describe that voice as harsh and grating? or has it so much changed since then? We are told it has greatly changed, and that he has rubbed off many of the oddities of his debut. His voice is now rich and full, rolling and swelling in most mellifluent cadences, and capable, we should judge, of wonderful expansion. His reading is good, but not remarkable; his enunciation measured, and consequently, distinct and clear; his utterance unfaltering, and his language very free but common-place. From the moment he opens his lips to speak until he closes his work, there is no stammering, or lisping, or faltering of language or of voice. He seems capable of any amount of labor. His whole manner and appearance is of one who feels he has a work to do and is determined to do it, fully conscious, withal, that he is equal to his task. In his opening prayer he at once raises his voice to an earnest key, and never lowers from this through all the long services of the occasion, his lesson from Scripture is carefully selected and meant to chime in with his sermon, and he commences it with a preface and proceeds with expositions, which, to our mind, (aside from his theology, from which, of course, we differ) are the strength of his services. We hope never to forget the melting unction that attended his glowing exposition of the eighth chapter of Romans; and the sense of triumphant security we felt in the grace of our Lord Jesus, as Mr. Spurgeon played on that magnificent apostrophe, with which that most glorious of all chapters in the epistles closes,—"For I am persuaded, etc."

As a preacher, we must acknowledge that we know not where the secret of his great popularity lies. A few propositions,—earnestly, but very illogically and bigotedly defended rather than argued—with consummate arrogancy and inconsistency—formed the frame-work of his discourse. He seemed to say, "I am set for the defence of Calvinism and the uprooting of every other system, particularly Arminianism; which he boldly declared to be only another name for Antinomianism. Evidently believing Arminianism to be anti-Christ, he dashed at it with all the holy fury of an angel of wrath sent down to destroy the "man of sin," vehemently declaring that if he were to embrace Arminianism (which he had just defined to be Antinomianism) he should "expect that the gates of heaven would be closed against him the next moment!" And yet, apart from this, there were home thrusts and telling words, which burned as they lodged, and an unction which no criticism can touch. His figures were often coarse and far-fetched, and fitted, as the Yankee would say, "any how;" but also, as often the homely figure had an application and force which no logic could give. Sometimes his humility melted you down into love and forgiveness of all his incongruities, and then again, his arrogance and protrusion of self made you "wish he had not said that." After all, there is a something in him or about him, which wins upon all, but what that something is, I have again to say, I cannot by any means determine. * * * * *

The singular desire for his picture, or else the determination of his friends to force it on the public, is so great that one house in the famous Paternoster Row has its windows filled with them in every imaginable shape and position, from the marble bust, life size, to pocket size; from the life size engraving lithograph, to the miniature photograph, the medalion in bronze and in plaster of paris—now the orator on some fancy flight with hands outspread, then the declaimer with clenched fist, again, the pointed finger, and now "Mr. Spurgeon at prayer," or "Mr. Spurgeon as he appears when reading," et cetera adfinitum, ad nauseam—just as over the way in the theatre bookstore, are seen the prints of, "Mr. Macready, as Richard the Third, "Mr. Brooks, as Hamlet," or "Charlotte Cushman, as Meg Merriles." The wonder is how the poor fellow can swing clear in the pulpit or out of it, of the Boswells that crowd upon his path. Happy will it be for him if he can say also with Paul, "I determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified."

FRANK.

For the Crisis.

"Spiritualism Exposed," etc.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to say through the Crisis, that I have about two hundred copies of this pamphlet, which I want circulated. About seven dollars more will enable me to pay up the publisher for the work, and I will now mail twenty copies, post paid, to any one sending me $1,00. It meets the Spiritualist not only on Bible ground, but on their own ground; and gives in a condensed form all the arguments necessary to expose this satanic delusion. Will not the friends take the remaining copies off my hands, and circulate them among those who are infected with this destroying doctrine?

MARY D. WELLCOME.

Richmond, Me.

☞ Men are like words; when not properly placed, they lose all value.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 10, 1860.

Diary Leaves.

Bryant's Pond, Sept. 27th. This village is on the Grand Trunk R. R., sixty-one miles from Portland. The pond is a sheet of water, at the base of a steep and rocky mountain, and floats a sail boat for pleasure parties.

This evening, we had an interesting meeting at the Baptist house, which was well filled with very attentive listeners; indeed, we think we never spoke to any more so. Some portion of the time complete silence prevailed, except from our own voice. It was easy preaching to people so anxious to hear the word of the Lord. There is a bright prospect for a revival of pure religion, if the meetings could be continued. The discussion has awakened much interest in the study of the Scriptures; and many are astonished at what they find in the Bible. They almost think our Bible is different from theirs, and will not believe to the contrary till they have made an examination.

Friday, 28th. To-day several have called on me to talk about Bible truth, who are most deeply interested. Some of them have been associated with Universalism and Spiritualism, but now do not hesitate to say, that our position completely overthrows both systems, while at the same time it makes the Bible a plain and harmonious book. They say the Scriptures never looked plain before; "but your preaching," said an intelligent lady, "overturns about all I have believed." This we very well knew. Another said, "There is no use in trying to overturn your position, for it is fortified at every point, unlike any other doctrine." Our visitors to-day have made us think of Paul's, when in his hired house at Rome, where the people were continually coming and going for the purpose of asking him questions about the "new doctrine." Several are evidently under conviction. We have made an appointment to meet them again the 9th of Oct., on our return from C. E.

Saturday 29th. At 11.25 o'clock, we left Bryant's Pond for Danville, C. E., a distance of one hundred and seventy miles, where we arrived about 7 P. M., and met a very hearty reception from Bro. J. Porter and family. Danville is a thriving village, midway between Montreal and Quebec, it being eighty-four miles from each place. On our way, we passed through a wild section of country interspersed with log huts, occupied or deserted by wood-choppers, that were far from looking very inviting. The scenery is not only rude, but quite mountainous, which makes the prospect rather interesting, especially when we find the mountain tops snow-clad before the close of the first autumnal months, as is the case now. We passed Mt. Washington, the noted peak of the White mountains, so often visited by tourists and summer pleasure parties. It is now covered with snow, having retired into winter quarters, and hid its top among the clouds, so that we did not see its steepled summit. At Island Pond, and for several miles around, we found the earth and trees whitened with snow, and the atmosphere feeling like the last of November.

Sabbath, Sept. 30th. This has been a pleasant day, and one of interest at Danville. The meeting was full in the morning, and crowded in the afternoon and evening with very attentive listeners. At the close of the evening meeting some ten or fifteen requested prayers, expressing their determination to leave all for Christ, and be prepared for his speedy coming. We found the church with their earnest pastor, Bro. Porter, struggling to keep the mastery over the wiles of Satan, and ready to press the battle to the very gates of the enemy. The prospect is encouraging for a good work in this place.

Danville, and this section of Canada, is noted for its pleasant sunsets. We have never before witnessed one so beautiful as at the close of this day. We thought of the new earth, when beholding the pleasant scene. The entire horizon was bordered with a golden or crimson hue, fading upward with a peculiarly soft tinge that was very pleasing to the eye of the beholder. Said one, who had traveled extensively, "I have been in no place where there are such beautiful sunsets as in Danville."

Monday, Oct. 1st. In the evening we had an interesting meeting, and quite a large audience, notwithstanding it was very rainy. Many came several miles to the meeting, and one lady walked about five miles and back in the rain. A Baptist and Congregationalist minister were present. The truth with the Spirit of the Lord is stirring the people, and we are looking for happy results.

Tuesday, Oct. 2nd. Our meeting this evening was one of deep interest. Several came forward for prayers, and others were almost persuaded to be christians. The revival tide is rising rapidly.

☞ Night brings out stars, as sorrow shows us truths; we never see the stars till we can see little or naught else—and thus it is with truth.

An Interesting Baptism.

When we arrived in Danville, C. E., Sept. 29th, 1860, and inquired of Bro. Porter concerning the welfare of his family, he replied that all were well but John, his eldest son, now about twenty-seven years of age, who was nigh unto death,—whose funeral we should probably attend before we left. This son has been in business in Boston, but was obliged to return home some eight months since. Since that time, he has been continually declining, till there is now no hope of his recovery. He has not lain down for over seven months. He is obliged to keep standing upon his feet or knees in order to breathe. He spends a considerable portion of his time kneeling in a chair, with his arms elevated and resting upon a kind of sling on the top of the back of the chair. By this means he produces the greatest possible cavity for the action of the lungs. In this painful position he passes long days and nights. He is truly an object of pity; and his condition would be almost intolerable were it not for the comfort of the christian's hope. Yet he is much troubled with the neglect of one duty, which is that of baptism. Being quite diffident, while in Boston, he neglected to make his feelings known, consequently this ordinance has not been observed. When he learned we were to visit D., he expressed a wish to be buried with Christ in baptism. The week before our arrival, he had failed so fast that he was expected to live but a few days, still he could not bear the thought of dying before he had obeyed this command. His father asked him if he would not be embarrassed at sight of the crowd? He replied, "It will not weigh a feather with me." Again he said, "If the whole universe stood by scoffing, I would wish to go forward." His friends are astonished at his firm boldness as compared with his former timidity; but he now looks upon earthly things as they are—"vanity of vanities." His father said, when referring to his proposed baptism, "John, you may die in the hands of the administrator." He replied, "I am willing to die thus."

Seeing his anxiety, and firmness of purpose, we appointed 5 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 2nd, as the time for this solemn ordinance. As we approached the appointed hour, a deep solemnity rested upon us, similar to that felt on the day of a martyr's execution. The clock was carefully watched, hour by hour, till one says, "It is 3 o'clock—two hours more." Another says, "4 o'clock—only one hour." The father came in and said, "I begin to tremble. If he should die during the administration of the ordinance, our enemies would make great handle of it." He again went to John, and put the baptism before him in the most unfavorable light, almost hoping he would decide it is too late; but the son is firm, and calm, ready to die obeying the Lord, but entirely unwilling to breathe his last till he has observed the important ordinance.

We next hear, "It is twenty minutes past four,—half past,—only fifteen minutes more,—it is time to get ready!" At this time Sr. Porter was so affected with palpitation of the heart, that it became evident she could not attend the baptism. The people were assembling in solemn silence on the banks of the stream, and we felt that we must begin to move. It was like taking a corpse to the hearse for burial. By the kind aid of our brethren, we succeeded in getting John into the wagon, which was backed up to the piazza; but when we sat him down, we found he could not breathe in that situation, and we were obliged to keep him standing, by taking hold under his arms. His feet and legs were so swollen with dropsy, that he could not control them; and his body was so bloated that there was no room for his lungs to act unless he occupied a standing position with his arms elevated. He sometimes rests his arms, by hanging his head in a sling, and holding up his body in part in this way.

After we had arranged him as well as we could, Bro. Porter led the horse through the street to the place of baptism, which was but a short distance from the house, and within a few feet of the meeting-house. When we were ready to go into the water, John wished me to say to the spectators, "No one has urged me to do this, and I wish to bear the whole responsibility before the Lord." It was arranged that his father should go into the water and assist in the ordinance. Some years since he had the misfortune to lose one hand, and the thumb and forefinger of the other; hence we had a little fear that he might not be able to render the necessary assistance; but as it was John's request, we ventured, trusting in the Lord. A deep sensation was felt by the spectators when we began to walk into the liquid tomb, which became intense as we laid the young man down in the watery grave, in the likeness of Christ's burial. We have never seen a living man, who appeared so like a corpse, as did John when we looked upon his calm features beneath the yielding wave. Not a muscle moved, and, for the moment, we thought he might be dead. We raised him up, and a heavenly smile illumined his face, as he said, "No act of my life has afforded me so much pleasure as this,—praise the Lord." The father's tears of joy, met a hearty response from those who witnessed the thrilling scene. We returned in joy, to participate in the sweet peace of the obedient one. It was expected that he would die in the act of baptism, but he sustained no physical injury, and the next morning felt better than he had for several days previous, and was greatly benefited spiritually. We hope to be with him in the kingdom, when the faithful are gathered.

What do the Spirits teach?

The following extracts from the teachings of spirits, as published in the Banner of Light (?), will give the reader some idea of their doctrines. They need no comments to show that they are "doctrines of devils," which Paul said should come from "seducing spirits" "in the latter times." Says a spirit, "No man should rely upon any Savior outside of himself.... Jesus Christ was not the Savior of the world, more than any one before us.... Each and every one is a Savior, as he is a judge, a God."

Another spirit being asked his name, answered, "No matter—the devil I am... You cannot have my name, sir. Call me Satan."

Another says:—"According to our understanding, God will not hold man responsible for anything." Compare this with the Bible, which says: "God shall bring every work into judgment." Says Jesus, "Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."

Another spirit says, "When man became a living soul, he became a God." "All living souls are Gods. They die not." "So, living soul, rejoice in thy wisdom, ... be a a King, a God, a Jehovah." How plainly this corresponds with what Satan said to Eve in paradise.

Sayings of Spiritualists.

Says Dr. P. B. Dandolph:—"I believe there is a principle at work from one end of the world to the other, and the day is already dawned when all society will be swept on by the rushing tide of truth and common sense, to the ultimate belief in Modern Spiritualism."

A new development has been made among Spiritualists, called, "The Angel Movement." It proposes "An entire overthrow of the existing external order of things, both in church and state." It also advises "The entire reconstruction of society after the laws of divine (?) order, and in such a manner as will realize the ancient predictions concerning the millennium, and the kingdom of heaven on earth." We would suggest that the word "divine" in the foregoing be changed to demon, as being more expressive of the facts in the case.

In answer to the question,—"Jesus, then, is not your Savior?" a writer in the Herald of Progress says, "No, if your Jesus be a dogmatical, supernatural wanderer, and a special 'Son of God.'"

A gentleman speaking of the death of his child says, it "died into immortality."

Another, when speaking of the spirits, answers the question, "What is Christ?" saying, "Christ is any sent spirit of God; in other words, any sent spirit of God is a Christ." He then goes on to say, "Christians, who are so earth-minded as to oppose the spiritual coming of Christ, have not their spiritual capacity exercised.... The spiritual plane being higher than the earth plane, the earth mind cannot, in the nature of things, understand the spiritual." Our prayer is that their "spiritual plane" may be kept so high that no one will ever attempt to reach it; for when they get there, they have only found a dream-land, like the one "beyond the bounds of time and space," about which some foolishly sing.

At the seventh annual convention of Vermont Spiritualists, held at South Royalton, Aug. 24th, 1860, among other things it was "Resolved, That the peculiar and exalted mission of Spiritualism is to elevate human beings, in all their relations, whether domestic, social, ecclesiastical, or political, from a mere sensual, material, to a spiritual plane of thought, feeling and action."

May the Lord forbid that the reader should ever seek such a "a spiritual plane of thought, feeling and action." Beware of it, as of the bite of the rattlesnake. They are only "speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron." The "spiritual plane," of which they speak, is only one of the "seducing" terms in the mystical theology of "anti-Christ." In the name of the Lord, let every christian stand up boldly in the defence of the "old paths," and the pure doctrine of Christ.

Questions for the Crisis.

At midnight will there not be a faithful and true cry;—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him"? Then will not the wise virgins who took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom, awake and trim their lamps, or do right as well as talk right? And will not the foolish virgins awake and find that they have not time to do so? Have we passed the hour of midnight? Christ received by faith is both life and light.

I. M. BRUCE.

Wilmington, Vt., Sept. 30th, '60.

☞ Idleness is the very source of sin. Standing pools gather mud, and nourish and breed venomous creatures; and so do the hearts of idle and slothful christians.

For the Crisis.

My Journal.

From July 11 to the 28th I have labored with the church in Boston. Nothing of special interest. The church is in the utmost harmony, with a good religious interest. Some of the members are deeply interested in the time and signs of the coming of Christ.

Sabbath, July 29. Preached in exchange with Eld. C. Cunningham, at North Attleboro'. I spoke to good audiences during the day on great practical questions, and in the evening, being stormy, to a small audience on the time of the advent. Some are interested in the subject; but most, I should judge, though not opposing, were not much interested in the calculation of 1867–8. Bro. C. has a large and flourishing interest in Attleborough, is highly esteemed by his people, and is doing a good work.

On the question of the time, I may here remark, that I have ever believed that the prophetic periods were given to teach definite time, and that they would be understood by the church before the coming of Christ. "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." We have had some light all the way, since the passing of Mr. Miller's time. In 1845 the following article was adopted by the conference of Adventists at Albany, N. Y., which was expressive of the views of Adventists at that time:—We hold "That the second coming, or appearing of Christ, is indicated to be now emphatically nigh, even at the doors (Matt. 24 : 33) by the chronology of the prophetic periods, (Dan. 7 : 25; 8 : 14; 9 : 25, etc.) the fulfillment of prophecy, (Dan. 2 : 7, 8., etc.) and the signs of the times, (Matt. 24 : 29; Luke 21 : 25, 26). And that this truth should be preached both to saints and sinners, that the first may rejoice, knowing their redemption draweth nigh, and the last be warned to flee from the wrath to come, before the Master of the house shall rise up and shut to the door." In 1848 I gave the following article in tract form, as an expression of the views I then held, with many other Adventists, showing my faith in the time.

TIME OF THE SECOND ADVENT.

What do the Adventists preach now on the time?

The year 1847 is past. The disputed time of about four years, among accredited chronologers, is now gone. The exact calculations which have been made by them on the prophetic periods have failed. What are Adventists now to do? is the grand question.

To determine our future course, we must consider the following things:—

1. Did the truth of the Bible, or the correctness of the prophetic periods in themselves, rest on those calculations? No.

2. Do not other calculations, based upon the prophetic periods, extend into the future? Yes.

3. Will it not be wise to look for the real fulfillment of these periods in the future? Have we not the best of reasons for doing so? Is not this the only safe course? So we think.

We can take no very definite ground on exact time, with our present light. The events are in the future, and may, so far as we can determine, speedily break upon us. So that the imperative duties of watchfulness, prayer, and all the duties of the ministry and church, are to be performed in all faithfulness.

On this important question, we present the views of Dr. Elliott, contained in his late work:—

"With regard to our present position, we have been led, as the result of our investigations, to fix it at but a short time from the end of the now existing dispensation, and the expected second advent of Christ. This thought, when we seriously attempt to realize it, must be felt to be a very startling as well as solemn one. And for my own part I confess to risings of doubt, and almost scepticism, as I do so. Can it be that we are come so near to the day of the Son of man, that the generation now alive shall very possibly not have passed away before its fulfillment; yea, that perhaps even our own eyes may witness, without the intervention of death, that astonishing event of the consummation? The idea falls on my mind as almost incredible. The circumstance of anticipations having been so often formed quite erroneously heretofore of the proximity of the consummation,—for example, in the apostolic age, before the destruction of Jerusalem,—then, on the breaking of the old Roman empire,—then, at the close of the tenth century,—then at and after the Reformation, and still later even by writers of our own day,—I say the circumstance of all these numerous anticipations having been formed and zealously promulgated of the imminence of the second advent, which, notwithstanding, have by the event itself been shown to be unfounded, strongly tends to confirm us in our doubt and incredulity. Yet to rest in scepticism simply and altogether upon such grounds, would be evidently bad philosophy. For these are causes that would operate always; and that would make us be saying, even up to the very eve and moment of the advent, 'Where is the promise of his coming?' Our true wisdom is to test each link of the chain of evidence by which we have been led to our conclusion, and see whether it will bear the testing;—to examine into the causes of previous demonstrated errors on the subject, and see whether we avoid them;—finally, to consider whether the signs of the times now present be in all the sundry points that prophecy points out, so peculiar as to warrant a measure of confidence in our inference such as was never warranted before."

Here we have the full confidence of a ripe scholar, and a thorough student of prophecy, while all the evidence of ten years' profound study of the prophetic word, and the signs of the times, were all fresh before his mind.

Mr. Cuninghame, of Scotland, another distinguished student of Prophecy, remarks on this subject:

"If we who have watched every sign in the spiritual horizon for a long series of years, were now asked, 'Is any sign of His [Christ's] coming yet to be accomplished?' we should be constrained to answer, 'To our view, not one sign remains unaccomplished.' If we were further asked, 'Shall he come this year?' our answer would be, 'We know not; but this much we know and believe, that he is at hand, even at the door.'"

Notwithstanding all our trials and disappointments, we, as Adventists, still look for our coming Lord with all the confidence we ever did. The following extract from a correspondent of the Herald is in point:

"We expect the coming and kingdom of Jesus at the dissolution of the fourth earthly empire,—the great agency in persecuting the church—at the end of the two thousand and three hundred days, 'the times of the Gentiles,'—in 'the generation' which has witnessed the specified 'signs' given us by Jesus Christ our Lord,—after the first six trumpets have sounded, and at the seventh, which is now about sounding. Never, no never, was there an expectation of the Lord's coming based on the descriptive prophecies, the signs, and the first six trumpets fulfilled, till now! Never till now could it be ascertained that the prophetic periods were about expiring. All the rays of revelation are here converging to a local point. Luther's time—the apostles' time—the Savior's time, is our time, just so far as we can ascertain the import of their preaching: and all is founded on God's time. Dan. 8th. "At the time appointed the end shall be." The Lord will come! Past failures, when understood, 'tend strongly to confirm' our faith that he is now nigh. He will come soon, and not tarry. Amen."

J. V. HIMES.

Boston, April, 1848.

After this, and in the same year, Dr. Cumming came out on the subject both of the nature and time of the advent, adopting very nearly the views of Dr. Elliott. His lectures in London in 1848 materially strengthened my faith in the time. This faith in these time calculations gave me great interest in the circulation of Drs. Elliott's and Cumming's works, and for the last ten or twelve years I have sought to spread the information they contain to the extent of my power, both by the pulpit and press. Within the last year a work by the Rev. Mr. Shimeall, of New York, entitled, Our Bible Chronology, was placed in my hands. This work I hailed with joy, as it gave me much light. I think it will well repay the Bible student who will give it a careful study. I have detected no mistakes that affect my faith in the main question. In conversation with Mr. S. he assured me that so soon as his health and necessary duties would allow, he should give attention to any criticisms relating to his work. He is desirous that they should say all they have to say about it first. But my faith has been strengthened also by the writings of the late Rev. E. Bickersteth, Wm. Cuninghame, Esq., Dr. George Croly, as well as other distinguished persons, who give A. D. 533 for the date of the Justinian decree and beginning of the 1260 years of the Papacy, and so ending in 1793; also beginning the 1335 at the same date, and ending them in 1868. Dr. Croly says: "The things, whose fulfillment was to commence at the end of the 1260 years, are the universal war, and the fall of popery and its adherents. The prophet then asks, 'O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?' and he is answered, that it shall be in 1335 prophetic days, or 75 years from the year 1793; in the year 1868." Besides this class of writers, who support the calculation of '68, there is another, who give it much help by pointing to 1866 as the time of the destruction of the papacy and the commencement of the millennium. Of this class are the late Dr. Ramsey, Dr. Rice, and Rev. Mr. Bryant, all of the Presbyterian church. Dr. Coggswell and other New England divines take the same view. These writers believe the 1260 years began in 606, and hence will end in 1866. They believe that at that time, or about that time, the man of sin will be destroyed. So do I. They believe the millennium will be ushered in. So do I. But there is a difference in our views as to the coming of Christ and the nature of the millennium. With the light which now shines upon the time of the advent, together with the marked signs of this time, I have no doubt about the coming of the great crisis in 1867–8. Some of my brethren, whose judgments I value, think the time ought not to be preached with much positiveness; while others think it should not be preached at all. But I differ from them, and agree with the late learned and pious Bickersteth, who was an example of christian prudence and conservatism. In his Practical Guide to the Prophecies, he makes the following remarks on the subject, which may be found in the 19th chapter of that work.

"It would be a grievous error in the church to disregard such prophecies. Because many in past ages have made serious mistakes respecting the dates, we must not, therefore, in the spirit of infidelity, refuse to consider them, as if they were full of danger and evil. The mistakes of others should lead us to more caution and diligence and prayer in our researches, and more diffidence in our conclusions. But having now the advantage of a more lengthened manifestation of God's mind, from the past history of the church, we have with this greater light for the true interpretation. Because men, hundreds of years back, said the coming of Christ was near to them, do not let us now say it cannot be near to us. The rolling away of 1800 years must have brought it much nearer. Because they anticipated the event before the time, do not think it will not come suddenly, and cannot be at the doors, and that it is not your duty to look for it and expect it. Oh, unhappy perversion of preceding mistakes! by which Satan gains this immense advantage; that wise and holy, that cautious and good men are brought into a state either of neglect of that word of prophecy which is a light shining in a dark place, until the day dawn, and to which GOD HAS EXPRESSLY COMMANDED US TO TAKE HEED; or of hampering it with such rules as almost to shut out the study from the general body of the church. Oh, deep design of Satan! by which he accomplishes that predicted dangerous state of men in general, before the day of the Lord come; 'as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.' Luke 21 : 35. 'When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?' Luke 18 : 8. Let us not be 'ignorant of his devices.' 2 Cor. 2 : 11. How perfectly contrary is this to the mind of the holy prophets! 1 Pet. 1 : 10, 11."

I am prepared to work in the great field with any and all men, who believe in the near coming of Christ, and will faithfully proclaim with a "loud voice, the hour of His judgment is come." I do not ask them to believe as I do. If their faith is that Christ may come to-day, this year, or before 1868—that it is imminent, and so labor, according to their faith—I am with them so far, in their work. Only let us be faithful to our convictions of duty, to God, the church and the world.

J. V. HIMES.

Correspondence.

From Bro. C. B. Turner.

BRO. GRANT:—As circumstances would not allow my presence at the annual meeting at Wilbraham, I take this method of saying to all the lovers of truth that from time to time peruse the Crisis, that I am still striving, in my weak way, to present the truth to a perishing world. The last year has been one of trial and conflict, both within and without. And while I look over the history of my life for the last four years, I can say truly, the Lord has been my helper. I was thrust out with my deep feelings of duty, after contending with the Lord about it for two years, until I made up my mind that I must preach or give up my faith in my God and my Bible. In resisting the influences of the Spirit of God so long, I became so lean that I thought I had no religion left; the only way that I could obtain a blessing at all was by promising the Lord that I would obey his voice. But how soon would the tempter say, you cannot preach; you have not been educated for that purpose; you have no faculty for speaking in public, and you had better never attempt, than to fail and bring a reproach upon the cause of God.

I never shall forget the feelings of my heart in that hour, when life and death stood before me, and I thought I would give up my faith, and meet the consequences as they should come, rather than preach. It seems to me that not an hour passed over my head for weeks, either at midnight or at noonday, but that I heard the still small voice saying to me, go preach my word. I well knew to obey was life, to disobey was death. In this frame of mind, between hope and despair on account of my own weakness, I faithfully promised the Lord that if he would open the way once more, I would, by the help of his grace, do my duty. When I had made this promise, the Lord smiled upon me. I thought if I refused to obey this time, the Lord would leave me to myself. How easy it was for the Lord to open the way; for within a day or two I received a letter from Bro. Morrell, of Oneida Co., saying they desired to hear something on the Advent doctrine. Bro. Morrell was then a member of the M. E. Church. Now, thought I, the Lord is opening the way; but I began to excuse myself by saying, I must fulfill my engagements with my employers. I cannot go now; I must get some one else to go. But soon my excuse was made in vain, like the dew before the sun; for my employer came to me, soon after receiving Bro. Morrell's letter, saying, "Our engine is out of order, and we shall be under the necessity of making repairs, which will take about two weeks." The first thought that came into my mind was, the Lord has opened the way, and I will obey. I dispatched a letter to Bro. Morrell, requesting him to give out an appointment for me on the Sunday following. Sunday came. I found myself in the old school-house where I had spent many of my boyhood hours, surrounded by many of my childhood companions, for the first time to try to preach the word of God. The result was, Bro. Morrell came out,—although it was like a death-struggle for him to break away from a people to whom he had become wedded by many ties of affection, holding as he did several offices in the church, having just obtained a license to exhort, being loved by all. The truth is taking deep root in that vicinity through his instrumentality.

From that time a large field opened, and I commenced in good earnest proclaiming the truth. With no one to give me counsel, with no one whose experience has taught them how to present the truth so that the most good may result therefrom, I left all, looking to the Lord to direct. How do you think I came out at the end of two years? The fields being new, the people poor, and the hard times coming on, I found myself run behind one hundred and fifty dollars, including books, tracts, etc., that I gave away. I thought this would not do. I soon found employment, and have worked and preached, and preached and worked, and, by the grace of God, with what the friends have been willing to give, together with what I have earned, I have not only been able to support my family, but to pay a good share of my arrearages.

The last has been the busiest year of my life, and I feel that my time has not been lost. God has crowned every effort with success, for which I thank his holy name.

The experience of the last four years, in trying to preach the gospel, has been a good school to me, and never was I more determined to persevere than now. As soon as the length of the evenings will permit, I purpose to give all my time to preaching the word.

I am now ready to go where the Lord may direct. If there are any places in New York State where there a few hungry children, almost starving for a portion of gospel food, if they will make it manifest by letter or otherwise, I will try to make arrangements to see them this coming autumn and winter. Come, Brn. and Srs., let us arise and shake ourselves from the dust, and prepare to meet the coming Lord.

But you may say, we are few, and poor at that. Well, the Lord says he has chosen the poor of this world to be heirs of the kingdom, but you must be rich in faith; and if you have no money, no wheat, no corn, no cheese, no butter, no potatoes, nor anything of this kind to sacrifice to the cause of God, then you shall have the gospel as free as the air you breathe, or the water that runs at your feet, until I am obliged to enter the shop again; for the poor must have the gospel preached to them. I don't expect to get rich; don't expect to lay up money; but I do expect to have a living for myself and family until the Lord comes; and if I cannot get it by preaching alone, then I shall try to get it by preaching and working. May the Lord help us all to do what we can in warning the world of the coming judgment. What we do must be done quickly.

Syracuse, N. Y.

From Bro. J. A. Sober.

Bro. Grant:—I am still in the gospel field, laboring for the interest of the cause of God, which I love above every sublunary object. And though I get but a meagre support for my labors, and toil under discouraging circumstances, yet I am bound to press the battle for my soon coming King. When he comes, I hope to receive a crown of endless life in the kingdom of God's glory. For this I am willing to toil and suffer.

I have been able thus far to fill all my appointments since I have been on my circuit, except one. I have no news of especial interest to report, but, on the whole I think the cause of truth is steadily on the advance in the region where I labor. In August, I held a two days' meeting at Wakeshna, in Kalamazoo Co. We had a very good meeting, and a new interest was awakened in the community.

Our quarterly meeting for this district came off on the 31st of Aug., Sept. 1st and 2d, at Mendon, St. Joseph Co. There were present to preach the word of life, Brn. E. Miller, Jr., E. Chesebrough, H. H. Nottingham, and the writer. One put on Christ in baptism.

Burlington, Mich.

From C. W. Baker.

To the Saints scattered abroad:—Inasmuch as the night is far spent, and the day is at hand, let us watch and be sober, not being overcharged with the cares of this world, but have our loins girt about with truth, our lamps trimmed and burning,—we, as waiting servants, upon our watch so that day overtake us not as a thief. Mercy soon will be gone. Let us work while the day lasts. Have we done all we can for the conversion of sinners? Lord, help us to be diligent in the work, that it may be said of us "Well done," and we be among that company whom the Lord will receive as his jewels, so as to shine in the everlasting kingdom. O, what a blessed hope is ours! The signs tell us the day draweth nigh; we are nearing the kingdom. Glory to God! almost home. Soon we'll shout "victory" over the grave, and live forever. Hallelujah! How bright the hope; while faith lays hold unwavering upon the word, it is yea and amen.

Worcester, Mass.

Obituary Notices.

Died, in Providence, R. I., Sept. 14th, 1860, aged 13 months, Mary, infant daughter of Bro. and Sister H. L. Hastings.

This dear little daughter, whom they tenderly loved, and perhaps more because it was always feeble, and required so much attention, sleeps. It became my duty to be present and extend "comfort" to those who mourned, which I sought to do by bringing to their remembrance those blessed promises of resurrection and life which they have often spoken in the ears of others, and which belong equally to themselves. Bro. Hastings was far away in N. H. or Maine, about the Master's business; yet he was not forgotten, but was earnestly remembered before the throne, that the great Physician would heal his wound and minister him consolation as he alone can do it. "Thy children shall come again from the land of the enemy." Praise Jesus for the promise!

Joseph D. Brown.

Died, in Greenville, R. I., Sept. 20th, 1860, in the thirty-third year of her age, Sister Abby H., wife of Bro. Harley Phillips, of Providence.

Our sister who now sleeps in Jesus had one of those gentle or warm dispositions which cause those who possess them to be loved wherever they are known; and during her partnership with our little church in Providence, which dates from '54, she had grown into our affections as a christian, so that we loved her as we loved ourselves, and we can say of her, and speak truly:—

"Sister, thou wast mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer breeze;
Pleasant as the air of evening,
When it floats among the trees."

A large congregation of those who had known and loved her, came together at her funeral in the Free Will Baptist church in Greenville, on Sunday the 23d, at which time the writer addressed them on the christian's ground of "comfort." It seemed as though the assembly appreciated the strength of a christian's "hope," as the Lord enabled me to present it to them, for every ear was listening intently. Her husband, who is left behind, is supported by this "staff" of the Lord, and expects to see her again very soon, awake. How blessed it is, when death must come, to "sleep in Jesus;" them will God bring with him. Amen.

Joseph D. Brown.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Per steamship Connaught. Advices of the 25th ult.

Ancona had been bombarded nine hours by the Sardinian ships, and replied vigorously, when hostilities were suspended for a conference.

Garibaldi's troops were concentrated at Volturna.

Queen Victoria embarked for Prussia on the 23d. She will meet the Prince Regent at Calrusch. Lord John Russell accompanies the Queen, and will, it is said, have a political conference with Baron Schlemitz, the Prussian Minister for Foreign Affairs

Four sub-marine cables between Valencia and the islands of Ivica, Majorca and Minorca, and thence to Barcelona, have been successfully laid.

Prince John of Bourbon publishes in the Times an appeal to the Spanish people relative to his rights to the Spanish throne.

The King of Naples was supposed to be at Capua, which town was barricaded.

It is reported that the King's troops and the Garibaldians had exchanged shots at the outposts near Capua.

Garibaldi, in a letter, declares that there exists an irreconcileable difference between his policy and Count Cavour's.

It is reported that the quarrel between the Sardinian government and Garibaldi had arrived at such a pitch that Victor Emmanuel determined to proceed to Naples for the purpose of having a personal interview with Garibaldi.

The details of the battle between Lamoriciere and Cialdini, in the official bulletins, agree with those previously published Among the six hundred prisoners taken by the Sardinians, were upwards of thirty officers, some of high rank. In consequence of this victory four thousand of the Papal troops, mostly foreigners, and fifty officers, the guards of Lamoriciere, capitulated and laid down their arms. Six guns, a large quantity of ammunition, etc., also fell into the hands of the Sardinians.

The arrival of Gen. Guyon at Rome had, it was said, determined the Pope to remain in Rome.

An incendiary proclamation, calling the people to arms, had been introduced into Hungary from Bucharest. All the garrisons in Hungary were to be placed on a war footing. Austria had concentrated a large force on the Po, and increased military patrols; also restricted the use of arms in Venetia.

False reports had been current in Paris that the Austrians had crossed the Mincio.

It is stated that Napoleon will not visit Warsaw; also that the Prince of Prussia will not be there at the same time with the Emperor of Austria.

The French commander in Syria has sent a detailed report of Syrian affairs to Paris, giving his opinion that Syria will require foreign occupation for at least two years.

PER STEAMSHIP VANDERBILT

Garibaldi had made an attack on Capua, during which 200 of his men were wounded.

The Garibaldians had succeeded in passing Cattabene.

The Neapolitans had made an unsuccessful attempt to recover Cajazzo.

Garibaldi was awaiting the arrival of General Turr for an immediate attack on the Neapolitan forces.

The inhabitants of Viterbo had revolted and driven away the Papal garrison.

TWO DAYS LATER.

The Sardinians continued to advance into the Papal States.

The fortress of Santo Leo surrendered after some hours firing, and was occupied by the Sardinians.

The official Roman journal contains Antonelli's note, claiming assistance from the Catholic Powers.

Garibaldi had concentrated his troops on the heights of Valturno, preparatory to attacking the Neapolitan forces.

Garibaldi, in a fresh proclamation, indicates that he will join the Sardinian troops in their march upon Rome, and then will march against Venice.

The antagonism between Garibaldi and the Piedmontese government continued.

The King of Naples had published decrees at Gaeta, ordering a state of siege in all the provinces where the revolutionary struggle exists, and cashiering all the officers of the marine as guilty of high treason, except those of one vessel which went to Gaeta.

The Republicans were gaining ground in Naples, and their influence upon Garibaldi was increasing.

It is reported that Victor Hugo had arrived at Naples.

A letter from the Turin correspondent of the Debats, dated the 17th ult., says:

"The Government here is resolved to avoid everything of a nature to lead to a collision with France. They would sooner break with Garibaldi. The expedition into the Roman States was undertaken purposely to prevent Garibaldi doing it himself. Once master of Umbria and the Marches, it was feared that, excited by new success, he would not be able to resist the temptation of pushing on to Rome, and taking revenge for 1859

Everything possible is done to negotiate with this terrible auxiliary, but they have to contend against his dislike to Count Cavour. In Garibaldi's eyes Count Cavour personifies diplomacy, the particular object of his hatred. Moreover, Count Cavour committed the unpardonable crime in his eyes of ceding Nice to France."

Victor Emmanuel, according to a recent rumor from Italy, is again to be excommunicated, his name being this time specially mentioned in the Bull.

A dispatch from the Sardinian Minister at Paris to M. Thouvenal is said to state that Garibaldi has given Piedmont to understand, in a peremptory manner, that if she does not immediately disperse the foreign volunteers of the Papal army, he would proceed from Naples to Rome in order to pursue and accomplish the task himself, and that he would only respect Rome on the condition that the Marches and Umbria were occupied by Sardian troops.

The Paris correspondent of the Liverpool Times writes:

"Little or nothing was known of the movements of the King, as the telegraph with Gaeta was interrupted, beyond the fact that His Majesty had anything but an agreeable voyage to Gaeta. Having met at sea with the ship commanded by M. Longo, who was reputed to be a faithful servant of the monarchy, he ordered him to follow him, but instead of obeying this command, M. Longo got up all steam and set off at once for Naples, where he delivered up his ship to the Dictator. It is also said that when Francis II. arrived under the walls of Gaeta, his soldiers were for some time very unwilling to open the gates of the fortress to him. The troops which followed him are represented as daily deserting his standard, and returning to Naples in small detachments. Some of them have sought service in the Italian army, but most of them have taken advantage of the decree of the Dictator, which allows them, if they wish, to return to their homes."

Italian Revolution.

[Correspondence of the "World."]

"Florence, Sept. 12th.

* * * * * *

But the curtain has risen upon a new scene in the Italian drama.

"With news the time's with labor, and throes forth
Each moment some."

This afternoon brought us a proclamation from Victor Emmanuel, which is equivalent to a declaration of war with the Roman states. Two days since it was whispered in certain circles, that Cavour had intrusted to the Count Minerva a note to be presented to Cardinal Antonelli. In it the Sardinian government had demanded the immediate dismissal of the papal mercenaries, affirming that the presence of upwards of 20,000 foreign troops in the centre of Italy, was tantamount to a violation of the principle of non-intervention, now recognized by Europe, as well as a source of perpetual vexation and menace to contiguous states. An answer to this note was demanded within twenty-four hours, under pain of an armed occupation of Umbria and the Marches, on the part of Piedmont.

All to-day there was a vague feeling abroad that we were on the eve of great events I was, therefore, not surprised this evening, when distant cheers and the increasing hum of many voices announced that something important had occurred. On hurrying into the grand piazza of the Loggia, beneath the old palace of Arnulp, I found a crowd of many hundreds pressing round a proclamation affixed to the walls. The noise of the throng prevented for a time my catching the words that were shouted forth amid wild bursts of cheering by a succession of readers. At length I gathered, that no notice having been taken of the ultimatum addressed to the Papal court, the army was immediately to cross the frontier, and that the king was to put himself at the head of his troops. The exact wording of the proclamation is as follows:

SOLDIERS.

You enter the Marches and Umbria to restore civil order in their desolated cities and to afford the people the opportunity of expressing their wishes. You have not to combat powerful armies, but to free unhappy Italian provinces from foreign bands of mercenaries. You go not to avenge the injuries done to me and to Italy, but to prevent the bursting forth of popular hatred and vengeance against misrule. You will teach by your example forgiveness of injuries, and christian tolerance to him, who in his folly has compared to Islamism our love for our country, Italy.

At peace with all the great powers, and without any idea of provocation, I intend to remove from the centre of Italy a perpetual source of disturbance and discord. I desire to spare the seat of the head of the church, to whom I am ready, in accord with allied and friendly powers, to give all those guarantees for independence and security which his blind counsellors have vainly imagined they could obtain from the fanaticism of that mischievous party that conspires against my authority and the liberty of the nation

SOLDIERS.

They accuse me of ambition! Yes! one ambition is mine—that of restoring to Italy the principles of moral order and of preserving Europe from the continual perils of revolution and of war.

Victor Emmanuel,
C. Cavour.
Farini.

It would be very difficult to give a stranger an idea of the enthusiasm excited by the above; it has revived all that feeling of personal attachment to the king which he had earned no less by the straight-forward honesty of his character than by the conspicuous gallantry he displayed in the field. What last week was denounced as lukewarmness and a betrayal of all the hopes of Italy is to-day spoken of as prudent reserve and the caution of a consummate statesman. Cavour, who a few days since was a retrograde, jealous of the fame of Garibaldi and anxious at all hazards to rob him of the popular favor, is to-day a Fabius, the

"Unus qui nobis cunctando restituit rem;"

and in very truth, the moment is most happily chosen by Cavour for regaining that influence which had begun to pale before the splendid star of Garibaldi.

Funds for Italy.—The success of the Italian liberator, and the exhibition of his noble virtues, have stimulated the patriotic on both sides of the Atlantic to aid him. In England a ladies' Garibaldi fund, with the Countess of Shaftesbury as directress, has been started. Measures are being taken in New York by the ladies to follow the example thus set them in England. The amount sent from this country to Garabaldi probably does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, but undoubtedly a larger sum will soon be dispatched. Garibaldi is not the only recipient of funds from America; the Pope is not forgotten by the Catholics. Fifty thousand dollars have been sent to His Holiness, and contributions are flowing in from all quarters, contributed mainly in small sums by Catholic congregations.

Notices, &c.

☞ Providence permitting, there will be a conference at Danbury, N. H., to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 25th, and hold over the following Sunday. The following brethren are expected, and perhaps others: D. Churchill, Geo. A. Otis, J. Pinkham.

J. G. Smith.

Quarterly Conference.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in the Read meeting-house, Richmond, Maine, Oct. 25th, Thursday, P. M., at 2 o'clock, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see all our preaching brethren, and as many other brethren and sisters present to work in the Lord's vineyard as can consistently come. There is an open door for gospel work, and may the Lord guide us in it, and add his blessing with it, that good may be done. Let us continue to rally the Lord's host, and work for the salvation of sinners until the Master comes. Soon the work will be finished, and we will rest in the kingdom.

I. C. Wellcome, Secretary.

Notice.

There will be a Second Advent meeting in Bristol, near Bro. Mix's, to commence Friday, Oct. 26th, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren, in the name of the Lord.

J. K. Bellows, for the Brethren.

Notice.

Tour West.—I contemplate a tour West, as far as Cincinnati, Ohio, in the months of October and November.

The following are my appointments, as far as Springwater, N. Y. Other notices will be given duly. In the mean time, I will be glad to hear from any who wish for a visit, or single lecture, on my way out, beyond Springwater, or on my return. I go by way of Buffalo and Cleveland. Address me, Boston, Mass.

Worcester, (Thomas St.,) Monday evening, Oct. 15th.
Springfield, Tuesday evening, Oct. 16th.
Albany, N. Y., Wednesday eve., Oct. 17th.
Syracuse, N. Y., Thursday eve., Oct. 18th.
Homer, N. Y., Friday evening, Oct. 19th.
Auburn N. Y., Sabbath, Oct. 21st.
Senaca Falls, N. Y., Monday and Tuesday evenings, Oct. 22d and 23d.
Lockport, N. Y., Wednesday evening, Oct. 24th.
Lewiston, N. Y., Thursday, Oct. 25th.
Springwater, N. Y., Saturday and Sabbath, Oct. 27th and 28th.

While in this vicinity, I shall visit Dansville, Conesus, Honeoye, etc., and will give due notice of appointments further west.

J. V. Himes.

Notice.

Meeting of the "Christian Association."—Those interested in devising means to make a more earnest and effectual effort to arouse a wicked world and a sleeping church to the all-important truth that the Lord is soon coming, are invited to meet at Salem, Mass., Tuesday, Oct. 16th, 10 1-2 A. M., at the Union Street Chapel, for this purpose. Let those who cannot come, pray that the Lord may direct those who may assemble to adopt the best mode of action, and help them to do all things to his glory For particulars, see Crisis No. 1, Vol 12, Sept. 12th.

M. Grant, for the Committee.

Strangers who may attend the conference will inquire for Union Street Chapel.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a two days' meeting in Gilead, Branch Co., Mich., in the school-house near Humphrey Foster's, to commence Oct. 27th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Brn. Greenleaf, Robison and Sober may be expected to be present to assist in preaching the word of life. Let all the friends of Jesus interested in this meeting, be present at the commencement of the meeting. Brethren and sisters, come with overflowing hearts of love to God and one another, and labor for the salvation of sinners We desire earnestly to see a general waking up to a full preparation to meet the soon coming Savior.

In behalf of the friends of Jesus,
A. N. Seymour.

Notice.

The brethren in Ohio, through their committee, Geo. W. Cherry, Bro. Southwick, Bro. Fish of Dayton, and P. Alling of Norwalk, have determined on holding a conference this fall in Northern Ohio. They choose as

The place North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio.

The time, so far as determined, is Oct. 26th, Friday, 11 A. M., and over the Lord's day, the 28th. The first, or morning meeting, may hold daily as long as needful. The second meeting early in the evening. Thus we shall not be hurried in our services, nor spend time needlessly in going and coming. All "who have an ear to hear" are invited to "hear" the proof positive, as holy writ and acknowledged fact, that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Those who believe are exhorted to come and help forward the objects of the conference. The Judge has said in relation to spreading the knowledge of his approach,—"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing!" "Now the just shall live by faith; but if he draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Come then, beloved, to dispense, as well as to "receive," more of "the manifold grace of God." To them that have shall be given, and they shall have more abundance.

In behalf of the brethren, and subject to their amendment if deemed needful.

J. B. Cook.

☞ It is recommended by the committee that Thursday, the 25th Oct., be observed as a day of fasting and prayer by the brethren and sisters of Ohio, and all others who may be pleased to join us, that the blessing of the Lord may rest upon his waiting people, and especially upon our contemplated meeting—that it may be one of profit to all who may attend, and the cause of Christ advanced in this portion of his moral vineyard, and also that "his kingdom may come and his will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

In behalf of the committee, P. Alling.

P. S.—Brethren coming by the Toledo Rail Road will stop at Norwalk, some ten miles north of Fairfield, where conveyances can easily be procured. Those by the Newark and Sandusky road will stop at Plymouth, some ten miles south west thereof, and inquire for Bro. Hoffman.

P. A.

Notice.

There is to be a tent meeting near Bro. Joshua Porter's, five miles east from where we held our meeting last year, about seven miles from Monmouth, Warren Co., Ill., to commence Oct. 17th, 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over Sunday. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield, from Mich., are expected to be with us to preach the word. We give a general invitation to all to come. We expect the Spirit of the Lord will be with us.

Moses Chandler, for the Church.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a prayer and conference meeting held on every Friday evening at Bro. Elijah Skinner's house, Sandwich Centre, N. H. Preaching brethren when convenient are invited to call and preach the word. For the brethren,

Jas. Wm. Nute.
Tristram O. Mason.

☞ The Tract on the Rich man and Lazarus is now ready. This tract also contains the subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single 3 cts; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 ct. To be had at the Crisis office, or of me, at East Boston, Mass.

J. S. White.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. P. B. Morgan will preach in
Boston, (Chapman Hall)........Sunday, Oct. 21st

Providence permitting, I will preach in
Castleton, Vt.........Oct. 21st
MILES GRANT.

I will meet the brethren in Sandwich Centre, N. H., Saturday evening, Oct. 20th, and over the Sabbath.
L. C. GLAZIER.

The Lord permitting, I expect to preach at Canterbury, (Town-house) Sunday, Oct. 21st.
T. M. PREBLE.

H. B. Sevey appoints to preach in
Augusta, Me.........Oct. 21st

I will preach in Southbridge, Westville, (school-house) Mass., Oct. 14th.
L. P. BABCOCK.

T. W. Piper appoints to preach in
West Ossipee.........Oct. 14th
Tuftonborough.........Oct. 21st
Merideth Neck.........Oct. 28th
Clark meeting-house.........Nov. 4th

S. C. Hancock will meet with the brethren in New York, (corner of Grand and Elizabeth Streets) Oct. 14th.
Plymouth Hollow, Ct.........Oct. 21st

C. Goodrich appoints to preach in
Danielsonville, Ct.........Oct. 21st
Providence, R. I.........Oct. 24th and 25th
Warwick Plains.........Oct. 28th
Lafayette.........30th and 31st
Peacedale.........Nov. 4th

J. G. Smith appoints to preach in
Dorchester, N. H.........Oct. 21st
West Ossipee.........Oct. 14th

L. D. Thompson will preach in Concord, N. H., Oct. 17th, evening, 7 o'clock.
Westford, Mass., Oct. 18th, (where Bro. Vose may appoint.)
Lawrence.........Sunday, Oct. 21st
Auburn, (where Bro. Roby may appoint) Oct. 22d

George L. Teeple appoints to preach in
Pine Swamp, Ct.....Oct. 11th and over Sunday.
Bantam.........Oct. 16th
Bakerville.........Oct. 20th and 21st
Winsted, (where Bro. Whitehead may appoint) Oct. 23d
Cold Spring.........Oct. 24th
Blandford, (Bro. Bates').........Oct. 25th
Chester Factories.........Oct. 26th
Goshen.........Sunday, Oct. 28th
Plainfield Pond.........Oct. 30th
Savoy.........Nov. 1st
Cheshire, Mass.........Nov. 2d
Dalton, (where Bro. Warren may appoint) Nov. 3d and 4th
Chester Factories.........Nov. 8th
Sandisfield, (where Bro. Fenn may appoint,) Nov. 10th and 11th

N. B.—If any of the above conflict, please address me at Bakerville, Ct., care of C. Goodrich.

I have appointments to preach at
Hartford, Ct.........Oct. 14th, 21st and 28th

☞ When I see my way clear to visit Milton, N. Y., to hold meetings, I will write Bro. N. S. Latimer to that effect.
RUFUS WENDELL.

L. Wetherbee appoints to preach in
South Hermon.........Oct. 14th
South Orrington.........Oct. 21st
East Grate Works.........Oct. 28th
Belmont, (school-house).........Nov. 4th

J. K. Bellows appoints to preach in
Wells' Forge.........Oct. 14th
At Bro. Wm. Fenn's.........Oct. 17th
Pine Swamp.........Oct. 21st

The Lord willing, I will preach in
Rochester, N. H., (Shory Mills) Oct. 20th, and over Sunday.
Great Falls, N. H., Monday evening, Oct. 22d.
Kennebunk Port, Me., Oct. 27th and over the two following Sundays.
Cumberland, Me., Tuesday eve, Nov. 6th.
Woollwich, Me., Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 8th and 9th.
Round Pond, Saturday evening, Nov. 10th, and over Sunday.
SAMUEL BRAGG.

The Lord willing, I will attend meetings as follows:—
Milo or Sebec.........Sunday, Oct. 14th
3d Sunday in Oct., 21st, as the brethren may appoint.
4th Sunday in Milo or Sebec, as the friends may arrange.
THOMAS SMITH.

Providence permitting, I shall meet with the friends in Prospect, Ct., where Bro. Mix may appoint, Oct. 13th and 14th. Will Bro. Ira Morgan please meet me? Middlebury the 16th. At Bro. Porter's, Roxbury, the 17th. Wauraumaug the 18th.
JOSEPH GREGORY.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

C. W. Baker's P. O. address is Scitico, Ct.
C. W. B.—Yes, on practical themes.
J. P. Darling, T. Capen.—Money credited last week.
G. W. Dean.—All right—pays to No. 218.
J. M. Dudley.—All right.
J. G. Duncan.—All right.
R. B. Estes.—All right.
We have received a letter, with 50 cts. enclosed, from some person in McGrawville, N. Y., but no name to it. Will the party please enlighten us as to who it came from?
L. R.—Money for Bro. Conrad received.
C. A. Hill.—Receipts published this week.

Cash Receipts.

T Sables 256, $1.00; T B Potter 256, $2.00; Mrs. H E Wright 306, $1.70; C H Sutton 256, $1.40; Mrs. M A Mexton 276, $5.00.

Mr. Elijah 275, E J Turner, S S Campbell 279, L Hurlbert 275,—50 cts. each.

C C Bragg 264, G Bracket 303, R W Neal 319, H B Winch 286, W Nichols 286, C Kimball 279, J Conrad 262, L Martin 260, W Collins 272, G Noney 250, G P Persons 260, Mrs. L Moore 286, W W Taylor 286, R Woodward 260, J W Ireland 273, J Whitman 274, J Vickery 286, W Colbath, Jr., 288, A Burnett 286, A Messer 273, G F Fowler 279, Miss A W Smith 288, G Severence 279, S M Lum 286, E Noe 286, T C Smith 286, A H Bonnell 286, J Lyles 286, D H Warren 280, N Wheeler 280, P Alling 247, S Jennings 282, G A Streeter 260, H M Ring 276, W D Wood 270, A W Lloyd 286, L Dudley 286, J L Boyd 288, C Chase 288, I T Randall 288, Mrs. E Merrick 271, J T Gray 288, J Sissons 282, L C Johnson 286, S E Teeple 273, G W Whiting 286, J Young 286, Mrs. L T Marsh 286, S Boardman 286, T Chase 286, M Fogg 273, J Dean 286, H O G Sweet 288, J T Howell 288, H H Corbin 312, J C Duncan 272, A P Wells 234,—$1.00 each.

G H Waterhouse 273, Mr. Nudd 261, L Upson 260, C C Tuck 286, Mrs. S Dow 264, C Gilson 260, W Kelly 260, L T Hart 280, J Laing 286, T C Mason 238, W Chamberlain 312, H Tuttle, 307, M W Buck 270, P Jenness 312, J Baker 314, E Groves 260, M L Stocking 312, A Wescott 294, C Morse 2 copies 267, W Smith 274, H F DeWolf 248, J Reeves 286,—$2.00 each.

H Fowle 282, J Kemp 317,—$3.00 each.

I Thurlow 260, J C Blackman 260, D S King 260, J M Stone 312, L H Stone 286, E D Stearns 273, D J Morse 260, M Rickart 312, P W Jones 262, J D Rogers 312, H Drake 296, S Herrick 286, C A Holt 312, J Whitcomb 316, C Churchell 273, J J Johnson 260, And. Lawrence 260, C Perry 260, J B Walker 286, G W Wetherell 260, M Dodgson 273, R Emery 312, B Snyder 301, S Dunham 312, C Rowe 264, D Woodside 282, L S Pratt 286, W A Smith 312, E Hibbard 312, J Converse 312, H Briggs 309, J S Heath 312, D Hoskins 312, Mrs. F Parker 312,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

P A Mason 18 cts, L Upson $1.00, J Richards 21 cts, Mrs. H M Wright 22 cts, S Polly 36 cts, R R York $5.0, A W Lloyd 29 cts, J Baker 10 cts, C H Sutton 60 cts, A Wescott 48 cts, S S Campbell 30 cts., F. Burr $5.40.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. Isaac L. Allen, 10 Howard Street, Albany, N. Y., has an assortment of our books and tracts, and will fill orders at the same rates that are charged at this office.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Tracts from the Tract Fund.—Friends at the West can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.

H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 239 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances [illegible] Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $4.00 per hundred,—6 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Brooks, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS
OF
H. L. HASTINGS,
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp.	$1 00
The Great Controversy between God and Man: its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp.	60
Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 128 pp. Paper, 30 cts. Cloth	50
Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing.	00
Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings 12mo. Preparing	00
Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp.,	50
Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp.,	50
Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 320 pp.,	75
The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt,	25
Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm Ramsey, D.D., edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth,	40
Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper,	15
The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings Paper, 67 pp.,	13

Tracts of 24 Pages.—3 cts single; $1 for 1600 pages—by mail 1200 pp. for $1.

The Church not in Darkness,	by H. L. H.	pages 24
The Three Worlds,	by H. L. H.	" 24
The Last Days,	by H. L. H.	" 24
Plain Truths,	by H. L. H.	" 28
Will all men be saved?	by H. L. H.	" 24
Voice of Warning	by D. T. Taylor	" 24
The New Heavens and Earth,	"	" 24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos,		" 24
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos. by	H. L. H. &c.	" 36
Important Questions, 9 Nos	by H. L. H.	" 36
State of the Dead,	by John Milton	" 24
The Intermediate State,	by H. G.	" 24
Destiny of the Wicked	by H. L. H.	" 12
Future Punishment,	by H. G.	" 12
The Key of Truth,	by W. S.	" 12
Man's Future State	"	" 12
Letter on Dress	by Adoniram Judson	" 12
The Day of Judgment,	by St. Cyril	" 12
Outline of the Coast,	by A Voyager	" 8
The Night Cometh,	by John Adey	" 8
Gems, 9 Nos., poetry,	by H. L. H.	" 12
One Thing		" 8
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ,		" 4
The Duration of the Earth	by A. Clarke	" 4
Hope and Duty of the Church,	M. Henry	" 4
The Restitution.	by St. Cyril	" 4
A Warning Voice,	by Cotton Mather	" 4
Loving Christ's Appearing,	by Baxter	" 4
Little Children, Love one another		" 4
The One Resting Place,	by H. Bonar	" 4
My Friend,	by H. L. H.	" 4
Abundant Grace	"	" 4
Wondrous Love	"	" 4
Go in Peace	"	" 4
Living Water	"	" 4
The Banner	Anonymous	" 4
The Blood of Christ	"	" 4
Are you a Christian?	by H. L. H.	" 4
Why not Now?	"	" 4
Are you Pardoned?	"	" 4
Are you Safe?	"	" 4
Are you Saved?	"	" 4
Do you Pray?	"	" 4
When Will He Come?	by J. C. Ryle	" 4
Statement of Account	by H. L. H.	" 2
Man in Death	By Bishop Law	" 4
Forty Questions on Immortality		" 4

SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.

No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked		" 1
No. 2. The State of the Dead		" 1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus		" 1
No. 4. The Resurrection		" 1
No. 5. Plain Truths		" 1
No. 6. The Judgment		" 1

POETRY.

Brother, Shall we Meet?	by H. L. H.	" 2
Sister, Shall we Meet?	"	" 2
Stand up for Jesus!	"	" 1
The Harvest is Past	"	" 1
Beyond!	"	" 1
At Rest!	"	" 1
We would see Jesus	by Josephine	" 1
A Little While	by J. C.	" 1

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

Life Insurance, Envelope Size	H. L. H.	" 12
Home	"	" 12
Lost, Lost	"	" 8
Peace in Christ	"	" 4
Worth Knowing	"	" 4
All things are Yours	"	" 4
Now	"	" 4
Assurance	"	" 4
About God	"	" 4

The foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $8, with the order, shall receive $17 worth of books at the retail prices. Tracts are sent by mail, 1200 pages, on the receipt of a dollar. When sent by express, or at the expense of the buyer, 1600 pages will be sent for one dollar. Terms cash. Persons who desire to do good can obtain Four hundred tracts, of four pages each, for $1. These may be widely distributed and open the way for religious conversation. [illegible] thus be a blessing to those around them. The poor can have any of these tracts sent to them free, by remitting stamps to pay the postage. [illegible] have specimen copies of the tracts and pamphlets sent free. All letters, orders, and remittances should be addressed to the Publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 43 Weybosset St.,
Providence, R. I.

January, 1860.

* These publications can be obtained in Boston of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York: G. W. Young, 138 William st.; Philadelphia: A. B. Porter, 725 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publisher through all Booksellers.

Bibles of the British and Foreign Bible Society. [illegible] references between the verses, $1 50 to $2. 25. Nonpareil, marginal references, or references between verses, $1.20 to $2.10. Pearl, references between verses, $1.75. Marginal references, $1.20 to $1.25. Diamond, marginal references, 75 cts. to $1.25. Bindings, Sheep, Calf and [illegible] the difference in prices.

For the Crisis.

The Angel of Patience.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

She came to me in a fearful hour,
When the wild waves mocked my utmost power;
Desolation spread her wing around,
And lightnings played through the gloom profound.
Her snowy robes, like a wreath of light,
Beamed like a star on despair's night;
And she laid her hand on my burning brow,
And my throbbing heart beat soft and low.
She cried—"I've an errand! but not to save
Thy little bark from the stormy wave;
But a priceless boon is mine to give,
A patient skill in the storm to live.
The darkest wave is within thy breast,
And the fearful storm is the soul's unrest.
Sorrow and pain have a sure life-lease,
Spurn not the rod, 'tis an earnest of peace;
Conflict will give thee a nerve for ill
Thou wilt surely need; for a darker still,
Shall bring thee work in this trial hour,—
Fight and conquer, thou hast the power.
The gold must be tried, for base alloy
Never can enter the world of joy.
Not a victor in glory the crown will wear,
But the overcomer through trials here;
Not a soul be greeted with sweet 'well done,'
But the faithful steward, whom God will own;
None but the workers will ever find rest,
No room for the idlers among the bless'd."

* * * * * * *

She is with me still on the stormy wave,
She has saved my soul from a yawning grave;
I bless the Lord for the power of prayer,
For the angel of PATIENCE found me there.

For the Crisis.

"Stray Thoughts Arrested."—No. 2.

BY T. W. S.

NOW, AND THEN.—What a wide contrast does the plan of salvation preached by the evangelical ministers of the day present, with the simple method taught by the apostles. Observe Peter's answer to the inquiry of the multitude to whom he had been preaching Jesus as the Christ—the Messiah. He had convinced them that Jesus, whom they had crucified and buried, was really their expected Messiah—the Son of God. They then, of course, believed in him—believed that he was the Son of God. They had faith. They inquired what was to be done. "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Living faith works. Peter replied, "Repent and be baptized every one of you for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."

The word "repent" should be translated reform,—it is "metanoia," not "metamelomai." Unfortunately, these two words, though widely different, are in the common version always rendered "to repent"—or "repentance;" so that the distinction which is made in the original, does not appear in the translation. Both these words are found in 2 Cor. 7 : 10, which reads: "For godly sorrow works repentance to salvation not to be repented of." Dr. George Campbell remarks that we have here a play upon words which was far from the design of the Apostle, who in the first part of the sentence uses metanoia, but at the close employs the other expression. The former denotes not only sorrow for sin, but a conviction of its true nature as tends or leads to amendment of life. The latter signifies merely that regret or uneasiness of mind which may exist without any change of conduct. Perhaps a truer rendering would be—"For godly sorrow works a reformation unto salvation not to be repented of." So perhaps Acts 2 : 38, would read better, "Reform, and be baptized," etc. Peter thought (and declared) that faith in Christ as the Son of God, reformation of life and character, and baptism into the name of the Lord Jesus, would secure the remission of sins, and constitute a man a christian.

But our learned D. D.'s think those terms of salvation too easy. Then, it was faith in Christ as the Son of God. Now it is faith in the doctrine of the "trinity," "baby sprinkling," "predestination," "the discipline," "the creed," etc., etc. Then, it was a change of heart, of life, of character. Now, it is "come to the anxious bench—try to feel that you deserve to be sent to the lowest depths of hell—pour out your soul in tears—then believe!" Then, it was baptism into the name of Jesus Christ. Now, it is sprinkling in the name of the adorable trinity. Then it was that "they were added to the church the same day." Now, it is six months' probation. In apostolic days the disciples met on the first day of the week for the breaking of bread,—(meaning, no doubt, the celebration of the Lord's Supper.) Now, with some, once a month; others, every three months; others, every six months; and others think once a year is often enough. In vain we look to those who profess to be the Church, for that simplicity which characterized the early christians. In vain we look among the evangelical churches for "the faith once delivered to the saints." Commandments of God are supplanted by the traditions of men. The Bible not being sufficient, creeds are invented, and for doctrine the commandments of men are taught. In primitive times, it was said of the followers of Jesus, "See how these christians love one another!" Now, the sceptic raises the finger of scorn at many, and cries, "See how these who profess to be followers of Him who was meek and lowly, gentle and peaceable, despise, hate, persecute and devour each other." O, how the heart longs for a return of peace and unity, of love and sympathy! O that christians now spoke the same things, and minded the same things! O for that one Lord, that one faith, one baptism, and one hope. To expect such things is not consistent with the divine teachings. We look for darker seasons than we have yet experienced. We look for less faith, for less purity, for less zeal, for less unity. A brighter day will dawn when Jesus comes, not before. Men may teach and men may pray for the conversion of the world before Jesus comes; but in vain. The Scriptures declare that "wicked men shall wax worse and worse,"—that "many shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits," etc. It needs but a glance at the church and her condition, and at the world, to convince the most skeptical that the end draweth nigh. "Behold! I come quickly, and my reward is with me. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

For the Crisis.

"He that giveth to the Poor, lendeth to the Lord."

DEARLY BELOVED OF THE LORD:—I have felt it duty of late to address you on a subject that to me is of vast importance. During my short pilgrimage, I have been engaged more or less in looking up the destitute, wretched and degraded ones of earth, who are too low and vile for kid gloves to touch, or self-righteous eyes to look upon. Knowing that "the servant should not be above his Master," I have felt it a privilege to do what my Master said when he dwelt among men. O, what love did he exhibit! He loved to do good. Don't you think his heart filled with holy joy when he found a subject of want and he could relieve the sufferer? I tell you, yea. I think I know by experience something what such rejoicings must be.

Some days ago I met a little bright-eyed boy, whose patched garments bespoke poverty at home. I said to him, "My little boy, do you go to Sabbath School?" "No, ma'am," was the frank reply. "Why not?" "Hav'nt got any clothes to wear." Soon after I called on his mother, and found her an honest, smart and intelligent person as I seldom meet with, working with her hands to support herself and family. She had seen better days. The husband and father had been a man of industrious habits; but strong drink had ruined him, and thus brought poverty and desolation into the family. The mother was a broken-hearted woman. O, how she wept when she told me her sad story. She is an American woman, and loves the Lord. I talked with her husband, and asked him to come to the prayer meeting; he promised me he would. O! may the Spirit of God follow him.

I could enumerate many such instances, but this will suffice. These things come under my observation every week, whenever I put myself in the way, and I sigh for their desolation; for I know the disposition of the mass is to trample upon those who have erred,—if they have done wrong, kick them down; they are not fit to live. But not so with the christian, for they have charity that covereth a multitude of sins. O, how quick we can tell when a person has the spirit of Christ! He will overlook the faults of others. He has that charity that hopeth all things—beareth all things—endureth all things. Sweet charity! precious boon! let me possess thee forever. It thinketh no evil—is not easily provoked. O, then, thou shalt be mine. Twine around me, thou faith, hope and love, that I may be able to approach the enemy; for without thee I am as sounding brass, and a tinkling cymbal.

But I see I am wandering from my subject. What I was going to say, is this: we are about starting a Sabbath School for ragged children. We have given all we can spare, and now I am going to beg old clothes of you, brethren and sisters. Have you not some that you have laid aside, that you can pick up and send, old pants, coats, dresses—anything that can be made over—old ribbons that I can color; anything will be acceptable; old clothes of every description. If you have them, and have not poor enough among yourselves to take them all, just gather up a bundle and send it to me, and I will show you a crop of wheat by and by.

Come, sister, that one who has got the biggest heart, sally out to stir up the minds of your neighbors. You that live where you don't have your spirits crushed, day by day, by destitute and starving children,—remember one thing: "Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." "They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

Christ's work while here on the earth, was in looking up the lost ones. And shall we not give heed to the command, "Go ye out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in?" Well, dear brethren, I am trying to obey this command, by the grace of God. I mean to visit every house where I think is any opportunity of doing good—leaving a tract at each place. O, how much I have wanted the means to do good with! The Lord is near, even at the door. Have we done our best to give the last invitation to the "marriage supper of the Lamb?" "Go into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in." Who will help me to fulfill this message? Who? Who? Time is short; sinners must be saved. The poor can be reached. They will hear. I have seen the tear of penitence fall, as I have been on my mission, and have found that the spirit of Jesus through me can reach the hearts of sinners as well now as in days past and gone. God is on the giving hand yet—and shall we not be up and doing, and work while the day lasts? Pray for us, dear brethren, that God will bless our efforts here in Providence. Yours looking for Jesus.

HATTIE.

N. B. Should any see fit to send any bundles, direct them to H. L. Hastings, per express, Providence, R. I.

For the Crisis.

Our Nation—Its Sins, etc.

Somewhere in the past, our nation has reached a crisis, similar to the Jewish nation when the Roman army took possession of their country. But we are not utterly cast off—we have a privilege of returning to our land again like as the Jews to Palestine. And although this return is hardly noticed in comparison to the final gathering at the appearing of Christ, yet it is a part or an inseparable item in the preparatory work of the great gathering, and we are called upon to treat the subject seriously, and be in earnest in the work. The settling in new fields—as the west—is also a part of the plan. Let none suppose they must engage in either work except as they have facilities. Both we and the Jews must expect to be faithful and believing if we would expect Christ's coming to be a deliverance and vindication of our course.

The new comers to this country, like the nations who have possessed Palestine, have had a chance to almost dispossess us; or more properly speaking, a chance to attain to nearly, if not quite, an equality with us; but they have been too anti-christian in their character to thus prevail, and hence God is choosing us again, and has been so doing a number of years past.

That some of the new comers have attained to nearly, if not quite, an equality with us, is clear; but generally speaking, we are the inheritors and possessors, and the rest, as far as they are righteous, are grafted into the branches.

H. B.

October.

Ay, thou art welcome; heaven's delicious breath,
When woods begin to wear the crimson leaf,
And suns grow meek, and the meek suns grow brief.
And the year smiles as it draws near its death.
Wind of the sunny south! oh, still delay
In the gay woods and in the golden air,
Like to a good old age released from care,
Journeying, in long serenity, away.
In such a bright, late quiet, would that I
Might wear out life like thee, 'mid bowers and brooks,
And, dearer yet, the sunshine of kind looks,
And music of kind voices ever nigh,
And when my last sand twinkled in the glass,
Pass silently from men, as thou dost pass.

W. C. Bryant.

For the Crisis.

"How shall we escape, if we neglect so great Salvation?"

Our gratitude for deliverance from any thraldom or danger, is usually in proportion to the means employed to effect it. We are also apt to appreciate anything we possess according to the price paid for it; and thus if we make large sacrifices to obtain a desired object, the value of the same is enhanced accordingly.

Hence, as the Apostle calls the salvation of the Bible a great one, it might be useful and important for us to inquire why it is so. And the first thing we wish to know relative to the subject is, who is its author? Did our sin-ruined world excite the pity of some personage of earthly greatness who, by his achievements of mighty valor, had acquired to himself a name of world-wide fame? Was it one of milder form who, by his general benevolence and anxious concern for the wants of others, had endeared himself to the surrounding multitude, with the prospect of his bearing our burden of guilt and sorrow? Or was a band of angels commissioned on an errand of mercy to our fallen race, who, by their words of sympathy and consolation for our tribulation and grief, might mitigate in a degree human woe? Did a ray of bright effulgence emanate from the eternal throne, and cast its influence over the gloom and moral night that brooded over our world, thus enlightening the checkered pathway of benighted mortals? Ah! no; though mercy, weeping mercy, would have done all this, in view of our deplorable condition, yet nothing could be answerable, or availing to the inexorable demand of justice, save the blood of the everlasting covenant, "even Jesus, who became through suffering the author of salvation to all that believe." Wonder, then, oh ye heavens, and be astonished ye ends of the earth, that when in our lost estate there was no eye to pity nor arm to save, His own arm brought deliverance, even his who is "Lord over all, God blest forevermore."

How great, then, must be that salvation, which required the blood of the glorious Son of God to procure it! Another evidence of its greatness is its effects upon those who receive it. It is understood that while in a state of impenitence, we are all under sentence of condemnation, and nothing is wanting to effect its execution but the cessation of mortal life, and the departure of the spirit from the body to that God who cannot look upon sin with the least allowance. Hence, it is said of the wicked dead, "they are reserved in chains of darkness to the judgment of the great day." Therefore, must not the salvation be great which proposes a release from all former sentence of condemnation and death, and an entire escape from the bondage and corruption of the world, and, finally, a safe arrival and happy admittance into the haven of eternal rest, where sin with its attendant train of temptation cannot enter, but where all will praise the Lamb of Calvary forever and ever?

Another feature of its greatness consists in the present happiness of its recipients, as they pass along in their journey heavenward. It is said in the sacred page, that when the blessed Savior led captivity captive, and ascended up on high, it was for the glorious purpose of giving gifts unto men. And now, what are some of these gracious gifts? O! have we not seen in the sanctuary his waiting children, in answer to prayer, receive such manifestations of the Redeemer's presence as brought joy and peace to every heart, while the opening heavens seemed to shine around them with beams of sacred bliss? And such has often been the glorious result, that poor, perishing sinners, who beheld the melting scene, were moved to contrition, and the tear of penitence, as it stole down the cheek, told that they too would gladly share in such earnests of a Savior's love. And these gifts and graces are strewed all along the christian's pathway, thus inviting all of every name, kindred and tongue, to reach forth and partake of the waters of life freely.

Then is it any wonder that, in view of the great cost of this salvation, and its gracious benefits to the human family in their lost condition, the Apostle should ask, how we shall escape if we neglect it? If, with his inspired mind, he saw no way of escape for the poor deluded sinner who should reject the offer of sovereign mercy, then let us hasten to accept the easy terms of life and salvation as proposed in the gospel of the Son of God, that when that great and notable day shall come, we may be able to stand.

M. A. T.

Neal's Creek, Ind.

For the Crisis.

Religious Gambling.

Well, what is it? I have seen the cards shuffled for money, and the dice box tipped to cheat somebody out of their wages. I have seen the wheel of fortune turn, the billiards roll, the ten pins knocked down, the raffling for the coat on the back, the pig in the pen, or for the three cent glass. The world calls such "black legs," "night birds," "hard cases," "gamblers," etc. Why? Because they extract from their fellow men that for which they pay no equivalent.

But what is "Religious Gambling?" Let us see. Look on yonder post, or in the store—yea, all over the streets; see those large hand-bills, headed with great capital letters—a fair to cushion Rev. Mr. C.'s church; or to pay a standing debt; or to add to our library a new list of books, etc., etc. Read on. "In which fair will be tickets sold from 25 cents up to $2.00. The following articles will be drawn for in lottery: two sewing machines, one melodeon, three gold watches, several gold breast pins, worth $28.00 each, one baby carriage, worth $15.00, silver spoons, etc., etc., with other articles too numerous to mention. Come one, come all, to-night in the large hall."

Well, let's go and see this fair. Yes, up the great stairway we go, and arrive at the door; here stands a man straight up against the door, who calls out, "Ticket, sir, or the entrance fee, 25 cents." But do common gamblers charge a quarter for admittance to their lotteries? O no, they go in free. Well, we pay the quarter and are inside. Sidewise we elbow our way along. What a crowd! Faces all flushed, some with excitement, some with wine, more with brandy, and some with villainous gin. Let's see; here is the hotel keeper, and Squire S., Deacon B., clerks in the store, young men, old men, boys, black legs, and all, all that have got any money left, have bought tickets in the lottery, and with flushed faces anxiously wait for the prizes to be drawn. Now comes the hour. The numbers are drawn. Hark! No. 12 is drawn. Nothing! A poor factory girl starts up; that's my number. O dear! nothing. Number 22 is drawn. Nothing! a neighbor behind me starts up, (who has not paid his house rent the last quarter,) that's my number. "Let it slide, 'twas only a dollar." And so it goes, ticket after ticket is drawn, and many silently curse the day they ever heard of a lottery. Finally, a prize is drawn. It is a melodeon. "That is mine," says a rich man in the corner. "O what a lucky fellow," says another, "he's always lucky;" "but we are not," say a dozen voices, who have lost all the money they have got. Finally the prizes are all drawn, and fifty to five go away heart-sick and mad at themselves, but ready to go the next night and try their luck again. This is religious gambling.

G. W. DENNY.

THE WAY TO BE HAPPY.—You must learn to be happy in the discharge of daily duty, and in the enjoyment of daily blessings. God never intended that we should go through our daily toil with our heads down as a bulrush. We must be hopeful. Every trial and affliction that comes upon us, in the path of duty is designed for our good—is a blessing in disguise, and we should meet these trials and afflictions with a brave heart, and a cheerful spirit. The student must learn to be happy in his studies, the teacher among his pupils, the husbandman on his farm, and the mechanic in his shop. In God's great world there is enough to make us all happy if we seek it. If any one is miserable it is his own fault.

For the Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—I send you the following lines, which I very much desire to see in your paper should you think them worthy.

The more the troubles of the pilgrimage increase, the more the struggle becomes intense, the more will the strong soul of faith be nerved to action, and the more noble the action. The love which operates, as a principle, and ascends more fully to God and truth by all its want of an object on earth, becomes a grand exalting and redeeming power, sanctifying at every step, while with this we may trust under all disappointments and difficulties, for there are promises of success; and I am sure the day of salvation and strength, with glory crowning the triumphant contestant for the truth and right, will soon appear.

Yours, P. D. CAMPBELL.

New Britain, Ct.

Toil, Love and Trust.

BY SARAH FAUSETT.

Toil! though your soul has grown weary,
Though the way is darksome and long;
Live in the great world nobly,
With a spirit true and strong;
Dreaming of life is not living,
But toil with a smile and a song!

Toil! though the strife may seem fruitless,
It will not, at last, be in vain:
An Eye above you is noting
The weary toil and pain;
The struggle will soon be over—
Your soul may the victory gain!

Love! though your heart has been darkened
And crushed by a withering blight;
Though your love has been scorned and down-trodden,
Lock not your spirit in night—
Walk not alone in the shadow—
Open your heart to the light!

Love! there is bliss in loving;
There are souls who faint by the way;
There are weary hearts to be strengthened—
Gladden them while you may;
Your soul will grow purer and stronger,
And rise to the light of day!

Trust! though your trust has been broken,
Though your faith has been guarded by none;
Faint not, and doubt not, oh, spirit!
The life-work will soon be done;
The day is coming in glory,
Trust, till the goal is won!

Trust when strife is around you,
When your idols are crumbling to dust,
All your doubt will be known in the future,
For the Father is loving and just;
Then look up to the Heaven above you,
Toil nobly, and love and trust!

Selections.

"Fear Not."

A missionary in India writes that he has chosen the words "Fear not," for his motto this year. He says, "just look up the phrase, and see how often it is repeated in the Old and New Testaments." It is indeed repeated often, no less than fifty times in the whole Bible, and how many circumstances are there in life to which it is applicable!

Fellow christian,—if dark prospects rise before you, let not anxieties for the future fill your mind; for, remember, "not a sparrow is forgotten before God." Hear him say, "Fear not, therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows." Do you mourn the death or alienation of friends near and dear? "Fear not," saith the Lord, "for I am with thee, and will bless thee." Should enemies appear against you, even very many, the Lord is on your side. "Fear not, for they that are with you are more than they that be with them." When your sins rise up against you, and despair is ready to take possession of your soul; look to Jesus, and obey his voice saying, "Fear not;" "only believe." Hear his blessed assurance, "Fear not; for I have redeemed thee." Though temptations assail you, yield not, but go forward in the strength of the Lord, encouraged by his word; "Fear not, I am thy shield and exceeding great reward." What though the cause of Christ seem to languish for a season? Pray and labor on. Jesus says "Fear not little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Yes, though you are a little flock, a feeble band! Not because you merit success, for then you must despair, but "it is your Father's good pleasure." O greatly beloved, fear not, be strong, yea, be strong.

These comforting words are addressed to "the souls that on Jesus have leaned for repose;" but those who are seeking the Savior may well be encouraged by these "gracious words," for they show the kindness of that One who says, "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Then let them come to him now, and these precious assurances will be theirs.

Finally, whatever difficult duty the christian is called upon to perform, whatever affliction he may endure, and especially in the hour of death, let him remember the cheering words, "Fear not."

"Fear not, I am with thee, oh, be not dismayed!
For I am thy God, and will still give thee aid,
I will strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand,
Upheld by my righteous, omnipotent hand."

—Tract Journal.

Complete Consecration to God.

There was a time when to profess christianity publicly was to expose the professor to insult, to torture and not unfrequently to death itself. Then christians were compelled to renounce all worldly ambition, not only theoretically, but practically; and hence, before men professed religion, they became most thoroughly convinced that it was a verity, and that it was more important to serve God, though at the expense of their lives, than "enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season."

Now to profess christianity is no disgrace, even in the eyes of the world, and in many places it is for the interest of a man who wishes to be respected and popular to be a christian; not a strict, thorough-going christian, of course, but a sort of a moderate man of the world christian, who goes to church when it is pleasant, to hear the mellow-toned organ and the sweet singing choir, who pays the minister liberally, and takes care that he preach the most pointed part of his eloquent discourse against the tyrannical Egyptians, or stubborn Jews; and when he reproves his own parishioners, that he speak in general terms, lest he incur the odium of preaching politics; in a word, that the minister tickle the ears, instead of pricking the hearts of genteel sinners.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Opposites in Religion.

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."—Paul.

"I believe I'll stay at home to-day, as it is rainy and I don't like to go and spend my time listening to Bro. W., for he can't preach much anyhow."—Fair Weather Laxiness.

"Pray without ceasing, and in everything give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus, concerning you."—Paul.

I can't find time to pray, and then I have so many things to attend to, and my mind is so taken up with the business of the day that I am not prepared to pray.—Worldly-mindedness.

"See that none render evil for evil unto any man, but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves and to all men."—Paul.

My neighbor has done so much evil and has acted so badly that I will not stand it any longer; I'll make him know that I have rights as well as other men, and I'll make him respect them.—Revenge.

"Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."—Peter.

I do not see what good baptism will do; if the Spirit of God does its work upon the sinner's heart, outward forms and ceremonies are not of any use.—Skepticism.

"Strive to enter in at the strait gate."—Christ.

All will be made holy and happy, so there is no use of striving, as there is no danger.—Presumption.

"Hold fast the form of sound words which thou hast heard from me, in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus."—Paul.

Unless you have a human creed, we cannot admit you as evangelical. You are piratical, sailing under a false flag.—Orthodoxy.

"Contend earnestly for the faith, once delivered to the saints."—Jude.

Don't preach doctrinal sermons, or you will offend the sects.—Faintheartedness.

"Withdraw from every brother that walks disorderly, and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.—Paul.

If we withdraw from Brother B. he will do us all the injury he can, so I think we had better let him alone.—Trimmer.

"For as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ."—Paul.

I don't like that view of the matter, for that leaves out all that have not been baptized.—Disobedience.

"Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness."—Christ.

As soon as you get settled in life it will be easy for you to serve God, but you cannot well do it before.—Satan.

"They that preach the gospel should live of the gospel."—Paul.

"I think that they should preach for nothing, or at least should follow some other business for their living.—Covetousness.—Ex.

"Thy numerous works exalt the Lord,
Nor will I silent be;
O rather let me cease to breathe,
Than cease from praising thee."

Some One Must Pray.

A man of learning and talent, but an unbeliever, was traveling in Manilla on a scientific expedition. He was escorted by a native of rank, and, as they were about to start, the native, with the refined politeness which characterizes the Orientals, requested the white stranger to pray to his God.

This was probably the only thing he could have been asked to do without being able to comply; and on his declining, the native said, "Well, some God must be prayed to, so you will excuse me if I pray to mine."

"Full many a shaft at random sent, Finds mark the archer never meant."

And so it was in this case. The unbeliever was rebuked by a heathen, and the man of science who had gone there in quest of natural curiosities, returned, having found the "pearl of great price." His next visit is to be as a missionary to preach Christ.—Ex.

Reading for Youth.

About the Bible.

Little folks, what think you of this blessed book, the Bible? Is it not true, every word? Do you read it? When? how often? How do you read it? Solemnly, attentively, prayerfully? Do you read it as God's book, Heaven's choice purchase, —the book of mercy, judgment and grace? Do you take this book as your book, your guide, your wisdom, your hope, your joy? In the Bible you will find every thing good; every thing to meet your wants for time and eternity—every thing to make you wise, kind, obedient, lovely, mild, humble—Christ-like. O, read it young friends, read it on your knees—read it imploring God's Spirit to enlighten, purify, sanctify. Read it. Begin at Genesis, read on and on to Revelations—then begin again, and again, read on and on. The more you read it in truth, honestly desiring to be good and do good, the more you will like to read it, till it becomes like honey to your taste, more precious than gold. Read the historical part, the lives of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, of Joseph, Moses and Joshua, the history of the Judges and the Kings also. And above all, and more than all, read about Jesus, the Lamb of God, who shed his blood for you, for all. Read over and over the Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, till your whole souls are enlisted. The Acts also, and the Epistles are rich, very rich, more precious than rubies.

Read all, search all, pray over all, practice all, live out all. Imitate Christ in all his beautiful loveliness, his goodness, meekness, mercifulness and truthfulness. Read the Bible daily, read it as you lie down, as you rise up, read every spare moment, make it your constant companion. Read the Bible, search it out, commit portions of it daily, meditate in it, get your little hearts alive, on fire! your souls kindled to a living flame!

O how joyful you will be! Read it and pray over it in this way till you can say, "O how I love thy law, it is my meditation all the day."

"Source of wisdom—thou dost show
The debt of love to God I owe;
In thee my duty I may see,
And what kind heaven's done for me.

Holy Bible—Book of Truth,
I loved thee from my early youth;
And thou shalt ever be my guide—
More precious than all else beside."

Golden Rule.

"Father's at the Wheel."

Among the passengers on a bark running as a packet from a northern to a southern port was a little boy, the son of one of the sailors engaged on the vessel. His playfulness and good-nature made him quite a favorite with the passengers, and they learned from him that this was his first voyage in the bark, and that he was going to visit his grandmother, whose home was in a town near to the port to which they were bound.

"When father asked the captain if I might go," said little Albert, as he was giving an account of himself one day, "he said he didn't like to have sailors bring their little boys in the vessel, but father told him I would be good and not make any trouble; and now I'm going to be just what father said, because that will please him."

His father was a large, strong man, and a whole-souled sailor. During the voyage, there was a great storm. The wind blew so violently that for some hours it seemed doubtful whether the bark would live through it or go down. The passengers gathered together, most of them, in the cabin, and spoke anxiously of their situation and prospects. Very few cheerful words were heard among them, and it was indeed a gloomy company.

Little Albert joined the group, but it was evident that he did not share in the fears of the others.

"Don't you think the bark will be lost and we shall all be drowned, Ally?" said one of the passengers.

"Oh, no!" he answered; "I have just been out on deck, and I know we are all safe for father's at the wheel."

Perhaps some of my little friends do not know that the "man at the wheel," who is also called the helmsman, on a ship, is the man who steers or guides the ship. When he turns the wheel, the rudder is moved, and in this way vessels are directed in their course when moving through the water. And the man who performs this duty must be a strong man; he must be watchful too, and always listening to catch the first word of an order given to change the ship's course.

"Father's at the wheel," said little Albert. The simple-hearted, trustful child had found that his father occupied the post of helmsman, and without waiting to think or to ask how much that fact had to do with sails or rigging, winds or waves, he was satisfied that all was well.

We love to see children anxious to please a good father, and having confidence in him. But there is another kind father, in heaven, stronger and more able to help than any earthly friend, for he is the Almighty God, and he can guide all children and their dear parents through every storm,—every scene of trial and sorrow in this world, and bring them safely to his bright and beautiful home. And those who love him are glad to think they have such a Father and such a friend. Little reader, do you love him, and are you glad to have such a Father? Can you say to him in your heart: "My Father, thou art the guide of my youth"?

Did Jesus Sing?

At a gathering of children on Christmas day, a gentleman present related a very interesting incident.

A little girl, about three years of age, was very curious to know why Christmas greens were so much used, and what they were intended to signify.

So Mr. L. told her the story of the babe at Bethlehem,—of the child whose name was Jesus.

The little questioner was just beginning to give voice to the music that was in her heart; and, after Mr. L. had concluded the narrative, she looked up in his face and asked, "Did Jesus sing?"

Who had ever thought of that? If you will look at Matthew, twenty-sixth chapter and thirtieth verse, you will there find almost conclusive proofs that Jesus sang with his disciples.

Is not that encouragement for us to sing,—not with the understanding only, but with the heart also?—S. S. Gazette.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 265. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 6.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

My Home.

My home is on the other shore,
Beyond the billow's foam,
And you green fields, to some so fair,
But part me from my home.

And oh! each pain-throb of the heart
Shall there forever cease,
And all the tumults raging here
Be hushed to "perfect peace."

Thank God! there's light to guide me home,
Where darkness reigned of yore,
A watch-fire on the narrow way,
A light-house on the shore!

The willow 'neath its burden bends,
It's borne my harp too long;
I'll strike again those trembling chords,
And raise a triumph song!

For now the pilgrim's almost home,
The pearly gates I see,
And glory to His name, I know
They'll open unto me! F. F.

Pine Avenue.

For the Crisis.

"Be not conformed to this World."

Being greatly blest of God, and knowing that it is the duty and privilege of the christian to grow in grace, I wish to say a few words to those who are seeking eternal life. Dear brethren and sisters, I have found "great peace" in Christ, and I am anxious every dear saint of God should enjoy this same blessing. Allow me to tell you, that as long as you let the natural man rule and reign, you never can be free in Christ. "Let not sin, therefore, reign in your mortal body," saith the apostle. "To be carnally minded is death." "Come out from among them, and be ye separate," is the divine command, which should be obeyed in its most absolute sense. If you do not follow the Savior's directions, you cannot be saved. Now, brother and sister, do you come out from the world when you go to the worldly gatherings and join in their revelry? In some places, brethren belong to agricultural societies. They put in their dollar with the gambler and the drunkard. The brother may not trot his horse for money, but he will draw his oxen hard, or plough for money, which is just as bad. When he pays his dollar, he does it so that he can have a chance to draw his five or ten dollar premium. I ask, dear brother, is this coming out from the world and being separate? I think not. Now wont you tell me which is the gambler, the man who draws his oxen for money, or the man who trots his horse for money? Come, let us be honest. Is not one a gambler just as much as the other?

We are told by the apostle not to do any thing "through strife or vain glory," but this is not heeded; for what a strife there is going on all the year to excel in horses, cattle, butter and cheese, fruit, and every thing indoors and out. Oh, how these yearly gatherings unfit the christian for the service of Christ! The world love such christians. Go to meeting the next Lord's day, and if they are there, they will be silent on the subject of religion, and all filled up with the spirit of the world; and before they can get into the element of religion again, they will have to repent and pray as David did, "O God, . . . restore unto me the joy of thy salvation." Dear brother and sister, Jesus denied himself of every thing to obtain salvation for you. Wont you do as much for yourself as another will do for you?

There are many that profess religion, who have never lived self-denying lives. They have a will in this matter. They sometimes obey the Lord and conscience, and the teachings of the Spirit, and sometimes they obey beloved self; consequently they make no progress in divine life. Now, brother or sister, wont you have this for your motto?—no compromise with sin. How destructive are these worldly gatherings to young christians. It is like running their ship aground. Christ says, except we deny ourselves daily, we "cannot" be his disciples. Let us give up the world and be good soldiers of Jesus Christ. He wants soldiers that wont desert and run after the enemy's temptations. How you would feel to have your friends desert you as you do Jesus. When he forgave you your sins, you promised to be wholly his without reserve. Have you kept your promise? Come, make up your mind to be a whole hearted christian, and get ready to meet the Lord when he comes. Do in religion as you have done in the pursuit of worldly things,—be in earnest about it. If our religion does not distinguish us from the world now, it will not when Jesus comes. AUGUSTUS L. CHAMBERLIN.

Worcester, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Hinesburgh, Vt.

On Wednesday evening, the 26th ult., I closed a series of well attended, interesting meetings in the Town Hall of the above named village; and as the place is "new ground" for the views of Bible truth which distinguish us as a people, it ought perhaps to be introduced to the readers of the Crisis. Hinesburgh village—located near the centre of the town of the same name—is in Chittenden county, and is twelve miles from Burlington, in a south-easterly direction. Charlotte Depot is the nearest R. R. station on the Rutland and Burlington road. The village of H. is about the size of Castleton, I should judge, and contains three churches—Baptist, Methodist and Congregational. My first knowledge of the place dates back to March 27th, 1859, when two now greatly beloved sisters in Christ, Mrs. Irane R. Castle and Mrs. Susan A. Durfee, of Hinesburgh, accompanied by their brother-in-law, Mark H. Irish, whose family they were then visiting in Troy, came to this city to hear Bro. George Storrs preach, and spent the interval between two meetings at our house. At that time Mr. Irish was a sincere inquirer after truth, and a few months afterwards, under circumstances of sorrow which are referred to in the obituary column, he learned by a happy experience what it was to have "Christ in" him "the hope of glory." After we had partaken of the Lord's Supper at our afternoon meeting, Bro. Storrs invited any to speak who might feel it a privilege to do so. Sr. Castle, then an entire stranger to us all, was one of the number who improved the opportunity, and in doing so she gave a deeply interesting account of her exclusion, but a little while before, from the Baptist church for holding the doctrines of the unconsciousness of the dead and no immortality out of Christ. We all felt, while listening to her heart-stirring and heart-cheering recital, that she would not fail to let the light of truth shine; but nothing could then have seemed more unlikely to any of us, than that the writer of this notice should be the first man to defend, before a Hinesburgh audience, the truths for believing which she had been made to feel the bitterness of a bigoted persecution. But thus the Lord has ordered it, and the prayers of these faithful sisters, and others of like precious faith, that their neighbors and friends might be permitted to hear the testimony of God's word concerning man's mortality the resurrection of the dead, Christ as the Life-Giver and the "blessed hope" of his coming again, have been answered. Their prayer now is that the seed sown may be watered by the blessing of God, and that perishing men and women, viewing the character of the Most High in the light of revealed truth, may be led to accept the gracious offer of eternal life as the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

My first visit to H. was to attend the funeral of Bro. Irish's wife; this was held in the Baptist meeting-house on Saturday, Aug. 18th. I say more elsewhere of this occasion, and of the effort to exhibit the true ground of comfort concerning "the dead in Christ." By invitation of the pastor, I preached in the same house on the morning and afternoon of the next day to good congregations. My last discourse was on the nature and destiny of man, and in it I endeavored to array against the doctrines of the immortality of the soul and the eternal torment of the wicked the clear and harmonious utterances of the word of God. The occasion was one of deep interest to me, for I felt that in some honest minds confidence in the popular theory was yielding to the power of truth. When I had done speaking, the pastor of the church made a few pertinent remarks, and announced his purpose to preach on the same subject the following Lord's day. I regretted, of course, that it would not be my privilege to hear his discussion of the question, while I was very glad that it was to receive his attention in the manner promised. The truth has nothing to fear from investigation, and I am fully persuaded that the sermons (some half a dozen in number) that have recently been preached in defence of inherent immortality and endless woe, to the three congregations of H., have in no wise hindered the spread of the doctrines of conditional immortality and unconsciousness in death.

During the progress of our recent meetings, which began on Tuesday evening, Sept. 13th, and continued two weeks, it gave me pleasure to examine many of the texts that had been adduced in support of the common view—showing their harmony with my views and the hostility of many of them to the theories in behalf of which they had been cited. I preached sixteen times, besides holding two prayer meetings—one of the latter at the house of a Baptist brother and sister who love the truth. There is reason for the belief that lasting good has resulted from this effort—made in weakness, it is true, but with a desire to honor God and bless the people. The claims of practical godliness were by no means lost sight of, and it is hoped that formal professors and other worldlings, including some whose only hope has been in the truth of Universalism, have been led to feel, as well as see, that something must be done if we would "inherit eternal life." "If ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." So says Peter; and Paul, having enumerated "the works of the flesh," declares—"they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Our congregations were, throughout, encouragingly large—unexpectedly so, considering the amount of prejudice existing in the community, and the influence used to prevent church members from attending; every seat was filled at our last meeting. The attention given to the word spoken was uniformly good. After meeting last Wednesday evening, one prominent citizen, who had been an interested listener from the first, came to Sr. Castle and said he had determined to travel with us to the kingdom of God. May he faithfully execute this noble resolve, and may his example exert a saving influence upon many around him who know not God and have no hope in Christ.

Prayer meeting was appointed for Saturday evening at Bro. Castle's house. Dr. HUGH TAGERT, of Shelburn, and his excellent wife, attended a number of the meetings. For years the Dr. has stood up boldly everywhere in defence of the doctrine of life through Christ, and he has accomplished much in calling attention to the subject. Bro. and Sr. T. love the truth; they have suffered for it, but they rejoice in being counted worthy of this honor. Bro. E. H. Glass, of St. George, and his companion, came to H. to attend the meetings, and remained to the close. They long ago embraced the truth of no immortality out of Christ, and are willing to suffer reproach for the Master's sake. At the close of one of the evening meetings, I had a pleasant interview with Eld. C. S. Shattuck, a Christian minister, from Starksborough, and I judged that he was quite friendly to the main features of our faith. One gentleman who attended nearly all the meetings, and who is a believer in modern Spiritualism, admitted that I had clearly shown the unconsciousness of the dead to be a Bible doctrine, but with him the Bible was a fallible book! I thanked him for the concession he had made, and hope he may yet be led to abandon his Spiritualism and his skepticism together.

I might devote a paragraph or two to the opposition that was brought to bear against the truth before the meetings, and during their progress; but as an impartial statement of facts bearing upon that feature of this, my first campaign, would fail to exhibit some of our opponents in a very amiable light, I prefer to let it pass,—endeavoring to remember, everywhere, that "the servant of the Lord must not strive." During my stay at H. I was most hospitably entertained at the house of Mr. John Ray, and before my departure the friends looked after my temporal wants in a bountiful manner.

Thirteen copies of "The Christian Lyre" were disposed of at H., and the book is much liked on all hands. I was informed that the Baptist minister had sent or would send for a lot of them to circulate among his own congregation.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Albany, Oct. 1st, 1860.

Friendship.

The sage observed, True friendship, with good counsel, demands both our pure esteem and implicit confidence. * * As the roots firmly fixed in the heart exhibit their branches on the tongue, so will perfect love only emanate from a true heart. * * The sage was asked to define love; and replied, The tendency of hearts, and their mutual inclination. * * He used to say, The space of a needle's eye suffices for two friends, whilst the universe itself can scarcely contain two enemies. * * To distinguish thy friend from thine enemy, examine thine own heart. * * Rely not on him who burthens thee with his sorrows, but withholds from thee his joys. * * The sage was asked, whom he loved most, Either him, he said, who has experienced the greatest kindness from me, or I from him. * * We may recognize the friend when our heart is cognizant of his affections, and our tongue utters his praise. * * Flatter not thy friend, nor inquire too anxiously after him, lest thou tempt his enemy to gainsay thee, and seek to sever thee from him. * * Be liberal to thy friends with thy heart and thy means, to thy acquaintances with thine influence and kind words; bestow on mankind thy countenance and friendly salutation, on thine enemies, thy charity: be mindful of the law of God, but of thy reputation above all. * * Beware of those who measure their love by their interest, for the one expires when the other is attained. * * Depend not on the favor of the prince, if the minister frown on thee, but with the favor of the latter thou needest not despair of the former. * * I never failed to repay the love of my friends with pure and undivided affections, nor to pray to God to restore mine enemies to the path of rectitude; neither betrayed the secret intrusted to me, nor desired a thing unworthy of me; nor did I assent and retract, even at the risk of my worldly treasures. * * Patience is always commendable, save when our frend is calumniated.—Choice of Pearls.

For the Crisis.

To a False Friend.

I.

Our hands and hearts have met, but met in vain,
O, they will never, never meet again!
Friends if we ever were, our love was vain,
Friends we can never, never be again!

II.

Friendship once spurned, can ne'er again be sweet;
Our hearts in unison can never meet;
A frown may blight love's flower to bloom no more,
Or ope its tiny bud upon life's shore.

III.

What bitter fruit doth broken friendship bear,
How oft it shrouds the soul in deep despair!
Then let us cherish love's bright, sunny flower,
That hath o'er life a touch-stone spell of power.

IV.

So like a looking glass this world appears,
Each look of ours a spirit wounds or cheers;
And every sunny glance returns a smile,
Some lonely heart from sorrow to beguile.

E. S. W.

West Winsted, Ct.

Coming of Christ.

To a few out of many passages I would ask attention. Study the parable of "the tares and wheat," (Matt. 13 : 24–30,) and the Savior's explanation of it, (37–43,) and ask how all this agrees with the idea of a millennium during the gospel dispensation. Mark, that the whole period between the Savior's ministry on earth and his advent in glory is included in this parable, but not a word is said about any millennium, or the general prevalence of holiness, till after the separation of the tares from the wheat; on the contrary, an evil state of things is spoken of as existing during the whole of the gospel dispensation, or to "the end of the age."

The parable of the sower and the seed—the net cast into the sea—the absent nobleman going to receive a kingdom,—with many others, prove the same point as the parable of the tares and wheat. The history of the gospel hitherto has agreed with these descriptions. Few have welcomed its free proclamations. Most have loved darkness rather than light. It is so still, and we are told will be so till the end; when the prince of this world shall be bound, and the kingdom be the Lord's. Reader, are you on the Lord's side now?

Turn to the prophecies of Christ, in Matt. 24 and Luke 21. We have there an outline of the principal events which are to happen, until the Lord comes in the clouds of heaven. But among all the things spoken of as sure to occur, there is no mention of a millennium. Instead of this, it is foretold that wars, heresies, wickedness, and sorrow, will abound until the Lord's return.

Rev. 11 : 15–19 describe the coming of "the kingdom of God and his Christ." We are there plainly told, that at the time when this universal kingdom will be established, the dead will be raised, the righteous of all ages rewarded, and the destroyers of the earth destroyed. All allow that these three events are frequently connected with the second coming of the Savior, and this passage connects them with the beginning of the universal kingdom,—thus proving that the advent is before the reign.

In 2 Thess. 2 : 8, the apostle teaches that there will be "a falling away" before the coming of Christ; that the apostasy, whatever it is, will continue until his coming, and that its leader, "the man of sin," will be destroyed by his bright appearance. He also connects this apostasy with evil principles working in his own time. If, then, error and sin work through the whole dispensation, and grow worse towards its end, there can be no millennium of truth and righteousness before the advent of the Son of God. The wine-press must be trodden, the great image ground to powder, and the body of the fourth beast burned. In short, in almost every place of Scripture, where the conversion of the nations is foretold, we have predictions of terrible judgments to fall on the earth.

If these things are so, if this terrible storm may soon come, is it wise to cry "peace, peace," and prophecy smooth things of a gradually dawning millennium, of which God's word knows nothing?

The state of things around us should awaken solemn thoughts, lead to fervent prayer, and induce renewed attention to the sure word of prophecy. This word is "a light shining in a dark place, to which we do well to take heed." The prophet Daniel was commended for studying the prophetic page, and for desiring to know more of God's designs; and a special blessing still belongs to those "who read, hear, and keep" the words of the last inspired prophet. Rev. 1 : 3.

Reader, I would solemnly ask you, have you obeyed these directions? Are you taking heed to the sure word of prophecy? Is it to you a cheering and comforting light, because it proclaims a coming Savior?

Do you think that the blessing pronounced upon the diligent and obedient student belongs to you? Especially, I would ask, have you searched for yourself the sacred page of truth, in order to ascertain what is revealed therein, concerning the second coming of the Savior? Or have you taken this important point upon trust, and received the opinions of others, without testing them by God's word? If you have done so, do you think you have acted wisely, or treated the words of the Redeemer of your soul as you ought to have done? Perhaps, if you were diligently to gather out from God's word all the testimonies concerning the second coming of Christ, you would be surprised at their number, at the important practical bearing of the doctrine, at the order it occupies in relation to other future events, and at your own neglect of such a subject. Suffer me, if you have acted thus, to address to you a few words of direction.

Do not regard prophecy as a separate study, or as something distinct from other parts of divine truth. How can this be if "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy," if his glory be its great theme? Just as the doctrine of salvation through the blood of Christ is found everywhere throughout the Bible, so is that of his second coming, and the terrors and glories connected therewith. We believe that scriptural views of the second coming of Christ are a key to the right understanding of a great part of the Bible, and that it brings into nearer communion and sympathy with God.

Do not think of prophecy as something very difficult and abstruse. Like everything else in God's word, it has its unfathomable depths and searchless heights; but the grand outline is clearly revealed, its leading and most important points are easy to be understood. Make Christ the centre of this, as of everything else, and a glory will radiate from him which will shed light on the whole. Seek the Holy Spirit to glorify Christ, and to "show you things to come," and you shall rejoice in hope of Christ's day, and long for his appearing.

Do not think that it is safe or right to neglect the study of prophecy. Christians who do this are great losers. They rob themselves of the pleasures of hope; exclude themselves from many of the green pastures and pleasant heights of God's word; are in danger of misunderstanding the Scriptures, and of teaching others to do so.

Blessed are those who, as regards their views of the coming of Christ, are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets." These holy men made "the coming of the Lord, and their gathering together unto him," their frequent theme; and surely it is not wise to substitute the spread of the gospel, and the death of believers, for these great events; yet this is done very generally, and men love to have it so.

Reader, the Lord Jesus declares, that in such an hour AS MEN THINK NOT, he will come again, (Luke 12 : 40.) He may come soon, yea, immediately: we dare not say that a long period of holiness will first transpire; for Scripture denies such a statement. We may not say positively, that certain events will be sure first to occur; for we may be mistaken. His coming will be as "a thief," "as a snare," sudden, unlooked for. The day of the Lord will burst upon the world, when men are saying, "peace and safety." "Let us take heed, then, lest our hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and the cares of this life, and so that day come upon us unawares."

Ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God, you who believe that the Lord Jesus is coming to reign, and that he may come soon, remember that it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful. Fear not to preach, and by every means to make known, the neglected and frequently despised truth of the pre-millennial coming of the Savior.

People of God, be it your grand concern to trust the cross of Jesus, to look for his coming, and to labor for his cause, seeking by every means, while opportunity lasts, to spread abroad the truth. So shall you be found of him in peace, and be forever with the Lord.—Tracts on the Prophecies.

For the Crisis.

Gem Jottings.

[Selected from diverse authors, by a Book-worm.]

JESUS' BLOOD SUFFICIENT.

"If all the sins which men have done,
In thought or will, in word or deed,
Since worlds were made or time began,
Were laid on one poor sinner's head,
The stream of Jesus' precious blood
Could wash away the dreadful load."

SATAN TAKEN ABACK.—Once upon a time the devil came to me and said,—"Martin Luther, you are a great sinner, and you will be damned!" "Stop, stop," said I. "one thing at a time: I am a great sinner, it is true, though you have no right to tell me of it. I confess it; what next?" "Therefore you will be damned!" "That," said I, "is not good reasoning. It is true I am a great sinner, but it is written, 'Jesus Christ came to save sinners;' therefore I shall be saved. Now go your way." So I cut the devil off with his own sword, and he went away mourning because he could not cast me down by calling me a sinner!—Martin Luther.

THE LAST DAY.

Great God, what do I see and hear?
The end of things created!
The Judge of man I see appear,
On clouds of glory seated:
Beneath his cross I view the day
When heaven and earth shall pass away,
And thus prepare to meet him.

—Martin Luther.

PROMISE BREAKING.—An honest old gentleman, in telling us his troubles, gave great prominence to the necessity he was frequently under of disappointing his customers, whose work could not be finished as soon as he had promised. After explaining the difficulty, he looked up with great earnestness, and exclaimed, "O dear, shall we ever be done with this lying?" We have often wondered ourselves whether such a consummation would ever take place. "Your boots will be done Saturday night without fail." Nevertheless, you have to go to church with gaping toes for want of them. "Your coat shall be sent home by nine o'clock Saturday night;" and you get it in fact on the Wednesday after. "Will you lend me your wheelbarrow? I will return it to-night." You wait for it a week, and then send for it. My wood was to be split on Saturday afternoon—enough for the Sabbath: so it was—but I had to do it myself. "O dear, shall we ever get done with this lying?"—Henry Ward Beecher.

For the Crisis.

What's in a Name?

"Not much," says one. "A great deal," says another. Very indefinite answers. Can we find nothing definite? Let's see. I think its value depends very much on two things.

1. Its appropriateness. Suppose a man should call me a "Methodist" or "Presbyterian," what should I care? No man could call me thus without making a serious mistake, and any Methodist or Presbyterian would tell him so, and would probably feel like chiding him for applying so respectable a name to one with so disreputable a faith as mine. Suppose I should be called an "Advent preacher," should I be ashamed to own it? Not I. Try me and see. I am an Advent preacher, and therefore it is perfectly proper to call me an Adventist.

2. The spirit in which it is given. A man, in the spirit of reproach, called me an "Atheist" the other day. It was not appropriate, and therefore not so valuable, but I took it for what it was worth, which was the reproach it bore. I call that worth something. Suppose he had called me an "Adventist" in the same spirit. That would have been appropriate, and would have borne a reproach for Christ's sake, and therefore I would have rejoiced in it. "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you . . . and reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake."—Luke 6 : 22.

Give me a name, if name I have at all, that has the reproach. Once 'twas a reproach for Christ's sake to be ranked as a "Puritan"—once to be a "Methodist." Then I would have rejoiced in these names for the reproach they bore. Now, people call me a "Millerite" sometimes. Although not wholly appropriate, I accept it gladly, and pass it over to the Lord to be laid up to account. Men may call me a Christian, and such I am. But the term is used at the present day to denote a sect in church polity. Christianity I love, but Christianism I have but little sympathy with. The "Christian Church" and Church of Christ at the present day are not synonymous. Adventism—meaning Advent doctrine—is gospel, and whoso rejects the name had better for consistency's sake refrain from preaching it. Adventism is Bibleism—therefore it gives the greatest liberty to its believers—therefore it is not, and cannot be in its true sense, sectarian. A still more literal definition of Adventism is, the doctrine pertaining to the second advent of Christ to the earth. Doctrine pertaining to any other subject cannot be called Adventism, and whoever calls it thus, perverts the name.

Now, brethren, I am an Adventist in the truest sense, and therefore I am not sectarian, and hope ever to continue thus.

FRANK BURR.

Honeoye, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Colloquial.

BRO. GRANT:—Enclosed I send you a part of a conversation I had a few days ago with a member of a Methodist church, professing to be a child of God. Please insert it in the "Crisis," to show its readers that the church of the present age is more in darkness and ignorance than is generally admitted. I only pick out a few questions and answers, and leave it to the reader to decide on whose side is the truth.

L. So you believe that when man dies, his soul goes directly to heaven, to be rewarded, or to hell, to be punished?

M. Yes, I do, because the Bible says so.

L. Where does the Bible say so?

M. In many places.

L. Can you show me one passage in the whole Bible, where it says, that man's soul is immortal and will never die?

M. The Bible is full of it.

L. Where was the soul of Christ when he was dead?

M. The Bible says, in Hell, which means his soul went down into the lowest regions of hades, and there he subdued the devil and his angels to himself.

L. Was there the Paradise where the thief on the cross was to meet the Lord on that day?

M. No; but anyhow, I believe no such doctrine as you say, that the soul of man is unconscious between death and resurrection.

L. Did God give an immortal soul to Adam after he had formed him out of the dust of the ground?

M. Certainly he did.

L. What did God put into his nostrils

M. The breath of life.

L. What did man become after this?

M. A living soul.

L. Does this look like receiving an immortal soul?

M. Yes, but man has got a spirit, which is a part of God, which can never die.

L. What kind of a spirit has the drunkard, who lies in the gutter and is worse than a beast?

M. He has a bad spirit.

L. But can a part of God sin and become worse than a beast? In taking this ground, don't you make God a sinner, which is a fearful assertion?

M. I can't see that.

L. Does not the word of God say plainly the soul that sinneth it shall die?

M. Yes, that means he shall be tormented eternally in hell.

L. Who tells you that this passage has such a meaning?

M. Christ himself says the wicked shall be tormented forever and ever.

L. Can you quote such a passage?

M. O, there are a great many of them.

L. Does not the Bible say in many places that the wicked shall be destroyed, cut off, burnt up, put an end to, be as though they never had been, not left of them neither root nor branch, put out of existence, etc.?

M. Yes, but not their spirit, because that goes to God who gave it.

L. Does both the spirit of the righteous and of the wicked go to God?

M. Yes, the first to be rewarded and the other to be punished.

L. Does the Bible in one single passage speak of any kind of reward or punishment before the resurrection or the second coming of Christ?

M. Yes, but I believe that there is some kind of reward or punishment before the reunion of soul and body, because the soul must be somewhere.

L. Was the soul of Adam any thing more or less than the breath of life which God had breathed into his nostrils after

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 265. | BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1860. | VOL. XII. NO. 6.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

My Home.

My home is on the other shore,
  Beyond the billow's foam,
And yon green fields, to some so fair,
  But part me from my home.

And oh! each pain-throb of the heart
  Shall there forever cease,
And all the tumults raging here
  Be hushed to "perfect peace."

Thank God! there's light to guide me home,
  Where darkness reigned of yore,
A watch-fire on the narrow way,
  A light-house on the shore!

The willow 'neath its burden bends,
  It's borne my harp too long;
I'll strike again those trembling chords,
  And raise a triumph song!

For now the pilgrim's almost home,
  The pearly gates I see,
And glory to His name, I know
  They'll open unto me! — V. P.

Pine Avenue.

For the Crisis.

"Be not conformed to this World."

Being greatly blest of God, and knowing that it is the duty and privilege of the christian to grow in grace, I wish to say a few words to those who are seeking eternal life. Dear brethren and sisters, I have found "great peace" in Christ, and I am anxious every dear saint of God should enjoy this same blessing. Allow me to tell you, that as long as you let the natural man rule and reign, you never can be free in Christ. "Let not sin, therefore, reign in your mortal body," saith the apostle. "To be carnally minded is death." "Come out from among them, and be ye separate," is the divine command, which should be obeyed in its most absolute sense. If you do not follow the Savior's directions, you cannot be saved. Now, brother and sister, do you come out from the world when you go to the worldly gatherings and join in their revelry? In some places, brethren belong to agricultural societies. They put in their dollar with the gambler and the drunkard. The brother may not trot his horse for money, but he will draw his oxen hard, or plough for money, which is just as bad. When he pays his dollar, he does it so that he can have a chance to draw his five or ten dollar premium. I ask, dear brother, is this coming out from the world and being separate? I think not. Now wont you tell me which is the gambler, the man who draws his oxen for money, or the man who trots his horse for money? Come, let us be honest. Is not one a gambler just as much as the other?

We are told by the apostle not to do any thing "through strife or vain glory," but this is not heeded; for what a strife there is going on all the year to excel in horses, cattle, butter and cheese, fruit, and every thing indoors and out. Oh, how these yearly gatherings unfit the christian for the service of Christ! The world love such christians. Go to meeting the next Lord's day, and if they are there, they will be silent on the subject of religion, and all filled up with the spirit of the world; and before they can get into the element of religion again, they will have to repent and pray as David did, "O God, . . . restore unto me the joy of thy salvation." Dear brother and sister, Jesus denied himself of every thing to obtain salvation for you. Wont you do as much for yourself as another will do for you?

There are many that profess religion, who have never lived self-denying lives. They have a will in this matter. They sometimes obey the Lord and conscience, and the teachings of the Spirit, and sometimes they obey beloved self; consequently they make no progress in divine life. Now, brother or sister, wont you have this for your motto?—no compromise with sin. How destructive are these worldly gatherings to young christians. It is like running their ship aground. Christ says, except we deny ourselves daily, we "cannot" be his disciples. Let us give up the world and be good soldiers of Jesus Christ. He wants soldiers that wont desert and run after the enemy's temptations. How you would feel to have your friends desert you as you do Jesus. When he forgave you your sins, you promised to be wholly his without reserve. Have you kept your promise? Come, make up your mind to be a whole hearted christian, and get ready to meet the Lord when he comes. Do in religion as you have done in the pursuit of worldly things,—be in earnest about it. If our religion does not distinguish us from the world now, it will not when Jesus comes.

AUGUSTUS L. CHAMBERLIN.

Worcester, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Hinesburgh, Vt.

On Wednesday evening, the 26th ult., I closed a series of well attended, interesting meetings in the Town Hall of the above named village; and as the place is "new ground" for the views of Bible truth which distinguish us as a people, it ought perhaps to be introduced to the readers of the Crisis. Hinesburgh village—located near the centre of the town of the same name—is in Chittenden county, and is twelve miles from Burlington, in a south-easterly direction. Charlotte Depot is the nearest R. R. station on the Rutland and Burlington road. The village of H. is about the size of Castleton, I should judge, and contains three churches—Baptist, Methodist and Congregational. My first knowledge of the place dates back to March 27th, 1859, when two now greatly beloved sisters in Christ, Mrs. Irane R. Castle and Mrs. Susan A. Durfee, of Hinesburgh, accompanied by their brother-in-law, Mark H. Irish, whose family they were then visiting in Troy, came to this city to hear Bro. George Storrs preach, and spent the interval between two meetings at our house. At that time Mr. Irish was a sincere inquirer after truth, and a few months afterwards, under circumstances of sorrow which are referred to in the obituary column, he learned by a happy experience what it was to have "Christ in" him "the hope of glory." After we had partaken of the Lord's Supper at our afternoon meeting, Bro. Storrs invited any to speak who might feel it a privilege to do so. Sr. Castle, then an entire stranger to us all, was one of the number who improved the opportunity, and in doing so she gave a deeply interesting account of her exclusion, but a little while before, from the Baptist church for holding the doctrines of the unconsciousness of the dead and no immortality out of Christ. We all felt, while listening to her heart-stirring and heart-cheering recital, that she would not fail to let the light of truth shine; but nothing could then have seemed more unlikely to any of us, than that the writer of this notice should be the first man to defend, before a Hinesburgh audience, the truths for believing which she had been made to feel the bitterness of a bigoted persecution. But thus the Lord has ordered it, and the prayers of these faithful sisters, and others of like precious faith, that their neighbors and friends might be permitted to hear the testimony of God's word concerning man's mortality the resurrection of the dead, Christ as the Life-Giver and the "blessed hope" of his coming again, have been answered. Their prayer now is that the seed sown may be watered by the blessing of God, and that perishing men and women, viewing the character of the Most High in the light of revealed truth, may be led to accept the gracious offer of eternal life as the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

My first visit to H. was to attend the funeral of Bro. Irish's wife; this was held in the Baptist meeting-house on Saturday, Aug. 18th. I say more elsewhere of this occasion, and of the effort to exhibit the true ground of comfort concerning "the dead in Christ." By invitation of the pastor, I preached in the same house on the morning and afternoon of the next day to good congregations. My last discourse was on the nature and destiny of man, and in it I endeavored to array against the doctrines of the immortality of the soul and the eternal torment of the wicked the clear and harmonious utterances of the word of God. The occasion was one of deep interest to me, for I felt that in some honest minds confidence in the popular theory was yielding to the power of truth. When I had done speaking, the pastor of the church made a few pertinent remarks, and announced his purpose to preach on the same subject the following Lord's day. I regretted, of course, that it would not be my privilege to hear his discussion of the question, while I was very glad that it was to receive his attention in the manner promised. The truth has nothing to fear from investigation, and I am fully persuaded that the sermons (some half a dozen in number) that have recently been preached in defence of inherent immortality and endless woe, to the three congregations of H., have in no wise hindered the spread of the doctrines of conditional immortality and unconsciousness in death.

During the progress of our recent meetings, which began on Tuesday evening, Sept. 13th, and continued two weeks, it gave me pleasure to examine many of the texts that had been adduced in support of the common view—showing their harmony with my views and the hostility of many of them to the theories in behalf of which they had been cited. I preached sixteen times, besides holding two prayer meetings—one of the latter at the house of a Baptist brother and sister who love the truth. There is reason for the belief that lasting good has resulted from this effort—made in weakness, it is true, but with a desire to honor God and bless the people. The claims of practical godliness were by no means lost sight of, and it is hoped that formal professors and other worldlings, including some whose only hope has been in the truth of Universalism, have been led to feel, as well as see, that something must be done if we would "inherit eternal life." "If ye DO these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." So says Peter; and Paul, having enumerated "the works of the flesh," declares—"they which DO such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Our congregations were, throughout, encouragingly large—unexpectedly so, considering the amount of prejudice existing in the community, and the influence used to prevent church members from attending; every seat was filled at our last meeting. The attention given to the word spoken was uniformly good. After meeting last Wednesday evening, one prominent citizen, who had been an interested listener from the first, came to Sr. Castle and said he had determined to travel with us to the kingdom of God. May he faithfully execute this noble resolve, and may his example exert a saving influence upon many around him who know not God and have no hope in Christ.

Prayer meeting was appointed for Saturday evening at Bro. Castle's house. Dr. HUGH TAGERT, of Shelburn, and his excellent wife, attended a number of the meetings. For years the Dr. has stood up boldly everywhere in defence of the doctrine of life through Christ, and he has accomplished much in calling attention to the subject. Bro. and Sr. T. love the truth; they have suffered for it, but they rejoice in being counted worthy of this honor. Bro. E. H. Glass, of St. George, and his companion, came to H. to attend the meetings, and remained to the close. They long ago embraced the truth of no immortality out of Christ, and are willing to suffer reproach for the Master's sake. At the close of one of the evening meetings, I had a pleasant interview with Eld. C. S. Shattuck, a Christian minister, from Starksborough, and I judged that he was quite friendly to the main features of our faith. One gentleman who attended nearly all the meetings, and who is a believer in modern Spiritualism, admitted that I had clearly shown the unconsciousness of the dead to be a Bible doctrine, but with him the Bible was a fallible book! I thanked him for the concession he had made, and hope he may yet be led to abandon his Spiritualism and his skepticism together.

I might devote a paragraph or two to the opposition that was brought to bear against the truth before the meetings, and during their progress; but as an impartial statement of facts bearing upon that feature of this, my first campaign, would fail to exhibit some of our opponents in a very amiable light, I prefer to let it pass,—endeavoring to remember, everywhere, that "the servant of the Lord must not strive." During my stay at H. I was most hospitably entertained at the house of Mr. John Ray, and before my departure the friends looked after my temporal wants in a bountiful manner.

Thirteen copies of "The Christian Lyre" were disposed of at H., and the book is much liked on all hands. I was informed that the Baptist minister had sent or would send for a lot of them to circulate among his own congregation.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Albany, Oct. 1st, 1860.

Friendship.

The sage observed, True friendship, with good counsel, demands both our pure esteem and implicit confidence. * * As the roots firmly fixed in the heart exhibit their branches on the tongue, so will perfect love only emanate from a true heart. * * The sage was asked to define love; and replied, The tendency of hearts, and their mutual inclination. * * He used to say, The space of a needle's eye suffices for two friends, whilst the universe itself can scarcely contain two enemies. * * To distinguish thy friend from thine enemy, examine thine own heart. * * Rely not on him who burthens thee with his sorrows, but withholds from thee his joys. * * The sage was asked, whom he loved most, Either him, he said, who has experienced the greatest kindness from me, or I from him. * * We may recognize the friend when our heart is cognizant of his affections, and our tongue utters his praise. * * Flatter not thy friend, nor inquire too anxiously after him, lest thou tempt his enemy to gainsay thee, and seek to sever thee from him. * * Be liberal to thy friends with thy heart and thy means, to thy acquaintances with thine influence and kind words; bestow on mankind thy countenance and friendly salutation, on thine enemies, thy charity: be mindful of the law of God, but of thy reputation above all. * * Beware of those who measure their love by their interest, for the one expires when the other is attained. * * Depend not on the favor of the prince, if the minister frown on thee, but with the favor of the latter thou needest not despair of the former. * * I never failed to repay the love of my friends with pure and undivided affections, nor to pray to God to restore mine enemies to the path of rectitude; neither betrayed the secret intrusted to me, nor desired a thing unworthy of me; nor did I assent and retract, even at the risk of my worldly treasures. * * Patience is always commendable, save when our frend is calumniated.—Choice of Pearls.

For the Crisis.

To a False Friend.

I.

Our hands and hearts have met, but met in vain,
O, they will never, never meet again!
Friends if we ever were, our love was vain,
Friends we can never, never be again!

II.

Friendship once spurned, can ne'er again be sweet;
Our hearts in unison can never meet;
A frown may blight love's flower to bloom no more,
Or ope its tiny bud upon life's shore.

III.

What bitter fruit doth broken friendship bear,
How oft it shrouds the soul in deep despair!
Then let us cherish love's bright, sunny flower,
That hath o'er life a touch-stone spell of power.

IV.

So like a looking glass this world appears,
Each look of ours a spirit wounds or cheers;
And every sunny glance returns a smile,
Some lonely heart from sorrow to beguile.

E. S. W.

West Winsted, Ct.

Coming of Christ.

To a few out of many passages I would ask attention. Study the parable of "the tares and wheat," (Matt. 13:24–30,) and the Savior's explanation of it, (37–43,) and ask how all this agrees with the idea of a millennium during the gospel dispensation. Mark, that the whole period between the Savior's ministry on earth and his advent in glory is included in this parable, but not a word is said about any millennium, or the general prevalence of holiness, till after the separation of the tares from the wheat; on the contrary, an evil state of things is spoken of as existing during the whole of the gospel dispensation, or to "the end of the age."

The parable of the sower and the seed—the net cast into the sea—the absent nobleman going to receive a kingdom,—with many others, prove the same point as the parable of the tares and wheat. The history of the gospel hitherto has agreed with these descriptions. Few have welcomed its free proclamations. Most have loved darkness rather than light. It is so still, and we are told will be so till the end; when the prince of this world shall be bound, and the kingdom be the Lord's. Reader, are you on the Lord's side now?

Turn to the prophecies of Christ, in Matt. 24 and Luke 21. We have there an outline of the principal events which are to happen, until the Lord comes in the clouds of heaven. But among all the things spoken of as sure to occur, there is no mention of a millennium. Instead of this, it is foretold that wars, heresies, wickedness, and sorrow, will abound until the Lord's return.

Rev. 11:15–19 describe the coming of "the kingdom of God and his Christ." We are there plainly told, that at the time when this universal kingdom will be established, the dead will be raised, the righteous of all ages rewarded, and the destroyers of the earth destroyed. All allow that these three events are frequently connected with the second coming of the Savior, and this passage connects them with the beginning of the universal kingdom,—thus proving that the advent is before the reign.

In 2 Thess. 2:8, the apostle teaches that there will be "a falling away" before the coming of Christ; that the apostasy, whatever it is, will continue until his coming, and that its leader, "the man of sin," will be destroyed by his bright appearance. He also connects this apostasy with evil principles working in his own time. If, then, error and sin work through the whole dispensation, and grow worse towards its end, there can be no millennium of truth and righteousness before the advent of the Son of God. The wine-press must be trodden, the great image ground to powder, and the body of the fourth beast burned. In short, in almost every place of Scripture, where the conversion of the nations is foretold, we have predictions of terrible judgments to fall on the earth.

If these things are so, if this terrible storm may soon come, is it wise to cry "peace, peace," and prophecy smooth things of a gradually dawning millennium, of which God's word knows nothing?

The state of things around us should awaken solemn thoughts, lead to fervent prayer, and induce renewed attention to the sure word of prophecy. This word is "a light shining in a dark place, to which we do well to take heed." The prophet Daniel was commended for studying the prophetic page, and for desiring to know more of God's designs; and a special blessing still belongs to those "who read, hear, and keep" the words of the last inspired prophet. Rev. 1:3.

Reader, I would solemnly ask you, have you obeyed these directions? Are you taking heed to the sure word of prophecy? Is it to you a cheering and comforting light, because it proclaims a coming Savior?

Do you think that the blessing pronounced upon the diligent and obedient student belongs to you? Especially, I would ask, have you searched for yourself the sacred page of truth, in order to ascertain what is revealed therein, concerning the second coming of the Savior? Or have you taken this important point upon trust, and received the opinions of others, without testing them by God's word? If you have done so, do you think you have acted wisely, or treated the words of the Redeemer of your soul as you ought to have done? Perhaps, if you were diligently to gather out from God's word all the testimonies concerning the second coming of Christ, you would be surprised at their number, at the important practical bearing of the doctrine, at the order it occupies in relation to other future events, and at your own neglect of such a subject. Suffer me, if you have acted thus, to address to you a few words of direction.

Do not regard prophecy as a separate study, or as something distinct from other parts of divine truth. How can this be if "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy," if his glory be its great theme? Just as the doctrine of salvation through the blood of Christ is found everywhere throughout the Bible, so is that of his second coming, and the terrors and glories connected therewith. We believe that scriptural views of the second coming of Christ are a key to the right understanding of a great part of the Bible, and that it brings into nearer communion and sympathy with God.

Do not think of prophecy as something very difficult and abstruse. Like everything else in God's word, it has its unfathomable depths and searchless heights; but the grand outline is clearly revealed, its leading and most important points are easy to be understood. Make Christ the centre of this, as of everything else, and a glory will radiate from him which will shed light on the whole. Seek the Holy Spirit to glorify Christ, and to "show you things to come," and you shall rejoice in hope of Christ's day, and long for his appearing.

Do not think that it is safe or right to neglect the study of prophecy. Christians who do this are great losers. They rob themselves of the pleasures of hope; exclude themselves from many of the green pastures and pleasant heights of God's word; are in danger of misunderstanding the Scriptures, and of teaching others to do so.

Blessed are those who, as regards their views of the coming of Christ, are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets." These holy men made "the coming of the Lord, and their gathering together unto him," their frequent theme; and surely it is not wise to substitute the spread of the gospel, and the death of believers, for these great events; yet this is done very generally, and men love to have it so.

Reader, the Lord Jesus declares, that in such an hour as MEN THINK NOT, he will come again, (Luke 12:40.) He may come soon, yea, immediately: we dare not say that a long period of holiness will first transpire; for Scripture denies such a statement. We may not say positively, that certain events will be sure first to occur; for we may be mistaken. His coming will be as "a thief," "as a snare," sudden, unlooked for. The day of the Lord will burst upon the world, when men are saying, "peace and safety." "Let us take heed, then, lest our hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and the cares of this life, and so that day come upon us unawares."

Ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God, you who believe that the Lord Jesus is coming to reign, and that he may come soon, remember that it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful. Fear not to preach, and by every means to make known, the neglected and frequently despised truth of the pre-millennial coming of the Savior.

People of God, be it your grand concern to trust the cross of Jesus, to look for his coming, and to labor for his cause, seeking by every means, while opportunity lasts, to spread abroad the truth. So shall you be found of him in peace, and be forever with the Lord.—Tracts on the Prophecies.

For the Crisis.

Gem Jottings.

[Selected from diverse authors, by a Book-worm.]

JESUS' BLOOD SUFFICIENT.

"If all the sins which men have done,
  In thought or will, in word or deed,
Since worlds were made or time began,
  Were laid on one poor sinner's head,
The stream of Jesus' precious blood
  Could wash away the dreadful load."

SATAN TAKEN ABACK.—Once upon a time the devil came to me and said,—"Martin Luther, you are a great sinner, and you will be damned!" "Stop, stop," said I, "one thing at a time: I am a great sinner, it is true, though you have no right to tell me of it. I confess it; what next?" "Therefore you will be damned!" "That," said I, "is not good reasoning. It is true I am a great sinner, but it is written, 'Jesus Christ came to save sinners;' therefore I shall be saved. Now go your way." So I cut the devil off with his own sword, and he went away mourning because he could not cast me down by calling me a sinner! —Martin Luther.

THE LAST DAY.

Great God, what do I see and hear?
  The end of things created!
The Judge of man I see appear,
  On clouds of glory seated:
Beneath his cross I view the day
  When heaven and earth shall pass away,
    And thus prepare to meet him.

—Martin Luther.

PROMISE BREAKING.—An honest old gentleman, in telling us his troubles, gave great prominence to the necessity he was frequently under of disappointing his customers, whose work could not be finished as soon as he had promised. After explaining the difficulty, he looked up with great earnestness, and exclaimed, "O dear, shall we ever be done with this lying?" We have often wondered ourselves whether such a consummation would ever take place. "Your boots will be done Saturday night without fail." Nevertheless, you have to go to church with gaping toes for want of them. "Your coat shall be sent home by nine o'clock Saturday night;" and you get it in fact on the Wednesday after. "Will you lend me your wheelbarrow? I will return it to-night." You wait for it a week, and then send for it. My wood was to be split on Saturday afternoon—enough for the Sabbath: so it was—but I had to do it myself. "O dear, shall we ever get done with this lying?"—Henry Ward Beecher.

For the Crisis.

What's in a Name?

"Not much," says one. "A great deal," says another. Very indefinite answers. Can we find nothing definite? Let's see. I think its value depends very much on two things.

1. Its appropriateness. Suppose a man should call me a "Methodist" or "Presbyterian,' what should I care? No man could call me thus without making a serious mistake, and any Methodist or Presbyterian would tell him so, and would probably feel like chiding him for applying so respectable a name to one with so disreputable a faith as mine. Suppose I should be called an "Advent preacher," should I be ashamed to own it? Not I. Try me and see. I am an Advent preacher, and therefore it is perfectly proper to call me an Adventist.

2. The spirit in which it is given. A man, in the spirit of reproach, called me an "Atheist" the other day. It was not appropriate, and therefore not so valuable, but I took it for what it was worth, which was the reproach it bore. I call that worth something. Suppose he had called me an "Adventist" in the same spirit. That would have been appropriate, and would have borne a reproach for Christ's sake, and therefore I would have rejoiced in it. "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you . . . and reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake."—Luke 6:22.

Give me a name, if name I have at all, that has the reproach. Once 'twas a reproach for Christ's sake to be ranked as a "Puritan"—once to be a "Methodist." Then I would have rejoiced in these names for the reproach they bore. Now, people call me a "Millerite" sometimes. Although not wholly appropriate, I accept it gladly, and pass it over to the Lord to be laid up to account. Men may call me a Christian, and such I am. But the term is used at the present day to denote a sect in church polity. Christianity I love, but Christianism I have but little sympathy with. The "Christian Church" and Church of Christ at the present day are not synonymous. Adventism—meaning Advent doctrine—is gospel, and whoso rejects the name had better for consistency's sake refrain from preaching it. Adventism is Bibleism—therefore it gives the greatest liberty to its believers—therefore it is not, and cannot be in its true sense, sectarian. A still more literal definition of Adventism is, the doctrine pertaining to the second advent of Christ to the earth. Doctrine pertaining to any other subject cannot be called Adventism, and whoever calls it thus, perverts the name.

Now, brethren, I am an Adventist in the truest sense, and therefore I am not sectarian, and hope ever to continue thus.

FRANK BURR.

Honeoye, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Colloquial.

BRO. GRANT:—Enclosed I send you a part of a conversation I had a few days ago with a member of a Methodist church, professing to be a child of God. Please insert it in the "Crisis," to show its readers that the church of the present age is more in darkness and ignorance than is generally admitted. I only pick out a few questions and answers, and leave it to the reader to decide on whose side is the truth.

L. So you believe that when man dies, his soul goes directly to heaven, to be rewarded, or to hell, to be punished?

M. Yes, I do, because the Bible says so.

L. Where does the Bible say so?

M. In many places.

L. Can you show me one passage in the whole Bible, where it says, that man's soul is immortal and will never die?

M. The Bible is full of it.

L. Where was the soul of Christ when he was dead?

M. The Bible says, in Hell, which means his soul went down into the lowest regions of hades, and there he subdued the devil and his angels to himself.

L. Was there the Paradise where the thief on the cross was to meet the Lord on that day?

M. No; but anyhow, I believe no such doctrine as you say, that the soul of man is unconscious between death and resurrection.

L. Did God give an immortal soul to Adam after he had formed him out of the dust of the ground?

M. Certainly he did.

L. What did God put into his nostrils.

M. The breath of life.

L. What did man become after this?

M. A living soul.

L. Does this look like receiving an immortal soul?

M. Yes, but man has got a spirit, which is a part of God, which can never die.

L. What kind of a spirit has the drunkard, who lies in the gutter and is worse than a beast?

M. He has a bad spirit.

L. But can a part of God sin and become worse than a beast? In taking this ground, don't you make God a sinner, which is a fearful assertion?

M. I can't see that.

L. Does not the word of God say plainly the soul that sinneth it shall die?

M. Yes, that means he shall be tormented eternally in hell.

L. Who tells you that this passage has such a meaning?

M. Christ himself says the wicked shall be tormented forever and ever.

L. Can you quote such a passage?

M. O, there are a great many of them.

L. Does not the Bible say in many places that the wicked shall be destroyed, cut off, burnt up, put an end to, be as though they never had been, not left of them neither root nor branch, put out of existence, etc.?

M. Yes, but not their spirit, because that goes to God who gave it.

L. Does both the spirit of the righteous and of the wicked go to God?

M. Yes, the first to be rewarded and the other to be punished.

L. Does the Bible in one single passage speak of any kind of reward or punishment before the resurrection or the [illegible] ing of Christ?

M. Yes, but I believe that [illegible] kind of reward or punishment [illegible] reunion of soul and body [illegible] must be somewhere.

L. Was the soul of Adam [illegible] God had breathed into his [illegible] which man became a living soul, and which goes back to God who gave it, when man dies?

M. Yes, but man has an immortal spirit too.

L. Do you believe that those millions and millions of wicked children, at the age of seven, eight, nine, ten and eleven, etc., after they die are tormented forever and ever in hell?

M. I believe that all children under twelve years go to heaven because they are not accountable for their sins.

L. Are those millions and millions of wicked heathen any more accountable for their sins because they never heard a sound of the gospel?

M. They are judged by their conscience. [Boys of twelve years, then, have no conscience.]

L. Does not David say the dead do not praise the Lord, but the living? etc.

M. Yes, but that means the body of the dead.

L. But which part, after your doctrine, does the praising, the body or the soul?

M. The soul, or spirit, of course.

L. So if David says that the dead do not praise the Lord, he meant not the bodies, which can never do anything like praising, or thinking, etc., but the souls; but if these cannot praise the Lord, but only the living, it follows that they are dead, and know not any thing.—Ps. 6: 6.

M. I believe David was in error here.

L. David, inspired by the Holy Ghost when he wrote these beautiful Psalms, committed an error, when he says in positive language the dead do not praise the Lord—they know not any thing? By taking this fearful position, must we not charge all the other holy writers, in the Old as well as in the New Testament, with the same error, who all agree on this point, that there is no knowledge, no praising, no device, and therefore no consciousness in sheol, or hell, or hades, or grave, whither man goes at death?

M. Well, that may all be, but they are not infallible. Did not David commit sin? Did not Peter deny his Master, and so all the rest? Could they not err in this respect?

L. Yes, they all sinned, but they confessed their sins and wept over them bitterly. But whenever they wrote, do you not believe they were inspired by the Holy Ghost, and do you suppose that the Holy Spirit would dictate to all of them the same error, which he knew would lead thousands of professors of christianity into darkness and infidelity, as the most of your churches say that we are in, who believe the plain teachings of the word of God rather than the traditions of men? In taking this ground, can we not with just as much right doubt any of the teachings of the holy men in both the Old and New Testament? How does a professor of christianity become an infidel? Is it not by doubting the infallibility of the holy writers, or, what is the same thing, by doubting the infallibility of the Holy Spirit, which inspired those holy men when they wrote the Bible?

M. Well, I believe I go to heaven right after I die, and no man can make me believe differently.

This may be sufficient. This person is an educated school teacher, an eminent member of the church, who charge us with infidelity because we do not believe as they do,—that man has an immortal soul, which, when wicked, will be tormented forever and ever in hell. So far has the Orthodox christian to come down. Because they cannot sustain their doctrine of the immortality of the soul, rather than to confess that they themselves are in error, they make those holy writers of the Scriptures commit errors. Though they may tell the truth in every other respect, concerning the state of the dead they are in error.

The very next day, the secretary of a large church here charged me with infidelity because I believed God would destroy the wicked, and even condemned me to hell because of such unbelief.

L. Does the word of God condemn a man to hell because he believes what Christ says, that the wicked shall be destroyed?

P. Yes, it does, because you are an infidel and all infidels go to hell.

My dear, beloved readers, do you find any brotherly love in such language? Where is the truth as it is in Jesus? where the spirit of Christ, who did not come to condemn, but to save? Did he ever condemn a man to hell who believed in him with his whole heart, who came to him that he might pardon his sins and give to him eternal life? Can or will a true follower of Christ condemn me to hell because I say with one of his disciples—"Lord, whither (should I go?) for thou hast the words of eternal life."

Yours in Christ, L. B.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Books.—A good book is a lasting companion. Truths, which it has taken years to glean, are therein at once freely but carefully communicated. No one can be solitary who possesses a book; he owns a friend that will instruct him in moments of leisure or of necessity. It is only necessary to turn open the leaves, and the fountain at once gives forth its streams.

☞ A young saint is like the morning star; he is like a pearl in a gold ring. Among all the disciples, John was the youngest, and the best beloved.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 17, 1860.

Scenes by the Way.

Danville, C. E., Oct. 7th. Our meetings in this place have continued to increase in interest from the first to the closing one this evening. To-day has been one of special good to us. At 9 1-2 o'clock, we met for a love feast, during which we had fifty testimonies; several of whom were young converts, and backsliders aroused from their slumbering. Others requested prayers. It was a scene of comfort to the lovers of Jesus, and of awakening to the careless. Some came twelve miles to be present. At the hour of preaching, the house was crowded with attentive listeners, and in the afternoon and evening it was packed; while many listened at the open door, and others were obliged to go away for want even of standing room. It is pleasant to preach to people so anxious to hear. At the close of the afternoon exercises, we repaired to the water and baptized six young converts, who have decided during the meetings to be christians. The Lord blessed them with sweet peace and rich joy. They found Jesus a dear friend, and are resolved to be his followers. Others are almost persuaded to imitate their example.

At the close of the evening discourse, about sixty gathered around the table of the Lord to commemorate his last supper with his disciples. It was a heavenly season, and will be remembered with delight by all who participated in this christian ordinance. We felt determined, in the strength of the Lord, to meet at the marriage supper of the Lord, where all our tears will be wiped away. At the close of the communion, some mourning sinners requested prayers, thus expressing a resolution to become the followers of Christ. Many are under conviction, almost persuaded to be christians. After meeting, we repaired to Bro. Porter's, and administered the sacrament to his sick son, who is but just alive. It was the first time he had ever taken the communion bread and wine, and probably the last before the marriage supper of the Lamb, as there is no hope that he can live but a few days. Thus closed our interesting series of meetings in Danville. It was evident if they were continued longer, much more good might be accomplished; but other appointments called us away.

Monday, Oct. 8th. At 7 1-2 o'clock, A. M., in company with Bro. Porter, we went twelve miles through mud to Melbourne, where we had an appointment to discuss the following question:—"Is the seventh-day Sabbath binding upon the christian church?" Bro. Evans, a Sabbath preacher, took the affirmative. We commenced about ten o'clock and continued two hours, each speaking twenty minutes at a time. In the P. M. we began again at 1 1-2 o'clock, and continued three hours and closed. The Sabbath people closed their general conference in this place yesterday, and many of them remained to attend the discussion. Brn. Pierce and Hutchins, Sabbath preachers, were present.

The following are some of the assertions made by the affirmative which we think were not sustained. 1. "The seventh-day Sabbath was enjoined upon man at creation." 2. "The prophets speak of the Sabbath as an institution for the christian church." 3. "Gentile christians are called Israel." 4. "There is more testimony in the New Testament in favor of the Sabbath commandment than of any other of the ten." 5. "The other nine commandments are not brought into the N. T." 6. "The ten commandments were the conditions of the promise made to Abraham." The reader will recollect that the ten commandments were given on Mt. Sinai to Moses, four hundred and thirty years after the promise made to Abraham;—how, then, could they constitute the conditions of the promise?

The following are points admitted by Bro. Evans: 1. "There was no positive Sabbath commandment before the time of Moses." 2. "God did not give the Sabbath commandment to Israel till after they came out of Egypt." 3. The penalty of the Sabbath commandment is abolished, or is not to be executed by man." Hence we argued, as the enactment of the law precedes the penalty; so its abolition must precede the abolition of the penalty;—consequently, that law is dead whose penalty is abolished. 4. "There is no Sabbath commandment in the New Testament." 5. The old covenant is done away, and we are under the new."

All those five points were found most firmly fortified by the Scriptures. As there is no seventh-day Sabbath commandment in the New Covenant, it follows as a sequence, that the institution in the old covenant is not binding upon those under the new. When a new covenant or constitution is formed, nothing is binding in the old one, only what is incorporated into the new, and as the fourth commandment is not in the new, it follows that both the law and its death penalty are abolished.

Paul says, "For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second."—Heb. 8: 7. The fault of the "first covenant" is found by looking over the "second" and noticing the difference between the two. If the whole of "that first covenant" is in the "second," it would then be apparent that there was no fault in the first; but this is not the case. We introduced the following Scriptures to show that the ten commandments were the first covenant to which Paul refers: "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day."—Deut. 5: 2–3. Here it is positively stated by Moses, that the Lord did not make the Horeb covenant with the fathers, but that it began with those who were then alive. Then it is forever settled that, whatever covenant this may be that was made at Horeb, it was not made at creation or during any part of the more than twenty-five hundred years preceding the time the Lord spake with Moses. If we read on from the 4th to the 22nd verse of Deut. 5, we find the ten commandments were the covenant referred to by Moses, that was not made "with the fathers." This is perfectly plain. Then it follows that the ten commandments were not "the conditions of the promise made to Abraham," four hundred and thirty years before the covenant made at Horeb. Says Moses, "He declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."—Deut. 4: 13. The point is settled as plainly as language can make it, that the ten commandments constituted "that first covenant" which Paul says was not "faultless," and which was afterwards remodeled into the new covenant, omitting the seventh-day Sabbath.

On examination, we find the Sabbath was never enjoined upon the Gentiles, unless they were living in Jewish families; and that Sabbath breaking is not mentioned as one of their sins, either in the Old or New Testament; hence it follows that the Sabbath was for Israel, and not for Gentiles. The Lord gives Israel the reason for inserting the Sabbath into the first covenant, where he says, "Remember that thou was a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm; therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."—Deut. 5: 15. As Gentiles were not thus brought out of Egypt, that reason does not exist for them to keep the Sabbath. When the Lord chose the memorial day by which Israel was to commemorate their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, he selected the one on which he rested at the close of creation week; but the reason for instituting the Sabbath for Israel was not because he rested himself, but because of their great deliverance just accomplished. And as none but Israel participated in this deliverance, no other nation was required to observe the seventh-day Sabbath; hence when the new covenant was made, including Gentiles, the fourth commandment is omitted. We have no record that the apostles ever commanded the christian church to observe the Sabbath enjoined upon Israel, or that they ever rebuked the Gentiles for not keeping it.

Eusebius * says:—"They [the christians] did not therefore regard circumcision, nor observe the Sabbath, neither do we; such things as these do not belong to christians." —Eusebius, pp. 26, 27. Says Barnabus,† "For which cause we observe the eighth day with gladness, in which Jesus rose from the dead."—Barnabus 13: 10. Mosheim says in his standard church history' "The christians of this [first] century assembled for the worship of God on the first day of the week; the day on which Christ reassumed his life."—Mos. Vol. I, p. 58. If a Jew should keep the first day of the week, he would acknowledge the resurrection of Christ, as it is kept by christians in commemoration of that event. He who keeps the seventh day, virtually unites with the Jews in denying the resurrection of Christ.

If the following are compared with the ten commandments in the Old covenant, in Ex. 20: 3–17, it will be seen that nine of the ten, omitting the fourth, are re-enacted in the New. The fourth is a special institution for Israel; the other nine contain moral precepts binding upon all classes. The following are the nine:—

1. "Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment."—Matt. 22: 36–38.
2. "Neither be ye idolaters."—1 Cor. 10: 7.
3. "I say unto you, swear not at all."—Matt. 5: 34.
4. Wanting.
5. "Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise; that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth."—Eph. 6: 2–3.
6. "Thou shalt not kill."—Rom. 13: 9.
7. "Thou shalt not commit adultery."—Rom. 13: 9.
8. "Thou shalt not steal."—Rom. 13: 9.
9. "Thou shalt not bear false witness."—Rom. 13: 9.
10. "Thou shalt not covet."—Rom. 13: 9.

Jesus adds "a new commandment," which supplies the place of the fourth, "which is abolished."

* Eusebius is the oldest church historian.
† Barnabus was a fellow laborer with Paul.

Syria.

The following interesting article is from the Edinburgh Witness. The writer is convinced that Syria is becoming once more "the centre of the world." He says:—

"Many signs seem to prognosticate that the hour of political and social resuscitation is drawing near to Palestine. It is now resuming its old place, as we have said, in the centre of the world, and at the heart of the world's revolutions. Palestine has been an anomalous country from the very first: there has been something about the influence it has wielded not explicable on ordinary principles. It never possessed any great political influence of its own, and yet it has powerfully influenced the destinies of other countries. The Jews were forbidden to extend their territory; wars of aggrandizement therefore they could not undertake; alliances, in the strict sense, they could not form with other nations; they stood among the kingdoms, yet were not of them. Their little country, moreover, had drawn around it a formidable wall of mountain, and ocean, and desert; and yet, despite this triple line of isolation,—this all but impassable barrier between the Jew and all other men, between Judea and all other countries,—both the people and the country have been strangely mixed up with the affairs of other nations. This little territory has been the pivot around which the affairs of great kingdoms have revolved. In the first ages it stood between Egypt and Chaldea, and had much to do with the politics of both these kingdoms. Empire in due time shifted its seat; but an invisible power kept it still in the close neighborhood of Judea, and tied its fortunes to those of that little country. The great kingdom of Persia arose on the one side of it, and that of Greece on the other; and the fate of Palestine began to act and re-act upon that of its warlike and powerful neighbors. Rome next arose; and no sooner had it grown to importance than it came in contact with Palestine. Thus has it been ever bound up in a strange mysterious way with all the great kingdoms of the world, and has had its share in all the great political revolutions which have changed the aspect of the world and the condition of its nations. And now, after being hidden in the deep shades of the Asiatic night for so many ages, and having neither part nor lot in the world's affairs, it suddenly starts up, challenges its old place in the world's regard, and this insignificant and forgotten country becomes in truth one of the grand political problems of the day. Palestine stands once more in the midst of the great kingdoms of the earth. It has France and Britain on the west; it has Russia on the north; it has India on the east. The great lines of the world's policy meet once more, where they have so often met before, in that little country which stands midway betwixt the colossal North, and barbarous East, and the civilized and powerful West. The paramount question of the hour after Italy is Syria. To leave that country as it is, is to erect a standing menace to the world's peace, and to make sure of a future full of revolution and war. And yet how to effect a settlement of it is a question which the wisdom of no politician has as yet been found adequate to solve.

Meanwhile, the question presses hard for a solution, and threatens to give the world no rest till it be settled. A hundred considerations may be urged why that settlement ought to be essayed now. Immensely difficult it may be. Environed by fearful perils and risks it undeniably is. These deter statesmen from facing it, and persuade them to hope that time may bring a remedy for its dangers; but these hopes are fallacious: delay will but increase the mischief, and destruction will come at last like an armed man. The Ottoman rule is manifestly doomed."

Garibaldi.

The following from a correspondent of the London Times will give the reader some idea of the feeling of the Italians towards Garibaldi, and the probability of his future success in liberating Italy from the Papal power. The following scene was on his entrance into Naples. The writer says:—

"At last twelve o'clock strikes, and a bell sounds; and from a distance a signal is made that Garibaldi is approaching. 'Viva Garibaldi!' rises from a thousand voices, and the train stops; a few red-jackets get out, and they are seized, hugged, and kissed with that most unmerciful violence which characterizes Italian ardor. There was one poor elderly man who, by virtue of his white beard, was taken for Garibaldi, and was slobbered so that I thought he must have sunk under the operation; but the great man had gone round by another door, and so there was a rush in all directions to intercept him. We drove round by a side street to the front of the Carmine, and thus by a knowing dodge we came in front of the Dictator. There is no mistaking that face; there is the grandeur and the openness of nature's nobleman expressed, and it does not say one thing while plotting another; it is marked by a loyalty which in vain might be sought for in that of many of the so-called great ones of the earth. I was much struck with his calm self-possession and the extreme sweetness of his smile. He was not in the carriage of the French Minister, though I believe it had been placed at his disposal, but in one hired for the occasion. Followed and accompanied by three lines of carriages, he went along the Marinella, through the Basso Porto, surrounded by thousands, and deafened by their greetings, up the Lago Castello, and so on by San Carlo and the palace of the King, which royalty left only a few hours before, and entered the palace of reception for foreign princes. The crowd waved backwards and forwards, and looked up to the windows and shouted for the appearance of Garibaldi. First came one red coat, then another, and at last the hero. What a cry of 'Viva' there rose from the vast mass below! When last that balcony was occupied by a distinguished personage it was by the Grand Duke of Tuscany, but in answer to no calls, for there were only a few of those idlers who always hang about the palaces of princes. It was impossible to make himself heard amid the noise and confusion, and so Garibaldi leant over the iron railing and gazed intently on the crowd. A wave of the hand at last asked for silence, but in vain. 'Zitti, Zitti!' rose from all sides, and there was a perfect silence. 'Neapolitans,' said a voice as clear as a bell, and with an enunciation so distinct that nothing could fail to reach the ear,—'This is a solemn, holy, and memorable day. This day, from being subjects under the yoke of tyranny, you have become a free people. I thank you in the name of the whole of Italy. You have performed a great work, not only for Italy, but for all humanity, whose rights you have vindicated. 'Hurrah for liberty!' so much dearer to Italy, inasmuch as she has suffered so much more than any other nations. 'Long live Italy!'

The cry was taken up by the thousands assembled, and 'Viva Italia!' might have been heard from one end of the city to the other. On entering the Palace and the room in which Garibaldi was received, I saw him giving audience to a deputation of Venetians. 'We are all ready and organized, General, and anxious to begin.' 'You cannot be more anxious than I am,' was the reply; and then he left the room to repose and take some refreshment."

Boston vs. Montreal.

We clipped the following from an editorial in the Montreal Witness of Oct. 3d:—

"An individual in Boston challenges any gentleman of Montreal to meet him in this city to debate the question, 'Will the wicked live eternally?' The challenger holds the negative. There are a number of persons who affirm that annihilation is the punishment threatened to those who die impenitent. There must be a good deal of twisting of Scripture, or an entire avoidance of many texts, to arrive at such a conclusion."

It is hoped some one will accept the invitation of the "Individual in Boston."

The Hour and the Man.

All seem satisfied now that Italy will throw off the Papal yoke,—that Rome will soon be free from priestly rule. This being true, we are near the time when the Prince of Peace will commence his reign. Says the N. Y. Tribune:—

"The hour and the man for Italian Freedom have come together. The heroic Garibaldi with a courage that never flinches; with a straight-forward simplicity of character which is proof against all temptation; with a cool and correct judgment which never errs, and seizes always at the right moment the right occasion, steps forward at the precise instant when the patience of the people was exhausted; when the love of liberty was the most intense, and the hope of achieving it the most enthusiastic and buoyant, and Italy rises as one man, redeemed and disenthralled. That such must be now the final result, seems evident to the most desponding.

France and Italy.

The following remarks are from the Edinburgh Witness of the 15th Sept.:—

"The Roman States must fall, or rather they will rise. General Guyon will draw a cordon around Rome. All the other Roman districts and towns will select the King of Sardinia as their Monarch. . . . . Even the city of Rome with ten thousand French soldiers is not quite safe. The citizens may desire freedom: Garibaldi desires to free them. . . . . Another week may bring new and exciting scenes out of the Italian revolution. Garibaldi has Father Gavazzi for his chaplain; and there is a resemblance between the qualities of the General and his priest. Gavazzi has sung the Te Deum in the Cathedral of Naples, and the blood of St. Januarius has done nothing. Before the close of the year he may repeat his song of thanks in St. Peter's at Rome; but, first the Italians have got to get the French out of their metropolis,—peaceably, if they can,—forcibly if they must."

For the Crisis.

Report of the Rhode Island State Conference.

Danielsonville, Ct., Sept. 27th, '60.

Thursday morning, 9 o'clock.—Conference assembled. Eld. Bellows in the chair. After conference was opened by prayer, the report of the last meeting was called for and read. Voted to accept it. Question of business was put. A letter from the church at River Point was presented and read, speaking with much encouragement of the state of affairs in that company. The clerk gave some account of the church in Providence. They are in a low state, so far as revival interest is concerned; but there are some members who earnestly desire the prosperity of the church, and are laboring for it, and we hope the cloud will soon break. Bro. Carpenter gave account of the church at Danielsonville, that they are not in as good state as they were in the summer, but he hoped that they would arouse, and be efficient laborers still. Bro. Champlin gave a statement of the general state of the cause as he finds it, very encouraging indeed. Bro. Bellows gave a thrilling account of the recent manifestations of the work of God in Lafayette and Blackstone. Bro. Henry Hopkins stated that, in his opinion, the church in Foster were in a good way. Bro. Warren Taft reported himself as delegate from the church at Chestnut Hill, Ct., who, on motion of Bro. Carpenter, was received as a member of the conference. Adjourned till Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

Friday morning, 9 o'clock.—Met as adjourned, Bro. Bellows presiding. Prayer offered by Bro. Carpenter. Bro. Bellows asked what was the business to come before us. The clerk stated that there had been no report on the Free Tract resolution. Bro. Carpenter wished to hear that resolution read. The clerk accordingly read it, when Bro. C. moved that the churches be reminded of their duty to provide tracts for free distribution, as recommended by a previous conference. Passed. After some discussion as to the place for the next meeting, conference adjourned to meet for business in Providence, R. I., on the last Wednesday in Dec., 1860, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon precisely, with the church in New Market Hall.

The religious exercises at this conference were highly pleasing and profitable. They consisted in exhortation and prayer meetings, and preaching every forenoon and evening. The tone of the prayer and exhortation meetings was very hopeful. The brethren seem to be growing in confidence in the soon coming of Jesus, and to be earnestly watching the signs of the times, with a lively appreciation of their import. The preaching was rather more doctrinal than practical, although much practical matter was mixed with the thoughts presented, and the doctrine was seemingly required by some of the indications of the meeting.

The list of texts is as follows: Bro. Bellows preached from Jas. 5: 16, Matt. 10: 28, Rev. 22: 14, Mal. 3: 7. Bro. Champlin, Isa. 63: 1; his son, Matt. 5: 5. Bro. Huntington, 2 Pet. 3: 18. Bro. Phetteplace, Dan. 7: 27. Bro. Hopkins, Mark 13: 37. Bro. Brown, Judg. 5: 23; Titus 3: 3–8; Luke 24: 47, 48.

There was not so much done in the direction of the conversion of sinners as we hoped, but the brethren who were present seemed to be much encouraged, and the church in Danielsonville was quickened. Some of us in seeing the working of our little, unpretending conference, have come to think that it is blest of God to the accomplishment of the object for which it was started, viz: to unite and build up the churches; and we feel to pray God to prosper it in doing right, and trust that all the churches in R. I. will yet see the utility of it, and take part in its privileges.

Joseph D. Brown, Clerk.

Correspondence.

From Eld. O. R. Fassett.

Dear Bro. Grant:—I was greatly interested in the account given by you in your last issue of the interesting case of baptism in Danville, C. E., of the son of our beloved and esteemed Bro. Porter. I could but weep tears of sympathy and joy with that son, and family, and yourself as the administrator. The scene was all pictured in freshness upon my mind as you detailed it, and more so from the fact that on my visit to Danville two years ago, I had the privilege of burying in baptism some three or more interesting cases in the same stream and perhaps the same spot,—one a very aged man, and another a blind girl, etc. I rejoice with Bro. and Sister Porter in the conversion of that afflicted son. If living, may the Lord give John grace to endure and suffer all His righteous will; and may he hereafter have part "in the resurrection of the just."

Why will not those young in years, and in health, be admonished by this instance of delay in a christian duty, and that of the "baptism of a dying girl" which you published in the Crisis a week or two since, not to procrastinate the immediate duty of repentance, faith in Jesus Christ, and baptism? May the Lord impress the minds of the young especially with the importance of an open profession of faith in His name, ordinances and doctrines, at once. The Judge standeth before the door.

Westboro, Mass.

From Benja. Spaulding.

After spending four months in Aroostook county, Sept. 15 I set my face homeward. I had seen much of the mercy and goodness of God in the conversion of sinners, and especially in the enlightening of the people by God's truth; had seen seven baptized, and all going on their way rejoicing with older christians, all united heart and hand, in one band completely. With a heart overflowing with gratitude to God, who had led me here, and given me access to minds, opened ears to hear, and hearts to feel, I started. It was a delightful morning. The air was clear and pure; the sun shone brightly; distant hills arose before me; the forests had put on their autumnal hues, and presented all the varieties of color, from the brightest red to the pale yellow, which made the landscape beautiful. Then there were the rich fields of grain scattered along the way—wheat; rye, with its heavy well-filled heads; barley, oats, peas and potatoes. O! what a beautiful harvest a good Providence had provided for the Aroostook people. My mind was led from nature up to nature's God, and with the poet I could sing,

"When all thy mercies, oh, my God,
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view I'm lost
In wonder, love, and praise."

I had quite a large bundle of tracts still left; these I took with me, stopped at every house to leave them, walked fourteen miles, appointed a meeting for the Sabbath, next day gave two lectures in one place, then walked a Sabbath day's journey to another place, four miles, and gave a third lecture in the evening. Next was on my way scattering tracts, walked fourteen miles, was invited to give a lecture in a public house in Masardis,—had a good turn out, good hearing, and good freedom. Praise the Lord! Think good was done, and the spirit of inquiry awakened. Next day walked twenty miles; was tired, but a night's rest restored me; and next morning found me on my way rejoicing, praising God. My feet were like hind's feet. I walked twenty miles, and arrived at Patten with my heart filled with gratitude and praise to God for his mercies.

I am now bound for Golden Ridge, Mattawamkeag, Lincoln, Old Town and Bangor. Then, the Lord willing, I hope to visit Mount Desert, and other islands along the south shore of Maine, that I may see whether or no the seeds of Bible truth have sprung up. I feel quite encouraged that Bible doctrine will generally prevail in Aroostook county. A great and effectual door is opened here, and the scarcity of ministers, the scattered state of population, and the fewness of churches, all favor the cause of Bible truth. Sectarianism cannot prevail to so great extent as in older places. The spirit of inquiry is very generally awakened through this county; doors are open almost every where to those who preach Bible doctrine, and the field is waiting for the sowing of the seed. I can recommend (to any of our Advent brethren who feel disposed to come into the far-famed Aroostook,) our brethren and sisters here. They will treat you kindly, welcome you to their hospitable homes, give you the best they have, hear you with candor and attention, and help you on your way to the extent of their ability. They are generally poor, and have to grapple with the disadvantages of a new country; but they do the best they can. God bless them, is my prayer.

Now, brethren and sisters, pray for unworthy me, that I may be inspired with wisdom from above, that a sense of past goodness and mercy may lead me still to trust in God, and lean upon his strong arm, that his strength may be made perfect in my weakness. My heart is still in the work. I love it. I had rather be in this humble work, than to be a king on a throne.

I am supplied with tracts for two months; after that, I shall need a fresh supply. If any feel disposed to help in this good work, they can send their contributions to the office of the "World's Crisis," and I shall get them as I need.

Patten, Me.

From Bro. C. F. Churchill.

Bro. Grant:—While I lift my trembling hand to pen a line for the encouragement of the loved ones scattered abroad, memories of the past fill my mind. I bless God for the heaven-sent labors of Bro. Spaulding in this place. The good Lord reward him with eternal life, and with an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom, for his labor of love. I trust he has here gathered fruit unto life eternal. He was the first that proclaimed in this place the blessed truth of the soon coming kingdom. Since which time, they have been the joy and rejoicing of my heart.

We were visited again by Elds. P. G. Reed and Wm. Ingham. The good Lord bless their labors in the conversion of souls. Many were made happy in the love of Christ through their instrumentality, and are now rejoicing in hope of eternal life. O, could they, or some others of God's faithful watchmen, come this way, having God's glory in view in the salvation of souls, great good might result therefrom. O, how many professing godliness are indifferent to their awful situation! They do not, they will not believe in the soon coming of Jesus. Their treasure is here. They heap to themselves treasures for the last days, the rust of which will testify against them in the great day of God's wrath. Instead of believing the word of the Lord, they believe in seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. They know not that, by by their ungodly walk and filthy conversation, they proclaim in trumpet tones the coming of the Just One, to judge the world in righteousness, and set up his everlasting kingdom. Yes, child of God, we are almost home. Soon our sorrows, toils, and tears will end in eternal rest. Be faithful a little longer, and "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." God grant you and I, dear reader, an abundant entrance into the heavenly kingdom.

Salmon Brook, Me.

From C. M. W.

Bro. Grant:—For the last week I have found much peace and joy in serving God, and in aspiring after more acquaintance with him. But oh, how closely do I find the means and end connected. When I seek him with my whole heart, and resign myself and all my concerns into his hands, his blessing is received at once, and the witness of the Spirit that I am accepted through the Beloved.

True religion has a blessed reward connected with it; and self-denial brings a present satisfaction. To maintain this prayer and watchfulness must be without ceasing; and there must be strivings against the obtrusive infirmities of nature, and the temptations which varying circumstances may produce. Stated seasons of reading and prayer must be observed, in spite of dullness and sloth. It is a state of trial, a life of faith; and to him that overcometh is the crown of glory promised. Therefore, leaving the first principles, let us go on unto perfection. Divine Spirit! fill me with love; empty me of self; bring every power, every faculty, into subjection to thy will,—and the glory shall be thine.

I have made a fresh surrender of myself to God this day. I am not my own, but thine; and I desire to act and live as becometh one who is a temple of the living God, and to be ever mindful that thou seest me. I especially feel the need at this time of watching continually. On a review of the past, I find that little things have often quenched the divine fire of love in my soul; as the indulgence of a wrong temper, or light conversation, or any kind of trifling. O may the love thou hast imparted to my soul break forth in acts of benevolence to all around me; so that the talent thou hast bestowed may be improved, and that I may render up my account with joy. The perilous times of the last days are rapidly becoming more apparent. Let us stand firm, "unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

Jacksonville, Ill.

From Bro. S. C. Hancock.

To THE DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS SCATTERED ABROAD:—Grace, love and peace be multiplied unto you, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. I feel like bearing testimony to the kind dealings of the Lord with me for a little time past. I have attended three campmeetings this season. I think the one at Lanesville, Ct., to be one of the best I ever attended. I then came to North Adams and held several interesting meetings. Some arose for prayers; backsliders confessed their heart wanderings, with full determination to renew their diligence in the divine life. I then went to Florida, and was rejoiced to find that some who had been for years the subjects of prayer have resolved to serve the Lord; and one poor backslider, who had resorted to the cup of intoxication, has now changed it for the cup of salvation. The Lord crown the effort with his blessing.

North Adams, Mass., Oct. 7th.

From Bro. O. R. L. Crozier.

BRO. GRANT:—I think of trying to spend the winter in the field. Brethren who wish me to visit their places may write me at Grand Rapids, Mich., and I will see if I can arrange a tour.

It may be well to say, that my annual sermon, which the Mich. Ch. Conf. desires published, aims to give a brief exposition of the 4th, 5th and 17th chapters of Rev. and some other prophecies, and contains some matter which has not, so far as I know, been brought out heretofore—setting forth in order the opening scenes of the next age. The following are the principle topics treated.

1. The signs of the Son of man. 2. The appearing of Christ. 3. The binding of Satan. 4. The Shout, the Resurrection, and the Translation. 5. The Sea of Glass. 6. Mt. of Olives and Mt. Zion. 7. The Enthronement. 8. Gospel message. 9. League of the Ten Kings against Christ. 10. Fall of Babylon. 11. Warning message, and Penalty of the Age. 12. Condition of Jerusalem and the Land. 13. Return of Israel. 14. Homage of the Nations—the Kingdom of Emmanuel a blessing to all Nations. For place for publishing, see report of Mich. Ch. Conference.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 9th, 1860.

From Sr. M. J. Achorn.

To THE BRETHREN AND SISTERS SCATTERED ABROAD:—I would address a few lines to you at this time, to ask the prayers of God's dear children for a beloved son who lies prostrated by accident and disease in Cal. He was in the mines at work, which caved in upon him and hurt him in a shocking manner, on the 19th of Jan. His left leg was broken in three places below the knee. He was so badly injured that his leg was not set until the next day. In five days amputation became necessary. He received other serious injuries, so that his life was despaired of for four weeks, when he so far recovered as to fondly hope he would live and be able to leave for home in June; but the injuries in his back are becoming alarmingly worse.

He was left to me, on the death of his father seven years ago, a lad of seventeen, to face a cold world, and provide for the family. At nineteen, an opportunity presented for him to go to Cal., when persuasion could not prevail on him to remain at home; but from the day he left, bad luck attended him. He did not intend to have been absent more than a year, but alas! the fifth has almost passed. In the time, he has never forgotten his mother, but has sent her the means that made her comfortable. He professed religion when thirteen years of age, under the labors of Elder J. Small, was baptized, and united with a little band of brethren who worshiped in Washington and Somerville, and continued faithful for over four years, when, like too many youth, he laid down the cross, grew careless, and joined with the world. I have buried a beloved husband and four children.

I do not ask your prayers as a compliment, but believing in their power, I desire them, that the Lord, who is rich in mercy, will look upon my son in compassion. I feel that I truly need the prayers of all my Father's children, that the Lord will support me in the trying scene through which I am called to pass. I still love the Lord, and feel to say, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him," "for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength."

Washington, Me.

☞ We must resist our sins in their pleasures and not their pains.

Obituary Notice.

Fell "asleep in Christ," at the residence of her parents in Hinesburgh, Vt., on Wednesday, Aug. 15th, 1860, Mrs. ELIZABETH IRISH, wife of Bro. Mark H. Irish, of Toronto, C. W., and daughter of John and Annis Ray, aged twenty-three years and thirty-nine days.

She was married Nov. 11th, 1855, and has left one child—a lovely daughter—nearly three years of age. Already has little Susan learned that "when the blessed Savior comes" her mother will rise to immortal life. May this sweet expectation become an unfailing source of joy to the bereaved child, while the kind hand which shall implant in her tender heart a fitting reverence for her departed parent's memory, shall also seek to "bring" her "up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." There are few who realize, as they should, the beautiful adaptation of the "blessed hope" to the wants of little children.

The last year of Sister Irish's life was a period of deep interest, during which she realized many manifestations of the loving kindness of her Heavenly Father. Late in the month of August, 1859, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Durfee, she left her father's for a residence in Toronto, C. W., where her husband had a little while before established himself as agent of the American Express Company. Her health was at this time delicate, but her symptoms were not thought to be alarming. Bro. I. had got their new home in readiness, and looked forward with the liveliest anticipations to the hour when he should have his loved ones with him. How changed was the prospect when they reached Toronto! On their way thither Sister I. commenced spitting blood, and the attacks being renewed after her arrival there, it became apparent that consumption had begun its fatal work, and that she must die! On the day after they reached T., Sister Durfee, in a letter to her parents, after speaking of the alarming indications that had presented themselves, wrote as follows concerning our sister's state of mind:—"Notwithstanding this, we have had a very quiet, interesting day. In her own words, she has come to a point that she has been striving all summer to reach, that is, where she can give up her life and every thing else into the hands of the Lord; that she is conscious her days are almost numbered, and that she feels a resignation to the thought. But if it is right that she should, it would be a privilege to return home and die among those she loves so dearly."

Two days later, Sr. D. wrote as follows to their sister at home:—"Praise the Lord that we ever came to Toronto! He has brought us all the way here to learn us to trust in Him—and oh! how lovingly is He teaching us to do it! Yes, here in a foreign land, among strangers, and in circumstances we have been wont to call afflictive, are we all enabled to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Elizabeth is every day raising more and more blood,—but, oh! the work that has been done for her, who can describe it! * * It is beyond the power of human understanding to conceive of the strength that is imparted both to the inward and outward man. Her impression is that she has a work to do before she goes into the grave; but, in her own words, 'the wonder of wonders is that she should be a chosen and honored instrument.' All I can do is to 'stand still and see the salvation of God.' Of Mark I can say, 'Behold! he prayeth!' In reference to the matter of going home, we are waiting directions from the Lord. We would not one of us for the world turn aside from His path after being led thus far. Truly, I can say I was never in such a place as this before. Mark says he has attained to his highest aspirations in business pursuits, and now he can cheerfully resign all for any duty or opening the Lord may present."

Sister Irish was almost immediately brought back to Hinesburgh, to spend her last days under the parental roof. The gracious heart-work referred to in the foregoing extracts was as permanent as it was divine, and throughout her long and painful illness she maintained an unwavering trust in God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. All her hopes of the future centered in the doctrine of the Resurrection. She utterly, heartily and steadfastly repudiated all ideas of glorification in death. She believed the testimony of God's word that death is an "enemy," and the revealed fact that this "last enemy" is to be "destroyed," was the ground of her faith that she would "live again" and "live forever." She expected to fall "asleep in Jesus," but she also expected that Jesus would soon "come again" and quicken her into an incorruptible, immortal life. She calmly watched the tokens of the "grim monster's" steady approach, and when the last conflict came she was not taken by surprise. She suffered much in her dying hour, but retained her reason to the last moment. Living and dying, her trust was in Him who is "the Resurrection and the Life," and we know that when He shall appear, she will also appear with Him in glory. Rest in peace, beloved sister! Thy slumbers will shortly be broken by "the trump of God," and then shalt thou feel the power of an endless life! Clad in the beauty of the Redeemer's person, thou shalt forever and ever drink in the joys which await thy redemption "from the power of the grave!" "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust."

Sister Irish was one of a family of thirteen children, eleven of whom survive, with her husband, child and parents, to mourn her loss. But they sorrow not as those which have no hope. They know that she died in the Lord, and that when his jewels are made up, in the last day, she will be remembered. Her funeral, which was held in the Baptist meeting-house, was the occasion of a discourse by the writer from 1 Thess. 4:13–18. The coming of Jesus to raise his sleeping saints and change living believers, was presented as the true and only ground of "comfort;" and many were thus permitted to hear for the first time the true gospel hope. Our bereaved Bro. Irish rejoices in his tribulation, believing that he will soon meet his beloved companion in the kingdom of God. Glorious thought! May we all live in the light of it.

RUFUS WENDELL.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Per steamship Africa, Advices of the 30th ult.

The Sardinians continued the siege of Ancona, and had taken another fort.

There was a ministerial crisis at Naples, and the Cabinet had resigned.

Ancona capitulated on Saturday, the 29th, and Gen. Lamoriciere was taken prisoner of war with the whole garrison.

It is asserted that the Pope, in his ultimatum to the French Emperor, threatens that he will quit Rome at once, unless France interferes. A majority of the Cardinals are reported to have recommended his departure.

Additional French troops have been ordered from France, and French outposts have been placed two miles beyond Rome.

The repulse of the Garibaldians at Capua is fully confirmed. One account says they lost four hundred men in killed and wounded and that three hundred were taken prisoners. Their positions were nevertheless maintained, and the attack will be renewed.

The King's troops are reported to be 50,000 in number and they are determined to show fight.

The Garibaldian ministry at Naples had resigned, and Signor Conforti was about to form a new one, professing extreme opinions.

It is reported that Lamoriciere, after his late defeat, returned to Ancona with a considerable number of troops.

Portions of Lord John Russell's warning to Sardinia not to attack Venetia have been published.

A letter of the 20th says, Mazzini had had an interview with Garibaldi. He was well received. Dissatisfaction is expressed in Sicily and Naples with the appointments made by Garibaldi, and much confusion existed.

A battalion of seven hundred priests has been organized.

The forts of Pescara and Augusta, in Sicily, have capitulated.

SARDINIA.

On the 25th the report reached Turin that the Piedmontese army had entered the patrimony of St. Peter, and that the French were concentrating at Rome and Civita Vecchia.

A formal order has been given to the Piedmontese commanders, not only to avoid any conflict with the French, but even any discussion on any point whatever with the French commanders.

It is said that the Sardinian government receives from a portion of Garibaldi's troops assurances of devotion to Victor Emmanuel.

GARIBALDI AND THE VENETIANS.

Garibaldi had complied with the request of a deputation of Venetians, who sought permission to publish at Naples a journal to excite the people of Venetia to a general rising; and he caused his reply to be published in the official journal of Naples. He told the deputation that the present war was the only national one which could give them a country. "Our battles are so many marhes in our progress to the Alps, on the summit of which alone we will stop." He authorized them to act as an association, for the purpose of electing subsidies for all kinds of insurrectional war making for their common deliverance.

GARIBALDI AT NAPLES.

A Naples correspondent says: "Garibaldi is the hero of the day and of every one in Naples; his movements this week have been marvelous. As you already know, he left Naples on Sunday night, or rather early on Monday morning, spent six hours only in Palermo, conciliated the wavering, silenced opponents by intimating his willingness to accept their resignations, and was back again in Naples on Tuesday at three o'clock."

GARIBALDI AND CAVOUR.—A letter from Turin, dated the 22d of September, says:—

"Our political world is greatly agitated. The great split between Count Cavour and Garibaldi, which up to yesterday was officially concealed, is now made public by Garibaldi himself. His letter to M. Brusco has been published in the official journal of Naples, and, as if that were not enough, the Dictator has publicly avowed the existing disagreement, as well by a manifesto issued to the people of Palermo as by a speech from the balcony of the royal palace.

The great game is being played between Cavour and Garibaldi. It is presumed that within another fortnight one or the other must disappear from the political arena in Italy, if this unhappy country is to be spared the horrors of civil war. Garibaldi is at the present moment at the height of popularity; he can dispose of an army of 50,000 men. Public opinion is blindly devoted to him. On the other hand, Count Cavour is strong in the confidence of Parliament; popularity has not yet forsaken him; Piedmont, properly speaking, defends him, and Turin especially."

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM KOSSUTH.—The Espero, of Turin, gives the substance of a letter said to have been written to Garibaldi by Kossuth, recommending him not to break his connection with Victor Emanuel and his government, who alone can effect the liberation of Italy. He also invites the Dictator to give up all designs upon Rome, in order not to draw upon himself the hostility of France, the only defender of Italy, and the only hope of oppressed nationalities; and, lastly, not to attempt anything against Hungary, that country not being as yet ripe for revolution.

[From the London Times, Sept. 25]

THE IMMINENT PERIL OF ITALY.—There is an unpleasing coincidence in the accounts which come to us from Italy. We have, indeed, tidings of the most glorious successes, of victories gained in the field, of frightened foes fleeing before the patriot bands, and of cravens courting captivity to avoid a fight. The Irish bravos of the Church, who went forth hoping only to have to trample down a poor peasantry, have been seen cowering beneath the swords of an insurgent people. Everything is satisfactory, except only the incessantly repeated testimony that discord has crept up under the cover of all this success. We turn in vain from side to side to find some reason to discredit this unwelcome tale.

We dwell upon the three great public facts that Garibaldi has handed over the Neapolitan fleet to the King of Sardinia, that he has proclaimed the laws of Sardinia throughout his new conquests, and that he has performed public acts of State in the name of Victor Emanuel. All these favorable facts are, however, weakened or explained away by those who are now closely observing what passes in Italy. Even Mr. Edwin James, who went out certainly with no design to depreciate the great man whom we have believed in as a second Washington, now describes the Neapolitans as discontented and reactionary, the roads swarming with banditti, the proclamations of Garibaldi as causing the deepest disappointment to all the friends of Italy, and the Dictator himself as surrounded and influenced by those who do not hesitate to express their wish for the proclamation of a Republic.

THE FRENCH EXPEDITION TO SYRIA.—The following extract from a private letter will interest our readers:

"BEYROUT, Aug. 17.—Two detachments of French troops have arrived, and are encamped with the others at 'The Pines' outside the town; but they find a great lack of water and of roads, so that their first occupation will be to make a road and sink wells. Last night two Druses who were found prowling about the camp were arrested and sent on board a French ship, a summary mode of proceeding, which rather astonishes the natives; but the French are rapidly settling themselves down in their quarters, and will doubtless soon establish a little order in their vicinity, and not a little gaiety, for it will be the popular promenade. Hassan Bey (Colonel O'Reily) started for Sidon on Wednesday, to make a night attack on the Druses in the vicinity of Hasbeya and Rasheya, and also to bring away some two thousand Christians, chiefly women and children who are still in that district. One of the Druse Sheiks has declared that if a French soldier sets his foot in their territory he will massacre every Christian he can lay his hand on, and make for the Hauran. O'Reily is to take 1,200 Turks from Sidon, and the result of the expedition is looked for with great anxiety. This morning a despatch was received from Damascus stating that Fuad had arrested 1,003 persons, of whom 145 had been tried and condemned. Of these forty were to be hanged, of whom four had already suffered, but they belonged to the villages outside Damascus. It is also reported that he has occupied the passes to the Ledja with Turkish troops, so as to hem in the Druses; but this I doubt, as also the probability of their being surprised by the expedition from Sidon. Their means of obtaining and conveying intelligence are most extraordinary. They have not altogether taken hostile attitude towards England, but their hatred of the French is loudly proclaimed, nor does there seem to be much friendship exhibited towards our allies by the Arabs in general; so the English Admiral has prohibited officers of the fleet from going to villages round Beyrout, probably lest they should be mistaken for Frenchmen, and shot by the Druses."

Notices, &c.

Editorial Notice.

☞ We have upon our exchange list a paper published at Niagara Falls, the editor of which is blind, the compositors deaf and dumb, and the papers are folded by the blind and wrapped by mutes. The press-work is also performed by the blind.

Notice.

To those applying to me for lectures, I would say, I will attend to their calls in order, and as speedily as possible. They will see my present published arrangement in the "Crisis," which will be an answer to all requests for the present. I leave for Western New York and the West, Oct. 19th.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Oct. 15th, 1860.

Notice.

The following question was unanimously adopted by the committee and debaters, to be discussed at Dover, Me., commencing Oct. 24th, 1860, 6 o'clock, P. M., to continue at least three evenings. Resolved, that the Bible and philosophy teach the existence of intelligent disembodied human spirits, and that there has been and may be spiritual communications to man from this source. Affirmative, J. H. Williams. Negative, J. Hemenway.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a protracted meeting held at the Hollister school-house in Barnston, C. E., commencing Friday, Nov. 16th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and hold as long as thought best. Elder Hiram Munger is expected to attend.

WM. A. CRAMER.

Herald, please copy.

☞ Providence permitting, there will be a conference at Danbury, N. H., to commence Thursday evening, Oct. 25th, and hold over the following Sunday. The following brethren are expected, and perhaps others: D. Churchill, Geo. A. Otis, J. Pinkham.

J. G. SMITH.

Notice.

TOUR WEST.—I contemplate a tour West, as far as Cincinnati, Ohio, in the months of October and November.

The following are my appointments, as far as Springwater, N. Y. Other notices will be given duly.

Auburn N. Y., Sabbath, Oct. 21st.

Senaca Falls, N. Y., Monday and Tuesday evenings, Oct. 22d and 23d.

Lockport, N. Y., Wednesday evening, Oct. 24th.

Lewiston, N. Y., Thursday, Oct. 25th.

Springwater, N. Y., Saturday and Sabbath, Oct. 27th and 28th.

While in this vicinity, I shall visit Dansville, Conesus, Honeoye, etc., and will give due notice of appointments further west.

J. V. HIMES.

Notice.

Providence permitting, there will be a two days' meeting in Gilead, Branch Co., Mich., in the school-house near Humphrey Foster's, to commence Oct. 27th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Brn. Greenleaf, Robison and Sober may be expected to be present to assist in preaching the word of life. Let all the friends of Jesus interested in this meeting, be present at the commencement of the meeting. Brethren and sisters, come with overflowing hearts of love to God and one another, and labor for the salvation of sinners. We desire earnestly to see a general waking up to a full preparation to meet the soon coming Savior.

In behalf of the friends of Jesus,

A. N. SEYMOUR.

Notice.

The brethren in Ohio, through their committee, Geo. W. Cherry, Bro. Southwick, Bro. Fish of Dayton, and P. Alling of Norwalk, have determined on holding a conference this fall in Northern Ohio. They choose as

THE PLACE North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio.

THE TIME, so far as determined, is Oct. 26th, Friday, 11 A. M., and over the Lord's day, the 28th. The first, or morning meeting, may hold daily as long as needful. The second meeting early in the evening. Thus we shall not be hurried in our services, nor spend time needlessly in going and coming. All "who have an ear to hear" are invited to "hear" the proof positive, as holy writ and acknowledged fact, that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Those who believe are exhorted to come and help forward the objects of the conference. The Judge has said in relation to spreading the knowledge of his approach,—"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing!" "Now the just shall live by faith; but if he draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Come then, beloved, to dispense, as well as to "receive," more of "the manifold grace of God." To them that have shall be given, and they shall have MORE ABUNDANCE.

In behalf of the brethren, and subject to their amendment if deemed needful.

J. B. COOK.

☞ It is recommended by the committee that Thursday, the 25th Oct., be observed as a day of fasting and prayer by the brethren and sisters of Ohio, and all others who may be pleased to join us, that the blessing of the Lord may rest upon his waiting people, and especially upon our contemplated meeting—that it may be one of profit to all who may attend, and the cause of Christ advanced in this portion of his moral vineyard, and also that "his kingdom may come and his will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

In behalf of the committee, P. ALLING.

P. S.—Brethren coming by the Toledo Rail Road will stop at Norwalk, some ten miles north of Fairfield, where conveyances can easily be procured. Those by the Newark and Sandusky road will stop at Plymouth, some ten miles south west thereof, and inquire for Bro. Hoffman.

P. A.

Notice.

There will be a Second Advent meeting in Bristol, near Bro. Mix's, to commence Friday, Oct. 26th, and hold over Sunday. Come, brethren, in the name of the Lord.

J. K. BELLOWS, for the Brethren.

Quarterly Conference.

The next session of the Western Central Quarterly Conference will meet in the Read meeting-house, Richmond, Maine, Oct. 25th, Thursday, P. M., at 2 o'clock, and continue over the following Sunday. We hope to see all our preaching brethren, and as many other brethren and sisters present to work in the Lord's vineyard as can consistently come. There is an open door for gospel work, and may the Lord guide us in it, and add his blessing with it, that good may be done. Let us continue to rally the Lord's host, and work for the salvation of sinners until the Master comes. Soon the work will be finished, and we will rest in the kingdom.

I. C. WELLCOME, Secretary.

☞ The Tract on the Rich man and Lazarus is now ready. This tract also contains the subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single 3 cts; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 ct. To be had at the Crisis office, or of me, at East Boston, Mass.

J. S. WHITE.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. P. B. Morgan will preach in
Boston, (Chapman Hall)........Sunday, Oct. 21st

Providence permitting, I will preach at
River Point........................Nov. 4th
East Killingly..........Nov. 11th, 18th and 25th

M. R. PHETTEPLACE.

I will preach at River Point, R. I...................Oct. 21st

WM. SUTHERLAND.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BRISTOL, CT.

Eld. D. A. Jones will preach Sunday.....Oct. 21st
Eld. Ralph Williams ....Sunday, Oct. 28th
Eld. George Champlin..............Sunday, Nov. 4th

I will preach in Haverhill, Sabbath, Oct. 21st, all day. In Lawrence Oct. 22d and 23d. In the evening where the brethren may arrange. The 25th Oct. I shall be at the Richmond Quarterly Conference, Me. The first Sunday in Nov. in West Poland, Me.

O. R. FASSETT.

Providence permitting, I will attend the regular conference at Corinna, Me., commencing Nov. 3d, to continue over the Sabbath.

J. HEMENWAY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Wallingford, Ct...........................Oct. 21st
Scitico, Ct.................................Oct. 28th
Newfie'd, Ct...............................Nov. 4th
Plymouth Hollow, Ct......................Nov. 11th

I trust the friends in Scitico and Newfield will excuse me for not meeting my last appointments with them, as I was engaged with a Brother who was very sick; and his family were quite unwilling that I should leave him. I tried to secure a substitute to fill my appointments, but failed to do so.

L. S. LUDINGTON.

Providence permitting, I will preach in
Castleton, Vt...........................Oct. 21st

MILES GRANT.

I will meet the brethren in Sandwich Centre, N. H., Saturday evening, Oct. 20th, and over the Sabbath.

L. C. GLAZIER.

The Lord permitting, I expect to preach at Canterbury, (Town-house) Sunday, Oct. 21st.

T. M. PREBLE.

H. B. Sevey appoints to preach in
Augusta, Me..............................Oct. 21st

T. W. Piper appoints to preach in
Tuftonborough..............................Oct. 21st
Merideth Neck ....Oct. 28th
Clark meeting-house.........................Nov. 4th

C. Goodrich appoints to preach in
Danielsonville, Ct...........................Oct. 21st
Providence, R. I...............Oct. 24th and 25th
Warwick Plains...............................Oct. 28th
Lafayette.............................30th and 31st
Peacedale......................................Nov. 4th

J. G. Smith appoints to preach in
Dorchester, N. H.............................Oct. 21st

L. D. Thompson will preach in
Lawrence ....Sunday, Oct. 21st
Auburn, (where Bro. Roby may appoint) Oct. 22d

George L. Teeple appoints to preach in
Bakerville.......................Oct. 20th and 21st
Winsted, (where Bro. Whitehead may appoint) Oct. 23d
Cold Spring....................................Oct. 24th
Blandford, (Bro. Bates')......................Oct. 25th
Chester Factories..............................Oct. 26th
Goshen.............................Sunday, Oct. 28th
Plainfield Pond.................................Oct. 30th
Savoy...Nov. 1st
Cheshire, Mass...................................Nov. 2d
Dalton, (where Bro. Warren may appoint) Nov. 3d and 4th
Chester Factories.................................Nov. 8th
Sandisfield, (where Bro. Fenn may appoint,) Nov. 10th and 11th

I have appointments to preach at
Hartford, Ct.......................Oct. 21st and 28th

☞ When I see my way clear to visit Milton, N. Y., to hold meetings, I will write Bro. N. S. Latimer to that effect.

RUFUS WENDELL.

L. Wetherbee appoints to preach in
South Orrington................................Oct. 21st
East Grate Works.................................Oct. 28th
Belmont, (school-house)..........................Nov. 4th

J. K. Bellows appoints to preach in
Pine Swamp.......................................Oct. 21st

The Lord willing, I will attend meetings as follows:—
3d Sunday in Oct., 21st, as the brethren may appoint.
4th Sunday in Milo or Sebec, as the friends may arrange.

THOMAS SMITH.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Henry Drake—All right—pays to 286.
E. B. Stearns—All right—pays to 273.
H. B. Winch—All right—pays to 286.
H. Fowle—All right.
C. F. Churchill.—You can obtain copies by sending to the office of "Golden Rule," New York.
Eld. Moses Candler's P. O. address is Monmouth, Ill.

Cash Receipts.

N. Ober 288, $2.00; S S Stetson 260, $2.00; D Graffam 312, $4.00; J Gibson 276, $1.12; Jas. Wilson 315, p. pd., $2.26; H L Hastings, for Providence brethren, 296, $20.00.

Mrs. S F Hutchinson 264, H Beach, O E Lord 275, J McNabow 274,—50 cts. each.

J McConnell 260, J Purinton 288, O P Reddington 288, S Benton 260, W R Ottman 289, O S Knapp 289, L Gallop 274, I Barnes 288, T Wilkins 296, J McKee 280, W Kay 298, J B Paine 288, G Christie 288, M F Champlin 288, T P Hedrick 288, R C Gray 288, L L Sanborn 288, S Cummings 288, Mrs. S M Clark 286, A B Chapman 288, W F Knowlton 288, Mr. Justice 288, B Gardner 266, D L Grant 288, M A Gaskin 289, W Howard 286, M Moorehouse 286, J D Merriam 288, P C Goodale 286, F U Gardner 289, D B'ood 288, S Blaisdell 286, E Flanders, Jr., 275, J B Adams 277, C Perkins, p. pd., 286, P J Maine 287, D S Clark 287, Mrs. A A Barnard 260, W O Williams 288, Mrs. A Young 289,—$1.00 each.

J F Busch 317, C Taft 312, W McCulloch 312, W Babcock 312, Dr. G W Kittle 249, I Myers 331, S J Gardner 314, L Welch 314, H A Arnold 314, E G Spenser 267, L J Blossom 315, D W Perry 286, E A Deming 260, C O Delano 264, T J Grant 314, N C Jerome 286, T Harrington 281, Ald. Soule 300, W G Ocobock 276, I E Lang, Jr., 278, Gard. Barl 292, W Welch 250, Abm. Johnson 275, R R Bullen 272, Mrs M Reynolds 312, D Sna[illegible] 312,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

W McCulloch $1.00; F Severence 24 cts; J D Merriam $1.00; P S Pekham $1.00; J Gibson 88 cts; L T Nichols $2.00; J W Nute 39 cts; D S Lyon $1.00; G W Gillespie 12 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. ISAAC L. ALLEN, 10 Howard Street, Albany, N. Y., has an assortment of our books and tracts, and will fill orders at the same rates that are charged at this office.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

TRACTS FROM THE TRACT FUND.—Friends at the WEST can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.

H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psukee as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many incidents, circumstances connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts.—postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 2 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low, or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the children. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Bacons, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS OF H. L. HASTINGS, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp. $1 00
The Great Controversy between God and Man: its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp. 60
Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 129 pp. Paper, 30 cts. Cloth 50
Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing 60
Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing 60
Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp. 50
Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp. 50
Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 320 pp. 75
The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt. 25
Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm. Ramsey, D.D. edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth, 40
Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper, 15
The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, 87 pp. 18
Tracts of 24 Pages.—3 cts. single; $1 for 1600 pages—by mail 1200 pp. for $1.

The Church not in Darkness,	by H. L. H.	pages 24
The Three Worlds,	by H. L. H.	" 24
The Last Days,	by H. L. H.	" 24
Plain Truths,	by H. L. H.	" 28
Will all men be saved?	by H. L. H.	" 24
Voice of Warning	by D. T. Taylor	" 24
The New Heavens and Earth,		" 24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos.		" 24
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H. &c.	" 36
Important Questions, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H.	" 36
State of the Dead,	by John Milton	" 24
The Intermediate State,	by H. G.	" 24
Destiny of the Wicked	by H. L. H.	" 12
Future Punishment,	by H. G.	" 12
The Key of Truth,	by W. S.	" 12
Man's Future State		" 12
Letter on Dress	by Adoniram Judson	" 12
The Day of Judgment,	by St. Cyril	" 12
Outline of the Coast,	by A Voyager	" 8
The Night Cometh,	by John Adey	" 8
Gems, 9 Nos., poetry,	by H. L. H.	" 12
One Thing		" 8
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ,		" 4
The Duration of the Earth	by A. Clarke	" 4
Hope and Duty of the Church,	M. Henry	" 4
The Restitution.	by St. Cyril	" 4
A Warning Voice,	by Cotton Mather	" 4
Loving Christ's Appearing,	by Baxter	" 4
Little Children, Love one another		" 4
The One Resting Place,	by H. Bonar	" 4
My Friend,	by H. L. H.	" 4
Abundant Grace		" 4
Wondrous Love		" 4
Go in Peace		" 4
Living Water		" 4
The Banner	Anonymous	" 4
The Blood of Christ		" 4
Are you a Christian?	by H. L. H.	" 4
Why not Now?		" 4
Are you Pardoned?		" 4
Are you Safe?		" 4
Are you Saved?		" 4
Do you Pray?		" 4
When Will He Come?	by J. C. Ryle	" 4
Statement of Account	by H. L. H.	" 4
Man in Death	By Bishop Law	" 4
Forty Questions on Immortality		" 8

SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.

No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked		" 1
No. 2. The State of the Dead		" 1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus		" 1
No. 4. The Resurrection		" 1
No. 5. Plain Truths		" 1
No. 6. The Judgment		" 1

POETRY.

Brother, Shall we Meet?	by H. L. H.	" 2
Sister, Shall we Meet?	"	" 2
Stand up for Jesus!	"	" 1
The Harvest is Past	"	" 1
Beyond!	"	" 1
At Rest!	"	" 1
We would see Jesus	by Josephine	" 1
A Little While	by J. C.	" 1

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

Life Insurance, Envelope Size	H. L. H.	" 12
Home	"	" 12
Lost, Lost	"	" 8
Peace in Christ	"	" 4
Worth Knowing	"	" 4
All things are Yours	"	" 4
New	"	" 4
Assurance	"	" 4
About God	"	" 4

THE foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $8, with the order, shall receive $12. worth of books at the retail prices. TRACTS are sent by mail, 1200 pages, on the receipt of a dollar. When sent by express, or at the expense of the buyer, 1600 pages will be sent for one dollar. Terms cash. Persons who desire to do good can obtain Four hundred tracts of four pages each, for $1. These may be widely distributed, and open the way for religious conversation. Persons may thus be a blessing to those around them. The poor can have any of these tracts sent to them free, by remitting stamps to pay the postage. Ministers can have specimen copies of the tracts and pamphlets sent free. All letters, orders, and remittances should be addressed to the Publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 43 Weybosset St., Providence, R. I.

January, 1860.

☞ These publications can be obtained in Boston of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York, G. W. Young, 138 William st.; Philadelphia, A. T. Foster, 725 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publisher through all Booksellers.

Bibles of the British and Foreign Bible Society. [illegible] references between the verses, $1.50 to $[illegible]. [illegible] Morocco, marginal references, or references between verses, $2.50 to $[illegible]. [illegible] between verses, $1.75. Marginal references, $[illegible] to $2.75. Diamond, marginal references, to clasp, $3. Bindings, Roan, Calf and Morocco. Bibles make the difference in prices.

For the Crisis.

To the Christian Watchman.

BY VESTA R. CUDWORTH.

Thou tired, worn, and weary, once more to the fight
Thou must nerve!
Thine eye, dimmed and tearful, must watch for the light;
Never swerve!
Now in the conflict, the pile, and the sigh,
Humiliation! the old man must die;
Thou shalt exchange, when the battle is done,
Beauty for ashes, the cross for the crown.

Sweet home, and the dear ones, once more sad and lone
Thou must leave;
The call is most earnest, the Bride must be won!
Let them grieve;
Thou wouldst not through weakness thy darling ones here
The cup of his suff'ring should fail e'en to share;
Commit to his trust in thy faith's deathless grasp,
And thou shalt receive them when faith's work is past.

What are the sweets of thy brightest cup here?
Frail as dew.
Dearer the sparkle of one falling tear,
Grateful, true;
Christian Philanthropist, go forth and win
Souls from the thraldom of darkness and sin;
Unfurl thy banners 'mid vice and despair,
'Neath the damp mould still are gems rich and fair.

Haste, watchman, haste! for the dark, glazing eye
Soon will close;
The warm gushing tide, with its crimson dye,
No more flows;
Light of the desolate! oh! bid it find
The wildest spot in the human mind;
On the sterile soil will some sweet flower bloom,
And smile for the watchman beyond the dark tomb.

For the Crisis.

A Conversation.

The following conversation was held between an Orthodox minister and a layman of the Advent faith. After an introduction, the conversation turned on Bro. S. E., an acceptable preacher among the Wesleyan Methodists, who had become satisfied his theology was wrong, and had embraced the truth. The conversation commenced thus:—

Min.—"Is Mr. E. out preaching now-a-days?"

Lay.—"Yes."

Min.—"He ought not to be tolerated as a preacher of the gospel."

Lay.—"Do you know any thing against Bro. E.'s christian character? Is he guilty of any immoral conduct?"

Min.—"Not in that sense as I know of, but he has gone after most every wind of doctrine, and has now gone into Spiritualism."

Lay.—"I think you are mistaken, for I am intimately acquainted with him, and am with him in belief. I will tell you something what he does believe. He believes God will destroy the wicked just as he declares he will in Malachi 4: 1.—'For, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch;' or as Obadiah says, 'They shall be as though they had not been.'"

Min.—"Well, sir, the doctrine of annihilation cannot live one moment in the light of the Bible. You cannot annihilate any thing; it is utterly impossible. That doctrine can be easily overthrown with Bible argument."

Lay.—"I did not say Bro. E. believed in annihilation; but that he believed God would destroy the wicked, as he said he would in the Scriptures that I quoted."

Min.—"Do you think these texts mean as they read?"

Lay.—"I do."

Min.—"I should like to have you sit down with me some time, and I would take my Greek Lexicon and show you that many of these words have a very different signification. You should understand the Greek Scriptures to get a correct view of the true teaching of the Bible upon this and many other subjects."

Lay.—"I do not profess to be a Greek scholar, but God has taught us by Moses that man was made of the dust of the ground. After Adam had sinned, God said to him, 'Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.' Now can you take your Greek Lexicon and show that Adam was not made of dust? and that he will not return to dust again? If you can, why will you not make out that he will not die, as the serpent said?

Min.—"But that was Adam's body that was made of dust and was to return to dust again. That was not his spiritual nature. Adam had two natures,—one an earthly, and the other a spiritual, one which was an unending and an undying nature, which must live on forever. It is the soul which cannot die."

Lay.—"You have asserted these things. Solomon says, 'Add thou not unto his word, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.' You say that the soul cannot die; here you are in plain contradiction with your Bible. Ezk. 18: 20.—'The soul that sinneth it shall die.' You stated that Adam had two natures, one of which was spiritual. This is contrary to St. Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 45, 46.—'So it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual; but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual.' Please try your Greek and see who is right. You say Adam had a spiritual nature; St. Paul says he was not spiritual. How will you settle this controversy?"

Min.—"It is of no use to talk with you, for you are determined to have every thing in your own way."

Lay.—"Dear sir, I do not want it in my own way; I want it as the apostle says, unless you can show that he taught wrong. I quoted it as it reads; now if you can show that it does not mean what it says, then the apostle will stand corrected."

Min.—"If I had my lexicon with me, I could show you many words that have a different signification from the literal rendering of the text. I would ask you, what do you do with that text of Scripture that speaks of the wicked, and says 'these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal?' I shall claim that everlasting is as long as eternal, and that they are both from the same Greek word; consequently, their punishment must be of the same duration as the eternal life of the righteous.

Lay.—"In the first place, if the Scriptures cannot be relied on to mean what they say, why not come to the conclusion with the Pope, that the common people ought not to have the Bible, but receive their teaching from Greek and Latin teachers, lest the people be led into error? As for the Scripture you mentioned, I do not wish to alter it. It says, 'these shall go away into everlasting punishment.' This speaks of the length of the punishment, but there is an abundance of testimony that tells what the punishment is. Adam's was death for sin. Moses testifies to this. Ezekiel says death is the penalty for sin. St. Paul testifies in Rom. 6: 23,—'The wages of sin is death.' He also says, 'They shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power.' Death is the penalty for sin. Now if a man could come to life in ten years after the second death had taken place, it would be punishment with the second death for ten years. If he should live again in one hundred years, it would be one hundred years' punishment; but as there is no resurrection therefrom, 'it is emphatically an everlasting and an eternal punishment with the second death.' I wish you would discuss this subject with some person that I would employ to meet you and discuss with you."

Min.—"I will not have any thing to do with it; it is beneath my notice."

Lay.—"I cannot think you are correct in your statement, for you have preached against the doctrine, and argued against it with others besides myself."

Min.—"It is of no use to talk with you, for you are determined to have every thing in your own way."

Lay.—"I do not wish to have it any different from what the Bible teaches, and if I am wrong, take your Bible and show me where I am wrong."

Min.—"I will talk no more with you."

E. O. A.

Waupun, Fond du Lac Co., Wis.

For the Crisis.

"The Prayer of Faith shall save the Sick."

There are many people at the present time who think that the fulfillment of this scripture is in the past; and, as the Lord has verified this promise to me down here in the last end of time, I feel that it is my duty to confess it, that others may try the same remedy and so be fully convinced of its efficacy.

I have thought for a long time about writing a few lines for the Crisis in regard to this subject; but feeling my inability to do so, I have delayed it until the present time. And now, feeling that the Lord requires it, I will endeavor to give a brief account of his dealings with me during the past few months.

I always possessed a feeble constitution, and was often afflicted with sickness in my childhood's days. In the fall of 1857 I was brought very low with the typhoid fever, from which I very slowly recovered. I did not fully regain my strength until the spring following, and even then it seemed that my constitution was weaker than ever before. However, I was enabled to labor through the summer until the month of Oct., 1858, when I was again afflicted with nervous and sick headache, dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart, weakness, and general debility; and in the spring following was taken with canker in my throat, until the tonsils were eaten through. This was very painful. I took medicine prescribed by different physicians, all of which proved ineffectual. Indeed, disease compassed me about. My friends nearly despaired of my recovery, and to all appearance I must be laid away in the cold grave.

In much distress of body I was carried to the campmeeting in this place, which was only a short distance; but it so exhausted my strength that I found it in vain to try to attend the meetings. At length I resolved to try the prayer of faith, for this had seemed for a long time the only remedy; and in accordance with St. James' Epistle, I called for the elders of the church, requesting Elds. Billings, Fox and Bishop to come and pray for me. The prayer of faith was offered in my behalf, the promise claimed, and the blessing of health received. Praise the Lord forever! I received this blessing the eighth of Sept., 1859. I attended the remainder of the meetings possessed of health, that blessing of which I I had been deprived for eleven long months. I still live, and in the enjoyment of good health. My heart o'erflows with gratitude to God to-day for his mercy to one so unworthy. O! it prompts me to new engagedness; yes, I will try to improve my strength and health to the glory of my Master.

I have not written this thinking that all would believe my statements, for I find that unbelief exists in many hearts. We often hear it remarked that the day of miracles is in the past; but I think if the professed children of God would live near enough to him to claim the promises as theirs, there would be more Almighty power manifested than is realized at the present time. The power of Jesus is the same today as ever. Blessed be his holy name! Dear Brn. and Srs., let us remember that the Lord says, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." I believe it, and therefore invite all who are afflicted, to apply to this great Physician. From your sister in Christ,

ELLEN E. MAYHEW.

Savoy, Mass., Sept. 3d, 1860.

NOTE.—The above comes from a person with whom I am not personally acquainted, but its correctness is vouched for by a worthy preacher of the gospel with whom I have been acquainted for many years. I believe the statement to be correct.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Lines,

On the death of ALBERTA, infant daughter of Andrew J. Hodgdon, who died of whooping cough at Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 7th.

She's asleep, she's at rest,
All her moaning and pain is o'er;
Mother, even on thy breast,
She ne'er slept so sweet before.

When again thy baby wakes,
All her sickness will be o'er,
And that dreadful strangling cough
Will rack her frame no more.

Her lilly hands are stiff and cold,
Her dark eyes glazed and dim,
But little Bertie's name's enrolled
In the tablets kept by HIM.

Then cease thy weeping, parents,
Though thy tears are now like rain,
For though thy baby now is dead,
Yet still she'll live again.

Then look to the day that is promised,
When the bars of the tomb shall be riven,
And the dead that are blest shall breathe again,
For an endless life in heaven. P. A. T.

Portsmouth, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Visit to a Barn Meeting.

I saw by a notice in the Crisis there was to be a "barn meeting" in South Pittsfield; and as I felt anxious to hear the gospel preached once more in a humble place like the one where my Savior was born; although forty-five miles lay between me and the meeting, I resolved, by God's help, to be there. Truly the Holy Ghost was shed abroad in the meeting. Brethren Knowles and Leavitt dispensed the word on Saturday, to edification. In the evening and on Sunday Bro. Munger spoke the word, and God's spirit sent it home to the hearts of the people. Sinners trembled, backsliders confessed their wanderings and returned, and the infidel stood aghast, while God's power chained the audience to a late hour in the day. One young man, who had been falsely accused a few weeks before the meeting, when he supposed the officer was about to take him, attempted suicide; but he was rescued and saved from the fatal deed. He came to the meeting, was convicted, confessed with his mouth what he believed with his heart, God blessed him, and he went away expecting eternal life through Christ, the great life-giver. The seed sown there will tell in the great day of God. It will prove a savor of life unto life to some, and of death unto death to others. God has some whole hearted children in that part of his vineyard, whose religion is "pocket deep," and they do not intend the man of God shall be under the necessity of leaving the gospel field, and go fishing to get an honest living for himself and family.

The converts were down from Loudon Ridge. They were living children. Their prayers and exhortations were earnest and pathetic, and caused the tears to flow freely from some eyes.

The children beset Bro. Munger to go home to Loudon with them and have a meeting Monday evening. We went with them, and God's slaying power was manifested, and prostrated three persons, two of whom lay from one to two hours, apparently dead to all things in this world.

I would say to the saints scattered abroad, lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh.

J. M. SANBORN.

Ossipee, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Faith.

I feel moved to pen a few lines concerning the faith that was once delivered to the saints. I wish to put the question to my brethren and sisters, are we contending for the faith that was once delivered to the saints? as we read in Jude 3d, "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." There is much written, but little said on this subject. I find in the word of the Lord, that FAITH is the one thing needful; for without it, it is impossible to please God. It is said, "The just shall live by faith;" and if we expect to inherit the promise, we must exercise faith. We are to resist the devil with steadfastness in the faith, for he as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour. I suppose it is in all places, as it is here; the old adversary is on the ground ready to oppose the work of the Lord. Well, I expect it until the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. Some may inquire, what do you say that faith is? Well, I have come to the conclusion that faith is believing that God is, and that he is a rewarder of all them that diligently seek him; and all that he has spoken of his beloved Son, and all that he has given us by inspiration of God, is good for us to treasure up in honest hearts. The word of the Lord tells me that he will withhold "no good thing" "from them that walk uprightly." God's word has been fulfilled upon this point in the case of Daniel, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, and many more; hence we may fully rely upon God's promises; for his promise is sure. Now, do we exercise faith? This is the point at issue. I hope there are not any that think they have faith, who, when they come to the trial of it, like Peter, will be deficient.

"Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ." Here we notice love and faith in connection. The love spoken of, we find in 1 John 5: 3. "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous." Dear brethren and sisters, hold on to what you have attained; let no man take your crown. Grow in grace and a further knowledge of the truth. May the Lord help you all, is my prayer. Yours waiting for the Lord to come. Pray for me, that I may be found ready and waiting.

E. MACOMBER.

New Shoreham, R. I.

Selections.

"Pardon and Grace."

"When I first entered the christian life," said Mr. Wilberforce, shortly before his death, "my prayer was for pardon and grace. And now that I am near the end of my course, I find that all my petitions, all the wants of my soul, may still be comprehended in those two requests—pardon and grace."

Here are the universal and perpetual desires of the renewed soul. When David said, "I have gone astray like a lost sheep, seek thy servant," he prayed for pardon and grace.

When the penitent and returning church prays, "Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously," Hosea 14, what is it but a prayer for pardon and grace?

When Paul sends us to "the throne of grace," Heb. 4, to obtain mercy and find grace to help us in time of need, pardon and grace form the whole burden of the applications he enjoins on us.

When God promises in his last covenant, "I will be merciful unto their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more;" and, "I will put my law in their minds, and write it in their hearts," pardon and grace comprehend the whole boundless grant of divine compassion and goodness.

Pardon and grace! the very intensity with which the new-born soul longs for them, is a sure proof of the gracious life within.

Pardon and grace! The soul that has them, has all things else, either in possession or sure reversion. Oh, "the mountain of light," and "the sea of light," those priceless diamonds which glow on the wrists of the king of Persia, are worthless in comparison of those inestimable gems, "pardon and grace!"—Messenger.

The Syrian Massacres.

Most distressing details of the horrible massacres in Syria, attending the bloody contests between the semi-Roman-catholic Maronites and the Druses, a fanatical Mohammedan sect, have been received from that distracted country, calling forth the deepest sympathy for those who have been exposed to the barbarity of the infuriated enemies of christianity. After burning about one hundred and fifty towns and villages, massacreing ten thousand persons, and reducing about twenty thousand widows and orphans to the utmost poverty, the Moslems of a suburb of Damascus, aided by Druses, Koords, and Arabs, rose against the Christian population of that city, slaughtered between three and four thousand in cold blood, drove twenty-five thousand from their ruined habitations, and completely desolated the Christian quarter of the city, without the slightest effort of the government to prevent it, the Turkish garrison of five thousand men being inactive or hostile. Owing to the earnest remonstrances of the English, French, and Russian ambassadors, the Porte despatched Ali Fuad Pasha to Syria with full powers to suppress the insurrection, and to punish severely the offenders. In accordance with a convention agreed upon at Paris by the Great Powers, about 10,000 French soldiers have sailed for Beirut; 1,500 English soldiers have also landed in Syria. By the latest accounts, Fuad Pasha has completely quieted the people.

It would not be surprising if this intervention of the Great Powers in the affair of Turkey should result in the breaking up of the temporal power of the Turks. France will strenuously maintain the rights of those Christians who acknowledge the claims of the Pope of Rome to be the head of the church, while Russia will be the protector of those who acknowledge or are inclined towards the Greek church. The action of these two great powers will be awaited with the deepest interest.

In the mean time, the condition of the surviving sufferers in Syria, of whom it is supposed that there are from 75,000 to 80,000 who have been reduced from comfortable circumstances to poverty, has appealed with great power to the sympathy of Christians in this country. A committee of twenty-five prominent citizens of New York was appointed at a meeting held for the purpose at the Tract-house, August 13, for the sake of giving it practicable and effective expression. A prompt and generous response has been made, and more than ten thousand dollars has already been remitted to Syria.—Ex.

The Unnamed Women of the Gospels.

The hand that might have drawn aside
The veil, which from unloving sight
Those shrinking forms avails to hide,
With tender care has wrapped it tight.

He would not have the sullied name
Once fondly spoken in a home,
A mark for strangers' righteous blame,
Branded through every age to come.

And thus we only speak of them
As those on whom his mercies meet,
"She whom the Lord would not condemn,"
And "she who bathed with tears his feet."

Trusted to no evangelist,
First heard where sins no more defile,
Read from the Book of Life by Christ,
And consecrated by his smile.

—The Three Wakings.

A True Gentleman.

A true gentleman! God's servant, the world's master, and his own man. Virtue is his business, Study his recreation, Contentment his rest, and happiness his reward. God is his father, the Church is his mother, the Saints are his brethren, and he is a Friend to all that need him. Heaven is his inheritance, Religion is his mistress, Loyalty and Justice his two Ladies of Honor, Devotion is his Chaplain, Chastity his Chamberlain, Sobriety his Butler, Temperance his Cook, Hospitality his Housekeeper, Providence his Steward, Charity his Treasurer, Piety his Mistress of the House, and Discretion his Porter, to let him in and out, as is most fit.

Thus is his whole family made up of virtues, and he is the true master of his family.

He is necessitated to take the world in his way to HEAVEN, but he walks through it as fast as he can; and all his business by the way is to GLORIFY the name of God, and DO GOOD TO MANKIND.

Take him all in two words—he is a MAN, a CHRISTIAN.

Charity Schools of London.

Extract from a letter of the Rev. J. P. Newman, now in Europe, to Mr. G. P. Disosway, of N. Y.

. . . . I saw them in the Crystal Palace. The occasion of their assembling was to hold their annual festival, which is usually held in St. Paul's, but the Cathedral undergoing repairs, they were compelled to change the place this year. . . . . Twenty thousand people had assembled to hear the blended music of so many voices. The children were seated in the grand orchestra, the seats rising one above another, which gave them a splendid appearance. Each school was differently dressed. Some of the boys were attired in white pants, and blue coats, others had on drab pants and blue coats, while one whole school wore little red continental coats, with bright metallic buttons. Some of them had silver stars on their breasts, denoting their good behavior and proficiency in study. The girls were very prettily attired in dresses of different colors, as, red, blue, green, yellow, and scarlet, and they wore little caps, aprons, and vandykes. Great ingenuity was displayed in arranging them in their seats, according to sex, age, size, and the color of their apparel. O! it was a beautiful sight to see five thousand children, from four to twelve years old, in their many colored costumes, seated in a grand semicircle! When all were in, one simultaneous cheer burst from the orchestra, the boys stamping, clapping, and shouting, and the girls waving their white handkerchiefs. This was a salutation of welcome to the audience, who responded long and loud.

Then came the singing. At one wave of the teacher's hand, those five thousand children rose at once, as if by magic! And O! what music. How happy it made me! I wish you could have been there to enjoy it.

The first piece all sang together. The second was sung by the girls, soft and sweet as the strains of a lyre. In the third, the boys and girls alternated, and the responsive hallelujah was magnificent. This response would sometimes be commenced by those in the outer circles and gradually roll down the center, when it would rise like a mighty swell of music. Martin Luther's hymn was accompanied with a French horn, which sounded whenever the word trumpet occured, giving the piece a most solemn and thrilling effect.—Ex.

ANOTHER MONSTER PRAYER-MEETING.—On Monday, July 2, another great union prayer-meeting was held in Belfast, Ireland, in the Royal Botanic Gardens, which cover a space of ten or fifteen acres. Excursion trains of cars brought in thousands of persons from the country. More than twenty preaching stands were erected, from each of which ascended songs of praise and prayer, while ministers of every denomination in the Protestant church addressed the listening crowds. Not a solitary instance of disturbance occurred, but the conduct of the whole assembly was as exemplary as that of an ordinary congregation. It is estimated that more than fifty thousand people visited the Gardens during the day, and that thirty thousand were present at one time.

CHANGE OF SENTIMENT.—It is stated that the most prominent literary men of France, who have been nominally Catholic, and are for the most part really infidel, are now advocating the historical, literary, missionary, and theological claims of Protestantism, while some fearlessly avow the superiority of Protestantism as a system of religious faith.

☞ You can, if you choose, look upon poverty, deprivation and want in such a way as to make yourself and your fellow men about you uncomfortable; but how much wiser would it be for you to say, in all your disadvantages and rough usage in life, "I am better off than my Master was, who was without sin, or spot, or blame."

Hygiene.

"THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

For the Crisis.

To Smokers.

Much has been said and written against smoking, showing scientifically (not merely asserting) that it impairs the reasoning faculties, memory, and health, and that the smoker cannot heed the injunction of Paul in Rom. 12: 1, to "present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service,"—yet I wish to say a word more. It is "your reasonable service" to employ those reasoning powers which God has given you in the service of the Lord Jesus, instead of having them impaired by the use of tobacco, either smoked, chewed, or snuffed.

It is "reasonable service" for you to treasure up the word of the Lord, and to remember his dealings with those that would disobey in spite of admonition; also for you to remember the many blessings with which your pathway has been strewn all your life long, which you forget, and manifest "black ingratitude" toward God. When we administer to the wants of a person, and continue acts of kindness to them for a long time, if they forget all we have done for them, and treat us as though they "asked no odds" of us, we feel that they are very ungrateful. How do you suppose God feels toward some of you? I often hear this class of people, that have been admonished and shown the evils of tobacco, and they themselves realizing that they were losing their memory, praying for the Lord to strengthen their memory, but still cling to the cause with eager grasp, not willing to give it up. What do you suppose those prayers will avail with God? How do you think God looks upon them?

It is "reasonable service" that you preserve your health, and employ your strength in doing good. The cause of much of the sickness of mankind can be traced directly to the use of tobacco in some form. It is "reasonable" service for you to use the money which you spend annually for tobacco, to the "glory of God," in scattering light, or helping those that deny themselves and go forth to try to have men keep their passions, appetites, and evil propensities in subjection to "the law of the Spirit." Now, Brn., after all that has been said and written against the use of tobacco, if you will still cling to it, and think more of your idol than you do of Christ,—more of your pipe than of your Bible,—more of your box or pouch with tobacco or snuff in it, than you do of your closet,—more about self-gratification than of the prayer meeting,—if you choose to sow to the flesh, gratifying the lusts thereof, and of the flesh reap corruption, rather than sow to the Spirit, keeping the carnal man in subjection, and "of the Spirit reap life everlasting;" I beg of you to have humanity enough to smoke when ALONE, or not in the company of those who do not use the worse than useless weed. When in the sitting room with company—in the stage coach—on board the steamboat—in an assembly—or wherever you may chance to be, where there are those, (or even one) that do not smoke, oh, do not smoke in their presence, where they will have to inhale the smoke; for it has about the same effect upon them as it does to smoke; and you are not only guilty of injuring yourself, but of injuring others also. Remember, "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."—Gal. 5: 24.

A. P. MOORE.

Conesus Centre, N. Y.

Children's Eating.

Some parents compel their children to eat against their will, as when they come to the breakfast table without an appetite, or have lost it in prospect of a visit, or ride, or of going abroad, or for the sake of "eating their plates clean," in discouragement of wasteful habits. Certainly, a child ought to have the privilege of a pig, that of eating only when it is hungry. Unless we are thirsty, we can not drink the purest spring water without a feeling of aversion and as for eating when there is no appetite, it is revolting; as any one may prove to himself by attempting to take a second meal in twenty minutes after having eaten a regular dinner.

The complicated machinery of man, like that of the steam-engine which is in incessant motion, is wearing away every second of his existence. The engine wears out eventually, and a new one has to be constructed; but the machinery of the human body was made by an omnipotent Architect; made to last for ages; made to make its own repairs, to supply its own wastes, so that while it is wearing itself out, it is at the same time regenerating and renewing itself. When the human system is not interfered with, its supply is always equal to its waste: regulated by an unerring instinct—that instinct is called "appetite"—which is greater or less, according to the previous waste; that waste is always in proportion to the exercise which has been taken, as the wear of any machinery is in proportion to its running. Every man knows for himself, that if he walks ten miles he becomes hungry; if fifteen, he is more so. But what makes hunger, and what regulates it to more or less? The wastes of the system set in motion certain processes by which a fluid is prepared, called the gastric juice, and it is so arranged by Divinity, that a certain amount of waste occasions a certain amount of gastric juice; their proportion is exact and uniform; for nature makes no mistakes, does nothing in vain; she makes no more gastric juice than will digest food enough to make up for the waste and want of the body. The appetite, the hunger is excited by the presence of the gastric juice about the stomach; but if there is no gastric juice there can be no hunger, no appetite, and to compel a child to swallow food into the stomach when there is no gastric juice there to receive it, is an absurdity and a cruelty, because, there being no gastric juice there to receive and take care of it, it is rejected by vomiting, or remains there for hours like a "load," or "ball," or "heaviness," or else to ferment, causing "oppression," "wind," "acidity," or general discomfort, sometimes for half a night! Similar results take place in old and young, when more food has been taken than there is gastric juice to manage properly; hence, the more than folly of "forcing" food, of eating to "make it even," or taking a single swallow beyond the actual calling of the appetite, expressed in the familiar term, "over-eating," of which too many are conscious, almost every day of their existence. It ought to bring the blush of shame to every cheek, the twinge of penitence to every conscience, because it is a violence offered to the body, a shock imparted to the system, which never fails of more or less derangement, and not unfrequently arrests the machinery of life, to run no more forever! as in an attack of cramp-colic, or deadly diarrhea, (cholera,) at midnight, as a consequence of a late over-hearty meal, or the still more terrible apoplexy, which hurries from life to the judgment without the opportunity of a moment's consciousness, or of the final farewell to the loved ones left behind.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Apples.

There is scarcely an article of vegetable food more widely useful and more universally loved than the apple. Why every farmer in the nation has not an apple orchard where the trees will grow at all, is one of the mysteries. Let every family lay in from two to ten or more barrels, and it will be to them the most economical investment in the whole range of culinaries. A raw mellow apple is digested in an hour and a half; while boiled cabbage requires five hours. The most healthful desert which can be placed on the table, is a baked apple. If taken freely at breakfast with coarse bread and butter, without meat or flesh of any kind, it has an admirable effect on the general system, often removing constipation, correcting acidities, and cooling off febrile conditions, more effectually than the most approved medicines. If families could be induced to substitute the apple, sound, ripe, and luscious, for the pies, cakes, candies, and other sweetmeats with which their children are too often indiscreetly stuffed, there would be a diminution in the sum total of doctors' bills in a single year, sufficient to lay in a stock of this delicious fruit for a whole season's use.—Dr. Hall.

Let the Children Sleep.

We earnestly advise that all who think a great deal, who have infirm health, who are in trouble, or who have to work hard, to take all the sleep they can get, without medical means.

We caution parents, particularly, not to allow their children to be waked up of mornings—let nature wake them up, she will not do it prematurely; but have a care that they go to bed at an early hour; let it be earlier and earlier, until it is found that they wake up themselves in full time to dress for breakfast. Being waked up early, and allowed to engage in difficult or any studies, late and just before retiring, has given many a beautiful and promising child the brain fever, or determined ordinary ailments to the production of water on the brain.

Let parents make every possible effort to have their children go to sleep in a pleasant humor. Never scold or give lectures, or in any way wound a child's feelings as it goes to bed. Let all banish business and every worldly care at bed time, and let sleep come to a mind at peace with God and all the world.—Morning Star.

☞ Dr. Winship says:—"You should select for your sleeping room an apartment on the 'sunny side,' and let the sun play into it at least six hours a day, if the clouds will allow him to show his face. Keep it ventilated all the time, and especially keep the windows partially open at night, but avoid drafts. Practice general ablution once a week in cold weather, twice a week in warm. Too much bathing defeats every intention for which water is externally applied. Never rise early, unless you retire early. Be sure to get sleep enough. Gradually wear less and less clothing about the neck, till you can keep it entirely exposed without taking cold.

☞ Erysipelas is sometimes promptly cured by applying a poultice of raw cranberries, pounded and placed on the part over night.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to ELD. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i.e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 266. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 7.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

The Crumbling Image.

BY VESTA M. CUDWORTH.

Earth is enveloped in mysterious gloom,
And trembling nations read their certain doom;
Mimic convulsions of the earthquake's power
Startle the dreamer, while the war-clouds lower:
Prophetic visions press with solemn tread,
Like coffin-bearers burthened with the dead.

The great metallic Image's wasted form
In passive weakness waits the coming storm;
Her golden brightness long since passed away,
Her silver beauty charms no more for aye;
The meaner glories of the brass are gone,
The strong and powerful iron has become
Mixed with the miry clay, which brings to view
Her waning strength,—favor and beauty too
Are numbered with the story of the past.
And with another weak, spasmodic gasp,
She'll pass away, and never, never more
Be found, like chaff from summer's threshing floor:
Her end is sudden, and her doom is sure,
For this proud world must sink to rise no more.

For the Crisis.

In Expectation.

Ages on ages had passed since the formation of this earth, and sin had nearly defaced the beauty of all that was pronounced so very good in the beginning; a shadowy promise of a Messiah was retained only by the seers subsequent to the fall,—when the Lord added another dispensation, opening with the giving of a law written on tables, with types and shadows pointing to a substance which was to make the hearts of many glad. Generations again had passed; prophets had spoken of a good time coming; Israel in consequence had hoped for a time, till spoiled by their eagerness to become like other nations, her glory had nearly departed, when lo! a messenger in singular attire appeared in the wilderness of Judea, proclaiming the speedy coming of a deliverer. The news spread with the rapidity of lightning from hill to vale, and from hamlet to city; and all Jerusalem was troubled, except the few who "looked for the consolation of Israel." The general feeling was aroused, and the people were "in expectation" that some wonderful event, some mighty change that would perhaps better the condition of all the world, had fully arrived. A few only waited for the consolation of Israel, and a still smaller number understood the nature of the first advent of the babe of Bethlehem. His life was one of unmitigated suffering, and he must needs pour out his soul unto death. Nevertheless his resurrection was sure. A subsequent ascension must follow, after leaving a faithful record of his certain return.

Another dispensation followed, called the "visitation of the Gentiles." All the prophets had pointed beyond this period for the restoration of this earth for the home of the blessed. Israel stumbled through unbelief, a few only believed the "report," and to them followed a long night of tribulation, during which the hope of the church was obscured by the craftiness of designing men, and the foretold tradition which made void the law and the prophets. Generation had succeeded generation, and beside the heathen notion of rewards and punishments at death, the church had for a century been looking for a thousand years of peace and harmony to precede the coming of Christ, all to be effected by the preaching and prayers of an uninspired and degenerate clergy and church. Death had the while been filling her land with the martyrs and sufferers of Jesus. A few only of the saints remained, a dark cloud hung around them, when lo! another message, symbolized by the apocalyptic angel on the wing, announced "the time of the end," the "hour of judgment," the "dreadful day of the Lord" had come. A new spring, a bright hope took the place of despair, and the remnant were joyous in expectation of realizing the consummation of their long cherished hopes, by the speedy return of Jesus Christ. The announcement flew to every nation under heaven. The church rejoiced, and the world trembled through fear of the truth of its fulfillment. Time passed, and the Lord did not come. The true church were disappointed and sad. The hireling priest began to "smite his fellow servant," the hypocrite derided, the wicked scoffed, and truly we were made the "song of the drunkard."

A few long and tedious years have been counted by the faithful, in which they are being tried, purified and made white. The world are in expectation of something wonderful to transpire. The politician is looking for the downfall of all despotic rule, and for the establishing of republicanism throughout the world. The Roman Catholic church is trembling with half fear and half hope of some mighty change that will forever give her the pre-eminence. The devotees of Spiritualism are looking for a "coming one" that will either peaceably or by force compel all the world to embrace her religious tenets. And the nominal churches are drunken with the expectation of seeing soon the commencement of a temporal millennium.

All, all are in expectation. The students of prophecy, the church of God, are looking for a kingdom which shall be under the whole heaven. They are looking for the king of that kingdom, to raise the dead in Christ, change the saints that are living, to judge the world, to destroy the wicked, and reign over the righteous forever. Hark! there is silence in heaven for half an hour, or a period of seven days. The last warning has been given. Behold! a phenomenon appears in heaven! it is a "white cloud," it is "the sign of the Son of man." Where are the "wise men," the "astrologers" and "soothsayers?" It must be accounted for upon some natural principle, to soothe the rising fears of the kings and hosts of the high ones. "As it was in the days of Noah, so also shall the coming of the Son of man be." "Yet seven days and I will cause it to rain forty days and forty nights." Saints of the Most High, wait and see the salvation of God. Seven days will reveal the Son of man, after the sign appears. Behold! the time is expired. "All the tribes of the earth are beginning to mourn;" the "kings of the earth, the great men, the rich men, the chief captains and mighty men, every bond man, and every free man, now hide themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains: and say to the mountains and rocks, fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?"

There is another company. Hark! what say they? "Lo! this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, and we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth, for the Lord hath spoken it."

A. F. Servis.

For the Crisis.

When shall we have a pure Language?

BY S. D. BERRY.

"There is a world to come,
Happy and pure."

"Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures."—Matt. 22: 29.

In the book of Zephaniah, chap. 9, we read of a time when Jehovah will "turn to the people a pure language;" and the world's conversionists contend that that time will be when all men are converted to the Lord. This opinion we do not object to, for we understand by other Scripture that the pure language will be given when all who then live are righteous; and, of course, they will all be a converted people; that is, all who then live upon earth will be those who have been converted to the Lord. Children will be there, but they do not need conversion—the younger portion of them.

Not that all wicked men who shall live at, or rather before, the beginning of that time, will be converted to christianity; but that the Lord will take out from among the wicked his desired number of righteous ones to show forth his praise in the earth; and then has destroyed all the wicked—cut them off from the earth; "for the wicked shall NOT INHERIT the earth," says inspiration.—Prov. 10: 30; "For EVIL DOERS shall be CUT OFF: but they that wait upon the Lord, THEY SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH." . . . "Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall EXALT thee to inherit the land (earth); when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it."—Ps. 37: 9–34—(see whole chapter.)

A certain theologian—a "D. D."—says that, in the "temporal millennium," when all people shall become converted,—all knowing the Lord from the least to the greatest,—the wicked, even, being all converted, instead of being "cut off"—the Bible to the contrary notwithstanding—then, he says, will all people speak "one pure language," and "call upon the name of the Lord with one consent." He does not stop here, but tells us what the "pure language" will be. Does he say it will be the Hebrew? No. Does he say it will be the language spoken by Adam and his posterity unto the building of the tower of Babel, when it became confounded, so that no man could understand his neighbor? No. Does he say it will be a language which we never have heard? No. What then? "It will be the English language," says he. He thinks this is destined to be the universal, "pure language." One reason why he thinks so is because the English language is spoken more extensively than any other all over the globe now. Great evidence that.

It is a strange notion to call a language "pure" that is made up of almost every other language in the world, and which contains words that have many different meanings. We suppose a pure language would be one which contains words that have but one meaning. We understand that the Arabic is the purest language known in this respect, the Arabs having a word for every distinct idea and thing, and that word is never used for any other idea or thing.

Supposing the English language to be divided into a hundred parts, sixty would be of Saxon origin, thirty of Latin, five of Greek, the other five parts from all other languages. Some of these latter are Hebrew, and mostly belonging to religious matters. Some of them we will name: "Amen, cabalo, cherub, ephod, hallelujah, jubilee, manna, Messiah, seraph," etc. We have more words from the Arabic language than from the Hebrew. They are mostly astronomical, arithmetical, and chemical terms. We account for this from the fact that in the middle ages the Arabs were the arithmeticians, astronomers, and chemists of the world. These are some of the Arabic words that have become Anglicised: "algebra, cypher, zero, zenith, nadir, talisman, almanack," etc; and of the chemical terms: "alkali, alembic, elixir, alcohol," etc. We have some other terms from the Arabic, such as: "gazelle, gariffe, lemon, saffron, orange, sherbet, lute, syrup, artichoke, mattress, jar, coffee, sugar, amber, mummy, jasmin, crimson," etc.; also, "magazine, sofa, tariff, caret, arsenal, admiral, sultan, divan, vizier," etc. A few Persian words we have also; such as, "saraband, taffeta, scarlet, azure, caravan, pagoda, bazar, lilac," etc. A few Turkish words also, like "turban, tulip, chouse, dragoman," etc. All these words, besides many from other tongues, help make up our language. Among those words having their origin in America and learned from the natives, may be found these: "chocolate, potato, tobacco, maize, condor, hamoc, cacique, wigwam, hurricane," etc. Among the Italian words which have been brought to our shore are, "gazette, charlatan, bandit, pantaloon;" and the Spanish are, "palaver, gala, alligator, negro, musquito," etc. Some of our sea terms are from Holland, such as, "sloop, yacht, schooner," etc. Some of the Celtic are, "plaid, clan, kilt, bard, reel," etc. Many Greek words, also, have become quite common with us. Many other words also, from other countries, have got in use in our language, some of them recently, and others are being added all of the time, especially from the French, which language is composed in a great part of Latin, besides many other languages, as is the English.

Now, is it not a question whether God will cause all men on earth to speak the English language, and consider it a "pure language?" Some are inclined to interpret this text spiritually, and argue that God will cause all men's minds to well up to him, as one mind. What would this have to do with "language?" This arguing is to the effect that God will not turn any language at all to the people; whereas he says he will "turn to the people a PURE LANGUAGE;" and what else can we understand by the term "pure language," than—"PURE LANGUAGE?"

But let us just glance at a few of the multitude of words in our "pure" language, which have a like pronunciation, and different meanings; and some of the words, even, being spelled the same, and having opposite meanings. But a few examples of the "pure language" will suffice our purpose in this direction. EXAMPLES: Not—a word that expresses denial; knot, a tie—also, joint of a plant. Tract—a region; tract, a small pamphlet or book. Tack—a small nail; tack, a rope; tack, to fasten, tie up, sew; tack, to turn short. Die—a stamp; die, a small cube; die, to loose life; dye, to color, to stain. Fair—clear, pure, white; fair, openly, frankly; fair, a stated market; fair, a levee where fancy goods are sold at no set price; fare, food; fare, price of passage; fare, to be in good condition. Rain—water falling in drops; rein, strap of a bridle; reign, royal government; rane, a species of deer; reign, restraint. Wright—an artificer in wood; write, to form letters or characters; rite, a solemn act of religion; right, proper, true, just, fit; right, justice, just claim, property; right, the side opposed to the left; right, directly; right, to relieve from wrong.

Many more examples might, of course, be given, for this is not a thousandth part of the whole; but here is enough to show our "great theologian," to whom I have referred, how "pure his "pure language" is that he says Jehovah will choose for all men to speak, when "all the wicked become converted to christianity." The "D. D." might choose this "pure language," but who thinks that Jehovah will? I have no doubt that Jehovah will choose this language when "all the wicked become converted to christianity," as our "D. D." says, and not before. So when all pirates and blacklegs of every description turn christians, we may expect the universal reception and use of the English language.

In the "regeneration" and "restitution of ALL things," we expect that the language which was used previous to the building of the tower of Babel, and which was then lost, (Gen. 11: 1, 6–9) will be among the "all things" that shall be restored, and it will be restored to the redeemed for their use. This will be the "pure language" that Jehovah has promised to "turn to the people." That which Adam used was undoubtedly a "pure language," and it being lost, why will it not be turned to us again? But if that language is not restored, we shall have one just as pure, I have no doubt.

When this "pure language" shall be turned to the people, it will not be in a temporal millennium, with a spiritual reign of righteousness, with Christ still up in the heavens as now; but it will be when Christ dwells in the midst of his people, (Rev. 21: 3,) and "reigns in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients (the ancients resurrected) gloriously," (Isa. 24: 23); when he takes the "throne of his glory," and his kingdom on the earth, of which David's was a kind of type, and establishes and orders it from that time "henceforth, even forever."

That the "pure language" will be given to God's people at that time, is shown in the context of the text under consideration. Jehovah speaks of the time when the nations are gathered for the "battle of the great day of God Almighty,"—the battle of "Armageddon," in the valley of Judgment, when his indignation is poured upon them; and after that is when the pure language is given. Says he: "Wait ye upon me, saith Jehovah, UNTIL the day that I RISE UP TO THE PREY: FOR MY DETERMINATION IS TO GATHER THE NATIONS, that I may assemble the kingdoms, TO POUR UPON THEM MINE INDIGNATION, EVEN ALL MY FIERCE ANGER: FOR ALL THE EARTH SHALL BE DEVOURED with the fire of my jealousy. For THEN (next) will I turn to the people a PURE LANGUAGE, that they may ALL call upon the name of Jehovah, to serve him with one consent." "Sing, O daughter of Zion! shout, O Israel! Be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem! Jehovah hath TAKEN AWAY THY JUDGMENTS, HE HATH CAST OUT THINE ENEMY: The King of Israel—Jehovah—IS IN THE MIDST OF THEE; Thou SHALT NOT SEE EVIL ANY MORE."—Zeph. 3: 8, 9, 14, 15. At this time will the "pure language" come.

"Hail, Messiah! reign forever!
Hail, Immanuel! Lord of all!"

S. D. B.

Portsmouth, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Baptism.

In this age of "turning and twisting," when schools are established in almost every county to instruct men in this science and send them forth to preach the "word of God" to the convenience of men who have other objects than to "glorify God," wishing to serve the Lord by doing just as they always had done,—in this age when a person that has not been through one of these preacher factories and has nothing to "preach" but "the word" is hooted at, and called everything but a decent man,—in such an age as this, I say, these scientific turners have much to say about the various meanings of the word baptize. They tell us that to be "buried with him (Christ) by baptism into his death" means to be sprinkled, poured or immersed. A person would be considered the non-possessor of a great stock of knowledge, that in attempting to bury anything, should sprinkle or pour a little dirt upon it and leave it, unless he sprinkled or poured enough on to bury it. To be "planted in the likeness of his death" they say means the same. Who is there under heaven that would think of sprinkling or pouring a little dirt upon a hill of corn, or potatoes, or anything of the kind, to plant it? Who is there, from the child of four years old, but what would bury the seed in the earth? If, as they say, baptism is a "disputed point," how is it to be settled? If our present translation is not pointed enough on this subject, and we go to the original, we find that there is much dispute and contradiction about the term bapto. "Who shall decide when doctors disagree?" We will appeal to the Greeks themselves for information, thinking perhaps that they know as much about their own language as those that get a little smattering of it and set themselves up as teachers of the world. Eld. Millard, of the Christian denomination, who has traveled all through the East, says: "I was among the Greeks and heard them discourse on baptism and administer the same. They have always claimed that there is but one mode of christian baptism, and that is by immersion. They claim that bapto means to immerse, submerge, overwhelm, etc., and I believe if every professed christian had no other object than to "glorify God" in doing his will, they would every one be immersed."

Is not this enough? If the Greeks do not understand their own language, who does? It has also been the custom, not only among the Greeks but of the whole world, to bury persons soon after they die, without first waiting from three months to three years to see if they will remain dead.

A. P. Moore.

Concsus Centre, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

To A. F——, W——, N. Y.

When round the throne immortals stand,
Happy and pure and fair,
With harps and palms in every hand,
Say, will you meet me there?

When loved ones meet to part no more,
Beyond the tempter's snare,
When all earth's sorrows shall be o'er,
Say, will you meet me there?

When parents dear and friends we love
Shall meet, all joy to share
With Christ and all the hosts above,
Say, will you meet me there?

When from the dust the saints shall rise
To meet their Lord in air,
Then will you share the glad surprise?
Say, will you meet me there?

When saints immortal join to sing
In realms of beauty fair,
While harps of God with music ring,
Say, will you meet me there?

H. L. H.

"Our Home," June, 1860.

For the Crisis.

Dedication of the new Chapel in Sandy Hill.

Bro. Grant:—As notice went out through the Crisis that our new chapel was to be dedicated Oct. 4th, I presume an account of the exercises of that occasion will not be uninteresting to many of the brethren and sisters scattered abroad; therefore I think best to write a few words respecting it, and also of the way God has led his people here—which has been "marvelous in our eyes"—hoping that some almost disheartened one may thereby feel encouraged to work during the remaining hours of our bondage, and, if possible, lead wanderers to a home in the Kingdom. Yes, I say the last hours of night, for even now the watchmen are proclaiming the day near. Soon the first streaks of the morning's dawn will appear, and the day-star of gladness will arise to herald the approach of our Savior,—not as the babe in Bethlehem, but as the King of kings,—He whose right it is to reign.

The day appointed for our dedication was quite rainy, so that many were prevented from meeting with us; but, as it was, we had as large a congregation as could be expected. The exercises were opened by singing, after which Eld. J. Parry read a portion of the 27th and the whole of the 84th Psalms, and then offered a petition to the Father of all our mercies, that his blessing might rest upon the exercises of the occasion, and bless them to the promotion of his most glorious cause; when we again sung to the praise of God, after which Eld. John Howell, of Poultney, preached from these words: "But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest; for as concerning this sect we know that everywhere it is spoken against."—Acts 28: 22. In his sermon he gave an expose of the faith of our church, showing that the coming of Christ is a doctrine of the Bible too plain to be misunderstood; and that this coming is in the future—how far he could not determine—but prophecy shows it to be near. This coming is to be the second coming, for there are but two spoken of; consequently Christ does not come at death, neither did he come at the destruction of Jerusalem; for the work to be accomplished in immediate connection with his second coming was not then and there performed. His coming will be attended with great glory, even the glory of the Father, and then he will receive an eternal kingdom, and sit on a throne of glory to judge the world. The righteous will then be raised from a state of darkness and silence, where they know not anything; then they will be immortalized and with the living righteous will be caught up to meet the Redeemer and be presented to him without spot or blemish; showing that God's people must be a holy people perfect in every good work. The saints will then receive a kingdom according to the promise made to Abraham; the wicked will after this be destroyed, and the righteous left to possess this earth restored to its Edenic beauty.

After speaking on some other points, he mentioned the fact of our being a distinct people, saying, that some might blame us for preserving our identity, and thus adding one more to the already multitudinous number of sects. In answer to this he said that our identity was forced upon us by others, for the simple reason that they would not tolerate us as christians; consequently our identity was a necessity.

In all his positions Bro. Howell fortified himself with the usual "Thus saith the Lord;" so that the battlement of right seemed strong and able to stand the seige of the Devil and all his emissaries. The discourse was a source of comfort to the disciples, and we pray that it may be the means of leading some into the true light that "shineth more and more unto the perfect day;" that they may enjoy that liberty which those do who have found the hope of the gospel, and experience great peace in believing.

At the conclusion of the discourse, Eld. S. G. Mathewson offered a short but very appropriate prayer, dedicating the house to the worship of God, after which the choir sung a hymn written by Sr. Fannie Parry for the occasion; and the congregation was dismissed with the benediction.

We repaired to our homes feeling thankful that we had those among us who had the means and the heart to build a temple for our God, and we could but compare our present circumstances with those of a year ago. Then we were obliged to hold our meetings wherever we could find an open door, and at times that open door was closed against us, even after an appointment had gone out, so that when we assembled, behold, the doors were closed! Now, how different! Through the blessing of God, we are permitted to worship under our own vine and fig-tree, with none to molest. How thankful ought we to be! My mind wanders back through the ways in which God has led us thus far, and though at times we have felt that His ways were not ours, yet as we take a retrospective view we feel that truly "All things work together for good to those who love the Lord."

A few months after you held the discussion with J. F. Walker, which I think was one year ago last April, a church was organized here, composed of nine members, who appointed Bro. Parry their pastor. This little band of loving brothers and sisters struggled along for some time, holding their meetings in a school-house, situated a little way back from the village, where they had the Spirit of God with them, and his blessing was their portion. Early in the fall, yourself and Bro. Mathewson came to labor among us, to see if something could not be done here and in Fort Edward, a village two miles distant. Accordingly, a grove-meeting was held here for a few days, and an appointment given out for a meeting to be held in a Union meeting-house at Ft. Edward, built by different societies and individuals, to be used by any and all denominations, even to the Universalists and Spiritualists. But when we went to the house in the evening we found no lights, and the door locked; so here was a dilemma. Finally, it was decided to try and obtain the Union Hall which belonged to the village. After waiting on the steps for some time an entrance was gained, lights procured, and quite a congregation assembled to hear Bro. Grant preach. We afterwards obtained the house that was refused us, and held meetings there for some time.

We obtained permission to hold a meeting in the Baptist house. The evening was rainy, and the doors were closed, and we were obliged to stand in the rain some time while some one found a key to unlock the door. We finally obtained an entrance, and listened to a sermon from Bro. G.

Soon after this, Bro. S. G. Mathewson was called to preach to us during the winter. A hall was fitted up for our use, and in that hall, to which an entrance could only be had by a back way, we have worshiped the past year, and enjoyed many precious seasons in worshiping God. Impenitent persons have been made to see their condition, and we have had additions to our church, until at present we number about forty members; so that when we left the Hall for the last time it was with some reluctance. We have a very neat, comfortable house of worship, in which we hope to enjoy much of God's Spirit.

We have toiled thus far, and are willing to work longer in the vineyard, feeling that we are fully repaid for all our labor. Bro. Mathewson has already commenced holding meetings in the school districts near by, and seems very desirous to witness an outpouring of God's Spirit upon the people. We have suffered much persecution, but feel that it is unworthy of notice compared to the glory that will be made manifest to us in the great hereafter. Yes, although we have had doors closed against us in our pilgrimage here while waiting for the coming of the Bridegroom,—when He comes there will be an open door for all those who are prepared for his second appearing. Then let us watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation; soon we shall enter into the rest prepared for the faithful.

If there should be a little company of waiting children who feel almost discouraged, at times, on account of opposition, let them put their trust in God, remembering that in the "Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." The prayer of the righteous availeth much. Then pray on. Let the weapons used in your warfare be those recommended by Paul in Eph. 6th chap.: the "breast-plate of righteousness," "shield of faith," "helmet of salvation," "sword of the Spirit," etc.

Judson Austin.

For the Crisis.

"In the time of their Visitation they shall perish."—Jer. 10: 15.

These are fearful words; the thought of men perishing, even when the mercy of our God is visiting them, is terrible. If there were no mighty influences being exerted upon them, and no heavenly providence visiting them, then it would not seem so fearful; but for men to perish even in the time of their visitation by God, is appalling to the heart. But it is a blessed thought that God does visit the nations, notwithstanding our wickedness and rebellion against him. He does vouchsafe unto us his glorious presence. The manner of these visitations is various, sometimes in wrath, and again in mercy.

1. Visitation of the Holy Spirit. And who has not felt this? What person cannot recall the hour when a strange influence rested upon the heart, and something seemed to say to us, "Repent and turn to God that you may have life?" The first marked demonstration of this visitation was seen on the day of Pentecost, and so evident was it to the multitude that "God was in it," men of all nations looked on in astonishment and wondered that he should so manifest himself to men; and, blessed be God, the Spirit manifested at that time, re-visits us who live to-day. Hallelujah to God for that soul-cheering promise—"I will send the comforter!"

The visitation of our God is also seen in the quickening of the christian church. After months of comparative dullness and inactivity, the Lord suddenly comes to his temple," and catching the inspiration the christian begins to pray, faith is exercised, and the power of God falls upon the people,—sinners are awakened and converted, backsliders are reclaimed, and believers sanctified to God. But notwithstanding all this, multitudes perish even in the day of their visitation. As for me, I would much rather live in the very midst of pagan idolatry, and never hear of the blessed tidings of salvation, than go from such light as we have, to dwell in darkness forever more.

2. Visitation of Providence. The pestilential vapors that oftentimes fill the air being the harbingers of approaching death, remind us that God is near; and when the rain ceases to distil its life drops upon the parched earth, and the overheated earth, for lack of moisture, begins to wither, and vegetation ceases, then famine comes, and we are again reminded that "God is not very far from every one of us." Again, when disease and death invade our dwellings, we are compelled to acknowledge the visitation of Providence to this sin-cursed earth.

Let sinners do as they may, they can never excuse themselves by saying that God has not visited them, for he comes every hour, in some form or other, and urges by his loving kindness and tender mercies, and his care over us [illegible] tion to serve him.

Finally, the greatest and most glorious visitation of God to men was in the person of Jesus Christ to earth, bringing life and immortality to light through the gospel. Let us be careful how we [illegible] this visitor, for it is so [illegible] who seeks admittance to our hearts [illegible] hearts. He is the Prince of Peace, the one exalted above all principalities and powers, and sitting at the right hand of God, "he ever liveth to make intercession for us." Blessed be his name.

Hiram W. D[illegible]

West Troy, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Evening and morning Visions of Daniel.—No. 3.

Having given a brief historical sketch or general outline of what Daniel calls his "night vision," (verse 7) it remains to consider the chronological and geographical limits of this vision, for time, or duration and territorial space, belong to both the "visions of the evening and morning," which are true. The beginning, as well as the ending, must be ascertained. "In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon, Daniel had a dream, and visions of his head upon his bed," etc. But this is not the date for the starting point of the long chain of events indicated by this vision. It was forty-eight years before this that Nebuchadnezzar "had a dream," the imagery of which symbolized the same chain of events.

The first and most significant design which God manifested in permitting four universal heathen empires to "lord it over his heritage," was to fulfill his early threatened punishment for their idolatry and sin. To learn, therefore, the commencement of this Gentile supremacy, we must ascertain the time when God took away the supreming of Israel and Judah.

We find God's most fearfully threatened judgments enumerated in the 26th chapter of Leviticus, and their duration measured. To have an idea of the fearful nature, as well as the extent, of this divine retribution upon rebellious Israel, it is only necessary to read this 26th chapter. The remarkable expression signifying the duration of punishment, is four times repeated.—"I will punish you seven times for your sins." "I will make your cities waste, and bring your sanctuaries unto desolation," etc. It is added, "and then shall the land enjoy her Sabbaths as long as it lieth desolate." Our Savior recognizes this long desolation, (which Daniel terms the "abomination of desolation,") as extending down to the time in which he should "come in the clouds of heaven," etc.; or in other words, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

Thus we see Gentile rule, and the desolation of Israel and their land, run parallel. The "seven times," then, is the measure. I shall spend no time on what has puzzled lexicographers and professors of philology, as to the original word from which our translators have rendered "seven times." Some have asserted it should be rendered simply "sevens," or Sabbaths—a number so peculiar to the Hebrews.

I was once told by a learned and grave professor of Hebrew exegesis, that "unless I understand the usus loquendi of the Hebrews, it was vain for me to study the prophecies." But having learned, as we all may, the usus loquendi of the Lord of the prophets, we can dispense with further aid. We know how the Lord has used language for six thousand years, and therefore know how to apply his use of language for one thousand years to come. One half of the "seven times" often occurs in the visions of Daniel and John as a term measuring the last half of the great usurpation of the Gentile dynasties. For the commencement of the first half we are now prepared to consider. As it appears the people of God were to be subject to this usurpation of 2520 years—twice the term of "time, times, and the dividing of time," or 42 months, 1260 days, etc., as we so often [illegible] in prophetical Scriptures; the same [illegible] given in varied language, meaning the same thing.

To come, then, to the point. God instructed Ezekiel to give the final warning to Israel and Judah of the remnant of time left them, and taught him how to measure their last days of grace before their long subjugation. The ten tribes, or "Israel," were to be utterly cast off, but Judah to have a short and partial gathering from captivity, to fulfill the predicted events of the first advent of Messiah, but were never to recover their lost independence till the expiration of the "seven times."

God commanded Ezekiel (see chap. 4) to lie on his left side 390 days; and says, "I have laid upon thee the years of thine iniquity according to the number of the days." Again, "I have appointed thee each day for a year." This is sufficient authority for rendering each prophetical day one year of common time. It was exactly three hundred and ninety years from the revolt of Jereboam and the ten tribes from the house of David, to the final desolation of the whole land of Israel and Judah by Nebuchadnezzar, (B. C. 584.) And from the 18th year of Josiah (2 Chron. 34: 29, 31,) when the house of Judah solemnly covenanted with "God to walk in his ways," etc., to the same period, was just forty years—"according to the number of days"—Ezekiel was commanded to lie on his right side. "Ephraim was broken to be no more a people," and Judah partially subjugated as early as 677 years before Christ; and this was the fact on which "Father Miller" relied for the final and great restoration of the "spiritual Israel," in 1843. But the careful student will find a sort of "sliding scale," so to speak, in the commencement and termination to all these great periods. These "days of grace," which enter into the divine plan, have tried the patience of more than the single prophet Jonah.

But to make the point stronger, if need be, I refer to the prophet Isaiah when he prophesied against Ephraim in the first year of king Ahaz, (Isa. chap. 7.)—"The head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that he be not a people." Ahaz began his reign B. C. 742, and sixty-five years from this the ten tribes were broken, and have never since had legal power. Also, sixty-five years after that date, the twenty-second year of the reign of Manasseh, king of Judah, Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, marched into the land of Judah and carried Manasseh prisoner to Babylon.

Thus briefly have I traced out the time when Israel was cast off, in order to find the epoch from which to calculate the "seven times." It may be objected that I have given several epochs, which objection I cannot consider now. When we come to the "morning vision," we shall find four different periods in which a "commandment went forth" in reference to the partial restoration of Judah, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the temple, the epoch to commence the 2300 days. However much the short-sightedness of man may obscure, symmetry, proportion and beauty run through all of God's plans of operation. Let us be patient.

The geography of this vision I defer to No. 4. D. C.

John B. Gough.

The following interesting remarks were made by Mr. Gough on the occasion of his recent reception in Boston:—

"I spoke in Dundee, to the outcasts of that town. The Right Hon. Lord Kinnaird and his lady were instrumental in getting up that meeting. It was such a meeting, I suppose, as you cannot see in this country—at least, I never saw such an one. If such an audience can be gathered together here, I should like to see it, and to address it. The town missionaries had got together a large mass of men and women, and you would have looked almost in vain to find one lingering trace of human beauty left. It seemed as if the foul hoof of debauchery had dashed it out. It was a horrid sight to look at. Rags, filth, nakedness—a festering, steaming mass of putrifying humanity. A woman sat at my feet and the place was so crowded that I touched her; 'her nick-name for years had been 'Hell fire.' (Sensation.) The boys called her 'Fire,' and she was known by no other name, in the vicinity of her wretched residence. Fifty-three times she had been convicted and sentenced for from six days to four months imprisonment. The Ex-Provost of the town, George Rough, said to me, 'I never sent one policeman to take her. She was never mastered by one man. She is a muscular woman, and she will hit right and left. She has been dragged before me, time after time, with the blood streaming from her face. The Rev. Mr. Hanway and Mr. Rough said to me, 'if she kicks up a row, as she probably will, you will see one of the most comical rows you ever beheld. It is dreadful, but there is a comicality about it; she has such a power with her tongue that it is amazing. We have seen men who could stand any amount of common swearing, run when 'Fire' began to blaspheme.' She sat there at my feet, and as I went on she interrupted me a little. I told that audience what they had been, what they might be, what God meant they should be. I showed them that they were thwarting God's good designs towards every one of them. I asked that mother if she did not remember sending that half-starved little child for a penny's worth of oatmeal and four-pence worth of whiskey. I asked that young man to remember what he promised when he married that girl, and to go and look at that bed of rags to which he has brought her. Some of them lifted up their naked arms, and said, 'Oh! that is all true.'

By and by the woman at my feet looked up and said, 'Where did you learn all that?' Then she looked as if she had some important communication to make to the people, and she said the man kens all about it. 'Would you give the likes of me the pledge?' 'To be sure I will,' said I. 'Oh! no! no!' said some; 'it won't do for her to take the pledge.' I said, 'why not?' 'She can't keep it.' 'How do you know?' 'She will be drunk before she goes to bed to-night.' 'How do you know?' 'Madam,' I said to her, 'here is a gentleman who says you cannot keep the pledge if you sign it.' The woman flew into a rage. Said I, 'before you fight about it, tell me, can you keep it?' The reply was, 'If I say I will, I can.' I said, 'then you say you will.' 'I will.' 'Give me your hand.' 'I will.' 'Then,' said I, 'put down your name.' After she had done it, I said, 'give me your hand again.' She did so, and said, 'I will keep it.' 'I know you will,' I said, 'and I shall come back again to see you.' 'Come back when you will,' said she, 'and you will find I have kept it.' Some three years after I went back. Lord Kinnaird presided over the meeting, and the woman was there.

After the meeting I introduced her to Lord Kinnaird, not as 'Fire,' but as Mrs. Archer, a very respectable Scotch woman. She had on her white cap, and her cloak pinned across her breast. He shook hands with her. I went to her house. I wish I could tell you what she told me; I wish I could make you feel as she made me feel; she said, "I am a poor body; I dinna ken much, and what little I did ken, has been knocked out of me by the staves of the policemen. They pounded me over the head sir. I dinna ken how to pray; I never went to God's house these twenty-eight years; I cannot pray, but sometimes I dream"—and then her eyes filled. 'I dream I am drunk, and I cannot pray; but I get out of my bed, sir, and kneel by the side of it, and I never get back to it until day dawn, and all I can say is' God keep me! I cannot get drunk any more.' Her daughter said, 'Aye mon; and I have heard my mother at the dead of night, on the bare floor in the bitter winter time, cry out, 'God keep me! and I said mother, go to your bed, and she said, no, no; I had a dream, and I cannot drink any more.' That woman is now to be seen going every Sabbath day, to hear God's work preached—she who has not entered God's house for twenty-eight years!"

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 24, 1860.

Way-side Pencilings.

We parted with our readers at Melbourne, C. E., Oct. 8th, at the close of our discussion on the Sabbath question. It was evident that there was a very good result from the discussion. Those who had been somewhat perplexed on the subject are now fully satisfied, and feel prepared to give a reason for not keeping the seventh day. Those keeping the Jewish Sabbath appear to be sincere and determined to serve the Lord. Tuesday morning they baptized four, some of whom had been previously baptized. We felt sorry to see them baptized into the old covenant, thus repudiating the new, because of the yoke of bondage that follows; and because most all that take this step are soon led to denounce those who keep the first day, as reprobates having "the mark of the beast" upon them; and by this means divide the flock of God. Our prayer is, that these may not indulge such an unchristian spirit, and thereby create a root of bitterness among the children of the Lord in Melbourne.

Tuesday, Oct. 9th, we left M. for Bryant's Pond, in Me., on the Grand Trunk R. R., one hundred and fifty-eight miles from Melbourne. We passed again the White mountains, clothed in their winter garments, which produce quite a chilly influence upon the surrounding country. It is quite probable that they will not be undressed again till next summer. We felt no desire to enjoy their winter company, but would be pleased to pay them a visit when their frozen heart is melted by summer's warm affections.

At Bryant's Pond we found quite a large audience assembled at the Baptist meeting-house to hear on the subject of Spiritualism. At the close of our discourse upon the cause of this great and spreading delusion, three men, one of whom was a Baptist minister, asked several questions touching the subject, which only served to make the truth shine out more brightly. We continued meetings every evening through the week and over the Lord's day. The Baptist preacher, Eld. D. Ricker, kindly offered us the house on the Sabbath; but we learned that one of the committee of the house said he would not give him another cent if he gave up his pulpit for our use. We hope the committee man may see it best to break his rash vow. We were informed that another Baptist preacher endeavored to persuade Eld. R. to exchange with him so that he could go and claim the desk; but Eld. R. nobly refused. May the Lord bless him for his spirit of toleration, and give him favor with the people, and help him to lead sinners to Christ. Several members of the Baptist church have become deeply interested in the "blessed hope," and begin to see that we get eternal life only through Christ. The unconverted are also very attentive, and are evidently convinced of the truth of the doctrine, and see the danger of their sandy foundation. We trust some of them will turn to Christ and obtain immortality. We found the religious interest very low in this place,—not even a weekly prayer meeting. In our first two prayer meetings, no one prayed or spoke excepting Bro. Whitman, of South Waterford, who had come twenty-five miles to attend the meeting, and who was the means of getting us to hold the discussion with Mr. Rand. We found him ready to do what he could for the welfare of the people, showing a true christian spirit.

Lord's day, Oct. 14th. To-day, we have seen some bright tokens of good. We find several are deeply convicted but afraid to move. Several backsliders have been reclaimed, and gone to work for the Lord. They have set up their family altars and established a prayer meeting. This evening, two came forward for prayers, and others confessed their wanderings and resolved to begin anew in the service of the Lord. We do not recollect ever being in a place where we found the christian religion so scarce as at Bryant's Pond; but the Lord is doing a good work here now, and we shall expect to hear glad tidings from this vineyard. As in other places, we found some bigoted Pharisees who did what they could to hedge up the work. May the Lord forgive them, for they know not what they do. It was remarked that, if we did not leave the place soon, this class would be in favor of giving us a free ride on a rail. Our prayer is that their eyes may be opened to see their dangerous situation, and be led to turn and serve the Lord with full purpose of heart, and finally meet the faithful in the everlasting kingdom. In every place we labor, we find the ministers the greatest obstacles in the way of the work of the Lord. We are astonished at their bitter opposition, which is so unlike the spirit of Christ. Their blindness is remarkable, and truly alarming. Great is their responsibility in view of the approaching judgment. Would that something might arouse them to faithful action, that they may help sound the last alarm to a wicked world. "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing."

Question.

Bro. Grant:—Will you please give an exposition of 1 Pet. 3: 19-21, and oblige an inquirer after truth? S. C. H.

Including the 18th verse, the whole reads as follows:—"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit; by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water." The word which, in the 19th verse, stands "for Spirit at the close of the 18th verse. But the Spirit in the 18th is the Spirit of God, "that raised up Jesus from the dead," (Rom. 8: 11) and not Christ himself; hence the word which in verse 19th cannot be made to stand for Christ; but this same Spirit "that raised up Christ from the dead" was employed in preaching, "when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." Peter says, Noah was "a preacher of righteousness."—2 Pet. 2: 5. When Noah preached, he needed the aid of the Holy Spirit that brought "Christ from the dead." Noah's hearers are now in the prison house of death. We read concerning them, in Gen. 7: 21-23, "And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land died. And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark."

The foregoing is a very plain statement, showing that the Antediluvians are dead; and the Bible declares that "the dead know not any thing;" hence preaching would be of no benefit to them while in death. Admitting it were possible for Christ to preach between his death and resurrection; and that the Antediluvians are alive in opposition to the Bible account, it looks very improbable that he should go and preach to those who had been destroyed for rejecting the preaching of Noah. Such an idea is preposterous.

It is evident that the preaching was done by Noah, by the aid of the Spirit that brought "Christ from the dead," "while the ark was a preparing," before the people were destroyed by the flood, and not by Christ while he was in Joseph's new tomb. An old translation of 1 Pet. 3: 18-20 reads as follows:—"Suffering death, indeed, in the flesh, but restored to life by the Spirit of God; by whose afflatus (Spirit,) in the primitive ages of the world, he delivered solemn admonitions to those who are now in the state of the dead; but these repeated warnings they rejected, though God in the days of Noah waited their repentance during the whole time the ark was constructing, in which only eight souls escaped the general inundation."

"My Error."

It is to be feared that many, on their dying bed, will look back and say, as did Joel Erskine Hawes, the young pastor of the Congregational church at Plymouth, Conn., "We ministers have not preached the gospel in its simplicity; this has been my error. I say it from this bed, the gospel is God's appointed means for the salvation of the soul; philosophy won't do it." It is true that "Philosophy won't do it," neither will pleasing moral essays elegantly delivered while we pass with a velvety tread all around the sins of the rich and fashionable who support the church worship. Jesus and the apostles might have been well received by the Pharisees and Platonic philosophers, if they had done as many popular ministers are now doing,—preached philosophy and pretty essays on morals. But this won't do the work of the gospel of Christ. The preacher, like his Master, should be no respecter of persons. If there be but one man in his entire audience guilty of any particular sin, and he the most influential, the faithful minister should not go around that man, but run the plough-share of truth directly through his field, opening up his sins as fearlessly as though he were the most insignificant one in the whole congregation, if he expects the blessing of the Lord upon his labors.

Sayings of the Spirits.

Nothing can be plainer in morals than that the spirits which pretend to be departed human spirits are lying ones, teaching "doctrines of devils." They are daily developing their satanic character more fully, while leading their millions to destruction, whom they have seduced from "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

In answer to the question, "Did not Christ die, that through his death we might inherit eternal life?" a spirit answers, "No! Christ did not die, that through his death we might live. . . . His death has no more to do with the remission of sins than the death of any of your martyrs."

Another spirit says, "I come . . . . for the purpose of letting my friend (or relative) know that he has an immortal soul—that's all I wish to establish. When once that is established, this one simple germ of knowledge will work out all the rest." They are very faithful in trying to sustain the lie of their leader which he declared to our first parents in Eden's garden, when he said, "Ye shall not surely die."—Gen. 3: 4. Here we find the origin of the doctrine that man "has an immortal soul."

Another spirit says, "There is no God any where to forgive sin." "There is no such thing as forgiveness for sin."

Notice.—Contributors who wish their articles inserted in the Crisis, will forward them to us direct, and not expect us to "copy" them from others, although exchanges. It is not the way to do business, brethren. Please remember our request, and much mutual trouble will be avoided.

Correction.—On page 16, in the piece entitled "My Experience," by T. F. Farnsworth, read "in the spring of 1857," instead of 1837.

Atheism.

An Atheist is one who denies the existence of God. Spiritualism heads up in Atheism. The spirits and Spiritualists tell us that God does not exist "as a being," but only as "a principle." One that claims to be the spirit of Joseph Foster, as published in the Banner of Light, says, "Ah! there is no God, there can be none. . . . . What is the use of telling them of a God when there is none?" Says the Age of Freedom, a Spiritualist paper published at Berlin Hights, O., "Belief in a God is degrading." Such sentiments are rapidly spreading through the world, and being received by the rising generation.

The following are some of the sayings of Joseph Treat, in a speech at the Paine Celebration in Cincinnati, Sunday, Jan. 30th, 1860. Although an avowed Atheist, we do not see that his position is any worse than that of the more advanced Spiritualists. He says:—

"There is no God! God is the first, great, eternal mistake of the Age of Reason! God is the grand, pivotal mistake of all systems! God is the great central Superstition, round which all other Superstitions cling! God is the sole foundation of Bibles, Sabbaths, Priesthoods, Religions, Resurrections, Judgments, Heavens, Hells, Spirits, Spirit Worlds, all! I strike home at this root." "If there is a God, men can know it; but nobody does know it. If there is a God, there must be proof of the fact; but there is no proof." "Not one argument—that is an argument—in favor of a God, has ever been framed; and not one can be." "There is no need of a God! There is nothing for a God to do." "Call for a God when there is occasion for a God—but the Eternal Universe has none! And what there is no occasion for does not exist, and God does not exist!" "There is no room for a God! There is no place where a God could be." "God is an evil! He is the evil under which the earth has always been groaning." "A good God is a contradiction. Any God dwarfs, enslaves, dehumanizes. A man and a God cannot live in the same universe!" "God is the curse of curses!" "God will be blotted out! It is written in the book of fate! It is the future of this planet! Over the whole extent of this wide, wide world—among all its unnumbered millions of inhabitants, and during almost endless ages that shall roll, there will be no God! God will be lost out of the history of the race. Eternal generations will come and go, and never hear of a God, nor know that ever preceding generations talked about one! God will be swallowed up in an infinite oblivion! His very name will die out of human language!" "No-God will be the world's millennium!" "Then will indeed be proclaimed that everlasting gospel, 'Peace on earth, good will to men,' when all the dwellers of earth shall lift up their voice together, and say with a shout, 'God is dead, and we are glad of it!'"

Christ's Spiritual Coming.

Said Leo Miller in a discourse at the Melodeon in Boston, June 2d, 1860, "We behold in the advent of Spiritualism the second coming of the Spirit of Jesus of Nazareth." If this statement is true, then Christ's second coming is in the private parlors and chambers where the spiritual manifestations take place. But Jesus said when on earth, referring to his second coming, "If any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not." Let every one heed his warning, and remember John says, "Many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus is come in the flesh." This is a deceiver and an antichrist." Erkomenon, here rendered "is come," is more properly rendered is coming. The point is this: every spirit that does not confess that Christ is coming in the flesh is "an antichrist." And as all who pretend to be departed human spirits teach this doctrine, we know that "antichrist" is their appropriate title. Believe them not. Mr. Miller also says:—

"The Adventists prove by their texts that some men are not immortal—that the good shall rise on the resurrection day, and ascend into heaven while the world is being refined and purified by fire. When the process is completed, the righteous shall be let down, and Christ shall come and set up his throne here, and reign over his loyal subjects through all eternity. That sect, absurd as their belief is, have more Scripture to quote than any other."

Meeting of the Advent Christian Association.

Salem, Oct. 16, 1860, 10 1-2 o'clock A. M.

The Christian Association met in accordance with the call of the Board. The President being absent, the meeting was called to order by the Secretary, and opened with prayer, led by Bro. J. S. White. Bro. W. Pratt was called to the chair. On motion the call to the meeting was read.

Brn. White, Adams and Preble were appointed a Committee to receive the names of those entitled to vote in the business of the meeting, in accordance with the call. Brn. White, Grant and Hudson were also appointed as a Business Committee.

The following roll of members was reported: Preachers:—P. B. Morgan, L. Boutelle, R. Wendell, T. M. Preble, R. E. Ladd, F. H. Berrick, J. Hemenway, M. Grant, J. Couch, Elam Burnham, W. S. Campbell, J. S. White, J. F. Baker, W. M. Ingham, H. F. Carpenter, H. L. Hastings, W. Pratt. D. Hutchinson, S. P. Babcock, A. Ross, C. F. Hudson, J. A. Libbey; Delegates:—R. B. Reed, S. S. Pepper, B. Woodside, M. M. Young, E. Heath, A. B. Price, W. A. S. Smith, Geo. Pierce, G. R. Coburn, Chas. Haley, S. O. Welch, E. E. Church, P. White.

The names of Brn. G. T. Adams and H. V. Davis occurring in the reported list, who were members of the Board but not delegates, after some discussion it was agreed that they had been recognized as voting members by terms used in appointing the Committee on Credentials. Adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock, P. M.

2 o'clock. Opened with prayer by Bro. Couch. The President, H. L. Hastings, then read the Call, and inquired whether this was a meeting of the Christian Association, and himself the rightful occupant of the chair. After various motions and suggestions, it was voted, That this is a regular meeting of the Christian Association.

The Business Committee reported. Letters were read from Brn. B. P. Manning, I. C. Wellcome, Geo. Champlin, S. D. Berry, and D. T. Taylor, and from the churches in Orrington, Me., Yarmouth, Me., Vernon, Vt., and E. Boston, Mass.

After some dissussion it was voted to revise the Constitution.

Moved, That the first article be amended so that the society shall be called "The Second Advent Christian Association" Remarks were made by Brn. Morgan, Wendell, Stone, Preble, and others. Adjourned until to-morrow at 9 1-2 o'clock.

Oct. 17th, 9 1-2 o'clock. Opened with singing and prayer, led by Bro. Preble. After reading of the minutes, letters were read from Brn. Thos. Smith and Geo. Dilabaugh, and from the church in W. Poland, Me. Under a motion to suspend, the following resolution was offered by Bro. Wendell and seconded by Bro. Adams, which was discussed and unanimously adopted, viz:

Whereas, it was not designed by the Christian Association, at its organization at Providence, to impose a denominational name upon the body of believers whose interests it was intended to subserve, therefore

Resolved, That neither the present name of the Christian Association nor any name to which it shall be changed by the action of this meeting, shall be deemed a denominational name to be taken by the churches or individuals who shall co-operate with the Society.

The question respecting the name was then taken up, and remarks were made by Brn. Hemenway, Baker, Morgan White, Pratt, Hastings and others. Adjourned to 2 o'clock.

2 o'clock. Opened with singing and prayer, led by Bro. Boutell. The discussion was resumed, with remarks by Brn. J. S. White and others, and a vote was taken, yeas 15, nays 15. Thus the motion was lost, two-thirds being required.

After various motions a resolution was offered that the Association and its action thus far be considered null and void. After debate, this was laid on the table.

A trial vote was taken on the following name offered: "The Society of Believers in Immortality through Christ at His Appearing. Yeas 10, nays —. A trial vote was then taken on the name, "The Advent Christian Association." Yeas 19, nays 9. The motion that such be the name was afterwards put and carried. Yeas 24, nays 8.

The second article of the Constitution was amended so as to read—"The objects of this Society shall be the promulgation of Bible truth and the promotion of vital piety, by the formation of a Christian Publication Society, for the issue of books, tracts, and periodicals." The second and third sections of the original article being stricken out. The remaining articles were taken up and adopted, and the Constitution as amended was adopted. The Society then proceeded to the election of officers, and the present Board was re-elected. Adjourned.

Oct. 18, 9 1-2 o'clock. Opened with singing and prayer, led by Bro Ross. The President and Secretary offered resignations of their seats. The resolution yesterday laid on the table was again offered, but without a motion. A Committee was then appointed to draft a Constitution for the Publication Society. Brn. Berick, Morgan, White and Hudson, were appointed. The Committee reported, and the following Constitution, after amendment, was adopted:

Article I.

This Society shall be called the Christian Publication Society.

II.

The object of this Society shall be to put in circulation such books, tracts, and periodicals as shall best subserve the interests of the Church looking for the coming and kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ, and meet the demands of the times.

III.

The officers of this Society shall be a President, a Secretary, and a Treasurer, a Publishing Committee of five, and an Editorial Committee of three.

IV.

The duties of the President, Secretary, and Treasurer shall be such as are usually discharged by such offices. The Publishing Committee shall provide measures for printing and circulating such tracts, books and papers as shall be approved by the Editorial Committee. The Editorial Committee shall select such tracts and books as shall seem best suited to the objects of the Society. It shall also constitute an advisory committee in the conduct of the World's Crisis, and other regular issues of the Society.

V.

These offices shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meetings of the Advent Christian Association, and shall be subject to the instructions of the Board of managers of that Association. Vacancies occurring shall be supplied by that Board. The officers shall also report annually, in accordance with the fifth article of the Constitution of that Association.

VI.

This Constitution may be amended in like manner as the Constitution of that Association.

The resignations offered were then accepted, and Brn. P. B. Morgan and H. F. Carpenter were respectively chosen President and Secretary of the Advent Christian Association.

The following officers of the Publication Society were then chosen, viz., H. L. Hastings, President; C. F. Hudson, Secretary; Geo. T. Adams, Treasurer.

Publishing Committee: M. Grant, Walter Pratt, J. S. White, H. V. Davis, J. Hemenway.

Editorial Committee: H. L. Hastings, J. S. White, F. H. Berick.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the friends of Salem for their hospitalities. Adjourned sine die at 15 minutes to one o'clock.

Correspondence.

From Sr. N. M. Henry.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—Thinking that it might create surprise in the minds of our many friends who read the Crisis, that we have so soon changed our P. O. address, I would offer them a reason. Many of you have doubtless read of the terrible drouth that has visited the lovely lands of Kansas, Texas, and the southern portion of this State. You in the East can form no idea of it. Since last fall, no rain had fallen but once until the last August, and the country was visited with the most blasting, burning, withering heat; vegetation would droop before it, as if it had been the breath of a Nebuchadnezzar's furnace; even furniture in the houses would crack and blister, the hot blasts that swept through the rooms affected the varnish to such a degree. Our thermometer was hung on the north side of a green oak tree in a grove. The mercury ranged from 106 to 111 degrees day after day, and on "the hot Saturday," as it is called, (which was the last Saturday in June,) it was 121. The people did not dare to expose themselves to the heat. The negroes stayed in their cabins. The intensity of heat was from 10 o'clock, A. M., to 5 P. M. Twenty-five died of sun stroke in St. Louis in one day.

Of course provisions were up at starvation prices, and still rising. It was but little that we could obtain beside corn meal. (But I can say that the plain diet to which we subjected ourselves, out of necessity, has entirely cured me of the terrible scourge with which I have been afflicted for years, viz: sick headache, also dyspepsia, nervous spasms, etc.) Work could not be obtained, as there was no money in those countries visited by the drouth. Hundreds of families are daily passing here out of Kansas, and this State, on their way to Illinois, "where there is bread enough and to spare." We are on the line of the Pacific R. R., where Mr. Henry can obtain work as house builder, at good wages, and our son can also be employed. As for myself, I "work diligently with my hands," and can earn 75 cts. every day that I am able to work. To-day I am on the sick list. One of my children is suffering with the ague; otherwise, the family, with the exception of Grandpa, who is dead, have enjoyed excellent health.

Perhaps it would not be amiss here to note the unsafe feeling of the slaveholding population. The outbreak in Texas made a great commotion in the southern counties. The men who were the instigators were chased right by us, as it were. One man was caught and hung near us; another, a minister, was caught when he had almost gained free soil, and they hung him to a tree. They have frequently told me that they have never felt safe latterly, not knowing what night they might all be murdered in their beds. Fear predominates among all classes.

Now shall I tell you how they do things here when they come to meeting of a Sunday? (Sunday is the great visiting day, when they get up good dinners, if they starve the rest of the week.) The head ones, or any that wish, bring dinner for the whole congregation, and what they don't get in Gospel they do in "goodies." They have a jolly time over the "chicken fixins;" baked lamb, vegetables, pies, etc., etc. Of course the negroes have all the labor to perform. Then in preaching time their sermons are never less than two hours long. The colored women carry water to all the congregation. It is of no account if they lose some of the sermon—it is no loss. Bro. Grant could hardly understand how professors of religion can guzzle whiskey as they do here. I often think of Bro. Burnham's saying, "God forbid I should be one (speaking of the oneness of the church,) with whiskey guzzling deacons." Here they race horses, drink, swear, hang abolitionists, as accomplishments. Never heard of the Lord's coming.

Since writing the above, we have received a letter from a friend of ours in the next county, Johnson. He says, "I have laid out $700 in improvements on my farm (meaning by improvements the crops he had planted). My potatoes have not come up yet: and two dollars in money is all I've got, and where I am to get the necessaries for my family I don't know, for to borrow is impossible at this time in Mo." And he is a gentleman of wealth and excellent character; but his crops fail, stock buyers don't come to buy, and there it is. He says, "I shall have to live on corn bread, and when I say corn bread I mean it." What must it have been when in Judea it never rained for three years and six months? That scripture can't be understood in a land of showers and running brooks. This is one of the most productive states in the Union when they have rain. Their preachers tell them it is because the people are so wicked, that the Lord don't send rain. I think they are about right.

You in Mass., who can go to meeting and see each other, don't know how to prize the Crisis as I do here. I cannot bear to have the wrapper destroyed, because our Bro. Cotton sealed and directed it. Then it seems I can see the pleasant faces of Bro. and Sr. Grant looking out at me all through the paper, and Brn. Horace and Burnham, and good Bro. Brewer and all of them. How I love you.

Farmer's City, Mo.

From Sr. M. A. Harris.

Bro. Grant:—My heart is filled with the love of Jesus, which makes me love the truth of the Bible also. I long to hear it preached in all its purity. Husband and myself are the only ones here that believe in its literal fulfillment, and the soon coming of Christ. We meet with opposition on every side, but this will not harm those whose God is the Lord. If we endure unto the end, then we can claim the promise of salvation. I feel sad many times, when I hear the truth of the Bible turned to ridicule, its believers scoffed at, and Christ our blessed Savior treated with so much neglect. When, oh! when will this, with all other evils, have an end? Hark! the answer,—"when Jesus comes." Yes, I believe it. What a cheering thought to the weary pilgrim, who after many years of toil and care is still journeying towards the kingdom, to know that Jesus is coming. Happy, happy indeed are those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life; although for a short time here they meet with trials and afflictions, and their lot seems a hard one, yet God knows all their affliction, watches the falling tear, and has in store a rich reward which he will send them by his Son when he comes. Oh, who would not be a christian? Who would not be a child of God? When Jesus comes he will clothe us with immortality and eternal life. We shall live with him where there will be no more sickness nor death, sorrow nor sighing. Cheer up then, fellow pilgrim, still watch and pray, for soon we shall see Jesus coming in the clouds of heaven. Let us be all ready to meet him.

Brainard, N. Y.

From Sr. Mary F. Athorne.

Bro. Grant:—Though I am one of the weakest of God's children, I feel to praise him from whom all blessings flow. It is now a little over two years since my husband and self were willing to "come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." At that time, we were in Portsmouth, N. H., and thanks be to the Lord for leading us with that little company of saints who believe in a soon coming Lord.

We continued with them a few months, enjoying many precious seasons; yes, I might say heavenly sittings together, for the Lord was with us, and we truly had a foretaste of what is in store for those that continue in well doing unto the end. But, alas! the time came when we had to be separated, and move into the country, where we stand as lone pilgrims; yet we are blest. The Lord has taught us that his grace is sufficient for us; so relying upon his promises, and having our loins girt about with truth, we are striving to have our lives "hid with Christ in God"; that when he, "who is our life, shall appear," we may appear with him in glory. The words of encouragement from the dear saints in Portsmouth are still remembered, and I trust we are not forgotten in their prayers. Occasionally, some of the pilgrims call and see us, with whom we have a good praying season, which strengthens and refreshes us. The Crisis finds its weekly way to our lone home, and we feel encouraged while perusing the messages from the scattered saints; for they, as well as the word of the Lord, tell us the signs proclaim him near, and our hearts respond,—

Oh hail! blessed morning, when Salem's bright King
Shall gather his jewels all home;
From the east and the west, from the south, the north,
With singing to Zion they come.

Elliot, Me.

From Benj. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—As the high peaks of Mount Desert arose before me, my heart was filled with a mixture of joy and sadness at the remembrance of the scenes which had transpired in that vicinity. My labors, tears, joys and sorrows, the hospitality experienced from good friends on the Island, all revived as I approached once more this island of the sea. I had with me a large bundle of tracts and childrens' papers. This was my former field of labor. Perhaps, thought I, the seed may want watering; perhaps I may sow a little more seed. I will try to keep myself in a state of mind to do what may seem to be duty.

I have scattered tracts the whole length of the way from Bangor to Aroostook river, and from there by another route back to Bangor; the distance going and returning, three hundred miles. On my route I have visited most of the inhabitants of the Aroostook county, given lectures in most of the neighborhoods, in connection with Bro. Corliss about half of the time, and returned with a rich experience of the goodness of God, and my heart overflowing with gratitude to Him and to my friends for their hospitality, feeling satisfied with the success of my journey, and that Aroostook will become a place where Bible doctrine will prevail.

My health has been perfect. Have not lost a day for six months past. Have traveled in the time something over one thousand miles, and visited nearly seven hundred families, given one hundred and thirty lectures, and written one hundred and seventy letters, scattering several thousand pages of tracts. God be praised for the health I have enjoyed, and the access to minds granted me. His past goodness leads me still to trust in Him.

Mt. Desert, Oct. 9th.

For the Crisis.

Read it Again.

Yes, read again the article in the Crisis of Oct. 3d, headed "Is it Right?" Read it, ye proud, fastidious and stingy churches, who pray, "send forth more laborers into the harvest," and profess to be waiting for Christ, and then turn around and muzzle the ox that treads out your corn, and so discourage him from the field. Read and ponder, for verily I say unto you, ye shall have your reward. D. T. T.

Dansville, N. Y., Oct. 15, '60.

For the Crisis.

"Reasons for my Hope."—This is one of the best books among the many published in these last days, for the good of the cause of God and his children, that I have ever read. It ought to be in every family. It is worth four times its price. Brethren and sisters in the Lord, send and get the book; you never will be sorry. Read it through, and the more you read it, the more you will like to read it. Every child of God ought to have one copy for himself, and one to lend to his neighbors.

Benj. P. Manning.

For the Crisis.

Will You Join Us in this Work?

On Thursday evening we had a number of our preachers present,—on their way from the Salem Conference—in our prayer and conference meeting. It was suggested that if Jesus does not speedily come, we have another winter just before us. It was asked how we should spend it? In controversy? In simply talking about and discussing doctrines? Or, it was asked, will we lay ourselves out for the great work of saving souls? Will we consecrate ourselves anew to God—plead His promises—and strive this winter, (if a winter we see), to each be instrumental in saving at least one soul? I am happy to state, that the latter proposition was unanimously agreed in. Who will join us in this work? "Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." Jas. 5: 20.

Boston, Oct. 20th. P. R. M.

Obituary Notices.

Our much beloved sister in Christ, Miss Eveline A Freeman, died, Sept. 29th, in Charlestown, at the residence of Bro. Young, who is the husband of her only surviving sister, aged about twenty-seven years.

Her christian life began about six or seven years ago. It was most consistent and progressive from the first; and she attained, in the esteem of her friends, a marked maturity.

The funeral service was attended Sunday, the 30th, at the house of Bro. Young, attended by the family, the relatives and her christian friends.

The theme of remark—"He is dead"—was illustrated, (1) by the plain word of God, from Genesis to Revelation, which responds to the question, "Is he dead?" that "he (or she) is dead." (2) By all our senses. We know that our sister "is dead," as well as we ever knew that she did live! If all our senses mock us as to actual death, and the truth in the premises may lie out of the range of observation and experience, then the same sources of knowledge may deceive as to the reality of a personal life. (3) This reality and personality of death confound the Devil. It demonstrates that "he is a liar from the beginning." All ages have witnessed the contradiction of the old Serpent's saying, "He shall not surely die," in the actual and certain death of dearest friends. (4) This view of death justifies the Resurrection. The death of man is the only occasion for the gospel provision for a resurrection from death. If death could be un-real and im-personal, then the resurrection of Jesus and his saints must be! There must be coherency in the whole plan. (5) The rising of Jesus from the dead—the resurrection of his saints—makes the promised "Restitution of all things spoken" a blessed necessity. Acts 3: 19–21; 1 Cor. 1: 27; Rev. 20; and 21: 1–5.

The friends took the deceased to their early home, down East, for burial, to await the call of her Lord in the morning of the Resurrection, "at the last trump." "Then this mortal shall put on *im*mortality, and bear the image of the heavenly!" 1 Cor. 15: 47, 55.

This personally glorified class—"the church of the first born"—must, by a moral necessity, be "the kings and priests," under "the King of kings, in the kingdom." This matter of fact fulfillment of the word as to death, resurrection and restitution, requires and makes certain a literal accomplishment of all that pertains to the seven thousand years; and to the blessing of "the nations" named in the covenant oath of Jehovah. Gen. 22: 14; Ps. 72; Rom. 15: 12; Rev 15: 4; 20: 1-4. How consistent and glorious is God's plan! J. B. C.

Died, in Palmer, (Thorndike,) Sept. 30th, Sister Mary Ann Smith, wife of Charles H. Smith, aged thirty.

Sister Smith became a follower of Christ in 1854, and at the same time was convinced by the word of the Lord by reading and hearing the gospel preached that Christ was soon to come to establish a kingdom on earth. She has since been a consistent christian and a firm believer in the soon coming of Jesus, and that life is to be obtained only through Christ the Life Giver. She was always at the prayer meetings to bear witness for Christ, and the truths which lay so near her heart. She was at the Wilbraham campmeeting, but was too much diseased to enjoy it, as she had previously done on such occasions. For several months past Sr. Smith has been satisfied that she should not tarry here but a short time, and yet the morning previous to her death some thought she might recover. But she sleeps in Jesus. She left her dying testimony in favor of the gospel she professed. While dying she faithfully exhorted her friends and family connections to prepare to meet her at the judgment. She said she had not a doubt of her being raised soon to live forever with the Lord, and longed to breathe her last and sleep in Jesus, "blessed sleep!"

I never saw the results and fruits of christianity more fully exemplified in one's life and death than we have witnessed in that of Sister Smith's. The church have met with a loss never to be made up to us till Jesus comes to raise the dead, and bring our sister from the land of the enemy to die no more. She looked forward to that time with unshaken confidence in God's promises, that then Jesus would take the throne of his father David, and reign in Mount Zion, and before his ancients gloriously.

Bro. R. E. Ladd preached a faithful sermon expressive of her faith.

N. D. Wight.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[By the Arabia, at Halifax.]

ITALY.

The capitulation of Ancona is confirmed. General Lamoriciere surrendered to Admiral Persano, of the Sardinian fleet, who sent his own boat for him, and manned the yards of his vessel, and gave him his own cabin.

Gen. Lamoriciere is to be sent to Turin by way of Leghorn.

The Sardinian Chambers have resolved that King Victor Emmanuel be authorized to annex to Sardinia those provinces of Central and Southern Italy, in which the population, by direct universal suffrage, vote to become an integral part of the Sardinian Constitutional monarchy.

The Sardinian army has not yet entered the Neapolitan territory, but Garibaldi announces that they soon will. Their head-quarters will be at Aquila. Victor Emmanuel will command in person.

The forts of Pescara and Ajusta in Sicily have surrendered. Messina still holds out.

The provinces of Umbria, Viterbo and the Marches are lost to the papal government. Subiaco and Arsoli are in insurrection, and the only provinces left are Civita, Vecchia, Frosinone and Velletri.

Garibaldi has made some modifications in the Ministry, to meet the views of the Neapolitans. Bertaini, nick-named Garibaldi's evil genius, has been dismissed.

A better feeling now exists between Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi, the latter having written a letter inviting the King to come to Naples, and permit him to retire to his island home.

A new manifesto of Mazzini declares that no King of Italy should be proclaimed before the kingdom of Italy is organized at Rome.

Garibaldi has issued a degree granting pensions to the mother and sisters of Agesilas Milano, who attempted to assassinate the King of Naples.

The details of the defeat of the Garibaldians at Capua, show that the English and Hungarian brigade was badly cut up.

Recent letters from Naples state that the old standard miracles do not work as smoothly as before the advent of Garibaldi and liberal ideas.

The portfolio of Lamoriciere has fallen into the hands of General Fanti. It contains letters of the most compromising character and most positive proofs of numerous intrigues entered into with the Legitimist and even the Red Republican party against the government of Napoleon.

A dispatch from Trieste reports that the reason assigned for the order to extinguish the lights on the Venetian coast is, that Garibaldian agents secretly entered the lagunes at night in order to take soundings.

The British consular church in Paris, in connection with the Established church in Scotland, has availed herself of the important privileges conferred on it in common with the Church of England by the Consular act.

A correspondent of the London Times writes from Vienna, Sept. 29th:

The political excitement in Venice is very great, and the inhabitants of the city appear to be ripe for mischief. They scoff at the troops and German residents, and insult the government whenever they think they can do so with impunity. During the night of the 21st, the Imperial arms were pulled down from a public office, and so abominably bedaubed that they were untouchable. Many Frenchmen have recently arrived at Venice, and on the 21st, one of them, an engineer, was arrested while making a sketch of a fort. It is whispered that very important discoveries have been made by the Imperial authorities in Venetia. The whole affair is kept very secret, but it is believed that the government has in its hands proofs that there has long been a direct and constant correspondence between the Garibaldians, Venetians and Hungarians. Several persons have recently been arrested at Gorice and Udine, and sent to fortresses in the interior of the empire.

Infidel Convention.—The Infidels of the United States have held an annual convention for many years. The Convention for 1860 commenced in New York on Sunday the 7th. The Tribune contrasts it with the conventions of former years, showing that the attendance this year is much smaller than usual. It says:

"The sentiment of the annual convention of the Infidel Association, which met yesterday and will be continued to-day at the City Assembly Rooms, Broadway, is darkly tinged with disappointment and doubt. There should be, it would seem, some palpable progress. The room should be better filled than it was last year. Here is a fine, bright Sunday for scoffing; the sun shines with particular impartiality upon the just and the unjust. If the arguments against the religion of revelation and for the religion of humanity were ever valid, they should certainly by this time have had some vital force. If not for novelty, at least for their singularity, they should prove increasingly attractive.

Favorable as the weather was, none of the thousand church-goers who thronged the streets were directed, even by curiosity, to the Infidel Convention, nor did numerous advertisements divert the thoughtless public from their usual Sabbath-day pursuits. And there was none of that earnest hopefulness which is such a prominent feature of the common religious observances of the Lord's Day, among the small company of the irreligious; neither was there that live sympathy which is the signet of success. Reams of resolutions were read. It was resolved at immense length, and with a stern and awful solemnity, that the times are, religiously speaking, the worst upon which a foolish world has ever fallen; that men are generally in a state of profound unhappiness and despair; that they can't be happy until they throw overboard their faith in God and a hereafter. Long speeches were made to these resolutions. The speakers deplored the backwardness of things. One made it a burning shame that New York could not keep a hall for infidelity, and spent so small a sum annually in the cause. To this was offered, from a New York lady, the sad confession that New York can't afford it, but must have assistance from other quarters. This led to mutual recriminations on the score of insincerity and coldness. Then a resolution, that nobody could clearly understand, was sharply discussed. The word hypocritical, as applied to politicians, also demanded and received careful attention. A few words of consolation came by mail from the German Free thinkers, and from a German doctor in Bloomington, Illinois, and a collection was taken up at the door at adjournment.

Sunday in Germany.—If you enter the churches you will, indeed, sometimes find them very well attended, especially those in which a "popular preacher," or a fashionable one preaches; but the number of hearers stands in no proportion whatever with that of the population of the parishes. You know that in Berlin, out of 425,000 inhabitants, scarcely more than 25,000 attend the churches. It may be that in other towns the proportion is a little larger; but an entirely satisfactory one will be found but in a very few. Some classes of society, especially the officials of public administration and justice, appear to imagine themselves to be in possession of an hereditary dispensation, as it were, from all church attendance. The disregard which they manifest toward the church has become a by-word. Nay, in some towns the children only are sent to church, whilst the adults consider themselves above it, or as having outgrown it. To attend at the afternoon service is almost considered improper—at least, not consistent with the tone of "good society." This time is spent at dinner parties, or in excursions into the country; after which, in the evening, thronging to the theatres, ball-rooms and other places of amusement, follow.

Married.

In East Boston, Oct. 10th, by Eld. J. S. White, Julien B. Phillips and Harriet Doughty, both of Boston.

Notices, &c.

Book Notice.

Those wishing Wellcome's Treatise on Matt. 24th and 25th, in the Western States, should send to N. Branch, Cordova, Ill. Price 33 cts. This work contains a vast amount of evidence and fact relating to the signs of this time, and showing that our Lord must soon come. It should be read by thousands who have not yet seen it.

For sale at the Crisis Office.

Notice.

There will be preaching at Music Hall, (formerly Exchange) Chicopee, (not Chicopee Falls) Mass., Sunday 28th, and the following Sunday. Services at the usual hours. Friends in the adjoining towns are invited to come.

W. S. Campbell.

Notice.

Tour West.—I contemplate a tour West, as far as Cincinnati, Ohio, in the months of October and November. Will preach in Springwater, N. Y., Saturday and Sabbath, Oct. 27th and 28th.

While in this vicinity, I shall visit Dansville, Conesus, Honeoye, etc., and will give due notice of appointments further west.

J. V. Himes.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a protracted meeting held at the Hollister school-house in Barnston, C. E., commencing Friday, Nov. 16th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and hold as long as thought best. Elder Hiram Munger is expected to attend.

Wm. A. Cramer.

Herald, please copy.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. P. B. Morgan will preach in
Boston, (Chapman Hall)........Sunday, Oct. 28th

Charles S. Stevens will preach in Portland, Me.........Oct. 28th
Compton, C. E., (Saunders' school-house) Nov. 4th
Ascott, C.E., (where B. Kent may arrange) Nov. 11th
Danville, C. E........Nov. 18th
Barnston, (where Bro. Clark may arrange) Nov. 25th

Wm. M. Ingham will preach in Fair Haven, Mass.........Oct. 28th
Westport, Mass., (neighborhood of Bro. Dan. Tripp) Nov. 1st, 2d, 3d, and Sunday, the 4th

---

B. P. Manning will meet with the friends in Concord, N. H., (old Chapel).........Oct. 28th
Robie's Corner, (Warner).........Nov. 4th
North Sutton, (where Bro. I. Andrew may appoint) Nov. 6th.
Danbury.........Nov. 11th
and hold meetings evenings a few days.

J. T. Ongley will preach as follows:—
Union Mills, Pa., (where Bro. Sherwood may appoint).........Oct. 30th
Ravelin Hill, N. Y.........Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st
Findley's Lake.........Nov. 2d
Ripley Hill.........Nov. 3d,
over Sunday, and stay two or three days longer in that neighborhood, if desired. Bro. Thorpe may appoint accordingly.
Root Settlement, Pa..Sunday, Nov. 11th, 10 A. M.
Post Ridge, Pa.....Sunday, Nov. 11th, 3 1-2 P. M.
Anderson's, (near Edenboro,) Nov. 18th, 10 1-2 A.M.
Center Road, Pa.........Nov. 19th, 20th, and 21st
East Plymouth, Ohio.........Nov. 22d, 23d, and 24th
Saybrook.........Sunday, Nov. 25th
Unionville.........Nov. 26th, 27th, and 28th
Ravanna, Ohio, (where Bro. H. Tuttle may appoint).........Nov. 29th and to Dec. 5th
Girard, Pa., (where Bro. Allen may appoint) Sunday.........Dec. 9th
Edenboro, Pa., (near Bro. Whitaker's).. Dec. 10th

Eld. S. S. Brewer will preach in
South Windsor, (Pleasant Valley).........Nov. 4th

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach in
Woolcotville.........Oct. 31st
Bakerville.........Nov. 1st and 2d
Collinsville.........Nov. 4th
Canton Street.........Nov. 6th
Lovely St.........Nov. 8th
Cheshire St.........Nov. 11th

Eld. J. W. Crabtree appoints to preach in Southington, Ct.........Oct. 28th

Providence permitting, I will preach at
River Point.........Nov. 4th
East Killingly.........Nov. 11th, 18th and 25th
M. R. PHETTEPLACE.

APPOINTMENTS for BRISTOL, CT.
Eld. Ralph Williams.........Sunday, Oct. 28th
Eld. George Champlin.........Sunday, Nov. 4th

The 25th Oct. I shall be at the Richmond Quarterly Conference, Me. The first Sunday in Nov. in West Poland, Me. O. R. FASSETT.

Providence permitting, I will attend the regular conference at Corrinna, Me., commencing Nov. 3d, to continue over the Sabbath.
J. HEMENWAY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Scitico, Ct.........Oct. 28th
Newfield, Ct.........Nov. 4th
Plymouth Hollow, Ct.........Nov. 11th
L. S. LUDINGTON.

T. W. Piper appoints to preach in
Merideth Neck.........Oct. 28th
Clark meeting-house.........Nov. 4th

C. Goodrich appoints to preach in
Warwick Plains.........Oct. 28th
Lafayette.........30th and 31st
Peacedale.........Nov. 4th

George L. Teeple appoints to preach in
Goshen.........Sunday, Oct. 28th
Plainfield Pond.........Oct. 30th
Savoy.........Nov. 1st
Cheshire, Mass.........Nov. 2d
Dalton, (where Bro. Warren may appoint) Nov. 3d and 4th
Chester Factories.........Nov. 8th
Sandisfield, (where Bro. Fenn may appoint,) Nov. 10th and 11th

---

L. Wetherbee appoints to preach in
East Grate Works.........Oct. 28th
Belmont, (school-house).........Nov. 4th

I will preach at Hartford, Ct.........Oct. 28th
☞ When I see my way clear to visit Milton, N. Y., to hold meetings, I will write Bro. H. S. Latimer to that effect. RUFUS WENDELL.

The Lord willing, I will attend meeting in Milo or Sebec, Oct. 28th, as the friends may arrange.
THOMAS SMITH.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Eld. Moses Chandler's P. O. address is Monmouth, Ill.

Eld. P. B. Morgan's P. O. address is Boston, Mass.

D. Q. Kent.—All right.

Mrs. S. M. Clark.—All right.

H. L. Parsons.—All right.

Cash Receipts.

W. Draper 239, $3.00; Mrs. M. Waterhouse 278, 50 cts; E Dexter, 7 copies, 286, $5.60; S O Wescott 289, $1.12; E Cleaves 273, $5.00.

W Gilman 286, Alex. Bryant 290, M E West 289, A G Sawyer 289, L Marius 289, E M Mix 298, H D Peterson 289, C Lewis 286, A D Smith 286, D Rice 286, S Barton 286, A Hotchkis 286, E Farr 286, W S Moulton 286, S McDaniel 282, G E Hooper 291, G Storer 287, E C Field 260, S A Chaplin 312, A B Price 276, R Devereaux 286, J Baker 290, E Barnes 286, G S Hastings 286, G W Smith 290, L H Washburn 290, A Stein 290, S Harding 286, E Heath 260,—$1.00 each.

C Moulton 286, E Vandeusen 316, J C Stafford 288, K Mayhew 267, G Gould 286, J Woodward 302, A Hill 312, L Wade 308, W Whitford 308, D Smith 308, S F Mathews 280, J Buckingham 340, R Lyman 260, Mrs A Stillman 312, J A Brazee 260,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

A S Whitney $1.00, N L Roble $1.00, S F Hubbard $1.60, P A Smith $1.27, Al. Spear $1.00, N W Lansing 9 cts., G S Hastings $1.00, H A Walton 60 cts.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. Isaac L. Allen, 10 Howard Street, Albany, N. Y., has an assortment of our books and tracts, and will fill orders at the same rates that are charged at this office.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Tracts from the Tract Fund.—Friends at the West can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.
H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuhee as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 163 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 259 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $5.00.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1.60 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low, or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—5 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the readers. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Brooks, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS

of

H. L. HASTINGS,

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp.	$1 00
The Great Controversy between God and Man: its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp.	60
Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 128 pp. Paper, 30 cts. Cloth	50
Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing	00
Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing	00
Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp.	50
Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp.	50
Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 320 pp.	75
The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt	25
Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm Ramsey, D.D., edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth	40
Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper	15
The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, 97 pp.	10

Tracts of 24 Pages.—3 cts single; $1 for 1600 pages—by mail 1200 pp. for $1.

The Church not in Darkness,	by H. L. H.	pages 24
The Three Worlds,	by H. L. H.	" 24
The Last Days,	by H. L. H.	" 24
Plain Truths,	by H. L. H.	" 20
Will all men be saved?	by H. L. H.	" 24
Voice of Warning	by D. T. Taylor	" 24
The New Heavens and Earth,	"	" 24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos.,	"	" 24
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H. &c.	" 36
Important Questions, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H.	" 36
State of the Dead,	by John Milton	" 24
The Intermediate State,	by H. G.	" 24
Destiny of the Wicked	by H. L. H.	" 12
Future Punishment,	by H. G.	" 12
The Key of Truth,	by W. S.	" 12
Man's Future State		" 12
Letter on Dress	by Adoniram Judson	" 12
The Day of Judgment,	by St. Cyril	" 12
Outline of the Coast,	by A Voyager	" 8
The Night Cometh,	by John Adey	" 8
Gems, 9 Nos., poetry,	by H. L. H.	" 12
One Thing	"	" 8
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ,		" 4
The Duration of the Earth by A. Clarke		" 4
Hope and Duty of the Church, M. Henry		" 4
The Restitution.	by St. Cyril	" 4
A Warning Voice,	by Cotton Mather	" 4
Loving Christ's Appearing,	by Baxter	" 4
Little Children, Love one another		" 4
The One Resting Place,	by H. Bonar	" 4
My Friend,	by H. L. H.	" 4
Abundant Grace	"	" 4
Wondrous Love	"	" 4
Go in Peace	"	" 4
Living Water	"	" 4
The Banner	Anonymous	" 4
The Blood of Christ		" 4
Are you a Christian?	by H. L. H.	" 4
Why not Now?	"	" 4
Are you Pardoned?	"	" 4
Are you Safe?	"	" 4
Are you Saved?	"	" 4
Do you Pray?	"	" 4
When Will He Come?	by J. C. Ryle	" 4
Statement of Account	by H. L. H.	" 1
Man in Death	By Bishop Law	" 4
Forty Questions on Immortality		" 4

SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.

No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked	" 1
No. 2. The State of the Dead	" 1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus	" 1
No. 4. The Resurrection	" 1
No. 5. Plain Truths	" 1
No. 6. The Judgment	" 1

POETRY.

Brother, Shall we Meet?	by H. L. H.	" 2
Sister, Shall we Meet?	"	" 2
Stand up for Jesus!	"	" 1
The Harvest is Past	"	" 1
Beyond!		" 1
At Rest!	"	" 1
We would see Jesus	by Josephine	" 1
A Little While	by J. C.	" 1

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

Life Insurance, Envelope Size	H. L. H.	" 12
Home	"	" 12
Lost, Lost	"	" 8
Peace in Christ	"	" 4
Worth Knowing	"	" 4
All things are Yours	"	" 4
Now	"	" 4
Assurance	"	" 4
About God	"	" 4

The foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $8, with the order, shall receive $12 worth of books at the retail prices. Tracts are sent by mail, 1200 pages, on the receipt of a dollar. When sent by express, or at the expense of the buyer, 1600 pages will be sent for one dollar. Terms cash. Persons who desire to do good can obtain Four hundred tracts, of four pages each, for $1. These may be widely distributed and open the way for religious conversation. Persons may thus be a blessing to those around them. The poor can have any of these tracts sent to them free, by remitting stamps to pay the postage. Ministers can have specimen copies of the tracts and pamphlets sent free. All letters, orders, and remittances should be addressed to the Publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 43 Weybosset St.,
Providence, R. I.

January, 1860.

 These publications can be obtained in Boston, of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York; of G. W. Young, 138 William st.; Philadelphia; A. W. Porter, 725 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publisher through all Booksellers.

Bibles of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Minion, references between the verses, $1.50 to $2.25. Nonpareil, marginal references, or references between verses, $1.20 to $2.10. Pearl, references between verses, $1.75. Marginal references, [illegible] to $1.75. Diamond, marginal references, 75 cts. to $1. Bindings, Roan, Calf and Morocco: these make the difference in prices.

For the Crisis.

Thoughts, suggested by the death of Bro. William F. Cushing.

A brother from our side is gone,
His place is vacant now;
A voice we loved to hear is hushed—
Death's seal is on his brow.
No earthly strife can harm him now,
Life's conflicts all are o'er;
Calmly he laid him down to rest,
To wake in pain no more.

How oft we've heard his well known voice
In faithfulness reprove,
As boldly for the truth he stood,
Filled with his Master's love.
Meekly he heard the world's reproach,
Nor feared the cross to bear;
He kept the faith, nor ever shunned
God's counsel to declare.

And when disease had laid him low,
He spoke no murmuring word,
But in distress his language was,
"Thy will be done, O Lord."
Long he had looked with anxious heart
For Israel's coming King;
And hoped that he might live till He Should life and glory bring.

With sorrowing hearts we saw his strength
Was wasting day by day;
And tearfully we looked on him,
As cold in death he lay.
But oh! what consolation came,
Our mourning hearts to cheer—
"He sleeps in Jesus, and the morn
When he shall wake is near."

Down in earth's dreary charnel-house
The trumpet's voice is heard;
From north and south, from land and sea,
They come at Jesus' word;
All radiant with the glow of health—
All beauteous and fair;
No wasted form, no pallid brow—
All are immortal there.

Then we shall clasp our brother's hand,
And hear his voice once more,
And with the ransomed ones rejoice,
Our tears and sufferings o'er;
O then we'll wait the joyful day,
And pilgrim-like we'll roam,
And watch and pray in loneliness,
Until our Lord shall come.

S. M. H.

Portsmouth, N. H.

For the Crisis.

"The Beast that was, and is not, and yet is."

BY M. D. W.

It is not often that we take our pen to treat upon a "mystery," but having been deeply interested in an examination of this important subject, and the light shining thereon with such increased brightness that it seems to us no longer to partake of much "mystery," we have been induced by the hope of enlightening other minds, not yet illumined, to write a series of articles expressive of our views, though we purpose to do so more in the language of others than our own.

It has been our settled belief for several years that the French Emperorship, revived in the person of Louis Napoleon, constituted the "Beast that was, and is not, and yet is." By what mode of reasoning I was first convinced of this I cannot now tell, nor the time when I became convinced. I suppose, however, that I arrived at this conclusion by the same modus operandi that others have; but, in reviewing the ground, I see the argument in a much clearer light than ever before, and think I could now give understandingly a reason of my faith, touching this point.

A little book entitled, "Napoleon III, The Man of Prophecy," by G. S. Faber, B. D., came recently to hand, and I sat down to peruse it with much interest, and could but wish that all who are undecided respecting this mysterious Beast, could read this book. Then I thought that I could hold "the pen of a ready writer," and perhaps by adopting the language and arguments of a competent one, I might give hundreds the light, who never can perhaps be favored with a perusal of the "little book." There is to my mind a good deal of useless lumber lying round the well-executed frame work, and some of the premises we think are wrong, although he was a great man, and we are a little woman; so we shall set them all aside, and give you in brief his argument for the Revival of the Seventh Head in the French Emperorship, sometimes perhaps in our own way, for brevity's sake. It was in the year 1818 that Mr. Faber first gave his views publicity, and made also "startling announcements concerning a general European war," respecting which history has since given a striking record of fulfillment. Mr. Faber gives as his first reason:—

"1. That predicted Seventh Head had not yet come in the time of St John."

Mr. Faber seems to have overlooked the fact that it was not from John's stand-point, or the isle of Patmos, that he views the beast, and receives the interpretation from the angel, but that he is carried forward in vision to "the wilderness" in which the church was to be for 1260 years, though evidently at its termination, for the woman is represented as already drunken with the blood of martyrs, and her wine-cup full of abominations. From that stand-point, five heads had already fallen, the sixth then existed, and one was yet to come; also, apparently, an eighth, but, in reality, one of the seven, which for a time would cease to exist, and then re-exist. In this we deem Mr. F. in an error, and also in his application of the five fallen heads to the different forms of government, or Roman Polity.

"2. It was not simply to fall, as the angel declared that five out of its six predecessors had fallen; but it was to be politically slain by the sword of military violence.

"3. Yet, after some undefined time, it was to experience a Revival from the Political Death; for its deadly wound by the sword was to be healed.

"The first and third of these characteristics may be viewed as explicitly revealed; al least the third is virtually revealed by the statement that the Seventh King should continue only a short space, and should afterward re-appear as a seemingly, though not really, eighth King.

"But the second of them, which involves the third, is not specifically mentioned by the angel in his discourse. We must gather it, therefore, in the way of deduction from the prophecies in the 13th and 17th chapters combined together.

"The former of these two prophecies intimate that one of the Seven Heads was wounded to death by a sword, and afterward restored to life by the healing of its deadly wound; but it does not specify which of the Seven Heads should experience this violent death, to be followed by a remarkable Revival. To determine this point, we must resort to the latter of the two prophecies, combining it with historical matter of fact. The latter prophecy tells us distinctly that five out of the Seven Heads had fallen; a term plainly used in contradistinction to violent death by the sword of a military enemy."

It was by this mode of reasoning Mr. Faber came to the conclusion that the "French Emperorship" was the Seventh Head of the Beast, and he taught this view even before he saw the fulfillment. Believing that, if right, the "French Emperorship" would continue but a "short time," and then come to a violent termination, he says: "Under such circumstances, I patiently waited to see whether my CONJECTURE would be confirmed or confuted by FACTS. The wonderful career of the French Emperor seemed, for a season, likely to refute my conjecture. With the exception of Britain and Russia, all Europe was trodden beneath the hoof of the most intolerable military despotism; and, when a son was born to Napoleon while yet in the strength and vigor of life, despair anticipated no end to the baleful tyranny. I began to think that my conjecture must have been erroneous, though on fixed principles of prophetic interpretation, combined with the fact that the old Roman Emperorship of Rome had indisputably fallen, I could form no clear idea how it was possible that I could be mistaken in my conjecture. Nor was I mistaken. The French Emperorship, after astonishing and terrifying all Europe, was destined to experience a reverse. It continued only the very short period of eleven years; and then, rising as it had done in the year 1804, it was in the year 1815, after having been severely though not mortally wounded in the year 1814, finally slain by the sword of military violence. These were simple FACTS quite undeniable. I could not doubt that the predicted Seventh Head was THE FRENCH EMPERORSHIP."

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Iowa, Minn., and Wis. Christian Conference.

Our fourth annual Conference was held at Springville, Wis., commencing Oct. 4th, 1860, according to appointment, and continued its session till Sunday evening following. Eld. S. D. Deyo was chosen President, and Eld. P. S. W. Deyo Clerk. W. Sheldon was chosen to prepare a report of the proceedings for publication. The doors of the conference were duly opened for the reception of ministers; and the following preachers were received into the conference, namely: Brn. G. L. Hiscox, A. Cotrell, H. H. Janes, S. Wright, C. Churchill, J. W. Elliot, G. L. Phelps, S. Folsome, W. H. Christeance and A. Duran; making an addition of ten ministers this year, with a pleasing prospect of a generous addition next year. Also the following churches were added: Rock Grove church, (six members,) Marble Rock church, (twenty-seven members,) Ironton church, (seventeen members.) Several other flourishing churches, which have been organized during the past year, intended to have connected themselves with the conference, but omitted to do so for the present.

The case of Yates Higgins was presented to the conference. Unanimously voted to withdraw the hand of fellowship from him. Voted, to appoint as Conference Evangelists for the ensuing year, (to be supported upon the free-will offering principle,) Eld. W. Sheldon, of Springville, Badaxe Co., Wis.; Eld. P. S. W. Deyo, of Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa; and Eld. W. Sweet, of Utica, Wynona Co., Minn.

Voted, that our ministers be required to report themselves annually to conference by letter, when circumstances prevent their being personally present; and that our churches be required to do the same whenever it is out of their power to send delegates. Thus we shall be sure to hear definitely from all parts of our field as often as once a year, and in this way find out the wants of the cause, and learn of its prosperity.

Voted, to return our thanks to the proprietors of the Western Tract Fund for the assistance which we have received from that quarter in spreading the truth.

Voted, that the three Evangelists select the place, and appoint the time for the next annual conference.

Voted, that the doings of this conference be sent to the Crisis for publication, with a request that they should be published in the Harbinger and Herald.

Strawberry Point Church reported an addition of sixteen members since last conference, with a loss of two by excommunication, and one by death; leaving thirty-three members. This church was organized two years ago with eleven members.

Springville Church reported an addition of ten members since Eld. Sheldon became their pastor, and one decease by death. There are now twenty-five members.

Ironton Church was organized one year ago by Eld. Sheldon, with only seven members, but now numbers seventeen; and eleven more have presented themselves for membership at the next church meeting, which will make twenty-eight members. Eld. G. W. Turner is their pastor, and is laboring with success in the vicinity of Ironton; he has baptized eleven in the place and vicinity, and others are waiting to be baptized at his next appointment. Eld. Sheldon has also baptized nine in the place.

Eld. W. Sheldon reported a prosperous state of the cause in different localities. He has had occasion to rejoice in the conversion of souls, and in the reclaiming of wanderers during the past year; has organized three churches; baptized between twenty and thirty souls; assisted in holding several general meetings, etc. Thinks the cause of truth is rapidly on the gain. During five grove meetings, held by Bro. Deyo and himself, three brethren were ordained to the work of the ministry. Eld. P. S. W. Deyo reported a prosperous condition of things in different parts of the field. Had organized one church, with only a few members at its commencement, but now numbering twenty-eight members. For the past year he had traveled seventeen hundred miles, preached one hundred and sixty-five sermons, baptized thirty-two, and felt determined to "stand to the rack, fodder or no fodder." His health is not good, but he had "rather wear out than to rust out."

Eld. G. W. Barnes has labored with success in different parts of the West. He stirs up a "muss" among the error-loving theologians. Has been successful in getting the truth before many, and in persuading a goodly number to embrace it. He preaches a part of the time to the church in his own town, now numbering nineteen members, with a prospect of speedy additions. Feels encouraged with the prosperous state of the cause in our western field. Baptized five during the past year. Eld. Samuel D. Deyo has an anxiety to see the cause of the Master prosper, but he is old and "broken down," and not able to do as much as in his younger days; yet he occasionally gets "out into the bushes" to scatter the word of truth.

Eld. A. Hubbell preaches a part of the time in the vicinity of home; has recently baptized one; feels the effects of old age, which prevents his laboring as constantly as in his younger days, but is "bound to keep going," and try to do what he can.

Eld. W. Sweet's letter to the conference informs us that he and Eld. C. L. Page are still doing what they can in the field, with a degree of success.

Eld. G. W. Turner gave a cheering report of his labors in the vicinity of his home. Preaches at five different places at a convenient distance from Ironton. Has baptized eleven souls during the year. Is now holding some interesting meetings near home, and several are soon to be "buried with Christ in baptism." Preaches a quarter of the time at home, and the rest of the time in the "region round about."

Eld. S. K. Gibson, owing to pecuniary circumstances, had not devoted so much of his time in the gospel field as he had wished to, but hopes to be in a condition to do more in the future. His heart is in the cause.

PREACHING.

Thursday evening. Eld. P. S. W. Deyo preached from 1 Thess. 2: 19; "For what is our hope?" He showed that it was not the hope of a reward at death, but at the Lord's coming. Remarks were made upon the same topic by Brn. Sheldon, Barnes and Turner.

Friday evening. Eld. G. W. Barnes preached from Heb. 9: 27, 28:—"As it is appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many: and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." A good sermon, indeed; full of good truth. Followed by Bro. Deyo with a few remarks.

Saturday, 2 o'clock, P. M. Eld. Samuel D. Deyo preached from 1 Cor. 15: 34; "Awake to righteousness and sin not." A timely discourse. Bro. Sheldon preached from John 14: 3; "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." He endeavored to show the necessity and nearness of Christ's coming. Brn. Deyo and Turner followed with appropriate remarks.

Sunday morning. At nine o'clock we enjoyed a cheering love feast. It was truly a feast of divine love to many pilgrims. At half past 10 o'clock, Eld. G. W. Turner preached from 1 Pet. 1: 10; "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently." He presented to us man's condition before he stood in need of salvation, his condition while he stands in need of salvation, and his condition after he is saved in the kingdom of God.

Sunday, 2 o'clock. Eld. W. Sheldon preached from Dan. 2: 35; "And the stone that smote the image became a great mountoun, and filled the whole earth." He proved that the stone was a symbol of the kingdom of God, and also that we were already in a little circle of time in which earthly governments should be broken to pieces, and give place to the kingdom of God.

Sunday evening. Eld. P. S. W. Deyo preached from 2 Tim. 1: 10; "Who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." He argued that immortality was the gift of God to the righteous only.

At the close of the sermon, Bro. S. K. Gibson was ordained to the work of the ministry. The pledge was received by Eld. P. S. W. Deyo; the charge was given by Eld. W. Sheldon, and the right hand of fellowship given by Eld. P. S. W. Deyo. We then sat down to the Lord's table, in apostolic style. Three times was our long table surrounded by the friends of Jesus, who are looking for his speedy coming. The rainy weather prevented the attendance of many from a distance. Our prospects are brightening. Our conference which, three years ago, only numbered three ministers and three churches, now numbers twenty-three preachers—also a goodly number of churches now belong to our conference.

S. D. DEYO, President.
P. S. W. DEYO, Clerk.

Mil. Harbinger and Adv. Herald, please copy.

For the Crisis.

Dedication Hymn.

[The following, written by our poetess, F. P., expressly for, and sung at, the dedication of the Sandy Hill church, will be very appropriate for other similar occasions.—ED.]

In Zion God our refuge dwells,
And His are all our ways;
We'll pass His gates with songs of joy,
We'll fill His courts with praise.
We've built this temple for our God,
And His the praise shall be;
O God! from Zion shining forth,
Our springs are all in Thee.

Our great High Priest has entered now
The high and holy place,
While in His outer courts we wait
The tokens of His grace.
How amiable thy courts, oh God!
Yet fairer are in sight,
When thou our temple, Lord, shalt be,
And Christ the Lamb our light.

Except the Lord hath built the house,
Our labor is in vain,
For holiness becomes His courts,
And peace shall ever reign.
The glory of His presence bright,
Doth gild our altars o'er:
Hosannah! in the highest strains,
Praise God forevermore!

For the Crisis.

Report

Of the Third Annual Meeting of the Mich. Church Conference, held at Mason, Ingham Co., Oct. 5–7, 1860.

Ministers present: E Miller, Jr., J. A. Sober, E. Chesbro, A. N. Seymour and wife, M. Curry, B. Hill, J. Morse, W. Turner, E. Hoyt, O R. L. Crozier, and brethren from the western and central parts of the State.

Friday morning, committees were appointed on business, resolutions, Bible class, and address to brethren, and to churches and unbelievers. The Bible class held several sessions, and discussed various questions, mainly relating to the kingdom, with perfectly good feeling. The social meetings were deeply interesting, and reports from evangelists, and others from different parts of the State, were, on the whole, encouraging, especially the one from the Calhoun Co. Quarterly Conference, presented by Bro. J. A. Sober.

Officers elected for the ensuing year:—President, E. Miller, Jr., Mendon, St. Joseph Co.; Secretary, O. R. L. Crozier, Grand Rapids; Treasurer, Joel A. Simonds; Directors, A. Currier, Ionia; Wm. H. Knapp, Galesburgh, Kal. Co.; E. D. Alvord, Pine Creek, Cal. Co.; A. A. Babcock, Albion, Cal. Co.; and D. H. Watkins, Leslie, Ingham Co.

The above, with the chairman of the Quarterly Conferences, constitute the Executive Board of the Conference. Evangelist, E. Miller, Jr. For next Annual Sermon, B. Hill. Financial Committee, A. English, East Saginaw; A. Currier, Ionia; Wm. Cork, Delhi Centre, Ing. Co.; J. Morse, Leslie, Ing. Co.; J. H. Winters, Pine Creek, Cal. Co.; A. C. Lewis, Burlington, Cal. Co.; Bro. Curtis, Galesburgh, Kal. Co.; and O. R. L. Crozier, Grand Rapids. [Now, financial brethren, let us see which will collect most for the conference this year.]

Owing to various causes, mainly to sickness, the attendance from abroad was not large; and the people of Mason did not get in much till Sunday, when our congregations were good. Eight discourses were preached, and the word was listened to with deep attention, and we hope some profit. The brethren agree that good has been done by our efforts in conference action, and seem disposed to do what they can to push on the work. At the close of the meeting, a resolution of thanks to the M. E. Society for the use of their house, and to the friends in and about Mason for their hospitality, was passed, as also the following:

Resolved, by the Mich. Church Conference, That we feel deeply interested in the Annual Sermon preached before us at Mason on Saturday, Oct. 6th, 1860, by Bro. O. R. L. Crozier, and desire that the same may be published in pamphlet and scattered. The subject of the sermon is the TRANSITION; or the events that mark the change from this age to the next. Financially, the conference aims at two objects this year, viz: to support its evangelists, and publish its Annual Sermon. About one quarter has been pledged for each. The financial committee are requested to obtain pledges and contributions for these objects, keeping the two separate, and report to our treasurer, Bro. J. A. Simonds, Grand Rapids, or to any member of the Executive board. [If it would not seem meddlesome, I would advise those who can give only one dollar, to do it for our Evangelist rather than the Sermon.] Pledges for Evangelist to be paid any time during the winter, and for Sermon when enough is pledged to publish it, and the value of the money sent will be returned in the Sermon as soon as published.

The Conference is under many obligations to our most excellent brother, B. Hill, for his assiduous labors in preparing for it, and providing for our comfort while in session. Both he and Bro. Curry are held in high esteem by all who know them. We hope the time may soon come when they can get access to the people, and do much good by preaching the word in that region.

Finally, brethren, let us be more diligent the coming year than we have the past. Let the preachers try to preach more and better, and the brethren and sisters do more to sustain them, and encourage and keep them in the good work. Let us not aim to do as little as we can, and escape censure from our brethren and our conscience but do all we can without absolute neglect of other duties. "He who soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully."

O. R. L. CROZIER, Sec.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 9th, 1860.

Selections.

Religious Doubts.

I have spent more than thirty years in a close study of the sacred Scriptures, and no small part of my inquiries has had reference to the difficulties which were suggested to my mind by my early skepticism, and to those which, to a mind naturally inclined to unbelief, have been suggested since. I do not mean to say that all those difficulties have been removed; but I have found that, on a close examination, not a few of those which at first perplexed me, have silently disappeared; that a large part of those which have been since suggested, have vanished also; and that, in the mean time, the evidences of the truth of the Bible have, in my apprehension, become stronger and stronger. I come, therefore, in this respect, with the language of encouragement to those who are now just entering on their christian way, and who find their minds poisoned by skepticism, and their course impeded by difficulties. Time, patience, study, reflection, prayer, suggestions from within and from without, accompanied by the influences of the Divine Spirit, will remove most of those difficulties, and will leave at last only those which belong, not peculiarly to the Bible, but to the mysterious order of things around us; to those which lie wholly beyond the reach of our present powers, and which must be left for solution to an eternal world.—Albert Barnes' Life at Threescore.

"Take Hold of my Hand."

"Take hold of my hand," says the little one, when she reaches a slippery place, or when something frightens her. With the fingers clasped tightly around the parent's hand, she steps cheerfully and bravely along, clinging a little closer when the way is crowded or difficult, and happy in the beautiful strength of childish faith. "Take hold of my hand," says the young convert, trembling with the eagerness of his love. Full well he knows that if he rely on any strength of his own, he will stumble and fall; but if the Master reach forth his hand, he may walk with unwearied foot, even on the crested wave. The waters of strife or of sorrow shall not overwhelm him, if he keep fast hold of the Savior.

"Take hold of my hand," falters the mother, feeling that she is all too weak for the great responsibilities that throng in her path. Where shall she learn the greatness of the mission—the importance of the field that has been assigned to her? and, learning it, how shall she fulfill it, if she have not the sustaining, constant presence of one who loves his people?

"Take hold of my hand," whispers the aged one, tottering on through the shadows and snows of many years. As the lights of earth grow dimmer in the distance, and the darkening eye looks forward, to see if it can discern the first glimmer of the heavenly home, the weary pilgrim cries out, even as the child beside its mother, for the Savior's hand.

O Jesus! Friend and elder brother, when the night cometh, when the feet are weary, when the eyes are dim, "take hold of our hand."—Christian Intelligencer.

HOW TO ACQUIRE VIGOR OF STYLE.—A reverend critic told a literary friend that his style wanted that vigor which might be acquired by running the pen through every other word. The editor of the Christian Inquirer expressed the same thought in this form: "We do not remember reading a book, sermon, or poem, for ten years, that would not have been materially improved by cutting out half the nouns, three quarters of the adjectives, and all the adverbs."—Boston Transcript.

☞ Wealth is generally attended by much good or much evil.

Children's Confidence.

Do you want to learn how to make children love you? Do you want the key that will open the innermost recesses of their natures? Then sympathize with them always. Never allow yourself to ridicule any of their little secrets. Never say "O, pshaw!" when they come to show a new kite or marvelous top, and "I can't be troubled," when the hard knot won't be untied, and two and two obstinately refuses to make four on their small slates. Kites and knots are only the precursors of older thoughts and deeper trials which the parent may one day plead in vain to share! Don't laugh at any child's ideas, however odd or absurd they may seem to you, let them find your sympathy ready in all their wonderments and aspirations.

Is there any man so wise in his own conceit as to have forgotten that there was a time once when he, also, was a child? The little folks are too much crowded out in the world, people generally seem to think that they can be put anywhere, or made to eat anything, or be crammed in any out-of-the-way corner, to amuse themselves anyhow. We don't agree with these cross grained wiseacres. Children have just as much right to the car window and easy seat as anybody. It don't take much to make a child love you and trust in you, and the benefits to him are absolutely incalculable. Oh, how much better it is for children to bring all their cares, and troubles, and temptations under the gentle eye of a wise parent!

What a safeguard it is for them to feel that there is always a kind ear to listen to their griefs and doubts, and a gentle shoulder to nestle their little heads against! Respect their rights, never think you can say better things in their presence, or do unjust actions. They are the finest discriminators of fair and unfair in the world. Somebody says, "When you incline to be cross with children for being slow to learn, just try a minute to write with your left hand. See how awkward it proves, and then remember with children it is all left hand." Preserve us from those precocious infants who spring up ready-made philosophers and casuists, cherry cheek little blockheads are infinitely preferable. Above all, do not be ashamed to let them see that you love them. Remember they will be men and women some day, and the slightest word which may influence their future lives, should become a thing of moment in your eyes.—Life Illustrated.

The Simplicity of the Bible.

The fact that God gave a revelation, not for the learned, but for all classes of men; not for any one age or nation, but for all ages and all nations: proves, that that revelation may be understood, at least as to its direct teaching, without the aid of human science. It is an instructive fact, that the Gospel was understood, and did achieve its most signal triumphs, at periods when every existing system of philosophy was fundamentally erroneous. The entire history of the Church in all ages, and in the present, sustains me in the assertion—that the Gospel has lost its power over the human conscience and heart, precisely in the degree in which there has been departure from the obvious meaning of the language of the Bible, to accommodate its teaching to any science or system of philosophy. The history of the Church furnishes not a solitary exception to this general statement; indeed, one of the most convincing proofs of the inspiration of the Scriptures is the fact, that every attempt to improve upon their meaning, (and there have been many such,) has been attended with loss of power, or has exhibited a perverted and pernicious power.—Nathan L Rice, D. D.

Fault-finders.

Here's what Beecher says of fault-finders:—"To watch to see what is awkward in others; to search out the infirmities of man; to go out like a street-sweeper, or a universal scavenger, to collect the faults and failings of people, to carry these things about as if they were cherries or flowers; throw them out of your bag or pouch, and make them an evening repast or a noonday meal, or the amusement of a social hour, enlivened by unfeeling criticisms, heartless jests, and cutting sarcasms; to take a man up as you would a chicken, and gnaw his flesh from his very bones, and then lay him down, saying, with fiendish exultation, "There is his skeleton;" this is devilish! Talk about cannibalism! Cannibals never eat a man till he is dead. They are nearer Christ than you are, a great deal.

Reading for Youth.

Love wins Love.

"Mother, the birdies all love father," said a little boy of five summers, as he stood with his mother, watching the robins, who were highly enjoying their morning meal of cherries from the old tree that overhung the house.

"Does any body else love father, Charlie?"

"Oh, yes! I love him, and you love him, but we know more than the birds."

"What do you think is the reason the birdies love your father?"

Charlie did not seem to hear this question. He was absorbed in deep thought.

"Mother," at last he said, "all the creatures love father. My dog is almost as glad to see him as he is me. Pussy, you know, always comes to see him, and seems to know exactly what he is saying. Even the old cow follows him all round the meadow, and the other day I saw her licking his hand, just as a dog would. What can be the reason, mother?"

"Think, Charlie,—try and find out a reason yourself."

"I think it is because father loves them, mother. You know he will often get up, when he is tired too, to give pussy something to eat if she is hungry, and he pulls carrots for the cow to eat from his hand, and pats her, and talks to her, and somehow I think his voice never sounds so pleasant as when he talks to the creatures."

"I think his voice sounds pleasant when he is talking to his little boy."

Charlie smiled. "Father loves me," he said, "and I love him dearly. He loves the birds, too, I am sure. He whistles to them every morning when they are eating cherries, and they are not a bit afraid of him, though he is almost near enough to catch them. They look at him with their funny little eyes, and chirp and eat away just as if they knew he liked to see them. I wish you could hear him whistle to the 'bobalinks,' as little Mamy calls them. They come and sit on a twig close by him, and sing so loud, and make such funny noises. It always makes me laugh to hear him try to do as they do. Mother, I wish everything loved me as well as they do father."

"Do as father does, Charlie, and they will. Love all living things, and be kind to them. Do not speak roughly to the dog. Don't pull pussy's tail, nor chase the hens, nor try to frighten the cow. Never throw stones at the birds. Never hurt nor tease any thing. Speak gently and lovingly to them. They know as well as you do who has a pleasant voice. Feed them and seek their comfort, and they will love you, and everybody that knows you will love you too."

Little by Little.

Do my dear young friends ever think, how almost all that is good comes to us? Did you ever see a farmer planting and sowing? Down in the moist earth goes the seed and yellow corn, grain by grain, little by little. God sees the farmer at his work, and knows full well that he has done what he could, so he kindly sends the gentle rain, drop by drop, and not one of these little drops ever forgets its errand upon the plea which the good God sent it to the earth.

"I have found you out," said the rain-drop to the tiny grain of wheat, "though you are dead, and in your grave. God has sent me to raise you up."

Well, there is nothing impossible with him; so when the rain-drop has done its errand, a spark of life shoots out from the very heart of the tiny grain, which is dead and buried, and little by little it makes its way out of the tomb, and stands a single blade, in the warm sunlight. That is nobly done; and if the great God pleased he could make that little blade strong and fruitful in a single moment. Does he do this? No. Little by little does the stalk wax strong; and its leaves grow slowly, leaf by leaf.

Is it not so with everything that is good? Should we like another way better? Impatience would.

It was only a few days ago that I heard a little girl say:

"I am tired, tired, tired! Here is a whole stocking to knit, stitch by stitch! It will never be done."

"But was not this one knit stitch by stitch?" I asked, taking a long one from her basket, and holding it up.

"Yes."

"Well, that is done."

The little girl was counting, instead of knitting her stitches. No wonder that she was tired.

Did you ever see a mason building a house of bricks? "Poor man," Impatience would say; "what an undertaking—to start from the earth, and go on so far towards the sky, brick by brick!" Who ever saw a patient, persevering person try, and not succeed at last? So, then, step by step, which is God's way, must be the best way.

Let us see that we do every day what we can. Any little boy or girl who, in looking back upon a day gone by, can say, "I have done one thing well," may be happy with the thought that he has taken one step in the way of wisdom and virtue. But remember one thing, dear little friend, the buried grain of wheat would never start into life if God did not send it help; and it is by the same help that it increases day by day.

As the little rain-drop—God's beautiful messenger—descends into its tomb, so in the darkness and death of sin, the Holy Spirit comes to us. If he breathe upon our hearts, we live to do good. Let us obey this Spirit, and all good will be ours at last, though we gain it little by little.

Hugh Miller and Drink.

When employed as a mason, it was usual for his fellow workmen to have an occasional treat of drink, and one day, two glasses of whiskey fell to his share, which he swallowed. When he reached home, he found, on opening his favorite book—Bacon's Essays—that the large letters danced before his eyes, and that he could no longer master his senses. "The condition," says he, "into which I had brought myself, was, I felt, one of degradation. I had sunk by my own act, for the time, to a lower level of intelligence than that on which it had been my privilege to stand; and although the state could not have been very favorable for forming a resolution, I in that hour determined that I should never again sacrifice my capacity of intellectual enjoyment to a drinking usage; and with God's help, I was enabled to hold by the determination."

Be virtuous, then you will be happy.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,
Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year.......$2.00
For a single copy 6 months.......1.00
For a single copy 3 months.......50
Five copies to one address for 6 months...4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months...8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months...15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months...22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; 1. 6. 61 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 267. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 8.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ The Crisis is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

I'll trust in God.

I'll trust in God; my heart is sad,
Wearied with earthly woes;
But in distress I'll look to Him
Who all my sorrow knows.

I'll trust in God; though clouds may lower
In darkness o'er my way,
I know that His almighty arm
Will surely be my stay.

I'll trust in God; he knows my heart
Is fixed to do his will;
And Satan's children rage in vain—
I will obey him still.

I'll trust in God, nor doubt his word;
I dare not choose my lot;
He knows what most I need, while I
In ignorance know not.

I'll trust in God; he would not let
Such fiery trials come,
Could I be purified without,
And fitted for my home.

I'll trust in God, and wait until
His work in me is done;
For out of darkness light doth rise
Unto the upright one.

I'll trust in God; he'll give me grace
The awful test to bear;
Soon I shall rest—the trial past—
And Eden's glory share. S. M. H.

Portsmouth, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Desire.

What is it? There are few positions in life wherein man may be placed, but that he feels a strong, unconquerable desire to stride over matters of minor importance—over the gross and groveling—and to plant his standard of dignity on the highest attainable position to which he may aspire. He may have forfeited all just claims to his manhood; but his character is human still. His mind, with its countless treasures, does not stop to inquire whether its clamorous calls of craving appetite can ever be satisfactorily adjusted; but there is one voiceless strife of intercession for it knows not what.

This inherent, yet ungovernable principle has its beginning, as its ending. It begins with the first dawnings of the moral mind, and only ceases its action in immortality. It is the vigor of temporal life, the antidote for every moral ill, and Pharos-like, rears its beacon light adown the gulf of time, to lead and lure onward alike the honorable and the depraved, the saint and sinner, towards their visionary goal.

But its virtue is limited in the vast multiplicity of its votaries. Napoleon was not satisfied with his profound thought, roaming the vast unlimited fields of his imagination, but he sought to prove by his million minions, the feasibility of his most extravagant projects. Gold when weighed in the balance with glory, was to his mental cravings no more than the moth in the flashing light in the noon-day sun. The god of the natural man was to his yearning heart but a single element that was to play a successful farce in the great drama of conquests. His prolific genius was a slave to calculations and their probable results. But yet he was not a skeptic, neither was he a slave of ambitious notions; but while he justly acknowledged the omnipotence of God and his unlimited attributes, he claimed he knew no more—he cared to know no more; and save a few fleeting years that were to crown with perishable glory his conquering arms, he knew no peace; and as the sun of glory fast waned upon his pathway, perhaps, pangs of remorse shot through his soul, as he viewed those wasted hours that might have secured him a greater conquest than the armies of earth—a victory over the power of the last enemy, Death. He died—but not as some men die; for the lowliest peasant that ever satiated nature with a crust of bread and drop of water, has yielded up his breath; and as he passed to the pale nations of the dead, he bore with him credentials signed and sealed, which, in that day, when the audience-chamber of Christ shall be prepared for the coronation of the immortal, will give him a passport through the gates of the eternal city, and entitle him to an imperishable crown.

It is very obvious that man in his thirst for knowledge labors under direful inconveniences; inasmuch as it is a question of vast importance, what knowledge should be selected from the great research of life,—knowledge that results in lasting profit. If man were not a creature of circumstances; if he were not a victim of that life-destroying principle—human influence,—in short, if he were not under the curse of that dread fiat—"Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return,"—if these considerations were not involved, a simple matter of choice might be his motto; but as it is, the very moment he breathes the breath of understanding, he becomes a necessarian,—the battle of life is begun, and nothing remains for him but to keep an eye single to its accomplishment. To be sure, he may not be convinced of the magnitude of his obligations; but if it is an unexceptionable rule that the greatest worth demands our highest admiration, he may from intuitive conviction, judiciously decide upon what course to pursue, and may form an abstract opinion, at least, of the value of the final results.

If God had never revealed to man a future existence dependent upon the character of the receiver, his hope would have been limited in the extreme; for it would have been obvious to his own sense of reasoning, that the very highest attainable position amid the gross and transient of earth, might be secured through a shrewd, penetrating foresight. But as it is, right in the face of divine law, the loftiest motive that some have is, to enroll their names on the highest scroll in the temple of fame. But providing they succeed in appeasing the desires of ambition, what doth it profit? Supposing they write on memory's scroll a deathless name, who dare say the mission of life is then nobly performed, and life's ends satisfactorily answered? To be, is not merely to live; to live truly, is to bring eternity into life, and so amalgamate and embody the present with the future, that the result shall issue in a faithful discharge of those duties that God imposes on all his subjects.

But, I ask, after man has spent all his physical and mental powers to still the innate cravings of the natural heart, and to all human appearance has attained that point in worldly sentiment where the gloss of life attracts its throngs of votaries; by what proof can we determine that he has received a fair requital for all his strivings—all the yearnings that have for years run riot among the most tender and hallowed loves of the heart? Is he satisfied? No. Inpossible! "Which of us by taking thought can add one cubit to his stature?" Can physical and intellectual power triumph over moral law? I say again, impossible! Who dare say that in the vilest hour man ever saw, heartless and destitute of manliness as he may appear to the public mind, that he became more disgraced, more degraded, sunk deeper in the slough of contempt than ever, because of the absence of some noble desire? The principle is yet within him; it may appear as inert as the dying zephyr; but let the fires of regeneration purge the rubbish that enshrouds it; let the refining element disentegrate it from the mass of ruin that covers it; then place an object within its reach and it grasps it with lightning vigor. Is it satisfied? No. It reaches out after higher and more noble objects: it attains them. Is it satisfied then? No. And when man lays his head down to die, he is not satisfied. Why? Something beyond, concealed, indistinct, mysterious. He aspires still. He thinks to live again. For what reason? Look at the furrow—ask the flower as it sleeps in the dust through the wintry hours—watch the insect from the period of germination to perfection, and behold it as it emerges from the tomb-like chrysalis in its rainbow-tinted beauty. Is man of less importance? If God so clothe the grass of the field with its glory, and the worm with its beauty; how much more will he clothe man with immortality!

C. G. Carre.

(To be concluded.)

For the Crisis.

"Because thine Heart was tender."

The world, because of sin and transgression, is under sentence of condemnation, and "tribulation and wrath are written upon every son and daughter of Adam that doeth evil; upon the Jew first, and also upon the Gentile." But while in the midst of this fearful condition, involving the ruin of the human family, the heart of the infinite Jehovah was moved with compassion towards our race. Hence, a fountain was opened in the house of King David for sin and uncleanness. A Savior was provided whose own arm brought salvation to those appointed to die; and now the heralds of mercy and gladness are everywhere commissioned to go forth throughout the wide creation with the glad tidings of great joy to all people. The terms upon which life will be given to those who have rebelled against their Sovereign Lord, are easy, only requiring penitence, or tenderness of conscience, on the part of the offender. For, saith the Lord, "to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word."

In the days of the kings of Israel, when Hilkiah, the priest, had found the book of the law in the house of the Lord, he delivered it to Shaphan the scribe, to read before the king a fearful message of wrath that was to be poured out upon that people. "For, thus saith the Lord, behold I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the words of the book, which the king of Judah hath read, because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense to other Gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be kindled against this place and shall not be quenched." But when that good king Josiah heard these terrible predictions, he rent his clothes, and sent to inquire of the Lord concerning the words found in the book; and so acceptable was this course of the king to the Lord God of Israel, he returned him this gracious message, "Because thine heart was tender, and thou hast humbled thyself before the Lord, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become a desolation and a curse, and hast rent thy clothes, and wept before me; I also have heard thee, saith the Lord. Behold, therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place."

Thus, if tenderness of heart and humiliation before God, in King Josiah, could defer an earthly judgment, how should the trembling sinner now rejoice, that tenderness of heart and a contrite spirit are in the sight of God of great price, and will finally secure him from suffering the penalty of wrath and fiery indignation which "shall devour the adversaries." But how greatly to be deplored is the fact, that multitudes daily hear of the terrible threatenings written in God's law, which will most assuredly fall upon the head of the guilty sinner, without being moved to tears, or sorrow of heart. Such is the fatal tendency of sin, that those who are under its influence, though they have eyes, they see not, ears, and they hear not, and hearts that will not believe the glad tidings of the glorious gospel, lest they should be converted and saved. O! that perishing sinners exposed to the penalty of God's broken law may humble themselves under his mighty hand, that he may become their portion here, and finally exalt them to the glories of his future and better kingdom, where sin and sorrow cannot enter, but an eternity of bliss will be the inheritance of the redeemed forever and ever. M. A. T.

Neal's Creek, Ind.

For the Crisis.

Notes by the Way.

After the campmeeting at Wilbraham, I thought it a privilege to attend meetings without so much burden on my mind. Went to the Methodist campmeeting two days with the intention of selecting all that was good. The two best sermons were very good, and there were some good prayer-meetings. Friday, I went to the Westford meeting, and enjoyed the two days I spent there. Sunday, went to South Reading. Found the church alive. Thence to South Pittsfield, to another barn meeting. Found the brethren holding on well. Some of the seed sown in the spring-time had taken root, and being watered by Bro. Emerson, began to bear fruit, which roused the devil, who set cold professors to reporting all kinds of falsehoods. But I felt like bombarding the place once more in the name of God. Here I met some recruits from Portsmouth and Loudon Ridge, and although young, they helped mightily in carrying the battle forward. Some came out while the enemy growled. Others skulked when they saw persecution coming. After about a week, I left for another old battle-field of last spring. Found the company strong, with the whole armor on, not having lost a single soldier—no, not one severely wounded in six months' battle. The selectmen thought of taking care of me if I ever went back; but no officials appeared, and we had a good time serving God with the young converts from Portsmouth, who went out to see those at the Ridge. Their hearts were soon knit together like David's and Jonathan's.

Monday, by request, went back to South Pittsfield to stop three days more and contend with Spiritualism in sheep's clothing. Then to Chichester three days. Here were a few faithful warriors who appreciated help. There was a good interest. Some received the light. Then went to Sandwich Center. Here most of the light had been put under the bushel, but four days brought it out in sight so others saw it. God will bless them if they keep doing. This is old ground forsaken by the brethren who formerly used to preach in that region; but sectarian darkness has not killed out all the true principle. One old man said to me on my departure, "Bro. M., your visit has been worth more to me than a thousand dollars." This was the first Methodist that came into that town. He embraced the whole truth with a good number of others, and confessed it publicly. They have established an independent free meeting every Friday evening. I hope the preaching brethren will give them a call. More good can be done in such places. There ought to be two or three good evangelists to visit such localities and feed the children. I fear city salaries have called some from God's work.

From there I went to Machiasport, Me. Stopped at Portland and Yarmouth. Found the churches holding on. Took the steamer "Daniel Webster" Friday evening for Rockland. Had a hard time, sea rough. Took the boat at Rockland for Machiasport. This was still worse. The boat jumped about like a duck. Nearly all were sick. I staggered, but was not sick, except of my job. We encountered a snow storm, and things looked dark. While I was staggering about the deck, I said to some one I thought they had better tie the "critter" up for the night. This made me a subject for sport among the boat's crew. They all supposing me a "green horn" that was frightened, had a good time squinting and laughing at me. I felt homesick, indignant and hungry. I found I was called the "blue surtout man." The "blue surtout" was Bro. Hastings' old blue overcoat that he lent me at Portsmouth, he having a new one. I must have suffered without it in the snow storm. Thank you, Horace, although it subjected me to notice.

It was nearly time for dinner, so I started for the cabin. Soon the bell rung, and a rush came down stairs. I went to the further end of the table, to be as much alone as possible, and sat down at the foot of the table, as I supposed. Soon the captain and mate, and a number of young sea captains, came down, and seeing the old blue surtout at the head of the table, commenced laughing, and proposed to "tie the critter up," etc. Soon one said, "Put on steam and run away from danger, for this man is scared," referring to me. I stopped eating, and said, "Gentlemen, you had better keep your gas for some one younger than I am. In fifty-four years I have seen a great many people and some fools." This stopped their fun. I then told them that I had seen the salt water before, for I had been the length of Long Island Sound and back three times, and wasn't sick nor scared. I then left for the deck. It appeared that after I left one of the oldest seamen said, "Boys, that old surtout man knows more about the world than all the rest of us, he has doubled the "Horn" three times. He has come the game on us." Soon I had company enough inquiring about my voyages. I was in the dark about it, only saying I had been the length of Long Island Sound three times. This made it certain that I had doubled the "Horn," and I was soon honored unexpectedly, treated with respect, and got to my appointment Sunday morning in good time. Some of the crew looked strange when they saw that same old blue coat go into the desk, but God worked, sinners were converted, the whole place stirred. The Baptists opened their doors, and I preached three times. The work was started there. Some were converted and others convicted. God moved the whole population. I consented to stay the second Sabbath. The work increased all the week. Sunday, six requested baptism. This was new and unexpected to the people in that backslidden place. Sunday evening there was the greatest interest I have seen for years. I presume there were fifty under conviction the second Sunday evening. But I had to leave it where it was; to stay another week I could not, and the boat left Mondays only.

These brethren have held on without any preaching but once for over two years, and then Bro. Leafest called on them to see how the seed looked that he sowed five years before. I felt that my visit was greatly appreciated by them, and blessed to the conversion of a good many sinners. It got among the seamen. One mate of a vessel and his brother were among the converts that were baptized. I left them, probably never to meet again on earth. I hope the preaching brethren will call on them.

This ended a tour of eight weeks. I had a rough time coming home, on the boats; was hindered two days for the storm to abate. I took my line and caught fish enough for the whole boat's crew one meal. So I became noted again, and got two meals free. I had to stay at Rockland over night. At six Wednesday morning I was awakened by the earthquake, which said the whole earth groans for deliverance, which will come soon.

I did not think of noticing this trip till some suggested it after hearing some of these incidents. There was a theft of thirty-eight dollars on board, but the energetic efforts of the officers detected the thief. Three men were on board in irons, going to State prison, one for five years. So we had a variety, all showing that wickedness is not at an end. Let us keep doing as long as God is willing to show mercy to sinners. I think it safe to say, I have seen fifty start to serve God this time out. Thank the Lord, children.

H. Munger.

For the Crisis.

Where is my Treasure?

Not in the gold of India's mines,
The glory that resplendent shines
Around the kingly throne;
The wealth of ocean's soulless caves,
The treasures 'neath its restless waves,
And surging billows strown.

The triumphs of the battle field,
The sceptre that the princes wield,
The crown that monarchs wear;
The titled worldling's sounding name,
The landed victor's blood-wreathed fame,
The joys the mighty share.

But, oh! my eyes can pierce the shroud,
And see the light beyond the cloud—
The glories angels share;
The coming world's unfading bliss,
The offspring of the pains of this,—
I'd place my treasure there!

Pine Avenue. F. F.

For the Crisis.

"Stray Thoughts Arrested."—No. 3.

BY T. W. S.

Nonsense! what is? why, what I heard a man say the other day. He said that "you might as well blot God out of existence as to destroy the soul!" for it is part of God. He ought to have said, also, "you might as well punish God with fire and brimstone, and consign him to eternal misery, as to do so to the soul, for it is a part of God!" "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul (psuche, life,) but fear him which is able to destroy both BODY and SOUL in hell" (gehenna.) So says Christ. It is plainly declared that it is possible for the soul to be destroyed or annihilated. If our friend meant that man cannot destroy the soul, we do not object; but if he means that God cannot destroy it, we differ, and assert by the authority of God's own word that he can as easily destroy the soul, or any thing else, as he can create. Presumptuous, erring man! to limit the power of Omnipotence.

God made man of the dust, and "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul"—not became possessed of an immortal soul. Being made of earthy matter, he is corruptible, perishable, mortal. God offers immortality, extends to man the privilege of becoming immortal. Man does not embrace the offer, despises the privilege, does not perform the necessary duties. He is therefore undone. Having refused to accept eternal life, he must as a necessary consequence forfeit it. God will not, and cannot justly, force eternal life upon any man. Is man wiser than God that he knows the soul cannot die? Paul says, "he that converteth a sinner from the error of his ways, shall save a soul from death." How can any thing be saved from death that cannot die?

Our friend said also that "in the beginning God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness;" it was the immortal soul that was made "in the image and likeness of God." Is it like God in omnipotence, in omniscience, in omnipresence? Like him in holiness, in wisdom, in goodness? Who will affirm this? How, then? By being immortal, by being part of God. But does the Bible say it is immortal? Does it say that the soul is part of God? If it does, who will show us the place?

This dogma, like many others held by those who style themselves the "Orthodox," is only a relict of Popery. It is proper for a daughter, on taking leave of her mother, to take with her some token of remembrance. This doctrine is too important to the "Mother Church" to renounce its possession. She is willing to lend it to her offspring, but if they are not grateful enough to acknowledge their obligations, she charges them with stealing it. The Devil contradicted the Almighty in the beginning, and men have been following his example to the present day. God says the soul that sinneth it shall die; man says it shall live. God says the wicked will be destroy—burn up; man says they will be preserved. God says man is mortal; man says he is immortal. God says he will turn (return or turn back) the wicked into hell (sheol;) man says they are cast into hell-fire and brimstone, and endure eternal misery. Is not this a fearful position for poor, erring, dying man to take? Yet there are thousands who daily contradict the plainest of all God's teachings, and if convinced from the Bible that their theory is false, rather than acknowledge their error, they will charge the inspired writer with ignorance or falsehood! How often do we hear persons say (professors of religion too) when the prophets or apostles are against them, that David, or Paul or Peter were nothing but men, as liable to err as others. This may be true so far as relates to them as men; but when they were speaking as the "oracles of God" under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit ("holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit"), is it not going too far to charge these men with fallibility, or fickleness? Would it not be more honorable, more consistent, more just, to forsake the errors and receive the truth?

But so firmly implanted are the opinions of some men—opinions which they have been taught from infancy, and which have grown with their growth—that it would require as much effort to forsake them as it would to lay down their life for a friend, and are yielded up as reluctantly as if eternal life depended on their retention. But the day will soon dawn when all differences will be adjusted, when error will be destroyed, and all will know the truth.

For the Crisis.

"Making her Naked."

Everything indicates that the hour of doom for the Papal Anti-Christ is just at hand. And as her plagues begin to sweep over her, so do they bring for her whose cup of iniquity is full, and whose time for making herself drunk with the blood of saints is forever past, no more to return,—torment and sorrow, mourning and famine. Not the least of these divine visitations of indignation is the showing up of her hidden deformities—the unveiling before the gazing and unpitying world, of all her secret and diabolical machinations for torture, and with them the black records of her guilt.

Mr. Pearsall of England has recently discovered one of those horrible instruments of torture, called "The Virgin," and similar to that said to have been discovered by the armies of the first Napoleon in the Inquisition at Madrid. It is described as a strong wooden and iron image of a female, whose arms opened in front like folding doors, and studded within with dirks and stillettos, poniards and spikes. The miserable victim is bidden to kiss the virgin as a penalty for refusing to worship the abyss-begotten beast. Sinewy, mechanical arms open to receive him, and he is crushed in their horrid embrace, and at the same time pierced with twenty-three irons in the eyes, neck and heart. A late New York Illustrated paper contains an engraving of this awful engine of death, invented by the Romish Inquisitors to destroy those who refused to submit to their infamous decrees. O Rome! what a solemn account thou wilt have to settle with Jesus Christ in the day of judgment for the manner in which thou hast dealt with his Bride!

But as though it were not enough to unveil from obscurity the vile and cruel modes of torture, God has in wrath against her put the records of those tortures of human Protestant flesh into possession of the Protestant world. In the plunder of Rome in 1848 the books of the Inquisition were carried off and sold in the streets, and after passing through several hands, are now safely deposited in the College Library at Dublin. Here in the manuscript-room, in some sixty huge quarto volumes, bound in red—fit color for the sanguinary tale they tell—are the real minute-books of the dreaded Romish Inquisition, extending over a period of one hundred years! They contain the actual proceedings of the "Holy Office," in the handwriting of the Inquisitors and their clerks; and, though locked up in the Italian tongue, the Protestant world will not leave them long unread. Hide thy head, mother of harlots, and blush for the revealings of the bloody story of thy shame and sin!

I have no doubt the world will behold more of these unveilings, tearing open her very heart, until mystery Babylon, stripped of her hiding places, stands "naked" before us. Rejoice over her fall, "thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets!" Rejoice over her every saint of God whose redemption draweth nigh!

I am very solemnly impressed in view of the great events of our times and the rapid and near approach of the end of the world. Christ have mercy upon us all. Amen. D. T. Taylor.

Dansville, N. Y., Oct. 1860.

For the Crisis.

"Let Brotherly Love Continue."

I. The objects of our love.

1. The Brethren. Those who love Jesus. There may be differences of opinion, and in view of individual peculiarities, it seems almost impossible that it should be otherwise; but these differences of sentiment form no excuse for us, for the command is imperative that we should love the brethren.

Now the text does not single out the brethren of our church, but recognizes the universal brotherhood of christian disciples. We are to extend our love, then, to brethren of EVERY NAME and nation. The great question is not, whether he belong to this or that church, or to none, but is he a christian? does he love the Lord Jesus with all his heart, and his neighbor as himself? If he does, then our love should encircle him as does the love of Jesus.

2. The Sinner. Although we cannot love his sins, we may and ought to love the sinner. It was the love of God to the sinner that induced him to send to our relief his "only begotten Son," that "whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." Let the sinner once become convinced that he is the object of christian love and care, and there is great hope of reformation in his case.

II. The ground of this love.

1. We are traveling to the same country. We are heirs of the same promise, and rejoice in the same hope. Notwithstanding our differences here, we look forward in anticipation to a glorious union with our God and with each other. We sigh for the "realms of the blest." We strain our weary eyes that we may catch a glimpse of the celestial city, and live in hope of having a part in "the first resurrection" from the dead.

2. We have the same object in view, viz., the salvation of the sinner and the glory of God. We labor to rescue men from death, and incessantly do we urge the blessings of christianity upon the people, and in the conversion of the ungodly we find a realization of our highest hopes. I would to God we were more zealous in this matter of pointing sinners to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world."

3. This love is essential to the prosperity of Zion. It is next to impossible for the church to labor effectually when the element of discord prevails; but let the church "as one man" go forth to battle for the Lord, and they will be attended with sure and certain victory.

III. How to promote this love.

1. By overlooking each other's faults. We often discover in our brethren things we deem liable to our censure; but we must remember that humanity is frail, the flesh weak, and we prone to err. Then we are apt to magnify these frailties so as to make them appear to be greater than they really are. The Lord save his people from fault-finding.

2. Let us learn to speak evil of no man. By pursuing this course, we may not only save ourselves much anxiety, but may prevent the ruin of others. O! how many through the slanderous tongue of others have become castaways. God save us from this also.

3. We must sacrifice for others. Sometimes by giving away a little to the feelings of others, we may accomplish that which under other circumstances we could not do in years of time.

IV. Effects of this love.

1. It gives strength to the church. "Union is strength," and a band of devoted christian men can accomplish that in united effort which would be impossible if taken singly and alone.

2. It makes us more Christ-like. The whole life of Jesus was one of love. Love characterised his mission, his deeds of mercy, and his entire life. Love, and love alone, has brought salvation to our ruined race. Glory be to God for that "love wherewith he loved us" in sending his Son into the world that we through him might have eternal life. Let us not forget, whatever else we may do, to love the brethren; and in the words of the blessed Bible I would repeat it—"Let brotherly love continue." Amen. Henry W. Dare.

West Troy, N. Y.

Be Silent.—It is a great art in the christian life to learn to be silent. Under opposition, rebukes, injuries, still be silent. It is better to say nothing than to say it in an excited or angry manner, even if the occasion should seem to justify a degree of anger.

☞ John Wesley said, "By repeated experiments we learn that, though a man preach like an angel, he will neither collect nor preserve a society which is collected, without visiting them from house to house."

For the Crisis.

"Proselyting."

Yes, we are accused of "sheep stealing"—of robbing other churches to fill up our own; and this is a very great crime; to disturb the peace and safety of the church, and wake them up from their sweet and comfortable nap, to cry "thief, thief." Well, I suppose we must plead guilty to the charge; we do want the "sheep," and mean to get them, if we can, in a fair and open way, by argument and persuasion. But we do not want the "goats;" they may stay where they are if they choose. Now we go on this principle, and it is according to the gospel: "If a man see an ox or an ass fall into the pit, will he not help him out?"—and, forasmuch as a man is better than a beast, should we not do likewise? We have, most of us, been in the pit ourselves, and are heartily glad to be helped out of it, though it has sometimes been done rather roughly; we have no wish to fall in again.

People ought to give a good and sufficient reason for what they do: we do not want to steal the sheep for the sake of the wool, or the mutton; for we do not mean to kill them, but make them alive: we do not mean to shear them, but to clothe them with glory and immortality. We want them to find a better pasture; some of them, we fear, are almost starved to death where they are: we freely acknowledge this was our case; our constant cry was, "my leanness, my leanness!" But now the Lord has given us a good pasture, and there is enough and to spare; and we do not want to feast alone, but we want all those who fear God, and love the appearing of the good Shepherd, who gave his life for the sheep, to join with us in that blessed hope of the gospel, the second advent of Christ.

I know there are a few in all the churches who are partially convinced of the truth, and would, if they dare, come out and advocate it; but poor, silly sheep, they are afraid of the wolf, and some are almost afraid of their own shadow. We want to give these timid ones a little more courage to do their duty, and act like men valiant for the truth. I know there is reproach and persecution for all those who embrace the truth as it is in Jesus, but it is to me perfectly evident, that those who refuse to suffer with and for Christ will never reign with him. As this is the case with too many in the present day, I fear they are in a dangerous predicament. What a fatal snare is the fear of man! How many are caught and ruined by it! If this should meet the eye of any one halting between two opinions, let me warn you, brother or sister, to make a speedy decision. Christ says, he who is not with me is against me. Are you willing to be found in communion with Antichrist, when the Lord shall be revealed from heaven? If not, come home to that little flock to whom Christ has promised the kingdom.

If there is "proselyting," be it so; we have been accused of worse things than this, and if this is vile, we would be more vile still. All we desire is, to warn sinners in and out of the churches of their danger, and entreat them to flee from the wrath to come. We feel that the nominal church is asleep in carnal security, crying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" and we would fain get the few sheep of Christ out of it; that when the Bridegroom cometh they may be ready to meet him, with their loins girt, and their lamps trimmed and burning.

The true church of God has ever been on the aggressive; she is in a militant state, and the armor provided for her warfare is not only for defence, but attack. She has not only a breastplate and a shield, but an arrow and a sword, and she is to go forth conquering and to conquer. We as a people who believe in the Advent of Christ, and the final destruction of the wicked, have deserved all the reproach cast upon us by the church and the world, if the truths we advocate are of no importance: we have labored in vain, and spent our strength for naught. But, on the other hand, if they are, as we believe them to be, the vital questions of the day; the test that is to try the faith of the church in these last days,—then an awful responsibility rests upon those to whom God has given the light of truth, that they should spread it abroad, and use all lawful means within their power to persuade men to embrace it.

This is our position, and others may call it "proselyting," or what not; it is at our peril we hold our peace. We might have continued in the nominal churches, as many do now who believe these truths, and try to shirk all responsibility on somebody else; but the true soldier of the cross will never take this cowardly course; if he did he would be cashiered, and sent away in disgrace, and ultimately lose his reward—eternal life. Christ and his apostles spent all their time and talents in trying to bring both Jews and Gentiles to the knowledge of the truth, that they might be saved; and they found more opposition and persecution from carnal professors of religion than from any other class. So it was with the reformers in the time of Luther. So it always has been, and so it is now in these last days; the self-styled rulers of the churches seek not to enter the kingdom of God themselves, and those who are seeking to enter in they hinder. Nominal Christianity in the present day is as much missionary ground as any heathen land, if we are to judge by their fruits. I know it is much harder to cultivate old worn out land, that has been exhausted by over much cropping, than virgin soil, that has never been turned by the ploughshare. And I have heard the same sentiment expressed by the spiritual husbandman with regard to some places where the gospel has been "statedly preached" for many years: the conscience at last becomes seared as with a hot iron, and men are given over to hardness of heart.

J. Parry.

For the Crisis.

The Royal Visitor.

BY P. B. MORGAN.

Our city has been all astir. The military have been moving from morning till night. Escorts, processions, reviews, beside a notable ball, a concert, and et cetera, have been arranged, and probably, we may say, enjoyed. Cannon have roared, bells have chimed, and Americans—thorough-going Democrats and Republicans—have played on American soil, "God save the Queen." All lips have echoed "The Prince," and all eyes, lifted high on tiptoe, have gazed, apparently quite unmindful of common flesh and blood, to get one view of The Prince. From garret to cellar, from the State House to the meanest hamlet, the centre of conversation has been The Prince. Until we might almost fancy, the cold granite of Bunker Hill Monument had become animated with the prevailing excitement, and felt proud to take in its arms and lift to equal height the American and British ensigns—the latter at the East, and the former at the West,—over the very bulwarks where, nearly one century since, the two nations met in deadly conflict, and when the warm blood of a Warren was poured out for American Independence.

But Saturday came—our blessed preparation-day—the day when the weary begin to think of a rest-day, and the way-worn think of the dear ones at home. And with Saturday came our deliverance,—a deliverance from the thousands and tens of thousands, and, not least of all, from the excitement consequent upon the occasion. After shaking hands with the Governor, our Hon. Congressmen, and others of Nature's noblemen, the Prince took leave for Portland, where, after a couple of hours, we are informed, he joined the British fleet and set sail for Europe.

And now, that we may take a long breath, we ask, who was this surely well-behaved young man? and why all this ado? The answer is—it is the Prince of Wales, heir apparent to the British throne. And it is further said, that, as the boy is father to the man, it is believed that the impressions made upon the youthful mind of the Prince—now scarcely nineteen—will have a lasting and salutary effect upon his future life; that the influence of this visit may possibly be of incalculable benefit to this nation at some future period;—and hence the uprising of this great nation to greet with such immense enthusiasm, with cheers long and loud, the presence of this young Prince.

The propriety of all this we will not pause to question, though, be it remembered, the bloody Nero was once a young, and apparently most amiable Prince. But let us ask, if such attention be due a Prince whose interests are so foreign to ours, what are the civilities, what the attention due Him who is Prince of the kings of the earth,—the Lord of glory—who has already announced his purpose to shortly visit this world again? Who makes haste to prepare for Him a welcome? Who is glad that he saith, "Behold, I come quickly?" In what nation, or city, aye, in what household, is this stupendous fact the subject and centre of conversation? Alas! alas! O, church of Christ, hast thou forgotten thy spouse? Nevertheless the King makes ready, and soon with the heraldry of angels, as a royal visitor, will be here. The Lord help us to be ready and bid him welcome when he comes.

For the Crisis.

The Pine Grove.

As I walked out this morning into the pine grove, bounded on the north by a dense oaken forest, I observed the pines next the forest all leaning southward. My first impression was, that the north winds had occasioned this; but, in a moment more I discovered my mistake by observing that all the branches of the pines grew southward also; that the trees were absolutely bare and uncomely towards the woods. I then saw that these pines, branches and all, were reaching as far as it was possible into the open space southward for the light and heat of the sun.

Oh! what a lesson it taught me. Child of God! see thy example. See these pines almost uprooting themselves to feel the light and heat of their sun. They were not content with the cool shade of the oaks; ah! no, not a branch shot thitherward, but all their beauty and grace was towards their life-giver.

And as I walked on, my shoes becoming wet with the cold dews, and every leaf dripping as the chill winds of October gently stirred them, I instinctively drew my cloak about me, shrinking from their every touch and exclaiming, "Truly, this is the oaken forest of this world"; and my poor stranger-heart went up with unutterable longings for the presence of the "Sun of Righteousness" to forever dispel the chill damps of earth.

E. S. Willard.
Hammonton, Atlantic Co., N. J.

The World's Crisis.
BOSTON, OCTOBER 31, 1860.

Salem Conference.

The Conference at Salem, held Oct. 16th to 18th, resulted in the formation of a Publication Society, which is designed to take more efficient measures for scattering light and truth in these last days. It is thought that, by associated action, more can be accomplished than by individual effort. The fact that we are now emphatically near the great day of the Lord should arouse all to do what they can in the best possible way to produce the greatest amount of good. No effort should be spared.

We were sorry to learn that some supposed that the Providence Conference, held in July, was called for the purpose of adopting a denominational name, to be accepted by the different Advent churches. Every church is perfectly free to take any name they may choose, and adopt such regulations as they may deem for their best good. If it were ever right, we are now too near the judgment to form ecclesiastical bonds to restrict the very largest religious liberty of every child of God; and we are the last people, we hope, who will consent to receive any such restrictions. We must be free. We should not envy the man who would endeavor to impose an unscriptural yoke of bondage upon those who are looking for and loving the appearance of Jesus. Our brethren need have no fears that any such work is contemplated; and we were grieved to learn that any supposed that those at the Providence Conference had so far departed from the Lord and the "blessed hope," as to have the least design in that direction.

We were still more surprised to learn that some thought the reason why the majority at Providence were in favor of the word Christian as a part of the name of the association, was because they were "ashamed" of the word Advent. Such would have made no greater mistake, if they had concluded we had all turned Mormons. Our reproach does not come from our name, but because of the doctrine we preach We shall have but little shame and reproach, if we receive none but what comes from the name; for the term "Second Advent" has become quite respectable, where the life and death doctrine is not associated with it; and those who hold to the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked are considered unworthy of the title. "Yet if any man suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf." "I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called; with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."

Rome and Napoleon; or, an Exposition of the 17th chap. of Rev.

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3: 7.

At the present time, the world is interested in watching the movements of Napoleon III. and the critical situation of Pope Pius IX. The former is rising, the latter is falling. His last props are being taken from him; and he whose mandate once made all Europe tremble, is now as helpless as a mere dotard. His temporal power is nearly all gone, and his spiritual is apparently about to end forever. The kings and dukes of Italy, who with their subjects were pillars of the Papal throne a few years since, are now but exiles, or assisting Garibaldi in his victorious march towards the "eternal city," which for more than twelve hundred years has been the seat of the Roman Pontiff, who has claimed to be Christ's Vicegerent upon earth; and yet caused "the blood of the saints, and . . . . the blood of the martyrs of Jesus" to flow, till some fifty millions were sacrificed on the bloody Papal altar. "The woman on the seven-hilled city" may now see the handwriting upon the walls, like that in Belshazzar's palace on the night of his destruction. The Cyrus of Italy is evidently on his march, drying up the waters of mystic Babylon, preparing to enter the Vatican palace in victorious triumph.

Let us now turn to the prophecy in the seventeenth chapter of Revelation, that we may obtain light on this interesting subject. The first part reads as follows:—

"And there came one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, come hither; I will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters; with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication. So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness; and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication; and upon her forehead was a name written, Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots and abominations of the earth. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus; and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration. And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns."

This prophecy contains two important symbols, a "woman" and a beast. The angel peomises to tell "the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her." Let us attend to his instructions. In the last verse of the chapter he says; "The woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth." What great city? In the 9th verse we are told that it is one located on seven mountains," or seven hills, as Wiclif's old translation reads. This is quite definite, and we think we shall have no difficulty in ascertaining its location. But before we do so, let us examine the symbol more carefully.

We assume that when woman is used symbolically, she represents a church; or the city containing it. If she is a harlot, as in this case, she symbolizes a corrupt one. The representation is very common in the Scriptures. Please read the 16th chapter of Ezekiel. Here we find the Lord speaking of Jerusalem, or the church therein, as a "harlot," because of her unlawful union with the Egyptians, Chaldeans and Canaanites. He says to her, "O harlot, hear the word of the Lord." She should have accepted the Most High as her husband; but instead of doing so, she looked to these other nations for protection, and thus committed fornication with them. When a woman leaves her lawful husband and is united with another, she becomes an adulteress; so when a church leaves the Lord, and associates herself with the civil power of the surrounding nations for support, she is properly represented by a harlot.

When the church is pure, she is compared to "a chaste virgin" Christ represents himself as the "bridegroom," and the church as his "bride," or "wife." But as the woman in Rev. 17 is a harlot, she must symbolize a corrupt church, which according to the prophecy must be located on 'seven mountains" or hills, and reign "over the kings of the earth." We know of but one city thus situated. Says a London correspondent, "An audible wail comes from the city of the seven hills." We need not stop to tell the reader that Rome is the only seven-hilled city on our planet. Says the historian, it is "the most celebrated city of the world, either in ancient or modern times." According to the prophecy, the church in this city would be properly represented by a harlot, and reigns "over the kings of the earth." No fact is clearer in history than that this church, by the authority of its ecclesiastical head, has claimed and exercised the right to establish and depose kings and emperors at pleasure. This has been one of her common acts, so well known to the world that we need not stop to burden the reader by citing examples. We think there can be no doubt that "the woman" represents the Romish church whose seat is upon the "seven hills."

"A Double Crown."

It will be recollected that Napoleon I. was crowned Emperor of France in 1804 and King of Italy in 1805. Napoleon III. is following closely in the steps of his distinguished uncle. A Paris correspondent says:—"The Emperor is determined that the year 1862, which completes the decade of power originally demanded by him of the French people at the 'coup d' etat, shall witness the concentration of a double crown—that of Rome as well as France—in the imperial family. In the meantime, while the French garrison grows stronger, the ties which connect the Emperor with the Holy Father become, in the estimation of this last, weaker every day."

"A Perilous Position."

The Pope speaks of his present situation as "a perilous position." Indeed it is, and increasingly so from week to week. He has recently delivered an allocution to the Cardinals in which he says:—"Whilst, however, we have for a long time been expecting such a result we are most painfully affected in seeing the authors and abettors of this invasion advance as far as the walls of our capital, as though they had the assurance that no one would oppose them. In presence of such a perilous position we see ourselves forced, even against our will, to the sad necessity of occupying ourselves with the measures to be taken for the protection of our dignity."

We think the Pope's "dignity" will not long be an object worthy of much boasting on the part of his friends or himself. His is no enviable position.

Hard Times.

The prospective financial aspect of our country is not very promising. The neuralgic pains of an approaching panic are already felt by many, especially at the South. The following from the Richmond Whig of Oct. 20th gives some premonitory signs of what is approaching:—

"The complaint of hard times comes from every portion of the South. Money matters are tight, and the wealthiest of people find it difficult, and in many cases impossible, to procure means necessary to meet their current expenses. Sad to say, in truth, the people are suffering in the flesh from an inability to get the real necessaries of life. Many who, in last year's plenty, enjoyed the comforts and luxuries of the land, are denied the least as well as the greatest of their earthly wants. Nor is it because the hand of Providence, bountiful in its dispensation the year before, is now closed against them, for provisions are as abundant and not higher priced than then. The western states are sending to our markets their increased surplus of grain and produce, and it requires but the cash, as heretofore, to obtain provisions in any quantity, but the money is not to be had. Why is this? Because the banks refuse to discount. No matter how good the paper offered, they close their drawers against it. And why is this? Not far in the distance are beheld signs of a dissolution of the government under which we have prospered as a nation, and it would be unsafe, under existing circumstances, to extend credits and increase an unsettled business. The most important interests of our people are in a deplorable condition, and a remedy must be applied soon, else they will be in a condition far worse, never to be remedied."

"Pius IX. must Go."

Must go where? Away from Rome,—to perdition. He has declared he would not leave the "eternal city," but it is now thought he will soon leave to return no more forever. The rule of the pretended vicegerent of Christ is evidently about ended. Indeed, the righteous heir to David's throne—the King of kings—may be expected to commence his reign within a brief period. The Paris correspondent of the London Post says:—"We must now expect two events—the flight of the Pope from Rome and the retirement of Francis II. from Gaeta. It is impossible, after what has taken place, for Pius IX. to remain in the Eternal city. He has by the advice of Antonelli sought to burn, pillage and destroy the property and persons of the people of his States. He has failed. His army of hirelings is beaten. His criminal intentions have been prevented by heaven. Pius IX must go."

"A Terrible Crisis."

The political aspect of own country is far from being peaceable. It promises nothing pleasing. The omens are very threatening—increasingly so. Men are hurriedly arming for a conflict at no distant day. The revolutionary element is very active, and in less than six months our nation may be in bloody civil war. The cup of iniquity appears to be about full. The oppressor cannot always prosper. The public pulse on this point may be seen by reading the following extracts. Says a Richmond (Va.) correspondent of the New York Herald:

"South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama will undoubtedly secede before the middle of January next, and then a conflict with the federal government, it is to be presumed, will follow. Virginia cannot stand by in such a contingency with folded arms. She must go to the aid of her sister States. . . . . In this attempt at coercion in reference to any seceding State rests the great danger of a general revolution, which there is every reason to apprehend. . . . . By the the time Lincoln shall have assumed the reins of government, the work will have been done. Every plan and every arrangement for future independence, or as some say, for a great Southern confederacy, including Mexico, will have been perfected; and it will take a power far greater than Lincoln will have at command to undo them. This is no vague, unfounded speculation. I have seen correspondences from high and influential sources referring to this subject, and the feasibility with which the details of future operations are set forth in these correspondences would convince any one but a black republican that a terrible crisis is inevitable. . . . The frequent applications for arms to the Adjutant General of this State foreshadow a crisis in our political annals, compared with which the John Brown raid was a mere holiday scene. So numerous and urgent are those applications that the State is unable to furnish the necessary supplies, and the probability is that another large purchase of arms must be made at an early day to meet the requirements of her increasing military organizations. . . . . It is estimated that by the time there shall be need for their services—say about December or January next—not less than from two to three hundred thousand men will be fully armed and equipped, ready for any emergency."

Another prominent public Journalist, when speaking of the signs of the times says:—

"We think our readers will admit that we are on the eve of by far the greatest danger that ever threatened the country. . . . . The unthinking multitude, as in all past ages, are sleeping unconsciously on a volcano which is already uttering its low murmurings, premonitory of eruption, and may at any moment send forth its irresistible fiery flood to overwhelm and desolate wherever it comes."

"The False Prophet."

For some three thousand years, the demons, or "the angels that sinned," have inspired the breasts of the heathen prophets, and conducted their oracles after the manner of what is now denominated "Spiritualism." Men thus inspired were called "false prophets" and not unfrequently interfered with the prophets of the Lord, and made earnest efforts to deceive the saints of the Most High. The prophets of Ahab were of this class. They have always made earnest efforts to gain the confidence of Emperors, Kings and other noted personages, that they might more successfully accomplish their purposes in gaining influence over our race. Just before the second coming of Christ, we learn from the Scriptures that these "spirits of devils" or demons, "working miracles," are to "go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty."—Rev. 16: 14. It is evident that they are now doing that work. Napoleon III. is receiving prophecies from them. He supposes the spirit of Napoleon I. is giving him special instruction. There is no doubt that the demons have selected the present Emperor of France to assist in carrying out their purposes.

The following is one of the prophecies given to the Spiritualists:—

"Between this time and the 7th day of September, 1867, a very great battle will be fought upon the grounds of the Austrian quadrangle. In the five days' battle, over forty-five thousand persons will be left dead upon the field. I will prophecy further, that, if a certain man does not die, this battle will be fought in the month of August, 1865; between the French and the Sardinians on one side, and Austria, England, and Prussia, upon the other. But if this said man shall die, the event will then transpire sooner by one year and a half, and upon different issues.

In the last case, the issue will be between Sardinia and Prussia, against Austria, in which England will take no part. This last issue is predicated upon the event that, if the present Emperor of France shall die, three contending parties in France will aspire for power—which, for the time, will neutralize the power of the French nation—at which time Austria will seize upon the opportunity to regain her former Italian possessions, and Prussia will protest against the attempt, and will successfully back up Sardinia in maintaining her position in this great battle.

Further, I will say of the Emperor Napoleon, that, on the 18th day of March next, he will have come nearer losing his life (I think by assassination) than ever before; but I perceive that he will escape. In the month of September following, all the nations of Europe will become alarmed for the health of Napoleon."

The following is another prophecy from the spirits, concerning American politics:—

"There will be a dissolution of the Union."

"A Free Republic will grow up at the North. There will be civil war carried on by the rabble and lower classes among the masses. The Republican candidate will get the popular vote, but will not be elected. There will be two great parties organized."

"The 'Liberals' in politics and religion will unite on the one side, and the Catholics, Democrats, and all conservative men and women on the other side."

"Slavery will be abolished by revolution, insurrection among the slaves, war, and blood."

"Next winter Congress will get in a broil. They will fight. Blood will flow.

"My consciousness is, that this Nation will be dead as a Nation before the 4th of March next."

"Almost simultaneous with the close of the November election, will be another crash among the banks, similar to the one of 1857."

"By and by we will have great diseases, and new forms of disease, unknown to physicians."

"We will have war, famine, political commotion, earthquakes and hurricanes."

"Healing mediums will be developed to cure disease."

"England is to be harassed by France, and Russia will assist France; and when England is crushed as a nation, America will aid her."

"We will have no more Presidents—the present one will not serve his time out."

"Canada will enter the new Republic in America."

"Ohio will be the centre of that Republic, and Cleaveland will be the capital."

"Our present constitution will be the basis of the new Republican government, but will be remodeled."

"After the transition is passed, Theocracy will be the true form of government."

"The Negroes will ultimately be colonized in Central America."

"In the transitional or Republican government, woman will take an active part; but in the more perfect form of government, or Theocarcy, the male and female elements will be equally balanced."

But we are aware of the rapid spread of the sentiments of Spiritualists, and of their deep laid and gigantic plans for revolutionizing the government of America "and the whole world." The demons are devising measures to govern our planet through their mediums, and when successful, they wish us to believe that we are under a true "Theocracy," or a government direct from God.

Pastoral.—We are happy to state that the church worshiping in Chapman Hall, in this city, have secured the labors of Bro. P. B. Morgan, lately from the West, who will serve them in the capacity of Pastor for the present. Since their parting from Bro. Moncrieff, one year since, they have been as sheep without a shepherd, and have suffered proportionately. It is earnestly hoped that the efficiency and zeal of him whom they have unanimously chosen to minister unto them in spiritual things, shall prove, under the blessing of Heaven, successful in the great work of wooing the unrepentant to a consecrated life; of increasing the primitive charity and union of the church, with the upbuilding of the interests of the Temple of our God, which, as a light in a dark place, shall beckon the benighted wanderer onward and upward to light and life.

Let not the churches scattered abroad forget to pray for their sister church in Boston, and for her pastor. In the midst of years of difficulties and perplexities, trials without and within, she still lives, and, with the present help vouchsafed her, is encouraged still to struggle on, and await the day of eternal redemption.

May the oneness for which the Savior prayed the Father to be given his people,—for whose sakes he sanctified himself,—be recognized as it should, and form the hidden strength of their success. Let pastor and flock co-operate in the one great work; let there be a loving sympathy and fidelity for each other, with submission to God and truth,—and shall not the cause of Christ be advanced? "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

"God save the King."—The origin of England's national anthem is said to be French. It was for a long time used as a vintage hymn in southern France; and its primal performance as a national song, in England, was given before James I., in the Merchant Tailors' Hall, July 16, 1607.

It has been asserted that Henry Carew, who wrote in the last century, was the author of this song; but facts associated with it will not substantiate such as true; for there is little doubt of its being of very ancient origin.

Inquiries.

Editor of the Crisis:—Please publish and answer the following inquiries, and oblige your affectionate brother in Christ,

Rufus Wendell.

1. Does the "sudden destruction" of 1 Thess. 5: 3, synchronize with the "everlasting destruction" of 2 Thess. 1: 9?

2. Does the word "when" in 2 Thess. 1: 10, synchronize with the same word in verse 7th of the same chapter?

3. Does the phrase "them that know not God," in verse 8th, relate exclusively to persons living at the time of the second advent? or, to persons alive at the advent and the unholy dead raised to life? or, to all the finally impenitent in a resurrection life?

4. "Eternal death is the highest possible punishment. The wicked lose all that the righteous gain." These statements being true, and it being also true that "the wicked" will begin to "lose all that the righteous gain" at the time when the righteous are raised to an incorruptible life, does it not follow that the state in which the unholy dead are left when the saints are glorified, is penal in its character?

5. Does the phrase "the dead" in Luke 20: 37 embrace any beside them "which are fallen asleep in Christ?" In other words, does it include the wicked dead?

6. Does the relationship expressed by the phrase, "the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," exist, or will it ever exist, between Jehovah and the impenitent dead?

ANSWERS.

No. 1. Perhaps it does.

No. 2. We are inclined to think it does.

No. 3. We think it refers to those alive at Christ's coming.

4. We think not. If so, there is no "second death." One cannot die twice without living between the two. "And the sea gave up the dead that were in it; and death and hell (hades) delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged, every man according to their works. And death and hell (with their contents) were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."—Rev. 20: 13-15. When death and hades delivered up the dead, they came to life for judgment. If they do not come to life, then we cannot see how death has delivered them up, or how they can die the "second death." If they continue in the same state they have been for ages, we do not see how it is any more penal because the righteous are raised, than it was before their resurrection.

5. Not necessarily.

6. When "the impenitent dead" are raised, the God of Abraham is their God as truly as he was before they died.

For the Crisis.

A Proposition.

I intend, if the Lord will, to publish in November cheap editions of the following works:—1. Reasons for my Hope. 2. The Great Controversy between God and Man. 3. Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times, by Dr. Ramsey. They will be on good paper, and in stiff, glazed, or enameled paper covers, and the price will be 25 cts.,—perhaps 30 cts. for The Great Controversy, as it is much larger.

Now I want these books widely spread, and besides I want the money to help print them. To those who wish to scatter them, I will put them at four copies for $1.00, postage paid; five copies for $1.00, they taking them by express, or sending postage. Thirty copies for $5, by express. Fifty copies for $8.00; and one hundred copies for $15.00; one thousand copies for $125—cash with the order. Who will take a hundred, sell sixty copies and get their money back, and then distribute the rest? Let me hear from you at once. I purpose also to issue the sixth edition of "Voice of the Church," $1.00, and the twelfth thousand of Pauline Theology, 15 cts., and also some Tracts. Let me hear from you, who wish these books, at once, that I may know how many to print, and have something with which to pay for them. Direct all letters, orders and remittances, to H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

Correspondence.

From E. C. Paine.

Bro. Grant:—For a long time I have felt a duty devolving upon me, and now, by the help of the Lord, I will try to discharge it. We have come to a time when it is our privilege to inquire, "Watchman, what of the night?" and we have a right to demand an answer. God, by the mouth of his holy prophets, hath said he would "set watchmen on the walls which should not hold their peace day nor night until Jerusalem is established a praise in the earth." Where are they?

I think it is high time we are all awake out of sleep, trimming our lamps anew, securing oil in our vessels, and giving the cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." It has been the burden of my prayers, that God would send forth his ministers in the same spirit that Paul had, receiving their commission from the Lord Jesus Christ, not shunning to declare the whole counsel of God, preaching the gospel in its purity, denying themselves of all ungodliness, and following their pattern in all things, like Paul, saying of a truth, I keep my body under, I bring it into subjection, lest that by any means when I have preached to others I myself should be a castaway. Many take advantage of Paul's saying in this very text, that if so good a man as Paul had fears, then we may. I say boldly, he had none. Read the preceding verses. He exhorts us to so run that we may obtain. Paul knew his acceptance with God; he was a workman that was not ashamed; he bore whippings and imprisonments with resignation, knowing that he was doing the will of his Master. We have fallen on strange times. I see not that spirit of endurance and boldness in the cause of my heavenly Master that I discover in Paul. He says, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel,"—it is of necessity laid upon me. O that the Lord would baptize his ministers into the work! Souls are perishing for lack of the bread of life. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty!

I often see notices in the papers of God's healing the brethren and sisters. I rejoice that faith in God's word is yet exercised by some of his dear saints. Why do you not all comply with the rule laid down by James?

Springfield, Mass.

From F. J. Hess.

Dear Sir:—I wish to say a few words to our Eastern brethren, that they may see how we suffer here for the want of the blessed gospel. We have a house here that will accommodate about three hundred persons, and we have no shepherd to feed the little flock. We would be glad if some advent preacher would come this way and sound the gospel trumpet. We have a few living members in this place, and a number that have become cold. We have some little villages, such as Turin, Martinsburgh, Lowville and Copenhagen, and all near this place, where the people ought to have the truth preached. There is quite a chance for some brother. We are in the heart of the State of New York. Come and see. You will never be sorry. Whoever comes must expect to stay two or three weeks. If any one should think of coming, let him come as far as Utica, then to Booneville, and let me know when he will be at Booneville, and I will meet him there with a horse and carriage.

West Martinsburgh, Lewis Co., N. Y.

From Sr. M. Norton.

It is more than twelve years since I first obtained a hope in Christ; but when I compare my enjoyments during that time with the assurance of hope that I now feel, the contrast is truly wonderful; and I now look back with sorrow on time past in which I might have enjoyed all that I do now, had not prejudice kept me from examining and receiving those truths that are now so heart-cheering to me.

There are but few in this place who hold the Adventist views, I think not more than ten or twelve within twenty miles; consequently we are much isolated. We seldom hear preaching except that which teaches the theology of the day. Bro. Lenfest preached here once, and Bro. Fitch two or three times. We have not had the privilege of coming around the table of the Lord, owing to some not being fully decided in their minds as to who is qualified to administer. The teaching here, as in other places, has always been that none but ordained ministers should officiate in this solemn ordinance. Will any of the ministering brethren give us their mind on this matter through the Crisis? We are willing, I trust, to help fill up the measure of Christ's sufferings, and we wish to show forth his death till he comes,—an event which we hope is near at hand. And I would say to the brethren and sisters, let us see that our loins are girded about, our lights burning, and we ourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord; lest he come in a day when we look not for him, and appoint us our portion with the unbelievers.

Strange that the professed church of Christ should remain in such a state of apathy, when everything around us indicates the near approach of that great and notable day of the Lord. Truly, the Bride should be making herself ready, and I believe the[illegible] is; but, alas! I fear that many who are dreaming of heaven will be sadly disappointed when they hear the awful sentence, depart, for I never knew you. God forbid that we should sleep as do others. My earnest prayer is, that the Lord of the harvest will send forth laborers into his harvest.

Scots Bay, Cornwallis, N. S.

From L. Wetherbee.

Beloved Brethren in the Lord:—Your heavenly messenger wings itself once a week again to my poor cottage; and glad am I to peruse its blessed columns. It is one of the best periodicals I ever have seen or read. It does my soul good to read its heavenly epistles. Never have I loved the Crisis as of late. The Lord help us, Brn. and Srs., to lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh. Watchman, the Lord help you in these last days to have the spirit that Noah and Lot had. The old Gospel ship that was launched almost six thousand years ago, is heaving in sight of the harbor, and soon she will cast her anchor.

Bangor, Me.

For the Crisis.

"The Rich Man and Lazarus."

Notwithstanding the vast amount of sound argument and much sophistry expended upon this subject, there is, to my mind, something very vague and undefined about it yet. Some in their endeavors have proved too little, some too much, and some just nothing at all. It has been used as proof of a state of conscious bliss and torment in the state betwixt death and the resurrection, which use collides with the Bible. Again, it is said to illustrate the position of the Jewish priesthood, and christian ministry. To this I would address the question, "Why did the rich man (Jewish priesthood) supplicate spiritual aid or consolation from Father Abraham (the Most High) through the instrumentality of Lazarus (Christianity)?"

The new tract, which has just been issued by Eld. J. S. White, takes a new position, which, divested of much that is mysterious, places the subject in an exceedingly simple light. The straight-forward, upright, unbending integrity of the writer, his holy life and conversation, his talents as a speaker, entitle his little work to a careful examination. I would recommend its perusal to all who read this, and are seekers after truth,—persuaded that they will be edified and instructed thereby.

Jno. F. Cotton.

Obituary Notices.

Died, in River Point, R. I., Oct. 4th, 1860, Saloma, daughter of Joseph L. Rose, aged twenty-three years.

She lived eleven days after being confined to her bed, and at the time of her death, we all thought she was getting better; but the palpitation of the heart came on again, and in one half hour from the time it commenced, she fell asleep in Jesus. Saloma was baptized and joined the church here in the spring of 1858 But the place that once knew her now knows her no more. Those that have listened to her soft voice will not hear it again until Jesus comes. Then he will make her like the angels. I have seen her countenance sad, the tear-drops large upon her cheek, and the enemy death gaining a victory over her; but soon, very soon, we shall see the dead coming out of the graves, and Soloma, not clothed with the habiliments of this sin-cursed earth, but clothed with immortality, forever blest. May God bless the parents of Saloma, and grant that they may meet their daughter on Mount Zion, to part with her no more forever.

J. P. Babcock.

Some few weeks since I was called to preach a funeral discourse upon the occasion of the death of Bro. Daniel Osborne, who died Jan. 31st, 1859, aged sixty years. He had been a believer in the one faith and hope of the gospel about twelve years, and it rendered him unspeakable consolation till he quietly fell asleep in Jesus to wait for the reward promised in the morning of the first resurrection. The friends chose not to have a sermon at the time of his death, because no one of like precious faith could then be secured. We occupied the Methodist house in Mottville, Mich., on the occasion. Text, Rev. 15: 3. We trust that the friends were comforted by the cheering promises of redemption, and some seed sown that will spring up and bring forth fruit to the glory of God.

A. N. Seymour.

Died, at Warehouse Point, Aug. 31st, 1860, Eldridge C. Hause, aged forty-one.

Bro. H. embraced the hope of the gospel in '44, and fell on sleep expecting life only through Christ at the resurrection. From the time he embraced the gospel to the day of his death, he lived among men as a friend to suffering humanity and a christian. It could be said of him, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." For the last two years of his life he was confined to the house with a cancer; during which time I have often visited him and found his sufferings intense; and when those excruciating pains brought forth the deep groan, it was often followed with "glory to God," or "bless God for the hope of eternal life." And although he was a great sufferer, he always had a word of comfort to give to his attentive companion, and all others that called upon him.

In Aug. '59 his sufferings were so great it was thought best to remove his left eye. This operation was performed at Hartford, and while at the surgeon's room, his companion weeping, he calmly said to her, "Weep not, but rather rejoice [illegible] surely come up again." And when the surgeons were astonished at his firmness, he said, "The Lord is on my side, I fear not." At another time he said, "Weep not for me, I have overcome the world." His companion has been a constant attendant upon him, and the Lord has given her strength and grace, or nature would have failed, and she would have slept in Jesus ere this. Our Bro. leaves two sons and two daughters.

A large number of neighbors, friends and brethren, assembled to pay their parting respects to our brother. A comforting discourse from 1 Cor. 15: 21 was given by Bro. J. W. Crabtree.

S. C.

Died, in West Winsted, Conn., Aug. 9th, 1860, Bro. G. N. Gale, aged sixty-one years.

He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his absence; yet they sorrow not as others who have no hope, knowing that those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Bro. G. had been for thirty years in the vineyard of the Lord, being a member of the M. E. Church until '43, when he heeded the cry, "Behold he cometh; go ye out to meet him!" since which time his waiting has been

"In expectation sweet."

Notwithstanding the intensity of his sufferings, he bore all with christian fortitude such as we had never before witnessed; the burthen of his prayer being, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly!" While we were watching by his dying bed, he would break forth in singing praises to the living God; and we could but say with one of old (should death be our portion), "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

The funeral was attended by the Methodist minister of this place.

G. S. H.

Died, at Danville, C. E., on the 19th Oct. and 27th anniversary of his birthday, my eldest son John, after having passed through eight months of extreme debility, and almost an unparalleled case of affliction, having in that time been neither able to sit upon a seat of any kind, or lie upon a bed. Latterly his suffering was great, but patience and christian fortitude run parallel. With composure he viewed the steady approach of the enemy, and said the fear was gone. The disease was general dropsy, terminating in mortification. The peculiarity of his case, and also that of his baptism, are noticed at length in the Crisis of the 10th inst., by Eld. Grant, who baptized him He was sound in the faith that there was no life for a dead saint until that day when the Lord of both dead and living shall unlock the prison-house of death and bring forth his sleeping millions.

His funeral was attended by a large concourse of people, who listened with solemnity to a discourse by Bro. J. Blake from these words: "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his"

Danville, C. E. J. Porter.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[Per steamer City of Washington.]

The Pope remained at Rome. Lamoriciere had returned to France. The French occupied numerous places near Rome. It was reported that the third division was to be sent from France soon.

Military movements on a vast scale are reported in Austria.

The Neapolitans, estimated at 90,000 strong, attacked the Garibaldians first, under the cover of a thick mist, carried some positions, and for a time succeeded in driving back the Garibaldians, whose number did not reach half of theirs.

Garibaldi went forward, revolver in hand, and after a desperate fight of eight hours' duration the Neapolitans were broken and routed, and pursued close under the walls of Capua. The brigade of Germans was cut off and driven to the mountains. The Garibaldians took 5000 prisoners. It is estimated that the Neapolitans had 3000 men killed and wounded, and the Garibaldians from 1200 to 2000.

The Royalists subsequently made a sortie to rescue the German brigade, but were repulsed.

The King of Naples and brothers were present at the battle.

There were contradictory rumors in circulation that Capua had surrendered, and also that the bombardment was progressing, but neither are confirmed.

The line of the Volturno is still strongly protected, and it is said that the Neapolitans are prepared to defend their positions.

Some Sardinian troops assisted the Garibaldians.

Garibaldi had called on the King of Sardinia to go to Naples and also send him 14,000 men immediately.

The Piedmontese troops had entered the Neapolitan territory and reported that three of the Great powers protested against it.

Mazzini, by request of the Pro-Dictator, had quitted Naples.

Affairs in the Papal States remain unchanged.

Of the provinces which remain to the Pope, Rome and Comarca have 326,504 inhabitants; Civita Vecchia, 20,701; Velletri 62,013, and Frosinone 153,569; a total of 560,867 inhabitants. The Piedmontese have deprived him of the Marches, Umbria and the province of Viterbo. The population of the Marches is 924,055, of Umbria 472,639, and of Viterbo 129,372 inhabitants. Thus 1,526,019 inhabitants have been withdrawn from the temporal sway of the Pope. The revolutionary party are convinced that the Piedmontese will enter Rome, and have prepared large quantities of tri-colored cockades and flags. They have even ordered a statue of Victor Emmanuel.

Garibaldi has appropriated 5000 ducats to the continuance of the excavations in Pompeii.

[Per steamship Canadian, from Liverpool 11th.]

The Paris correspondent of the Times says that private trustworthy accounts from the Island of Sardinia speak of the commencement there of manœuvres by secret agency for promoting a movement in favor of annexation to France in the same manner and by the same means as were employed by French emissaries in Savoy and Nice.

Garibaldi was about to convoke the Electoral Colleges of the Two Sicilies for the 21st of October, to vote by universal suffrage.

The Piedmontese corps d' armee in Naples will amount to 20,000 men.

Advices from Rome confirm the statement that the French would re-occupy Viterbo. The Pontifical gendarmes were to precede the French by twelve hours. The inhabitants were prepared to repulse the gendarmes, but would yield to the French. The Marquis Deppoli had proceeded to Viterbo to re-assure the inhabitants.

Victor Emmanuel was at Maceria.

The statement is confirmed that Spain had proposed a Congress of the Catholic Powers at Gaeta.

An extraordinary credit grant had been made to the Naval Department by the Austrian government for the construction of floating batteries to defend the entrance of the ports.

SYRIA.

Letters from Damascus say that since the departure of Fuad Pacha the Mussulmen had recommenced massacreing the Christians, and had already killed twenty. The remaining Christians were emigrating to Latakai.

The Mussulmen were furious against the Christians, and had threatened the life of the Russian Consul.

NAPLES.

The new Pro-Dictator of Naples, as soon as he was appointed, addressed a letter to Mazzini, complimenting him on his patriotism, but asking him to give a proof of it by leaving the country, telling him that, even without intending it, he caused disunion, and that many used his name with the parricidal intention of hoisting another banner in Italy.

A Congress on the affairs of Italy will probably soon assemble.

The Paris correspondent of the Times remarks concerning the forward movement of the Austrians, that it need not take people by surprise. Austria considers herself released from all obligations contracted with the French Emperor, and has good reasons to know that the Governments of France and Sardinia are bent on exterminating her, having prepared and probably brought to maturity their plans for an insurrectionary movement in her provinces.

A private letter from Turin announces that large armaments have been ordered by the Piedmontese Government, and the day before the Sardinian Minister's departure from Paris a supply of 50,000 muskets and 11,000,000 percussion caps was granted by the French Government to its ally.

It was reported that the French army in Rome is to be increased to 60,000 men, and that the garrison of Lyons was to be put on a complete war footing.

The Times in a leader, says: "Free Europe is tired of buying liberty of Napoleon pound by pound, and absolute Europe, if the meeting at Warsaw means any thing, is tired of seeing him sell it. Napoleon Third is master of the destinies of Italy, and we cannot prevent him from crushing her unity, or from selling it to any holy alliance, if he should see fit; but if we read the signs of the times aright, what he does henceforward must be done gratis."

By the entrance of the Piedmontese troops into the Roman States, Sardinia had violated the principles of neutrality. Count Cavour gave it to be understood that the entry of the Sardinian troops into the States of the Church was principally directed against Garibaldi. Now, on the contrary, it has become evident that they went to aid him. M. Bonfiace deplores the conduct of the Sardinians.

TWO DAYS LATER.

The cannonading of Capua commenced on the 9th, and the Garibaldians gained fresh positions. Hostilities were suspended for twenty-four hours to bury the dead, and recommenced on the 10th and continued through the 11th.

It is reported that Garibaldi was wounded at the battle of Volturno.

A decree had been issued for a vote on the 21st inst. by universal suffrage, as to the union of Italy under Victor Emmanuel

The Sardinian Chamber of Deputies had adopted an order of the day rendering homage to Garibaldi. It also approved the project of a law for annexation by a vote of 290 to 6.

Count Cavour made a speech previous to the taking of the vote, defining his policy. He urged union, and said he desired Rome to be the Capitol of Italy, and uttered a menace against Venetia.

It is denied that Russia and Prussia had sent a protest to Turin identical with that of Austria.

Victor Emmanuel had arrived at Grottamore.

Hungarian Insurrection.—A private letter from Turin, of the 23d ult., received in Paris, contains the following passage:

"Garibaldi alone possesses the secret of the period at which the Hungarian insurrection is to break out. He finds it extremely difficult to prevent the Hungarian liberals from acting before he has given the signal At the moment I am writing to you, Kossuth, Klapka, Teleki and others are here, waiting for the hour to strike by the Garibaldian clock."

Garibaldi after Melazzo.—Here an incident occurred which deserves to be mentioned, as showing the singular character of Garibaldi. Finding his shirt dirty and soiled from his personal struggles, he took it off, washed it in the brook hard by, and hung it up on the bushes, ate his lunch of bread, fruit and water, smoked his cigar bare backed, and, wrapt in thought, sat apparently contemplating the drying of his garment; thus, in the field or bivouac, sharing danger and hardship with the humblest of his followers. Directly his shirt was dry, he went on board the Tukeri, formerly Veloce, lying in the bay on the western side of the peninsula, and personally directed her fire on the fortress and retiring masses.

☞ At a village near Ballymena, Ireland a man by mistake delivered a paper containing the following, instead of an order for goods: "I do swear, in the presence of my holy brethren, by the Holy Cross of St Peter, and by the blessed Lady Mary, that I will maintain the holy religion, and exterminate all heretics, as they are called by our Holy Father the Pope, at two hours' warning. P. G. M." A similar document was found one night in the pocket of an unclaimed vest lost during a riot.

Letters state that lately in Bohemia, and particularly in the circles of Prague and Koniggratz, a great number of Roman Catholics have abjured their religion and embraced Protestantism. In the village of Spalow alone forty-seven persons have acted in that manner.

Notices, &c.

A Request.

I have lost mail matter. There is in N. Y. State a Dunnsville, a Deansville, a Danesville and a Dansville. To avoid mistakes and miscarriage, will persons sending me letters or papers please direct, Daniel T. Taylor, Dansville, Livingstone Co., N. Y.

Conference at Barnstead, N. H.

The Lord permitting, there will be a meeting commence at the "Clark Meeting-house" in Barnstead, on Friday, Oct. 16th, at 2 o'clock P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

T. M. Preble.

Eld. L. Boutell is expected to preach at Concord, N. H., in the chapel on the corner of Centre and Green St., on Sunday, Nov. 18th;—and Eld. J. Couch is expected to preach at the same place on the first Sabbath in Dec.

T. M. Preble.

The Lord permitting, I will preach at Loudon Bridge the first Sabbath in Dec., if it does not conflict with any other appointment.

T. M. Preble.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a protracted meeting held at the Hollister school-house in Barnston, C. E., commencing Friday, Nov. 16th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and hold as long as thought best. Elder Hiram Munger is expected to attend.

Wm. A. Cramer.

[illegible] Herald please copy.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Barnston, C. E.—On account of the distance and expense, cold weather, etc.; and thinking the same amount of labor and expense nearer home would be a better operation, I withdraw my appointment this winter with you for the present.

I would say to the brethren that have requested me to visit them, I am now at liberty to go where the church are ready for a protracted meeting, and are willing to cooperate with me in the work of saving men. Please direct to the Crisis Office until Nov. 12th.

Hiram Munger.

Notice.

There will be preaching at Music Hall, (formerly Exchange) Chicopee, (not Chicopee Falls) Mass., Sunday 28th, and the following Sunday. Services at the usual hours Friends in the adjoining towns are invited to come.

W. S. Campbell.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

Eld. P. B. Morgan will preach in
Boston, (Chapman Hall)........Sunday, Nov. 4th

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings at Champlain, N. Y., Tuesday evening, Oct. 30th, to continue one week or more.
MILES GRANT.

Wm. M. Ingham will preach in
Westport, Mass., (neighborhood of Bro. Dan. Tripp) Sunday, Nov. 4th
Worcester (Warren Hall)..............Nov. 18th
Truro (Cape Cod)..........................Dec. 2d
and stop there and in that vicinity some five to eight weeks.

D. A. Jones will meet with the Church at Cheshire Street, Ct.......................Nov. 4th

I will preach in the Advent Chapel, Warehouse
Point, Ct.......................................Nov. 4th
Southbridge, Mass., (where Bro. A. Streeter may appoint..Nov. 11th
South Windsor, Ct., (Pleasant Valley school-house) Nov. 28th.
S. P. BABCOCK.

I will preach in
Lawrence.......................................Nov. 11th
Albany, (where Bro. T. White may appoint) Nov. 18th.
T. W. PIPER.

Providence permitting, I will visit the friends and preach, if desired, in Windsor, (Bro. Cooper's)....................Nov. 5th
Pleasant Valley, or Buckland's Corner....Nov. 9th
Warehouse Point..............................Nov. 12th
Scitico, (by appointment) .....Sunday, Nov. 11th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Charles S. Stevens will preach in
Compton, C. E., (Saunders' school-house) Nov. 4th
Ascott, C.E., (where B. Kent may arrange) Nov. 11th
Danville, C. E...................................Nov. 18th
Barnston, (where Bro. Clark may arrange) Nov. 25th

B. P. Manning will meet with the friends in Roble's Corner, (Warner)....................Nov. 4th
North Sutton, (where Bro. I. Andrew may appoint) Nov. 6th.
Danbury..Nov. 11th
and hold meetings evenings a few days.

J. T. Ongley will preach as follows:—
Root Settlement, Pa..Sunday, Nov. 11th, 10 A. M.
Post Ridge, Pa.....Sunday, Nov. 11th, 3 1-2 P. M.
Anderson's, (near Edenboro,) Nov. 18th, 10 1-2 A.M.
Center Road, Pa.........Nov. 19th, 20th, and 21st
East Plymouth, Ohio........Nov. 22d, 23d, and 24th
Saybrook..........................Sunday, Nov. 25th
Unionville...............Nov. 26th, 27th, and 28th
Ravanna, Ohio, (where Bro. H. Tuttle may appoint)...........Nov. 29th and to Dec. 5th
Girard, Pa., (where Bro. Allen may appoint) Sunday...Dec. 9th
Edenboro, Pa., (near Bro. Whitaker's)...Dec. 10th

Eld. S. S. Brewer will preach in
South Windsor, (Pleasant Valley).........Nov. 4th

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach in
Collinsville.......................................Nov. 4th
Canton Street...................................Nov. 6th
Lovely St...Nov. 8th
Cheshire St......................................Nov. 11th

Providence permitting, I will preach at
River Point.......................................Nov. 4th
East Killingly..............Nov. 11th, 18th and 25th
M. B. PHETTEPLACE.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BRISTOL, CT.
Eld. George Champlin.................Sunday, Nov. 4th

Providence permitting, I will attend the regular conference at Corrinna, Me., commencing Nov. 3d, to continue over the Sabbath.
J. HEMENWAY.

I shall be in West Poland, Me., the first Sunday in Nov.
O. R. FASSETT.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Newfield, Ct......................................Nov. 4th
Plymouth Hollow, Ct...........................Nov. 11th
L. S. LUDINGTON.

T. W. Piper appoints to preach in
Clark meeting-house...........................Nov. 4th

C. Goodrich appoints to preach in
Peacedale...Nov. 4th

George L. Teeple appoints to preach in
Dalton, (where Bro. Warren may appoint) Nov. 3d and 4th
Chester Factories..............................Nov. 8th
Sandisfield, (where Bro. Fenn may appoint,) Nov. 10th and 11th

L. Wetherbee appoints to preach in
Belmont, (school-house).......................Nov. 4th

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Eld. Moses Chandler's P. O. address is Monmouth, Ill.

Eld. P. B. Morgan's P. O. address is Boston, Mass.

C. A. Waterman—All right.

[illegible]

Cash Receipts.

A Wood [illegible]; Mrs. F Taylor [illegible]; B Roberts [illegible]; J L McLean [illegible]

P Hawkins [illegible], Mrs. S F Hutchison 277, Mrs. A Dow 280,—50 cts. each.

A L Crosby 282, M Cole 286, J Hayes 286, J French 200, J Webber 290, H Tower 290, Mrs. F Eaton 286, Mrs. E Knox 290, J C Shaw 290, R W Shaw 290, Dr. M Calkins 290, M A Cook 278, R Benham 290, A Waterman 286, T Waite 260, W H Simmons 298, W Smith 291, V R Stone 281, Jas. Carr 290, Mrs. R Price 286, M Webber 286, J B Waite, J Sherman 282, F Bates, Jr., 286, W Apthorpe 29?, D B Salter 260, E J Roberts 286, T D Bailey 286, C Railsback 282, G W Stetson 289, I Young 286, S Tucker 286, And. Price 290,—$1.00 each.

C Clark 293, A Haskell, $1, 267, J Hooker 296, G W Denny 260, D Hastings 283, T B Weeks 312, B Jennings 312, J S Douglas 286, S Timberlake 286, G A Lewis 294, Al. Gleason 312, W N Reed 293, C E Robinson 286, C Bemis 299, S Tibbetts 291, Mrs. S E Griffin 288, S Cook, H Hall 284, A G Hudson 325,—$2.00 each.

L Hamilton 272, J DeMaranville 277, M B Dewey 278,—$3 00 each.

Books and Tracts.

E D Hutchinson 15 cts, W E Goodwin 43 cts, A B Flanders $4.70, J Richardson $1.00, W H Simmons $1.00, M Prothro $6.48, J B Waite $2.00, Eld. J Howell $1.12, Eld. C. P. Dow $4.00, C F Clough 7 cts, M H Irish $1.00, S Gerrish $1.00, Mrs. A Dow $1.00, Miss E Johnson $1.00.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. Isaac L. Allen, 10 Howard Street, Albany, N. Y., has an assortment of our books and tracts, and will fill orders at the same rates that are charged at this office.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Tracts from the Tract Fund.—Friends at the West can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.
H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 4 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Soul—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psukee as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

The Spirit—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 8 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

Anti-eternal Torment. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Sheppard. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $6.00.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, [illegible] Postage 7 cts. By L. C. Wellcome.

[illegible]

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts. —postage 10 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 10 cts.; postage 1 ct.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.00 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed; or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the young. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 2 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all the texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. Brooks, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS
OF
H. L. HASTINGS,
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp. $1 00
The Great Controversy between God and Man; its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp. 60
Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 128 pp. Paper 30 cts. Cloth 50
Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing.
Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing.
Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp. 60
Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp. 60
Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 320 pp. 75
The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt, 25
Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm Ramsay, D.D., edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth, 40
Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper, 15
The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, 67 pp. 18
Tracts of 24 Pages.—3 cts single; $1 for 1600 pages—by mail 1200 pp. for $1.

The Church not in Darkness, by H. L. H. pages 24
The Three Worlds, by H. L. H. " 24
The Last Days, by H. L. H. " 24
Plain Truths, by H. L. H. " 20
Will all men be saved? by H. L. H. " 24
Voice of Warning by D. T. Taylor " 24
The New Heavens and Earth, " 24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos., " 24
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos. by H. L. H. " 36
Important Questions, 9 Nos. by H. L. H. " 36
State of the Dead, by John Milton " 24
The Intermediate State, by H. G. " 24
Destiny of the Wicked by H. L. H. " 12
Future Punishment, by H. L. H. " 12
The Key of Truth, by W. S. " 12
Man's Future State " 12
Letter on Dress by Adoniram Judson " 12
The Day of Judgment, by St. Cyril " 12
Outline of the Coast, by A Voyager " 8
The Night Cometh, by John Adey " 8
Gems, 9 Nos., poetry, by H. L. H. " 12
One Thing " 4
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ, " 4
The Duration of the Earth by Al Clarke " 4
Hope and Duty of the Church, M. Henry " 4
The Restitution, by St. Cyril " 4
A Warning Voice, by Cotton Mather " 4
Loving Christ's Appearing, by Baxter " 4
Little Children, Love one another " 4
The One Resting Place, by H. Bonar " 4
My Friend, by H. L. H. " 4
Abundant Grace " 4
Wondrous Love " 4
Go in Peace " 4
Living Water " 4
The Banner Anonymous " 4
The Blood of Christ " 4
Are you a Christian? by H. L. H. " 4
Why not Now? " 4
Are you Pardoned? " 4
Are you Safe? " 4
Are you Saved? " 4
Do you Pray? " 4
When Will He Come? by J. C. Ryle " 4
Statement of Account by H. L. H. " 4
Man in Death By Bishop Law " 4
Forty Questions on Immortality " 4

SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.
No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked " 1
No. 2. The State of the Dead " 1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus " 1
No. 4. The Resurrection " 1
No. 5. Plain Truths " 1
No. 6. The Judgment " 1

POETRY.
Brother, Shall we Meet? by H. L. H. " 2
Sister, Shall we Meet? " 2
Stand up for Jesus! " 1
The Harvest is Past " 1
Beyond! " 1
At Rest! " 1
We would see Jesus by Josephine " 1
A Little While by J. C. " 1

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.
Life Insurance, Envelope Size H. L. H. " 12
Home " 12
Lost, Lost " 8
Peace in Christ " 4
Worth Knowing " 4
All things are Yours " 4
Now " 4
Assurance " 4
About God " 4

The foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $10, with the order, shall receive $12. worth of books at the retail prices. Tracts are sent by mail, 1200 pages, on the receipt of a dollar. When sent by express, or at the expense of the buyer, 1600 pages will be sent for one dollar. Terms cash. Persons who desire to do good can obtain Four hundred tracts, of four pages each, for $1. These may be widely distributed, and open the way for religious conversation. Persons may thus be a blessing to those around them. The poor can have any of these tracts, sent to them free, by remitting stamps to pay the postage. Ministers can have specimen copies of the tracts and pamphlets sent free. All letters, orders, and remittances should be addressed to the Publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 42 Weybosset St., Providence, R. I.

January, 1860.

 These publications can be obtained in Boston of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York: G. W. Young, 138 William st.; Philadelphia: [illegible] Porter, 726 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publisher through all Booksellers.

[illegible] of the British and Foreign Bible Society [illegible] references between the verses, $1.50 to $[illegible] [illegible]

For the Crisis.

Old Time.

AIR.—"Hard Times."

Should we pause but a moment, and count the many tears,
And all the cares and sorrows of the poor,
Which all the way from Eden have coursed the many years,
Old Time, we shall sigh to see thee o'er.

CHORUS.

'Tis the joy and song of the weary,—
Old Time, Old Time soon will be no more,
Then pain and death will linger around us never more,
Old Time, when all thy cares are o'er.

Should we seek mirth and pleasure, with music light and gay,
There are sorrows waiting at the door;
Though our voices are silent, there's something seems to say,
Old Time will shortly be no more.

In scenes dark, sad and dreary, though we may have a part,
There's a hope that will cheer us evermore,
There's a prayer that will echo in every faithful heart—
Old Time, soon may it be no more.

There are loved ones now sleeping within the silent tomb
That we shall not behold any more
Till we greet them immortal in Eden's happy home,—
Old Time then will be forever o'er.

Not a sigh shall be wafted across the troubled wave;
Not a wail shall be heard upon that shore;
Not a dirge shall be murmured around the lonely grave,
Old Time, when all thy cares are o'er.

CLARA BAKER.

West Winsted, Ct.

For the Crisis.

"The Beast that was, and is not, and yet is."—No. 2.

BY M. D. W.

Mr. Faber further remarks: "The true sense of the prophecy now before us is doubly confirmed; for it is delivered in a sort of duplicate form.

I.* The Seventh Head, the last of the series, suddenly starts into active vitality; and thus continues and completes the fated series of Seven Heads. Next, it is mortally wounded by the sword of violence. And then, by having its mortal wound healed, it experiences an extraordinary revival, and enters upon a new course of existence, apparently as an Eighth Polity, but really as the restored Seventh. [Says a late writer: "Every reader of the newspapers of the day must be aware of how strenuously Louis Napoleon has striven to identify his regime with that of his great uncle, and to obliterate from the soil of France every trace of the intervening reigns."]

II. Now an Empire must cease to exist as an Empire, when its last and therefore sole existing Head is violently struck down by the sword of war. And it plainly will re-exist, should that last head be restored to political power, and acquire its former dominant position. If this be represented symbolically, the animal which is employed as the symbol of the Empire thus circumstanced, will appear, first to exist, next to cease to exist, and then to exist afresh. Such is exactly the case with the symbol employed to represent, as all allow, the Secular Roman Empire. The Wild Beast was, and is not, and shall be. That is to say, just as the Seventh Head, first lived, then was slain, and then was restored to life; so the symbolical Wild Beast of which it remained the sole Head, first existed, then ceased to exist, and then re-existed. With this double PROPHETICAL COMMENT upon notorious POLITICAL FACTS, I no longer felt any doubt, that the French Emperorship was the predicted Seventh Head."

Having become fully established on this point, it of necessity produced in Mr. Faber's mind a very important anticipation, viz: "If the French Emperorship were indeed the predicted Seventh Head, then, as it had been destroyed by the sword, so of necessity it must be raised up again to Political Vitality." This anticipation was publicly put forth by him in the year 1818, three years after the extinction of the Napoleon Dynasty, and confidently repeated in the years 1828, and '44, in his first and second editions of "Sacred Calendar of Prophecy."

A brief extract from his little book—"Secessions to Papacy," contains some conjectures that are now matters of history. It was written April 8th, 1846, before the French Emperorship was revived in the person of Louis Napoleon.

"The effort, so conspicuously now making, both in England and on the Continent, to resuscitate the Apostasy, is, I believe, chronologically the last: nor is it anything more than might have been anticipated from the sure, though madly slighted voice of Prophecy. The Ottoman Empire totters to its fall; and the three spirits of Hellish Infidelity, Despotism springing out of Anarchy, and Jesuitical Popery, are already engaged in their allied predicted vocation. The peace of Europe, and of the world, apparently rests upon the life of a single, wise old man.* When the obstacle presented by this modern Sobrino shall have been removed, the demons of discord, now scarcely repressed, will be let loose. Revolutions will elevate the successful soldier, [illegible] of the day, to the Imperial throne of Military Dynasties. Then will follow that fearful [illegible] Universal War, which is foretold by all the prophets, as occurring at the Time of the End, and synchrononically with the restoration of Israel."

* Louis Philippe.

Mr. Faber hardly dare anticipate a restoration of a Bonaparte to the throne, but rather conjectured it might be fulfilled in some "successful soldier," whose laurels gained on the battle-field, would be woven into a crown of royalty. How much more striking the accomplishment of the prophecy, than ever he anticipated!

We will now give his notations, as afterwards recorded, respecting the successive steps by which the Seventh Head was revived, and the reader will no doubt be interested in seeing the ascension of the Beast from the abyss, and its restoration to former rule.

Dec. 10, 1848. Louis Napoleon is voted into a professedly constitutional Presidentship, by about 6,000,000 suffrages. Dec. 2d, 1851. He violently dissolves the factious Assembly, which was preparing his ruin, and which was meditating a return to all the murderous atrocities of Jacobinism; and then, throwing off all the tyranny of the unprincipled Metropolis, he appeals to the nation at large. Dec. 20th, 1851. He is voted into an Absolute Dictatorship, still under the name of a Presidentship, by about 7,000,000 suffrages. Nov. 4th, 1852. He accepts the Senatus Consultum proposed to be laid before the people. It runs thus: The Nation wishes the re-establishment of the Imperial Dignity in the person of Louis Napoleon, with hereditary succession to his direct legitimate or adoptive heirs: and gives him the right to regulate the order of succession to the throne in the Bonaparte family. Nov. 21st, 22d, 1852. The Nation votes for a Revival of the French Emperorship in the person of Louis Napoleon, by about 8,000,000 suffrages. Dec. 1st, 1852. The votes of the Nation are examined and ratified by the Senate, and are then submitted to the President for his acceptance. He accepts the Imperial Dignity at the hands of the Nation, their wish being expressed by an almost universal vote in the affirmative Dec. 2d, 1852. THE REVIVAL OF THE FRENCH EMPERORSHIP is proclaimed in the Provinces.

Thus the EMPERORSHIP OF THE FRENCH, originally established in the year 1804, mortally wounded by the sword in the year 1815, and revived in the year 1852, has appropriated to itself ALL the predicted characteristics, save THE STILL FUTURE LAST, by which the Seventh Roman Head, whenever it should appear, might be certainly recognized.* In its quality of being a Roman Head, it was during some parts of its existence to have the Sovereignty and possession of Rome, for the type being double, representing at once both the Seven Mountains of Rome, and the Seven Polities which should govern the Empire, no Polity can be a Roman Head, unless it fulfills the condition required by the type."

Some have objected to Mr. Faber's application of this prophecy on the ground that the Capital of the French Empire was at Paris, therefore it could not be a Roman Head. He meets this objection by referring to Dioclesian, whose sovereignty is unquestionably admitted by one of his most able opponents, Mr. Elliott, to be a distinct Roman Head, and yet his Capital was "Nicomedia and subordinately Milan, and, as Mr. Gibbon justly remarks shortly after the time of Dioclesian, Rome CEASED to be the Capital of the Empire, by the permanent transference of that character to Byzantium or Constantinople. The fate of the Roman Emperorship, subsequent to Constantine and his immediate successors, equally shews thst the Perpetual POSSESSION of Rome is not essential to the character of a Roman Head."

To our own mind, there is nothing in the symbol to prove that Rome must be the central locality of the Beast, but it must be that of the woman. She sitteth on seven mountains, and there are seven kings. These ruling kings must represent seven having dominion on the Roman territory, who sustain the woman whose seat of government is the seven-hilled city. The reader can be at no loss to understand what power now rules in Rome and sustains the woman. Whose soldiers have occupied that city and protected the Pope? Under whose dictation is he? Most certainly that of the French Emperor.

* This last has since appeared. The French soldiers possess Rome.

For the Crisis.

How to kill a Prayer Meeting.

I have just read in the Independent of Sept. 13th of a model prayer meeting, and would here transcribe some thoughts that arise in my mind in regard to the most efficient method of killing a church prayer meeting. The Pastor can very easily do this by following out a few simple suggestions. Let him assume the leadership of the meeting as a prerogative of his office. This will cause those who attend to regard him in the light of a schoolmaster, and themselves as pupils. Let him on entering the prayer room proceed to a seat in the high place, as if about to deliver a lecture. His people will then know that "school is in, and they must stop talking" (which has a deadly influence.) Let him commence the meeting by giving an edifying, instructive and somewhat lengthy discourse. This will close the mouths of many who would otherwise have spoken, but who cannot tell what he should say "who cometh after the king." Let him after this tell the people that the meeting is their own, and some will be incredulous. Let him urge them to improve the few moments that remain for prayer or exhortation, and to some he will seem "as one that mocketh." Let him protract the meeting a half hour beyond the usual time, in order that he may deliver another address, and many will think that they have had "too much of a good thing."

When we come together for prayer, we meet before God as a company of needy sinners, and as such he must regard us. Is this the time, and is the prayer meeting the place, for man to instruct his fellow man? Are the distinctions commonly observed outside of the prayer circle to be recognized at that solemn moment, when we are entreating of God that mercy which is as much needed by the minister as by the humblest of the flock? It may be so; but such is not the opinion of one who loves the prayer meeting.

If the above should fail, which is very seldom, then if the minister is not present, prominent lay members may finish its existence by bringing in subject matter to discuss which will gratify themselves, and which may be foreign to the objects of a prayer meeting, each using twenty minutes of the time, where there are forty waiting to tell of the preciousness of their Savior. If satan is not gratified, then let one who shall differ from the former speaker arise and undertake by sophistry of argument to explain away the other's opinions, and by that time the whole audience will wish they had remained away, and will probably be very cautious hereafter, and most likely be seeking some place "where prayer is wont to be made."

In my next I will endeavor to show how a prayer meeting may live. S.

For the Crisis.

Universal Salvation.

Did Christ or the apostles teach universal salvation? There are some portions of scripture, claimed as main pillars by those who advocate the doctrine of universal salvation, which puzzle some who abide strictly by the literal principle of interpretation. In this article we shall attempt an explanation of some of those scriptures, and in doing so, we shall abide by the literal principle, believing that God means what he says.

In John 1: 29, we read, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin (not sins) of the world." Does not John here in few words, express the work of the Messiah, touching one great item in the plan of redemption? But to what sin has John reference? We answer, the original sin. Is this not the sin of the world? Was not death passed upon all men on account of this sin?—Rom. 5: 12. What was the penalty of God's law, as given to our first parents? Was it not death?—"Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." The sentence of death, or the penalty of this law, is entailed upon all Adam's posterity, infants included. The sentence is certain; it is God's unalterable decree,—"dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Here we find the first great obstacle in the way of man's redemption, and unless this is removed, man can never have a future life, or live again; but Christ has undertaken his redemption, therefore, a remedy is provided. Yes, he is "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

In Rom. 5: 18, we read, "Therefore as by the offence of one, (Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation (under the first law); even so by the righteousness of one (Christ) the free gift came upon all men (the same all) unto justification of life." Does not Paul here teach us, that as all men were condemned, on account of Adam's sin, even so, the same all, by or through Christ, receive the free gift? But what is the gift? Why, the justification of life. Then all men will live again, whether righteous or wicked. God does not hold men accountable for Adam's sin, but for their own actual transgressions; and for those they will have to give an account in the day of judgment. These scriptures show that Christ and the apostles taught a deliverance from the power, or penalty, of the first law.

We read in 1 Tim. 4: 10—"Who is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe." Is Christ, then, the Savior of all men? So Paul says. If Christ is really the Savior of all men, he must save all, or the word will fail. But to what extent is he the Savior of all men? Why, he saves them from the power or penalty of the first law. See 1 Cor. 15: 12—22. The power of that law has been broken by the resurrection of Christ; consequently, he is the Savior of all men, without respect to character; "For as in Adam all die, even so in (or through the resurrection of) Christ shall all be made alive." All receive the free gift, which is justification unto life. Paul argues, that if Christ did not rise from the dead, then there is no resurrection of the dead,—no future existence or life; but Christ prevailed over the monster death, and came forth a mighty conqueror, opening the way from the grave for all men, and thus becoming the Savior of all men; but, says the apostle, "specially of those that BELIEVE." Does Paul here intend to contradict what he had before stated, that Christ was the Savior of all men? Certainly not; but he here presents the two salvations. First, the one which comes by or through the free gift; and secondly, the special salvation, or that which comes through belief and obedience. This, then, agrees with the apostle's words in 2 Tim. 1: 10,—"Who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." He has not yet given men immortality, but has set it before us in the gospel. How? Why, by promise, with the assurance that he will give it to all who seek for it. This, then, is the special salvation to be enjoyed only by those who continue in well doing.

Let us recapitulate. It appears in the first place, that Christ has broken the power of the first law, or rendered the death, inflicted as the penalty of that law, ineffectual; thus giving life to Adam's posterity, (but not eternal life;) and as infants are a part of that posterity, it therefore follows that infants will have a resurrection. And as they are not guilty of actual sin, they will therefore live in the kingdom.

In the second place, it appears that Christ and the apostles taught universal salvation, not as modern Universalists teach, but as the Scriptures teach, i. e., a universal deliverance from the penalty of the first law. It therefore follows that the wicked will live again, or have a resurrection from the power of the first law, which is the first death. But they have to meet a catalogue of crimes, at the judgment, and for those crimes they must give an account. As they are unrepented of, and as "the wages of sin is death," they must die the second time, or return again to dust. From this death there is no resurrection. Christ delivered them from the power of the first law, and offered them life and immortality; but they would not accept it; but chose death rather than life; and now they must lie under its power eternally, and "be as though they had not been."

Pelham. HENRY STEVENS.

Selections.

Sawyer's Translation of the New Testament.

* * * * * *

The text of our present New Testament is from that published in 1624 by the Elzevirs, the noted Amsterdam and Leyden publishers. They had the taste to publish an exceedingly beautiful edition, and the art to announce it as "a text received by all," by reason of which it got to be known as the "received text," and finally became for a long period and until the last half century in fact the received text. But within the last fifty years great attention has been given to obtaining by diligent comparison the exact text of the New Testament as it exists in the ancient manuscripts. The Elzevirs copied from the previous text of Beza, with a few slight alterations, and Beza copied from the still earlier text of Stephens with a few slight alterations, and Stephens followed the text of Erasmus with a few corrections from manuscripts, and some from the text of the Complutensian Polyglott. Both these texts were printed from modern manuscripts, so that the "received" text originated with Erasmus and the Complutensian Polyglott. Erasmus published in 1516, three hundred and forty-four years ago, and the Complutensian Polyglott was published in 1517, the next year. Both these texts were formed from modern manuscripts.

Within the last fifty years the German scholars have labored with great diligence on the text of the Scriptures, and particularly on that of the New Testament. Tischendorf has spent nearly his whole life in collecting and collating the text of the New Testament. His is not an attempt to modify the "received" text, but it is an attempt to reproduce, as far as may be, the exact original text, of the New Testament as it stands in the Greek manuscripts and other ancient monuments, word for word and letter for letter, without fear, favor or theological bias one way or the other. He takes no note whatever of modern texts, but compares the ancient manuscripts one with another, assisted by ancient versions and the writings of the fathers. And his is undoubtedly the most reliable text extant. Mr. Saywer's translation follows the Greek text of Tischendorf, and in following him he makes some changes in the text, from that of the present King James' Testament. And it is for the public to say whether they will open their eyes to the light that has been poured upon this subject during the last three and a half centuries, or whether they will not. When we are making so much progress in everything else, it is for the people to say whether they will rest in entire and blind security on a translation made so long ago, or whether they will welcome the results of hundreds of years of careful study of the very ground-works of our faith, as worthy contributions to our literature. We have had enough of commentaries, but too little exact ancient text, of all things in biblical literature the most needed. Let me here notice a few of the omissions and alterations and substitutions of the Tischendorf text, as translated by Mr. Sawyer in the Testament under notice.

The substitution of "righteousness" for "alms," in Matt. 6: 1. "But take heed not to perform your righteousness before men to be seen by them." In the common Bible, which corresponds nearly with the received text, this injunction relates to alms-giving, in the improved text, it relates to righteousness. As the more correct text, ought not the latter to prevail? as an erroneous text, ought not the former to be abandoned?

2. The omission of the doxology, "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever, amen," from the close of the Lord's prayer in Matt. 6: 13. This is found to be spurious. Should it continue to be represented as a part of the genuine Lord's prayer? How can such a representation consist with honesty and truth? What audacity and impiety to teach as the Lord's prayer a spurious addition which indeed is not a prayer, and still less the Lord's prayer! Can any one pretend that it is of no consequence to teach the Lord's prayer correctly?

The omission of several words and clauses from the Lord's prayer as it stands in Luke 11: 2-4, leaving it as given in Sawyer's version, to read thus: "Father, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, give us daily our essential bread, and forgive us our sins, for we ourselves also forgive every one that is indebted to us, and bring us not into trial." These differences in the forms of the Lord's prayer are remarkable. Matthew teaches us to address God in the Lord's prayer as "our Father" and "our Father in heaven;" Luke, to address him as "Father;" Matthew adds to the petition, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done;" and to the petition "Bring us not into trial; but deliver us from evil." Luke omits those additions and reduces the prayer to the fewest possible words. Matthew's form is the more full, Luke's form is the more condensed and equally comprehensive. But the spurious additions of the common text reduce the Lord's prayer in Luke nearly to the form of Matthew. Now that the error is discovered ought it still to be persisted in or abandoned? Can we make Luke teach as the Lord's prayer, what he does not teach? Can we allow to stand in his formula, words which he did not put there, and call it Luke's Lord's prayer? Let Luke's Lord's prayer remain forever as he wrote it, and Matthew's as he wrote that, and let everything else be accounted as something else, and nothing be accredited to Matthew and Luke but what they wrote.

The transposition of kingdom and righteousness in Matt. 6: 33, making the passage read, Seek first righteousness and His kingdom; not seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.

The omission of the following words in John 5: 3, 4, waiting for the moving of the water. For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water. Whosoever then first after the troubling of the water, stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had. This passage has been very troublesome. It has so much the air of superstition, that honest faith has sometimes been greatly stumbled by it.

The difficulty of believing it, is enhanced by the fact, that there is to this day an intermitting fountain at the pool of Bethesda, and a periodic troubling of the water as of old, but no supernatural agency required to account for the phenomenon. It is a real relief, therefore, to find the passage spurious, and the sacred writer not responsible for it. But when we know that it is spurious, shall we conceal the fact, and still teach the old superstition as a reality? Shall the people be uninformed of our discovery? It seems to us that the knowledge of it should be communicated as widely as possible.

The omission of Paul's name in the Title of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The titles of the Epistles are not the Epistles themselves, and are not supposed to have been placed over them by their authors, but by the first editors of these sacred books, after they began to be copied and circulated among christians. Those men put such titles over the books as they judged suitable, and according to truth. They attributed one of the Gospels to Matthew, and another to Mark, and so on; they attributed some epistles to Paul, and some to Peter, and so entitled them; but they introduced Hebrews as anonymous, attributing it to no one, not even calling it an epistle, clearly showing that they neither knew its author nor its object. The name of Paul, and the title epistle, are both interpolations, and ought not to be represented as belonging to the genuine text.

The omission of Saint and Divine, as descriptive of John in the title of Revelation. The first christians gave us that book as the book of John, describing him neither as saint nor divine. These titles therefore in the common Bible are spurious, and ought to be separated from the genuine text.

The omission of the words, in heaven, the Father, the word and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth—in 1 John: 7, 8. These words are not found in any ancient Greek manuscript whatever. Their earliest appearance in the Greek manuscripts is near the close of the fifteenth or the commencement of the sixteenth century. Erasmus did not insert them in the first two editions of his New Testament, from not finding them in any Greek manuscripts which he had seen. He inserted them in his third edition, 1522, from a Greek manuscript in England, now numbered thirty-four, and which belongs to the latter part of the fifteenth century, only a few years prior to the time of Erasmus. The agreement of all the ancient manuscripts for more than one thousand years in omitting these words, is a most decisive evidence against them, as not belonging to the genuine text. But besides being unknown to all the ancient Greek manuscripts without exception, they were equally unknown to all the earliest Greek and Latin fathers. With such evidence against them, ought they not to be omitted?

I have only mentioned the above as a few of the instances in which the text of Tischendorf's Greek Testament copied with exactness and fidelity from the most ancient and best accredited Greek manuscripts, and other ancient authorities, differs from that represented by the present version.

There are other reasons, and cogent ones too, which I will consider in another communication, why Sawyer's translation should be possessed and studied by every one who wishes to read the Testament as it was left to us, in its truth and exactness.—Boston Transcript.

PERSEVERANCE.—A little girl in England attended a missionary meeting which greatly interested her, and she resolved to do something for the cause. Following out her good resolution, she determined to pick up every pin she saw on the ground. At the end of a year she had picked up seven hundred and eighty, which her mother purchased of her at the rate of thirty for a half-penny. The result of her years' effort was one shilling and two farthings, which her father sent up to the annual meeting.

Maxims of Business.

Such suggestions as the following would secure a race of business men who would honor the land that furnishes them so noble a theatre for successful enterprise. 1. Engage in no business inconsistent with the strictest morality, nor in which you cannot daily seek the blessing of the Most High. 2. Follow your chosen vocation, and that alone, whatever temptations to speculation or rapid acquisition may present themselves. 3. Adopt no "tricks of trade," however sanctioned by custom, that involve deception or untruthfulness. 4. Never incur a debt beyond your resources. 5. Always live within your income. 6. Devote a fixed portion of your income, beforehand, to charitable uses, to be employed and accounted for as systematically as family expenditures. The man who will regulate his business by such simple rules as these, may free himself from the feverish excitements of adventurous traffickers, and assure himself, with God's blessing, of an honest competency, if not of a benevolent affluence and a good name.—Christian's Penny Magazine.

Come, Lord.

Come, Lord, and tarry not;
Bring the long-looked-for day;
O, why these years of waiting here,
These ages of delay?

Come, for creation groans,
Impatient of thy stay;
Worn out with these long years of ill,
These ages of delay.

Come, for the grave is full,
Earth's tombs no more can hold;
The sated sepulchres rebel,
And groans the heaving mould.

Come, for the corn is ripe;
Put in thy sickle now:
Reap the great harvest of the earth;—
Sower and reaper Thou.

Come in thy glorious might;
Come with the iron rod;
Scattering thy foes before thy face,
Most mighty Son of God.

Come, spoil the strong man's house;
Bind him and cast him hence;
Show thyself stronger than the strong,
Thyself Omnipotence.

Come, and make all things new;
Build up this ruined earth;
Restore our faded paradise,
Creation's second birth.

Come, and begin thy reign
Of everlasting peace;
Come, take the kingdom to thyself,
Great King of righteousness.

—H. Bonar.

Hygiene.

"THIS IS FOR YOUR HEALTH."—Paul.

The Human Pulse.

The human pulse, in all ages of the world, has been consulted as an index of health or disease. It is a kind of dial within us, which gives us both the measure of time and of health. The pulse of a person in health beats about seventy strokes in a minute, and the ordinary term of human life is about seventy years. In this seventy years, the pulse of a temperate person beats two thousand, five hundred and seventy-five millions, four hundred and forty thousand times. If no actual disorganization should happen, a drunken person might live until his pulse beat this number of times, but by the constant stimulus of ardent spirits, or by pulse quickening food, even, the pulse becomes greatly accelerated, and the two thousand, five hundred and seventy-five millions, four hundred and forty thousand pulsations are performed in little more than half the ordinary term of human life. Life goes out in forty or fifty-five years, instead of seventy. This application of numbers is given to show that the acceleration of those forces diminishes the term of human life.—N. E. POP. MED.

Relation of Lungs to Brain.

To our perceptions it is too clear to require further illustration, that the vivifying fire, the soul-energy of the body, the brain-and-nerve principle of life, is absorbed by the lungs from the boundless ocean of imponderable elements. Oxygen, so universal, is but the vehicle of heaven's breath. The brain is master of digestion; so also of the just distribution of strength. The stomach depends upon the brain for a supply of all forces necessary to accomplish digestion; but the brain, in its turn, is equally dependent upon the lungs for a requisite store of electric riches and vital power. The celestial elements of infinity ride straight through the lungs into the blood; thence to the great battery of all energy and digestion, the brain; which immediately distributes to each part of the body the principles of sensation, and life, and motion.

Deprive the lungs of heaven's invisible air—shut off the supply of the vivifying principle, and the whole beautiful machinery will immediately stop! The best food in the universe could give no strength, unless first baptized in the spirit of the atmosphere. Air is the universal blessing! It cannot be fenced in by legislative enactments; but it can be kept out by the ignorance or inattention of invalids. Some persons seem afraid to expand their lungs to their utmost capacity, lest something will break and let out the stream of life! Of course, good friend, you know that any sudden and violent conduct is attended with a greater percentage of risk. Begin deliberately and practice daily, therefore, and you will find that the common air is impregnated with an electric energy, which pervades, refreshes, quickens, and energizes every part of your physical temple.

VITAL ELECTRICITY IS REQUIRED. Your blood cannot circulate without the electric fire of the air; neither can a particle of food strengthen you, without it. Without the living energy of air, which is obtained only by way of the lungs, no diet could be made universally nutritious. Salivary juice, as it pours from the little springs on either side of the cheeks and mouth, could do nothing without the air's vivifying electricity. The gastric fluid—although loaded with its inherent pepsin, and the acids, lactic hydrochloric, etc., etc.,—could accomplish nothing without a constant supply of nerve-energy. The lungs must absorb the electricity of the measureless immensity; otherwise nothing strong can occur, but death and transformation will hasten into the temple.

Unventilated Rooms.

There is every reason to believe that more cases of dangerous and fatal disease are gradually engendered annually by the habit of sleeping in small unventilated rooms, than have occurred from a cholera atmosphere during any year since it made its appearance in this country. Very many persons sleep in eight by ten rooms, that is, in rooms the length and breadth of which multiplied together, and this multiplied again by ten for the height of the chamber, would make just eight hundred cubic feet, while the cubic space for each bed, according to the English apportionment for hospitals is twenty-one hundred feet. But more, in order "to give the air of a room the highest degree of freshness," the French hospitals contract for a complete renewal of the air of a room every hour, while the English assert that double the amount, or over four thousand feet of air an hour is required. Four thousand feet of air every hour! and yet there are multitudes in the city of New York who sleep with closed doors and windows, in rooms which do not contain a thousand cubic feet of space, and that thousand feet is to last all night, at least eight hours, except such scanty supplies as may be obtained of any fresh air that may insinuate itself through little crevices by door or window, not an eighth of an inch in thickness.

But when it is known that in many cases a man, wife and infant sleep habitually in thousand feet rooms, it is no marvel that multitudes perish prematurely in cities; no wonder that infant children wilt away like flowers without water, and that five thousand of them are to die in the city of New York alone during the hundred days which shall include the fifteenth of July, eighteen hundred and sixty! Another fact is suggestive, that among the fifty thousand persons who sleep nightly in the lodging-houses of London, expressly arranged on the improved principles of space and ventilation already referred to, it has been proven that not one single case of fever has been engendered in two years! Let every intelligent reader improve the teachings of this article without an hour's delay.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Softening of the Brain.

This condition is very common; the heart is proportionally hardened. "Professional, but more frequently business men, are its subjects. The predisposing cause is sumptuous living. After a morning fully occupied with business matters, a man comes regularly to a dinner of various and highly-seasoned dishes of fish and fowl and flesh, with every adjunct to excite and gratify the appetite. He partakes freely of food and wine, in excess to be sure, though perhaps never to the extent of gluttony, or inebriety. The papers are read, cigars are smoked, a few hours are passed socially, and the evening closes with a hot supper and abundant punch. If a man living thus, continues successful in his plans and his business, he may go through life with no other physical or mental infirmity than the pain and irrascibilty of gout or the distress and gloom of dyspepsia. But if it be otherwise, if he meet with a reverse of fortune, or if some grief or chagrin come upon him, then he is exceedingly liable to this fatal disease, which is the joint product of luxurious living and some torturing anxiety or disappointment.—Report of Dr. John E. Tyler, Superintendent of the McLean Asylum.

Fresh Air.

The following shows the importance of having plenty of fresh air, or "the breath of lives."

"One hundred and forty-six Englishmen were imprisoned in a room about eighteen feet square. The ventilation was insufficient, there being but two small windows, in one side, to admit the atmosphere, and the effect was very soon fully manifested. Only twenty-three of the one hundred and forty-six strong men were alive ten hours after their imprisonment in the dungeon! From this terrible circumstance the place received an appropriate epithet: 'The Black Hole of Calcutta.'"

☞ No physician will prescribe for a sick man, and then say, "Eat what you like, sir." The law of health forbids it.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 268. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 9.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

All Things are Yours.

Wanderer o'er life's dreary desert waste, and stranger on the wave,
Mid the surge's wild commotion, on the brink of sorrow's grave,
Who have left your all for Jesus to obtain the golden crown,
And intend to wear the armor, or in death to lay it down;
You'll be wealthy in the kingdom on the sparkling crystal sea,
For all things belong to Jesus, and he'll give them unto thee.

When the last loud booming thunder o'er creation swift shall roll,
And shake its firm foundation centre deep to either pole,
You'll be safe in the inheritance, all glorious and sublime,
Where its battlements of jasper and its towers of crystal shine;
You'll be wealthy when has perished sin and sorrow, land and sea,
For all things belong to Jesus, and he'll give them unto thee.

Mid the streamlets that so sweetly ripple Eden's plain along,
Mid the ransomed myriads swelling forth the victor's song;
Mid the flowrets that are blooming on its plains of living green,
Mid its glories you'll be raptured gazing on the wondrous scene;
Mid the roll of endless ages you will sound the jubilee,
For all things belong to Jesus, and he'll give them unto thee.

Weary wanderer, port is nearing, soon you will be glorified
With the throng of angel songsters on bright glory's rolling tide;
Soon the harpings of salvation shall resound o'er earth's domains,
And the joyful hills and vallies shall re-echo back the strain;
Soon beneath the golden portals you'll be wealthy and be free,
For all things belong to Jesus, and he gives them unto thee.

W. R. P.

Scituate, R. I.

"The Death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ."

A LECTURE BY WM. OLEN MONCRIEFF, LONDON, C. W.

Being a reply to the Westminster Review, No. 135, Article 5.
Delivered before the Young Men's Christian Instruction Society of London, March, 1860.

It requires very little ability to perceive that the fabric of Christianity—I do not mean the Christianity of this sect or that one, but the Christianity of the gospels—stands on the resurrection of the Lord Jesus:—sweep away that event, and the superstructure crumbles into fragments never to be reunited while the universe lasts. He frequently predicted his own revivification, as in the words, "He must go unto Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day"; and if he rose not, his own veracity must be pronounced untrustable: his intercession is a delusion—for how can he interpose if still under the dominion of death?—: the hope of resurrection to his followers is a dream—"if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain,—then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Destroy his resurrection, and the future is wrapped in impenetrable darkness; the voice that seemed fitted to cheer the lone pilgrim toward the unknown is hushed in eternal silence; and the arm that seemed so valorous to help, has been incurably paralyzed.

For reasons which we need not pause to discuss, there have been many attacks made on Christianity, and on the great fact on which it is reared; and we may as well admit that the assaults have often been conducted with a talent equal to the hostility that directed the blows. In our day it was not to be supposed that inimical spirits would resign the conflict, which has been handed down from generation to generation. It is a questioning age, though far from being a profound one; an age in which a daring penman has the more ground to hope for a temporary triumph, because there is little time devoted to rigorous inquiry, and assertions easily pass current with many for resistless demonstration. The world is fascinated with Ledgers, and Punches, and Yellow Tales: a volume of substantial thought is nearly as distasteful as aloes and alarming as the plague. Something light is the rage; something very light to answer the necessities of very light minds: arguments bearing on transcendent themes must fall gently as a mosquito's foot, and when you encircle an opponent with a chain of reasoning you are expected to make as much music with the links as possible. But the fact is, that a dilettante reasoner is about as dangerous as a dilettante physician: the one kills his patient, the other his cause. If we are to be strong in our attachments to truth we must have our reflection enlightened, and submit to have our patience taxed; and I do trust that on this occasion you will bear with me, if I invoke attention to some paragraphs, which if they do not regale the fancy, may perhaps establish your faith—a more valuable result.

The battle of Infidelity, Swedenborgianism, a vulgar Spiritualism, is to be fought at the tomb of Jesus Christ. Unbelief denies his restoration to animal life. Swedenborgianism and Spiritualism ignore it entirely. Swedenborgianism and Spiritualism acknowledge no literal revival in the flesh: the tomb of Joseph, according to these systems, was never opened—never to be vacated by the Redeemer in his material form. They admit what they call a spiritual humanity—an invisible man, who resides during life within the visible,—escaped phantom-like from the fleshly structure; and contend that that was all the resurrection he ever had, or ever could enjoy. In doing so they play into the hands of the absolute skeptic: they leave Christians no means of demonstrating their Savior's reanimation. While men of common sense expected, according to the natural import of his teaching, a literal revival, it turns out that there was no proper resurrection; instead of a conqueror over death and the grave, we are presented with a spectre which none can clasp; and told in mockery "the Lord is risen indeed," while we look upon the bones of Jesus and his dust.

In the CXXXV No. of the Westminster Review, there is an article designated "THE RELIGIOUS WEAKNESS OF PROTESTANTISM," in which the resurrection of Jesus is attacked in a manner so bold and so insidious, that it deserves a reiterated exposure. Ever since its appearance, my astonishment has been excited at the daring, I might add, effrontery, of the author. The argument he employs descends below the ordinary talent of the Review: its strength, however, lies more in the ignorance of readers, than in its own muscles and vitality. In an age like this, many will be imposed on by its glaring fallacies. It embodies not a manly exhibition of the whole resurrection story; but a garbled version of the facts—a caricature of the Record, instead of a daguerreotype of the Biblical testimony itself. For one, I enter my protest against all garbling, all misrepresentation, all sophistry, in a grave discussion: if the evidence for the death and resurrection of Jesus is imperfect, by all means, would be my counsel to Westminster Reviewers, and adverse scribblers the world over,—by all means, step forth, and with the hammer of criticism smash in pieces whatever is cracked and feeble;—better leave us shelterless and in despair than the imbecile dependents on an antiquarian fiction; but if you cannot overturn that building which has, like the pyramids of Egypt, confronted the storms of ages, and received many a weary traveler within its walls, do not mercilessly urge the footsteps of the wanderer in quest of another refuge, while Christianity still welcomes him to a peaceful home.

In the Article referred to, the design of the writer is to show that there was no resurrection, because there is no valid proof that Jesus, when crucified, was actually deprived of animal life. This is a mortal stroke: annihilate the evidence of his death, and with the same blow his resurrection is necessarily undone. "Now," says the author, "the very peculiar phenomenon in the Biblical narrative of the Resurrection is, that of the two propositions, (viz: Jesus died, Jesus rose,) both of which are equally essential, it is hard to say which of the two is less satisfactorily sustained." Here then are two subjects inviting our critical study:

I. THE PROOF THAT JESUS DIED.
II. THE PROOF THAT JESUS ROSE.

I. PROOF THAT JESUS' DEATH WAS REAL.

The theory of the Westminster Review is, that Pilate was friendly to Jesus, and gave secret orders that he should not be put to death; that out of his revival by cordials when in the tomb of Joseph, sprang the myth of his resurrection, which has long, like a "will o' the wisp," caused the world to stray. With the Reviewer, we concede, that a mere crucifixion is not in itself demonstration of death; a man may be crucified, and after having been removed from the engine of torture in a swoon, may be restored to health and activity. There are certain inflictions which leave no doubt concerning the destruction of life, as, for example, when a man is decapitated, or divided into twain by a sword, or cast into a blazing furnace. Had the brigands that were executed along with Jesus been taken from the cross, even when their limbs were broken, and carefully ministered to by medical science, it is not inconceivable that they might have been recovered so perfectly as even to resume their lawless profession. The mere fact that Jesus hung on the cross from two hours to three, is confessedly in itself no assurance that he expired; but we have such a full narration of all the circumstances attending his death, that legitimate doubts as to his murder are deprived of a foothold. We rest our case, not so much on the fact of his crucifixion, as upon his crucifixion in the given circumstances:—the treatment he was subjected to when on the cross—the resolution of his enemies to accomplish his destruction, and the immense absurdity of the theory as to Pilate's merciful interference. But to be more specific.

Prior to his crucifixion, we remark, Jesus was physically exhausted. There is no evidence that he tasted food for many hours anterior to his elevation between the robbers; he had been scourged by the order of Pilate, his disinterested friend, according to the Reviewer; there was an agonizing crown of thorns placed upon his head, and, though in the meridian of life, he had borne much enervating toil and mental anxiety during the course of his public ministry. The brigands, we may reasonably suppose, were fresh and vigorous, and belonged to the coarser types of organic build; the Son of Mary would be extremely delicate in bodily texture, and susceptible, as a result, of more exquisite physical pain. Morbid action would, from the delicacy of his organization, be more rapid at the lacerated portions of his form; and the nervous system, previously debilitated, would sink the more quickly beneath the sympathetic burden laid upon it. Pilate marveled if he were already dead, when Joseph of Arimathea came and begged the body; and the soldiers who fractured the limbs of the brigands were astonished when they came to Jesus and found him lifeless. Death then supervened much earlier in his case; and the physical causes detailed are, in my judgment, quite capable of explaining its premature advent.

Again, the enemies of Jesus, we may be sure, would be careful that his death was real. All the preliminaries—the spitting, the crowning, the scourging, the nailing, had been terribly real; and were they such fools as to be cheated out of his blood? There they stood around his cross with the words of insult, and the signs of mockery. All ranks that afternoon hastened to Calvary: even the Chief Priests were "in at the death." They were lynx-eyed, moreover, and amid the gloom watched the tragedy with intense satisfaction. His enemies long plotted for this hour; and it seems to me the mockery of reason to suppose that they would return to their homes without being assured that their victim's last breath was drawn.

We admit what the Reviewer says, that Cæsar's Deputy "unwillingly consented to his execution, and was driven to it only by fear";—the fear was, that he should be deemed unfriendly to his master by allowing the prisoner to escape. "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend." The author then assumes that after having condemned Jesus, the Roman Governor "made a compromise with his conscience"; these are his words, "by giving secret orders to the executioner not to kill him, but to put him on the cross for a short time, and give up his body, as if dead, to his friends, so soon as he appeared to faint."

When a man takes the liberty of appending his conjectures to a plain, historical narrative, (and for the occasion I am quite willing to accept the New Testament, as on a level with ordinary veracious human testimony,) he can soon manufacture a theory at once plausible and ingenious; by exercising the same liberty we could easily pitch the Duke of Wellington out of the battle of Waterloo, and make the hosts of Xerxes the conquerors at Marathon. Here we have an adventurer against Christianity making capital out of "secret orders," emanating from his own brain; and by an imaginary "faint" strengthening his cause. Trusting to this writer, one would suppose the crucifixion was more of a farce than a solemn tragedy; that Pilate, and the friends of Jesus, and the soldiers, and the executioners, performed their nicely arranged parts with a design to trick the sacred hierarchy in Jerusalem.

The Reviewer gives Pilate credit for much more interest in Jesus than we have any reason to believe the Governor felt. Pilate was a heathen, and could only look upon the Nazarene as a mild, and yet a benighted enthusiast. True he condemned him reluctantly; but once delivered to the executioners, what would the Roman Deputy care for the unpopular fanatic? When Jesus was suspended on Calvary, I can imagine the Governor eating his dinner and drinking his wine as comfortably as if there was no agony within a thousand miles.

The soldiers who attended at the execution testify to the death of Jesus. History delivers their convictions, and though the evidence does not look benignantly towards the Reviewer, that is a small matter to one who has a sovereign contempt for facts. The last day of the Jewish week was near, and it was necessary for ceremonial reasons—(the elders and priests could murder a man on Friday, but to let him hang on the cross during Sabbath was a crime they were not wicked enough to commit;) it was necessary, we were remarking, for ceremonial reasons, that his death, and that of his companions in woe, should be hastened, and the soldiers received orders to that effect. They brake the legs of the two robbers, and when they approached him who hung between them, they found he was dead already. "They brake not his legs; but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water." So says John, who was close by, and had every motive to take exact observations of what was done to his Master and Friend. This spearing, according to a natural estimate of the whole transaction, was intended to make sure work, in the same manner as Kirkpatrick acted when he transfixed the mortally wounded Comyn, in the chapel at Dumfries. According to the Reviewer, the spearing was only a branch of the preconcerted scheme: we are to believe that the skin was only punctured, or perhaps that a Roman soldier did not know where to give a mortal thrust. One may legitimately wonder what was the use of the spearing at all: it was a gratuitous idea of cruelty in Pilate's programme, for if he had only commanded the Centurion to pronounce him defunct, when Jesus had glided into the anticipated faint, that official's word would have readily been accepted by the onlookers. He was not dead, says the author, because when the instrument entered his side, there came out blood and water; if life had been extinct, this writer maintains, the blood would have coagulated, and of necessity, could not flow. Now in the first place, Jesus was only recently dead, and the blood had not time to coagulate in the interior of the body. So far from death rapidly congealing all the blood in the thorax, I may state that on one occasion I attended a post mortem examination of a young man who had been summoned from life rather unexpectedly, and witnessed the blood in great quantities lifted as yet fluid out of the chest, when the heart and lungs were undergoing inspection. Had that corpse been nailed to a cross, and then transfixed as the Savior was, blood would have ran copiously from the wound twenty-seven hours after dissolution. Again, second; In healthy patients the only section of the thoraxic cavity where water, in any quantity, is found, is within the pericardium—the sack which encloses the heart; and one can hardly doubt it was this fluid that escaped, along with blood, from the opening made by the spear. Such a wound would have terminated existence, had the least spark of life been lingering in his form. The Reviewer observes, "It is of course possible, that though crucifixion had not caused death, this spear-wound proved fatal; but the alternative is equally possible that, as he was still alive, neither did this new wound kill him"; and we may add, since it is a rivalry in supposition, that it is equally possible there was no spearing in the case, or that the onlookers were deceived by a thrust which they imagined drew mortal blood, while it was only a red fluid prepared by Pilate's apothecary for the occasion.

It was, moreover, no small wound that the spear produced. One who saw him after he had left the tomb listened to these words: "Reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side"; language that could never have been employed if a merely superficial incision had been made by the soldier's weapon. The spear of the Roman soldier was a lance which tapered very gently to a point, and must have entered at least four or five inches so as to produce such a scar as the Savior's address to Thomas clearly described.

(To be concluded.)

☞ Our desires are like the waves of the sea; they follow each other in rapid succession; they fall with the calm and rise with the storm. When gentle and unperturbed, they waft us tranquilly into the haven of happiness. When furious and uncontrolled, they endanger our safety, and drive us on the rocks of ruin and despair.

☞ Sincere repentance is never too late; but late repentance is often insincere.

For the Crisis.

"God is Love."

Love seems to be a favorite theme of the apostle John. He makes it the badge of Christianity; and one of the sweetest names that was ever given to our Father in Heaven, was first breathed forth in his simple yet expressive words, "God is love." It seems as if this blessed truth must from its very nature be conveyed to every heart by the white-winged messenger of peace; for it is the very embodiment of all that is calculated to give comfort, or inspire trust.

"God is love!" Yes, now we understand how it is that he is merciful, gracious and long-suffering. We understand why he "keepeth not his anger forever," for we know that love "delighteth in mercy." We understand how it is that ever in his dealings with us "mercy and truth have met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other." We know, too, why we love God, because the very key-note of his love to us wakes a responsive chord in our own hearts. Says John, "We love Him because he first loved us." At the sweet promise "I will love them that love me," faith and trust rise in our hearts, and we join the glowing response of the Psalmist, "I will love thee, oh Lord, my strength!" We understand how it was that the Son of God, leaving the glory that he had with the Father "before the world was," came to this world to "bear our sorrows" and "carry our griefs,"—why sinners, by nature, may now be saved by grace: it is because "God so loved the world." We understand now how it is that He sometimes allows it to seem to us that "all his waves and his billows have gone over us"; and taking his corrections as yet another token of his love, and a proof of our adoption into his family, we can cry, "Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, oh Lord!" These things we can understand, but there is yet one thing that remains an unfathomed and unfathomable mystery. How can the theologians of the present day reconcile the fact that "God is love" with their theory of his never satisfied vengeance? Is it a feature of love to delight in the torment even of the disobedient? Can mercy and truth meet on such a platform? Can love and justice unite on such terms? Never. The idea of eternal suffering is far beyond the limits of justice, far beyond the bounds of love. Men are less merciful than God; and it is from creeds of their invention that this dreadful idea first sprung, rather than from the bosom of Him whose name is "Love." There have lived tyrants whose names have cast a stain upon the annals of history, the very mention of whom fills us with horror, as we consider them little less than fiends in human shape;—and shall "mortal man" presume to brand the Almighty with a character more full of hate and vengeance than theirs, being only measured by His power? It is blasphemy to charge God wrongfully; and shall we stand convicted of that crime at the judgment? Closer still, shall we tamely countenance such blasphemy? Shall our lips remain sealed while our best friend is represented as a revengeful tyrant? Let us not only pray "Open thou mine eyes to behold wondrous things out of thy law," but let us also pray "Open thou my lips, and my mouth shall show forth thy praise."

We read that the goodness of God leads men to repentance; and after that goodness has done its office-work on our hearts, the very stones would cry out against us, did we not strain every nerve to tear away the misty veil with which men's inventions would hide the wonders of his love. Had commentators taxed their imaginations less, and their common sense more, or had they left the work of explaining plain declarations entirely alone, there would be more christians, and fewer banners bearing the fool's motto, "There is no God!" Love echoes to love, and hate responds to hate; and perhaps there is no doctrine so calculated to alienate man from his Maker, as one which hides the blessed truth that "His mercy endureth forever!"

Many a culprit that has borne threatenings and tortures unmoved, has been melted to tears by love. Love is the touchstone of the heart; it will touch the heart when all else fails. Man is not a hopeless case till he is hardened; he is not hardened till he is past feeling; he is not "past feeling" till love fails to reach him. God's goodness has a magnetic attraction, and when we see one uninfluenced by it, we can only predict for his future "the blackness of darkness forever," amid the silence of an eternal sleep. Error can never avail for those whom the truth fails to convict. Many while confessing the truth are opposed to upholding it, lest the chief motive for repentance should be taken away. But have we any right to call upon our imaginations to supply us with motives for loving God? Says John the Revelator, "If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book."

We are apt to become wedded to ideas, and even when they are proved false, we dislike to give them up, and it is more than probable that if error should die, most of the great and wise of this world would follow the bier as chief mourners, most of our churches would be draped in mourning, and many of our ministers would sit in "sackcloth and ashes;" she would have the honor of an imposing burial, amid the lamentations of countless sable-robed advocates. Yet it is strange that so spurious a coin should have such currency, for this error is dreadful in the extreme, and utterly unfounded. Let us come up to the old apostolic moorings and cast anchor, in the full assurance that "God is love;" and because he is love, "he willeth not the death of a sinner, but rather that he should repent and live." Love and justice unite on the Bible terms that "all the wicked will God destroy." Truth and error can never "smoke the calumet," and the sooner old error receives her death-wound the better; but that can never be till might and right are allied in the kingdom of God.

Pine Avenue. F. P.

For the Crisis.

Autumnal Musings.

As nature is sinking in death's icy arms,
A dark vail is spreading o'er earth's brightest charms;
'Tis written in groves and the deep forest shade,—
As autumn leaves perish, so mortals must fade.

I read in the meadow, "all flesh is as grass,"
The glory of man as the flow'r soon is past;
The cold frost of Time draweth stealthily nigh,
The loved and the cherished are soon called to die.

'Tis written on the river in lines broad and deep,
Where the pale leaf is floating so lonely and weak:
Thus onward is rolling life's river to-day;
Frail man like the leaflet is "passing away."

The gale from the mountain breathes forth the sad tale,
The strongest and firmest of earth soon must fall;
Corruption is written on all things below,
For the vile seeds of sin have brought darkness and woe.

But hark, ye! the gospel sends forth a glad sound,
Salvation on earth and good will shall abound;
Where sin did once reign, now free grace is the song,
And sinners forgiven the rare theme shall prolong!

The loved ones long parted will meet in that day,
And sorrow and sadness must all flee away;
The springtime of glory will break o'er each plain,
And Jesus in triumph begin his blest reign.

MARY J. MASON.

Pownal, Vt.

For the Crisis.

Desire.

(Concluded.)

But is this appliance inherent? then why desire it? Is it thrust upon man? then why this voiceless strife of prayer for perpetual existence? If it is a practical fact, that all that a man hath will he give for the prolongation of his temporal life; why is it, with his ceaseless cravings for eternal life, he reluctantly acknowledges it a conditional gratuity? The answer is obvious. Because, forsooth, some effort must be put forth to attain it; besides, this unequal war between good and evil forces him to the conclusion that he cannot serve God and mammon. The conscience may not be a judicious arbiter in deciding between merit and demerit, debt and grace, for the reason that its sinful conception renders it wholly incapacitated to act the part of a juror; besides, it does not increase in the severity of its reprovings with the increase of guilt.

Again, will the exercise of human reason in its loftiest grandeur confirm that immortality is inherent? I answer, that, too, is limited in the vast multiplicity of things. All the arts are indebted to it—all the social and liberal arts claim it as their author. It can chain the lightning, and draw treasures from the bowels of the earth. The poet lifts his etherial finger in the divine creation, and we admire the efforts of his genius. It computes the distance from planet to planet unimpeded. But while we give reason its praise, and see its power, we at the same time can mark its weakness. The faith that the Son of God became a man—was made of flesh; how can reason know that? The death of the Son of God,—how could reason know the Son of God died by the hands of those he loved best? Man? Yes. They called him malefactor, arraigned him as a blasphemer, put him to death as an insurrectionist; and tried him by HUMAN REASON. Never ask me what human reason is, after that. That act stamped its character forever.

So much for human reason, beyond its limited domain; and yet, theologians and philosophers are eternally speculating about the essence and quality of the soul, in its earthly sphere and final destiny; and after all, the word of God has to settle it. How can reason know that, more than eighteen hundred years ago, it was Jesus Christ that was born in a manger, in Bethlehem of Judea? But it is so recorded, that the glory of God shone round about them, and armies of the heavenly host cried, "Tis he." This is enough. I know not how it happened; but all the research and scholastic lore of six thousand years can never make me doubt that he was the promised Prince of life. If this is not reliable authority, call it what you please.

If, then, man's highest intelligence fails to determine by an infallible decision the relation he sustains to his Maker, by what conclusive evidence does he determine his innate immortality? Waving the argument, that there is no supposition against the immortality of all, as unscriptural and unphilosophical, we appeal to the law and the testimony, repudiating that famous tautology, "THOU SHALT NOT SURELY DIE," as a falsehood, born of the father of lies, and the only supposition in favor of the argument.

Jesus, in his conference with Nicodemus, unequivocally sets forth the relations man sustains to his Maker in the light of the atonement. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Among the whole order of classified texts produced to prove the non-immortality of man in his natural state, there is none that is so simple, so concise, and yet so awfully comprehensive as this. Why did the Son of God offer to that ruler of the Jews this boon as a conditional gratuity? Simply because his Father sent him to perform a mediatorial sacrifice, which he in his economy disposed should operate more successfully in the grand scheme of salvation. Hence Christ says that "whosoever believeth in him might not perish," etc. This word perish is from apollumi. Webster defines it, "to waste away," "to die," "to come to nothing," "to depart wholly." And here I remark, that any attempt put forth to apply this passage solely to the Jewish dispensation, must prove utterly unavailing, from the very nature of the language used on that occasion; besides, by applying this language exclusively to that age, it necessarily makes the generations of the Gentiles, and their salvation, in the economy of God, a question of no importance, and a theme unworthy of his matchless mercy.

However simple an exegesis this may be of God's plan of the atonement, it is scriptural; and, if scriptural, it left something of an obligation on the hands and hearts of mankind to perform; namely, "Seek for glory, honor, immortality." If we possess the germ of immortality, why desire it? Does a man desire to have what he already has? He may desire to keep what he has; but how inconsistent would seem the logic, that predicates a desire for life because we have it! If nature intuitively teaches him to aspire for immortality, is it not sufficient proof that he does not possess directly that for which he aspires?

The doctrine of the death and resurrection of our Savior as the pattern, the pledge, and prelude of the resurrection of his followers to eternal life, is an infallible argument against the immortality of all, inasmuch as, "If Christ be not risen, then they also which have fallen asleep in Christ are perished;" notwithstanding philosophers' opinions to the contrary. The Apostle says, "If ye have been planted together in the likeness of his death, so also shall ye be in the likeness of his resurrection." Barabbas was a robber, but we have no proof that he was ever planted in the likeness of Christ's death. Inspiration informs us that this occurrence is the grand finale of all probationary things. It informs us that it is the introduction of man to a future-life; and, in view of its certainty that it shall surely occur, the end of life's mission is, that all men should consider the earnest of their wishes, their hopes, and the probable result that shall emanate from their indulgence, and see how far they are allied to the resurrection of the Son of God from the dead.

But they that are Christ's shall be like him. Is this enough? Will it satisfy the pleadings of the heart? Is the possession of this assurance enough in itself to sink out of sight all other aspiring notions? In short, what better, nobler, and more exalted desire can sit enshrined in the heart of man than, when the monuments of all earthly greatness shall be lost in the general wreck of nature, he may survive the desolation of the devouring elements, and in a fairer clime, unstained by sin, enjoy a life as endless as the years that wheel their flight around God's throne? Will he be satisfied then? Saith the awful seer, "I SHALL BE SATISFIED WHEN I AWAKE IN THY LIKENESS." C. G. CLARK.

Blackstone, Mass.

☞ When the Spirit maketh intercession for us, it is not by any direct application from himself to God the Father on behalf of any one individual; but it is by pouring on that individual the spirit of prayer and supplication. The man whom he prays for, is, in fact, the organ of his prayer. The prayer passes, as it were, from the Spirit through him who is the object of it.

For the Crisis.

The Sick Healed.

TO THE BRETHREN AND SISTERS SCATTERED ABROAD:—Having found favor in the sight of God, and received great blessings from his hand, I desire to make a statement of a few facts in my experience, for the encouragement of those who are sick, earnestly desiring it may be the means of leading them to put their trust in Him who has all power in heaven and on earth. I praise God for his unspeakable goodness to me in granting me health of body and peace of mind that I never knew before.

I had been feeble from my earliest recollection, and hardly knew what it was to enjoy good health for any length of time, but was able to be around and work some most of the time until the fall of 1856, when I had the typhoid fever, and was brought so low that my life was despaired of; but the Lord was merciful, and I was again permitted to move among my friends. But disease had fastened upon me, and I felt that death had marked me for its prey. Although I was not confined to my bed all the time, I felt my strength fast failing, at times was in great distress, and knew very well that, unless immediate help was found, I must sleep. I tried various remedies, but was no better, rather grew worse, until all hope of ever getting well in that way failed me. I felt an earnest desire to know what it was to enjoy health once in my life. It seemed I could never be reconciled to die. Then I began to call upon the Lord—for I had no where else to go—that he would direct me in the right way. As I prayed and read my Bible, with a desire to be led entirely by the Lord, hope began to spring up, and I felt that he would have compassion on me. I could not see far into the future, but I knew in whom I had put my trust. I knew that he was able to do for me all that I needed to have done. I felt to give it up into his hands.

While thinking the matter over, I looked out of the window and saw Bro. S. S. Brazee coming into the house. Ah! thought I, surely God has sent him here for something; and it all rushed through my mind what I had been praying about, although I did not feel certain that he had come to pray for me. A number of us had been praying the Lord to revive his work in that place, and send some one to preach the word to us. I thought this was it, and felt encouraged to hold on; for I thought if God heard prayer in one case he would in another. Bro. Brazee stayed over night, but, as he was almost a stranger to me, I said but little about the matter. But while I heard him tell how he had been impressed to come there, I said, surely the hand of the Lord is in this matter. He went away the next day promising to come again in a few days, if it was the Lord's will. Before he came again, I began to understand the matter; but just then the enemy of all righteousness, perceiving that God's name was about to be glorified, exerted himself to the utmost to stop the work. He began to fill my mind with doubts and fears. "Ah!" thought I, "I am so unworthy, so faithless! and I have been very impatient during my sickness, have murmured and repined at my lot,—surely there is no hope for me." But Jesus said to me, "Although you have committed sins, they shall be forgiven you." "But," says the enemy, "that will apply to some, but not to you."

I had a severe trial for many days. At times I had hope, and heard the sweet voice of Jesus saying, "I will have compassion on thee;" then darkness would come over my mind. Thus I lived hoping and fearing, until my burden was so heavy that it seemed as though I could hardly live. At last I came to a turning point. Something seemed to say, do you believe that Jesus Christ has power on earth to forgive sins? Yes, said I. Then why not believe the rest of the record, where he has said, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up"? And my choice was given, to have health and peace in this world, and in the world to come eternal life; or have pain and distress the few days I might live, and then be classed with the unbelievers at last. I knew there was such a thing as religion, and therefore must believe that the prayer of faith would save the sick; for I could not separate them; if I believed one, I must the other; and I felt it was for me, or why had I had such an exercise of mind in regard to the matter? These words came to my mind:—"They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." I felt an impression that if I should ask Bro. Brazee to pray for and lay his hands on me, I should recover; but I felt it to be so humiliating. I could ask him to pray, and why would not that answer? but that would not do.

One night, after returning from meeting, I felt a burden too heavy to be borne. Then I tried to excuse myself because it was getting late, but I came to the conclusion, I will obey, and I will believe. Lord, help thou my unbelief. God verified his promise, for on the 25th day of Oct., 1859, he made me whole. I did not feel any particular change in my body at the time, only a strong confidence that I was well and should have strength according to my day. I knew I must live by faith on the Son of God. Such peace as I had in my soul! I could not praise God enough. I could not express my feelings; it was joy unspeakable and full of glory. Praise God, I feel it to-day. Although I have had many trials to pass through, I am alive and enjoying the blessing of good health this day, Aug. 30th, 1860. No one can know the joy I have felt, who has never experienced it. There is much more I might write, but I trust I have said enough to convince all there is a reality in these things. I now close, hoping this may be the means of encouraging som to put their trust in the Lord without doubting or fearing, as I have done. Dear children, have faith in God, walk out upon his promises, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, and blessed are they that wait for him.

LUCY BLANCHARD.

The correctness of the above statement is vouched for by a minister of the gospel with whom I am well acquainted. I am not personally conversant with the facts.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Christian Consideration.

"For consider Him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds."—Heb. 12: 3.

Consideration is what many fail to reach. If confined to the heedless and thoughtless worldling, we would not take up our feeble pen to write; but when we see the mass of professed christendom, with but few exceptions, rushing along regardless of consequences, we are constrained to speak, though the voice may be feeble, hoping that some may be led to give this subject a passing notice, if nothing more.

In looking over the history of God's people in the past, we find they have been grossly guilty of neglect upon a subject to which God has attached no small importance, until grieved at the spectacle we hear him calling to the heavens and the earth to hear what he hath spoken. "I have nourished and brought up children, (saith he) and they have rebelled against me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." How sad the picture to contemplate! The ox and the ass, the most stupid of all domesticated animals, standing pre-eminently above God's chosen people in regard to this one thing—consideration. "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me." Unlike the ox which gently lows as he beholds the approach of his master, or hastens to his appointed place in the stall, to receive his portion at the hands of his benefactor; they have become a stiff-necked and rebellious people; a sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil-doers, children that are corrupters; they have forsaken the Lord, and provoked the Holy One of Israel to anger. This is the picture presented to us of God's ancient Israel. See the first chapter of Isaiah.

And what if the hand of inspiration was moved to delineate the church of the present day? Would it present a picture any more to be admired? Or would it be of a darker hue? If so, what is the cause? I answer: an unwillingness to consider the source from which all our blessings flow. Our text says, "Consider Him who endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds." Shall we consider him while a babe at Bethlehem, when the decree went forth from Herod that all the male children from two years and under shall be slain, that he may be destroyed? Or, shall we consider him while at the age of twelve, as he sits and disputes with the doctors in the temple? Or, during his more public ministrations, while he was being rejected by those to whom he was sent, the great and wise men trying to catch him in his words, that they might have something whereof they might accuse him. Or shall it be while he is enduring that agony in the garden? Or as he bears his cross away to yonder summit, forsaken by all except a few who follow him at a distance? Or, as he is suspended between the heavens and the earth, a willing sacrifice, no earthly friend to offer one word of comfort or consolation. He could well bare with the revilings of the mob around him and with anxious solicitude implore his heavenly Father to forgive them. Earthly friends are of but little worth in such hours of trial as this; but, oh! to be forsaken of God, and that after having endured such contradiction of sinners against himself. But thus it seemed necessary to make the atonement complete.

Now brother, sister, yes, and thou, ungodly one, if such should chance to read these few lines, consider that it was for your sakes he endured all this; he took upon himself the iniquity of us all, and by his stripes we are healed. Then let us not get weary in well-doing, for if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him.

We might consider him in this light as King of kings; but we prefer to leave it here, hoping that we may learn by these few lessons of patient suffering to bear with our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, knowing they work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things that are seen, but at the things that are unseen. May God help us to keep the eye of faith ever open, that we may thus look at the unseen things.

H. F. HART.

☞ Permanent rest must not be expected on the road, but at the end of the journey.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 7, 1860.

Paragraphs by the Way.

Saturday, Oct. 20th, we left Boston for Castleton, Vt., and after a pleasant ride through varied scenery of woodland, farms, hills, vales and mountains, brooks and rivers, we arrived in safety, and met a hearty reception by Bro. Sherman and his happy family. The church in C. is doing well. They have five prayer meetings in a week, which are well attended and interesting. Their pleasant meeting-house,—the result, in a large measure, of Bro. Sherman's liberality, will be ready for dedication about the middle of Nov. Some one wrote on a board in the house, "This is the result of Sherman's folly and Grant's deviltry." We conclude the writer was a Pharisee, or the son of a Pharisee. May the Lord bless him with love for Jesus and his appearing. We desire to see him present at the dedication, and pray that he may become a christian, meet with us here and at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Sabbath 21st. Although the day was quite rainy, some came eighteen and twenty miles to be present, and participate in the joys of our meetings. The truth and light are still spreading. Every Sabbath morning they meet at half-past nine o'clock for a love-feast, when they have a delightful season in speaking of the love of Jesus. Beholders are astonished at the work of the Lord in this place. Great is the change when swearing miserable drunkards become praying, happy temperance men, with hearts full of the love of God, and their mouths filled with praise instead of tobacco and whiskey. There are some noble specimens of such in C. who have caused mourning among demons, and rejoicing among angels. Their testimonies in the prayer meetings and love-feasts are like cool water to a thirsty soul. We can only say to such, press forward, the kingdom and immortality will soon be yours.

Monday, 22nd. To-day we visited the dear saints at Sandy Hill, N. Y. This church is doing well. Their faithful pastor, Bro. S. G. Mathewson, is a valiant soldier in the army of the Lord, and is never found sleeping on the battle-field. They have just completed and dedicated a very pleasant and convenient meeting-house, occupying an eligible situation in this beautiful village on the banks of the Hudson. Praise the Lord for his glorious work at Sandy Hill. Our visit was a very pleasant one, but saddened by finding Fanny Parry, the "Pine Avenue" poetess, on a sick bed. Relentless disease is boldly threatening her frail constitution, but she has "great peace" in the Lord. Her pilgrimage towards Mt. Zion has been earnest and rapid. We hope and pray she may live till Jesus comes, and continue to aid in adorning the columns of our family paper with sparkling gems of sacred truth.

Tuesday, we returned to C., where we met Bro. J. Howell, pastor of the Poultney church, and had a pleasant but brief interview. We learn they are doing well at P. Some more have been baptized by Bro. H. recently. From Tuesday to Saturday evening, we had interesting meetings in different school-houses. Some new ones have started in the service of the Lord, and several others have requested prayers.

Lord's-day, Oct. 28th. The day was pleasant, the congregation large and attentive. We had another of our heavenly love-feasts in the morning, and a joyful time all day. The truth has taken strong hold of many who have not yet had courage to stand up in its defence. In the evening we had another heavenly scene around the table of the Lord. We parted in love, hoping to meet soon at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Monday, 29th, we left Castleton for Champlain, N. Y., where we are to hold a series of meetings for a few days. On our way, we called on Bro. M. Batchelor at Rutland, Vt., and learned that their meetings are increasing in interest. He is one of the Lord's faithful watchmen, who is feeding the household with "meat in due season." The church in R. has been struggling through deep waters, financially, but the Lord has been their helper, and cheered them with the hope of an eternal inheritance in the coming kingdom.

Rome and Napoleon; or,

AN EXPOSITION OF THE 17TH CHAP. OF REV.

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—AMOS 3: 7.

From our previous examination, we see no possibility to avoid the conclusion that the harlot woman in this chapter symbolizes the church whose seat is at Rome upon the "seven hills." But that this point may be still plainer, we will notice some characteristics of this church as given in the first six verses of the chapter. In the first verse we learn that "one of the seven angels, who are to execute "the seven last plagues," proposes to show unto John "the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters." In the 15th verse we are informed by this angel that the waters where she sitteth represent "peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." This shows that her influence has been extensive—that many have yielded to her power; or, as expressed in verse 18th, she "reigneth over the kings of the earth." And as the nations and kings of the earth have embraced her doctrines, they are said to "have committed fornication" with her. The angel then takes John to a position where he sees the appropriate representative of this apostate church and her protector, who is symbolized by "a scarlet-colored beast," hereafter to be considered. This harlot, as seen by John, and described in the 4th verse, is most gorgeously dressed. Hence the church on "the seven hills," which she represents, must be a rich one, noted for her magnificence. The Cathedral of St. Peter at Rome is said to be, "without exception, the noblest work of architecture ever produced by man." Its floor covers five acres of ground. Its estimated cost is from sixty to eighty millions of dollars. The height from the pavement to the cross is four hundred and fifty-eight feet. Besides this magnificent structure, Rome has three hundred and sixty-three other churches, "most of which are remarkable for their architecture and splendid decorations." The Vatican, or Pope's palace, surpasses that of all other kings, and is the largest in Europe. It contains four thousand four hundred and twenty-two apartments. This ecclesiastical hierarchy is then very properly represented by a harlot "arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication." Purple and scarlet are common colors used by the Popes and cardinals of Rome. On one occasion Mr. Addison witnessed some of the magnificence of the papal court, and says, "Silver can hardly find an admittance, and gold itself looks but poorly amid such an incredible number of precious stones."

As if to point out this woman in the most definite manner, in 1825, the Pope caused a medal to be struck, on one side of which was a figure of himself, and on the other a woman holding a golden cup in her right hand, with the inscription underneath, "Sedet super universum"—she sits upon the universe.

Verse 5. "Upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH." At the time of the Reformation, it is said the word mystery was worn by the Popes on their mitres; but they pulled it off when pointed out by the Reformers. This Babylon cannot be the one taken by Cyrus 536 B. C., for it was in ruins before John had the vision of this one seated on "seven mountains." Old Babylon became a very wicked city, but this modern one is much worse.

In the oath of the Jesuits when speaking of the Pope as the Vicar General of Christ, they are required to admit that "he hath power to depose heretical kings, princes, states, commonwealths and governments, and that they may safely be destroyed." And in the same oath, they acknowledge the Catholic church as "the sacred Mother Church of Rome." In Art. 12 of the creed of Pope Pius IV., the believer is made to say,—"I acknowledge the holy catholic and Apostolic Roman Church, the Mother and mistress of all churches." It is well known that the church or woman, on the "seven hills", has for centuries claimed to be the Mother of all churches.

The following titles, assumed or accepted, show her blasphemous character:—"All power is given unto thee in heaven and on earth."—Labbe, IX. 920, 927. Du Pin, Hist. III. 602. "If the Pope should err by enjoining vices or forbidding virtues, the church would be bound to believe vices to be good and virtues evil." Bellarm. Disput. B. IV. c. 5. Here we see that the woman endeavors to change the law of God. Daniel foretold that this power would "think to change times and laws." "Thou art another God upon earth." —Speech of Marcellus in Lat. conc. to Julius II. "Thou art not only king of men, but king of kings."—Begninius in same council to Leo X. Says another, "The honor due to Christ as God is due to the Pope."

Ver. 6. "And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." This verse shows that, when John saw the woman in this vision, she had done her great work of persecution; hence this scene is near the judgment. And it should be remembered that the angel proposes to show to John "the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters."—Ver. 1. According to history, this woman, or church on the "seven hills," has caused the blood to flow from some fifty millions of martyrs. How perfectly every feature of this prophecy is fulfilled in the history of the church of Rome. We can see no room for a doubt in relation to its application. In our next, we purpose to consider the "beast that carrieth her."

Interesting.

The following interesting remarks are from a writer in the Banner of the Faith, for July and Aug., 1860, published by the "Disciples" at Brighton, C. W. In speaking of the cautiousness of "the church in Erin," he says:—"They are thus saved from aggravating imposition by those noisy wolves grinning in sheep's clothing, alias those soul-sleepers and destructionists that lustily feed upon the contents of the flesh-pots of Egypt."

Again he says:—"Another happy result is the suppression and repudiation of certain reckless characters, crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation; ungodly men, turning the grace or gospel of God into desolating speculations concerning the sleeping of souls, the killing or annihilation of wicked spirits, etc. Jude, 4th verse."

Will the writer of the foregoing, or any of his friends, sustain his position relative to the doctrines named, in public debate? If so, please address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

"How Changed!"

In the Herald of Progress, a Spiritualist paper, we find a letter from J. W. Thwing, of Belleville, Ill., a Baptist minister, who has just embraced Spiritualism. He says:—

"I am almost astonished at where I am. Not only am I 'a wonder unto many,' but somewhat so to myself. A few months since I was an orthodox Baptist, fighting with considerable zeal for my denomination, although wincing now and then under sectarian 'bonds.' Trinitarianism had never been questioned; the doctrine of vicarious atonement seemed a little shadowy, yet had been well-rooted; endless punishment might possibly have a termination after a lengthy period, I thought, and all be finally restored, although I had never publicly enforced the idea. The Bible I supposed to be a finality in revelation, but for sometime had maintained that the 'age of miracles' was not necessarily past; reason had been kept a well-guarded prisoner —theories having not been tested but blindly believed; and fear had made me the subject of much unhappiness.

Now how changed! Trinitarianism is no more; the vicarious atonement has faded into 'thin air;' priestcraft has all gone by the board; endless punishment! I have dared not to charge God with so great an absurdity; the Bible—in moving it to a different shelf I find I have not moved Deity with it, for he can by no means take up his abode in a book or in books; sect imposes its galling fetters no longer; reason has in a measure been freed. In a word, I feel to be like a new man."

But few are aware of the power of the delusion induced by the spirits of demons, as they transform themselves into angels of light, to lead the deluded astray from the path of life, by their "signs and lying wonders; and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."—2 Thess. 2: 9–12. After men and women have yielded to this demoniacal influence, it produces a kind of careless security and indifference, expressed by this Baptist minister when he said, "I feel to be a new man." It is like the spell produced by the charmer upon his victim. It is a state from which it is very difficult to escape—it is so bewitching. The same is true of Shakerism and Swedenborgianism, which are only varied phases of the same system, adapted to different temperaments and tastes. Either of them is a system of error concocted by demons to overthrow the doctrine of the Bible, and give man a future life independent of Christ and the resurrection of the dead.

While they all profess great love for Jesus, they deny his second coming, a future day of judgment, the destruction of the wicked, and the reign of Christ on the earth. By them, the whole gospel system is perverted, mystified, and etherialized, until their votaries are lost in the wild labyrinths of their own vague imaginations. Thank the Lord for a gospel that the common people can understand,—one that does not exist in the flights of speculative fancy. Ours is a "blessed hope." Hold it fast.

For the Crisis.

Books to Great Britain.

Who wants to send books or tracts to friends in Great Britain? I will send one thousand pages of tracts to London for $1.00. They will be sent paid to a bookseller in London, probably Trubener & Co., there to be called for; or they can be sent by express from there wherever ordered. Books can be sent by mail in England at six pence per hundred. I will send any of my books to London, free of charge, on receipt of the retail prices, and one-fourth as much more in addition, to cover the expense of duties and transportation.

Address orders with cash immediately to H. L. Hastings, Providence, R. I.

Oct. 29th, 1860.

Sr. Wellcome's Book.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to say for the benefit of some who do not understand, that the money is not required with the names of subscribers for my contemplated book. When a sufficient number of copies have been subscribed for, then I will give notice through the "Crisis," and the money will be needed soon afterward. Let those who are disposed to aid, send in their names, with the amount they will subscribe for books, as soon as practicable.

MARY D. WELLCOME.

Richmond, Me.

For the Crisis.

The Rights of Wrong.

The following passage in Dr. Mansel's "Limits of Religious Thought," has been largely republished by the religious press, and seems to require some notice:—

"It is urged that sin cannot be for ever triumphant against God. As if the whole mystery of iniquity were contained in the word for ever! the real riddle of existence—the problem which confounds all philosophy, aye, and all religion too, so far as religion is a thing of man's reason—is the fact that evil exists at all; not that it exists for a longer or a shorter duration. Is not God infinitely wise and holy and powerful now? and does not sin exist along with that infinite holiness and wisdom and power? Is God to become more holy, more wise, more powerful hereafter; and must evil be annihilated to make room for his perfections to expand? Does the infinity of his eternal nature ebb and flow with every increase or diminution in the sum of human guilt and misery? Against this immovable barrier of the existence of evil, the waves of philosophy have dashed themselves unceasingly since the birthday of human thought, and have retired broken and powerless, without displacing the minutest fragment of the stubborn rock, without softening one feature of its dark and rugged surface."

To this kind of argument the tract on the Rights of Wrong is a reply. It has been out of print for a few days. The next edition, which will be the fifth thousand, will be out this week. It will contain a postscript of seven pages, replying more particularly to Dr. Mansel, with extracts from other able writers, some of them reviewers of Dr. M.'s book. The price of the tract will be as before.

C. F. H.

For the Crisis.

Short Tour to New Hampshire.

BRO. GRANT:—I was exceeding glad that at the Salem meeting there was so much love and good feeling manifested amid the diversity of sentiment and conclusions. I am sick of this kind of conference action; do and undo, and not know what to do, or what you have done.

Thursday, I left for the more "specific work," which is more congenial to my feelings. About midday I found myself at Lawrence. Here I heard a good report, as the result of Bro. Himes' meetings; quite an interest had been awakened; some backsliders reclaimed; and their meetings are now prosperous. Thence, I went to Concord, N. H. Spent the Sabbath with Bro. Preble's congregation. I saw but a few of the old pilgrims, but my heart was made glad to hear some familiar voices confess the faith with joy. There are some indications of good for Concord. Bro. Preble is doing what he can for them, and I pray they may have special help from the great Head of the church.

Monday, went still further north to Andover, to visit friends, where my wife had gone before me. Friday, the 26th, I went to the conference at Danbury, where I met Brn. D. Churchill, J. Smith, Glasier, Pinkham and Leavitt. The meeting commenced the day before. Brethren from the vicinity came together expecting a good meeting, and as it progressed, it was very evident the Lord, by his Spirit, was in our midst. Bible truth adapted to the times seemed to produce happy results. Those who had grown worldly and laid aside family prayer and their testimony in meeting and out of meeting, were reached by the Spirit of God. Such melting confessions and deep, heartfelt repentance from old and young, from fathers and mothers, I hardly ever heard before. After preaching Saturday and Sunday evenings, the exhortations, confessions, crying, rejoicing, glory and hallelujahs, kept us together till after ten o'clock. It was a solemn time especially Sunday evening. There was a prevailing feeling of the necessity of a readiness for our coming Lord.

Bro. Churchill left with me Monday morning, but the interest was such that they concluded to continue the meetings, and Bro. Smith remained. I do pray the influence from that meeting may be such upon our brethren who come that they may carry the holy fire home with them, setting all in a blaze. God bless the pilgrims and help them to double their diligence; and may this be the beginning of better times among them. This is the time to hold more meetings and double our efforts.

L. BOUTELL.

Groton, Oct. 31st.

For the Crisis.

Report of Richmond Quarterly Conference.

Assembled in the Read meeting-house, Oct. 25th, 2 o'clock, P. M., as appointed. The first was an interesting prayer meeting; but few had arrived from abroad; the Lord was there, however, to bless and guide us. A goodly number arrived in the evening and next day, and came ready to work. We enjoyed a heavenly sitting together in the Lord. The conference seemed to begin and go on in the spirit and earnestness with which it closed last year at the same place, only further advanced in experience and devotion, and the converts stronger. The ministers in attendance were O. R. Fassett, H. B. Sevey, I. C. Wellcome, S. K. Partridge, L. Rhodes, D. M. Hanscomb and R. R. York. Some were obliged to leave before Sunday to fill their appointments. Bro. Fassett left Saturday noon, but he gave three valuable discourses on some of the most important subjects, and we trust God will make them a blessing to us. Our other preachers also gave the word in season and well proportioned. There is a more general awaking amongst us on the great theme of Jesus' soon coming, and the importance of activity and readiness for the event, than has been for some years past. The zeal, the strong, healthy, intelligent testimonies and prayers of the believers, together with their more abundant deeds of charity and readiness to sustain the gospel, all show a growth in grace and knowledge.

Owing to a heavy rain just before the meeting, causing bad traveling, many did not come who intended to; yet we had a large gathering and a glorious meeting. One brother thought it the best he had ever attended. The love, union, and general interest for each other, and for the salvation of sinners, was beyond what we usually see. The preaching and the influence of our social meetings, which were held every morning, were deeply felt by some of our backslidden and unconverted friends, who we hope will yet come to Christ and live.

Sunday afternoon the Lord's supper was shared by the joyful pilgrims present, who hope soon to partake of the marriage supper of the Lamb. The congregations were large on Sunday. We had a good closing meeting in the evening, and parted in the joyous hope of soon meeting with all the family in the kingdom of God.

The hearts and houses of our brethren and friends in the place were open to receive and take care of all who came, and if any one felt neglected, we are sure it was not designed.

H. B. SEVEY, Chairman.

I. C. WELLCOME, Secretary.

Richmond, Me., Oct. 3d, 1860.

P. S. I cannot, as Secretary of this conference, feel clear of duty without adding a note to the churches and our ministers. Our conferences, our united efforts and harmonious action, and comparative healthy growing condition, is, under God, owing to organized system. The devil is mad, and employs all his means to overthrow it, either by his own direct agents, or by perverted or deranged christians. Some claim it a part of their mission to break down all church organizations. If we, brethren, "sow to the wind," we should not murmur when "we reap the whirlwind." I would gladly refrain from alluding to this matter, but as a Secretary it is made my duty, and to avoid the duty again, and also the responsibility of calling assemblies to be thus fed, I here remark, that I cannot call another quarterly conference until I have the assurance from my fellow laborers that no such messenger shall be allowed to occupy the minister's office in our conference. If they can cast out devils, let them do it freely, but among themselves, and in their own meetings. Brethren, I do not blame you, but exhort you.

Yours in gospel bonds,

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the Crisis.

Dr. Cumming's New Work.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Allow me to call attention to Dr. Cumming's new work, The Great Preparation; or Redemption nigh. First series, with preface and introduction, and sixteen sermons, is now out. Among the topics discussed, are, the Prophetic Dates and the study of them; Prophetic Dates and their solution; the Earth's Last Baptism; the Summer Nigh. This will be an interesting work to the waiting church.

I shall give full notice of the work in the December No. of the "Voice," with important articles from it. I shall keep the work for sale, wholesale and retail. Price $1. I will also send it postage free for $1. Address J. V. Himes, Boston, Mass.

For the Crisis.

ERRATUM.—In my notice of Bro. J. S. White's tract on "The Rich Man and Lazarus," last week, the printer made a mistake. The question was put, "Why did the rich man," etc. There is no sense in this; but when it reads thus: "When did the rich man" (the Jewish priesthood) etc., then the force of the inquiry is manifest.

J. F. COTTON.

For the Crisis.

Light Wanted.

Will J. S. White please say through the Crisis where the garden of Eden was? I read that Adam was driven from it, and from the tree of life, and a flaming sword placed to guard it. I don't read that God cursed the garden, only the earth into which he was driven.

We read that the tree of life is seen again at Christ's coming. Were the sword and tree removed, or are they yet there?

Why did God place the flaming sword to guard the tree of life, if it was ever to be removed from the garden?

E. H. C.

For the Crisis.

CHRIST OUR LIFE.—A friend in Philadelphia writes as follows: "Thank you for your book. It is very satisfactory and conclusive on the subject—the most so, I think, of any that I have met with as far as the general reader is concerned." He orders fifty copies, bound.

The second edition will be out in a few days.

C. F. H.

For the Crisis.

The Reformers not Spiritualists.

BY D. T. T.

In the "Confession of Helgetia," written by the Pastors of Zurich in 1566, and approved and subscribed by the churches of Berne, Scaphusia, Sangalia, Rhetia, Myllaine, Bienna, Geneva, Savoy, Poland, Hungary and Scotland; the great Reformers thus in concert and with united voice laid their veto on what would now be called modern Spiritualism. In chapter 25th of the Confession they say:—

"Now that which is recorded of the spirits or souls of the dead sometime appearing to them that are alive and craving certain duties of them, whereby they may be set free, we count those apparitions among the delusions, crafts, and deceits of the devil, who, as he can transform himself into an angel of light, so he laboreth tooth and nail either to overthrow the true faith or call it into doubt. The Lord in the Old Testament forbade to inquire the truth of the dead, or to have anything to do with spirits. And to the glutton being bound in torments, as the truth of the gospel doth declare, is denied any return to his brethren."

Pity that christian churches in confederation do not speak out as boldly in our times against this rampant evil. But, alas! it is to be feared they are too much wedded to the main tenets of Spiritualism, such as the presence of departed spirits, the soul's immortality, glorification of men while dead, etc., etc., to lift unitedly a warning voice!

Dansville, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

How a Prayer Meeting may Live.

When we come into the prayer room let each one have a moment of solemn thought of what is our business here. Let each feel that they must help by prayer, then all can join in singing,

"Help me to watch and pray;"

then a reading of a short passage,—"O come let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker. For he is our God and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand." Let any who feel most needy call upon the Lord, remembering that he has promised to hearken, being direct in their petition, asking only for what is most needed, backing up asking by confidence in his word; let the petition be urged by earnestness; let all join and desire that God would answer. (It would be well for all to read Jer. 29: 12, 13, before going to the place appointed for prayer.) All would be short if they would desire the blessing; for it would be —"Help us to believe what has been asked for will be given."

By this time a thankfulness would begin to exhibit itself in the expression of many, for the blessed privilege of being present, (and a few drops of rain would not keep them away from the next meeting)—the word would seem so good to them—

"Precious treasure, thou art mine,"

"sweeter than the honey comb." The Spirit of God would so bless the meeting that sinners would feel their lost condition. Then the faithful could have easy access to their tender hearts; the wax has been melted; Jesus only cures the sin-sick; they would soon tell how bad they felt,—no hope in the future,—their expression would be, "pray for us." "Yes," would be the response, and the meeting would now close with prayer to God for the special object. I am inclined to the opinion that such a prayer meeting would find full attendance afterwards.

In my next I may tell how a prayer meeting died. S.

Correspondence.

From S. C. Miner.

BRO. GRANT:—Providentially a number of the "World's Crisis" came to me. It is just what I want, and I enclose one dollar for six months' subscription. For quite a number of years my husband and myself have been convinced that the Bible teaches the doctrines you advocate in your paper. We very much wish some able expounder of these views would come here and preach a few sermons. It was our privilege to hear Eld. Geo. Storrs a few Sabbaths since, at Middlesex, ten miles from here. We had hoped he would come to our place and preach, but he could not. We have no lack of preaching of the popular sort. We circulate our books all we can, trusting in God to quicken his own truth.

We have in this village a new hall, just finished, where a large congregation could be accommodated. Whoever comes will find a home at our house. O that the Lord may send forth laborers for the harvest! There is a little handful of believers in Penn Yan. I do not know of any nearer, except here and there a solitary instance like our own.

May the Lord bless and strengthen you for your abundant labors.

Naples, N. Y.

From Bro. F. Douglas.

BRO. GRANT:—I write to inform you that I have removed to this place. I intend to assist my brother-in-law in his store until my companion's health will admit of my absence in order to follow duty's path in proclaiming the truth. It is true I find many opportunities to converse on Bible topics and much scepticism to contend with, in the formidable opposition to the true light which Spiritualism advances. I am surrounded with influences contrary to the Spirit of Christ, yet I confess that my confidence in God's written Revelation is only strengthened by intercourse and conversation with those who attempt to deduce arguments from nature and philosophy to overthrow the authenticity of it. I hope I shall never refuse to stand up for the truth, although assailed in high places by the so-called great of earth. I find that simple trust in the "Thus saith the Lord," works successfully against every distrustful dart of the adversary.

There are a few here who love the truth, but I have not yet been permitted to meet with them in a social capacity. When viewing the vastness of Satan's territory and the myriads who pay him homage, I feel to put on the whole christian armor and declare eternal hostility to him and all of his works; not merely by refusing him my allegiance, but endeavoring to persuade many to desert his cause and enlist under King Jesus.

Oswego, Oct. 31st.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. H. Tatro writes from Collinsville, Ct:—"I am trying to live Christ's religion, for no other will answer in the day when God shall make up his jewels. My faith in God is unwavering, my hope in the speedy coming of Christ is increasing, and I hail with joy all the signs of his near approach. God has been good to me through trial and affliction; and many times when cast down and almost in a state of despair, he has come to my assistance and made me to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. I will take him as the man of my counsel, his word as my guide, trust him for all things in the future, and hope finally to live with him in his everlasting kingdom.

Our church affairs are somewhat confused and broken, but I pray God to bless us, and help us to live, so that confidence may be restored and God's dear children united.

There is no time to lose. Jesus is coming to judge the world; let us lay by all strife and bickering, put on the armor of Christ, stand firm at our post, be willing to suffer with our Savior, that we may reign with him. To those who are walking through trial and sorrow; look up, for your deliverance draws nigh. Hope in God, trust his promises; for his word will surely be fulfilled."

Eld N. F. Nason writes from No. Searsport, Me., Oct. 29th:—"I spent this month in the eastern section of Maine. Visited Holden, East Great Works, Lincoln, Burlington, and Enfield Mills. In the last two named, had twenty-one meetings. Several were reclaimed, and many were left under conviction. Distributed what tracts I had. If any of the preachers go that way, do not fail to call. There is a chance to do good."

Obituary Notices.

Died, in Conway, Sept. 25th, 1860, Bro. HIRAM A. LORD, of consumption, aged thirty-one years. Also his son, ETHAN W. LORD, July 19th, 1860, aged two years.

Dear Bro. Lord sleeps in Jesus. He embraced the blessed hope of seeing Jesus, in 1853, in Lowell, under the labors of Brn. Berick and Turner. Since that time he has always been a strong believer that the coming of the Lord was at the door. He was a firm believer in the sleep of the dead, and has gone down to the grave with a hope big with immortality that he will soon come forth to die no more. May the grace of God comfort and sustain our dear sister in this her affliction. Pray for her, brethren and sisters.

CHARLES H. COLBY.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Vernon, Vt., Aug. 4th, at 10 o'clock, A. M., after an illness of only twelve hours, Sister MARY, wife of Bro. Noyce Streeter, aged fifty-four years and fifteen days.

Although Sr. Streeter was laid upon a bed of death with hardly a moment's warning, yet being in the covenant of God it did not find her unprepared. The disease that closed her eyes in death's unconscious sleep was congestion of the bowels, and consequently she suffered the most excruciating pain during her entire sickness; and had therefore no time to make a preparation to meet the monster death; but happily all in this matter had been done on her part, and when death claimed her as his victim, she fell calmly asleep in the embrace of Him who is constituted "Lord both of the dead and the living." Having complied with the conditions of the life plan instituted by the sovereign disposer of all things through Jesus Christ, she was possessed of the life principle derived by all true believers by the effectual working of that plan; and has consequently secured to herself a part in the resurrection of the dead through Christ; and when He shall come, who is the only source of life to the children of faith, she will be made alive from the dead and will die no more. Sr. Streeter was a very conscientious christian, and it engaged her utmost zeal to do all the will of God. Most deeply is her loss felt in the town where she resided, and especially by the poor, who ever found in her a constant friend—a friend to supply their temporal wants, and with every gift to exhort them to a preparation for a home in that land where want will come no more. They truly feel that a "Dorcas" is taken from their midst. Her husband and children feel deeply afflicted; but having knowledge of her unwavering christian integrity, they are fully satisfied that when the great day of rewards shall come, she will be numbered with chosen ones, and find an everlasting rest in Eden's blooming bowers.

A large concourse of people, among whom were about seventy relatives of the family, listened with deep attention while the writer attempted to demonstrate from the sacred word the important truth, that eternal life, by a resurrection from the dead, is secured only to new covenant believers through Jesus Christ. S. W. BISHOP.

Calmly fell asleep in Jesus, at Kennebunk, Oct. 6th, SARAH L. EMERY, aged thirty-five years.

Sister E. experienced hope in Christ in early life under the labors of Bro. E. Burnham, and was baptized by him in the summer of 1847, since which she has lived a christian to her death. Her disease was consumption, but of long continuance, and during her last moments she suffered much, but never murmured. Five years ago last May she, in company with her brother, Geo. G. Emery, removed to Wisconsin, where she resided until ten weeks previous to her death, when she came home to her father's residence, where she found the kind hands of parents to administer to her wants during her last hours of suffering. Sr. Emery was a lover of the "blessed hope," and the attractions of a western scenery did not diminish her love for paradise restored. She was deprived of the privilege of hearing much on the Advent while west, and was very earnest to hear on her return, but she enjoyed the privilege of hearing only a few times, which seemed reviving. Brn. Hastings and Pratt visited and prayed with her a short time previous to her death, which comforted her much. She had taken great pleasure in reading "Reasons for my Hope," but never before had the privilege of seeing the author.

Our sister sleeps, but she sleeps in hope; and, though friends are called to mourn, they mourn not without hope, for though she may for a while be confined in the grave's dark prison, yet He who said to John on Patmos' lonely isle, "I am he that liveth, and was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore; amen, and have the keys of hell and of death," will ere long come and unlock the prison and let the captives go free. May the blessing of God rest on the mourning parents and friends, and especially upon him who is in the West. We endeavored to comfort the bereaved ones from Rom. 14: 8, at our chapel, where a goodly number of attentive listeners assembled to sympathize. W. H. MITCHELL.

Died, at Melbourne, C. E., on the 10th ult., DANIEL TAYLOR, aged fifteen months, son of Bro. and Sr. Lawrence, of Lawrenceville, C. E.

Bro. and Sr. L. came a distance of thirty miles to attend Eld. Grant's meetings at Danville; and on their way home stopped at Melbourne, where their infant son sickened and died. It was carried away in life and brought back in death. J. PORTER.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

[Advices of the 19th ult.]

FRANCE.

The Times Paris correspondent says that the departure of the Pope's Nuncio from Paris was considered a forerunner of the departure of the Pope from Rome.

The same authority says that seldom has the spirit of hostility been so general in the church in France, and never was it more boldly displayed. Pastoral, circulars, allocutions and sermons denounce and all but implore vengeance upon the invaders of the Papal States, and by implication upon the Emperor himself. The whole prelacy is aroused from one end of the country to the other.

The French note to the Swiss Federal Council states that independent of the insults offered to the French flag at Sion, a French subject was maltreated on that occasion, and France therefore claims that a searching inquiry be instituted. The note expresses the hope that the guilty parties may be punished and full satisfaction accorded. The Federal Council has directed the government of Valois to make the necessary investigation.

ITALY.

Affairs were wholly unchanged.

The Paris Patrie says that as soon as the annexation of Naples and Sicily to Sardinia is proclaimed, Garibaldi will resign his political authority, and assume the title and functions of Commander-in-Chief of the land and sea forces of Southern Italy. He will exclusively occupy himself in preparing for war next spring, and will make an appeal to all Europe for volunteers.

It is confirmed that a French merchantman, laden with stores for Gaeta, had been captured by Garibaldi's ships, but as the blockade was not recognized by France, she would probably be restored to avoid disagreeable consequences.

A Naples telegram of the 16th says the Pro-Dictator had resigned, as also his Ministry, and that great agitation and discontent prevailed, and strong patrols of the National Guard paraded the streets.

It is stated that 14,000 Piedmontese troops had already reached Naples by sea. After Victor Emmanuel reviews them they will march to Caserta, to be joined by those entering by the Roman frontiers.

The Times' Paris correspondent says that the Papal Nuncio at the Tuilleries had been seen for the last time at the Imperial Court in the character of representative of the Holy Father.

The Russian Minister at Turin had not yet been recalled, but appearances show his recall to have been resolved upon.

FOUR DAYS LATER.

THE ROYAL MEETING AT WARSAW.—The Emperor of Russia, the Emperor of Austria and the Prince Regent of Prussia were all at Warsaw, together with Prince Gortschakoff, Count Reichberg and other prominent Ministers. Nothing has transpired as to the doings of the Conference. It is, however, asserted that Russia positively refused to enter into any engagements with Austria which might lead to a war.

FRANCE.

The Constitutionnel announces that the Emperor has received an autograph letter from the Czar, explaining the nature of the Warsaw meeting, and denying that it has any political significance hostile to France.

The Gazette de Lyons has been suppressed on account of its incessant appeals for agitation, its attacks on the Government, and its disdain of the good advice of the Administration.

ITALY.

Naples telegrams of the 21st announce that the vote of annexation was then being taken. There was much enthusiasm. Immense crowds had assembled, but all was quiet.

At the latest dates, the King of Naples had issued a protest declaring that he should consider the vote null and void.

It is reported that after annexation is effected, the titles of Prince and the rank of General will be offered to Garibaldi.

A Naples telegram of the 21st says that Garibaldi has officially declared that he would lay down the Dictatorship after the arrival of Victor Emmanuel.

Some authorities continue to assert that the Austrian demonstrations on the Italian frontiers were increasing in intensity, but on the other hand, it is said that Austria has given the most positive assurance that she will not draw the sword unless attacked.

ROME.

The Piedmontese troops were encamped at Rieti, ten leagues from Rome.

The text of the Prussian dispatch relative to the invasion of the Papal States has been published. It censures the action of Sardinia and rejects Cavour's justification, but does not threaten any active hostility on the part of Prussia.

AUSTRIA.

The official Weiner Zeitung publishes a reform manifesto from the Emperor. Many sweeping changes in the Constitution are proposed. The legislative power is only to be exercised henceforth with the co-operation of the Provincial Diets. The Rerchwatch court of Chancery in Hungary is restored, and other important concessions are made to that Province.

THREE DAYS LATER.

The Pope has assured the representative of France at Rome that he has no intention of leaving that city.

An article in the Constitutionnel, semi-official, defines the part of Napoleon in Italy as that of non-intervention, and argues for the settlement of an organized Italy by a Congress.

It is reported that the Papal Nuncio at Madrid has remitted within a few days 20,000 reals to the Pope, raised by the Bishops.

Advices from Italy state that Garibaldi had entered Capua.

The Papal Nuncio had left Paris in consequence of orders from Rome.

An order had been issued ordering that preparations be made for the coronation of Francis Joseph as king of Hungary next spring.

The Austrian warlike preparations were increasing on the Mincio.

The text of the Russian note to Sardinia, protesting against her course and ordering the Russian legation to retire, has been published.

GARIBALDI.—The Nationalites publishes the following recent proclamation of Garibaldi, addressed to the citizens of Molise:

"Glory to the brave! to the chivalrous men who defend their hearths, their wives and their children, from the wolf.

Glory to the children of Molise; they fought and conquered at Isernia.

Shame to the populations who fly at the approach of the spoiler, and abandon everything When they return to their houses, may their wives spit in their faces and shrink from all contact with such cowards.

Italians! When you fight you are conquerors, and when it is known that you are resolved to fight, the foreign powers which devour you under one pretext or another will not wait for your onslaught.

To arms! You have four months before you for warlike exercises. The fifth month, in March, 1861, will re-echo throughout the entire Italian territory the hymn of liberty and regeneration.

Caserta, Oct. 6, 1860."

A Naples dispatch says that Garibaldi has published a proclamation, in which, after announcing the approaching arrival of Emmanuel, he says:

"Let us be ready to receive the man whom Providence has sent us. There will be no more discord. Let United Italy and Emmanuel be the perpetual symbols of our regeneration."

[From the London Times, Oct. 13.]

Italy and Austria—Another War Imminent.

The future of Italy probably depends on the counsels which may prevail with the French Emperor within the next few days. It can now hardly be concealed that the resolve of the Austrian Government to abstain from interference in Italian affairs may at any time be broken down by the angry vindictiveness of Francis Joseph. There has been as yet no overt act of hostility; the Viennese Court still maintains its position of sullen neutrality; but it is understood that the Emperor chafes under the restraint, and may at any time take a resolution which will bring his forces once more into the field against Sardinia. The aggravating coolness of Count Cavour, his outspokeness about Venitia, the last instance of which, as published by us to-day, might almost justify in the eyes of diplomatists a declaration of war, the entrance of the Sardinians into the Papal States, their capture of German soldiers, the taunts of the European press, the discontent of his own army, and their desire to retrieve their laurels, have combined to excite the still youthful monarch until there is no saying what a day may bring forth. The people of the Austrian States, the citizens of Vienna, the Ministry, the leading politicians,—in fact, every one whose opinion is worth having, is in favor of peace; but the Court is no longer master of its own temper, and may commit any folly.

Happily, no step has yet been taken, and prudent counsels may prevail, but it is, at any rate, our duty to call attention to the danger which threatens Europe. Movements of troops are continually taking place in Venitia. According to the last accounts, though we can hardly believe them, an Austrian army 40,000 strong had crossed the Po at Borgo Forte, below Mantau, with no conceivable motive but to be ready for an interference in the newly annexed territory of Sardinia. The Austrian coast has been for some time subjected to military precautions, the lights having been put out, ostensibly in order to prevent any sudden attack from the Sardo Neapolitan fleet. Preparations have been hurried on throughout the empire for another war on the largest scale. The provinces, which are already discontented almost to the point of rebellion, have been still further alienated by a conscription of 85,000 men. With bankruptcy threatening and the Imperial paper sinking in value daily, money has been extorted in vast sums for warlike purposes. The Quadrilateral has been still further strengthened by elaborate works on the newest model.

The public arsenals have been employed without cessation in turning out cannon, rifles, arms, and munitions of war of every kind. The Reichsrath, which a few months ago raised the hopes of sensible men throughout the empire, has concluded its sittings, but no reforms are expected, for the empire resounds with the clang of arms. What does all this portend? Does Francis Joseph increase his army, burden and enrage his people, meet his brother autocrat at Warsaw, and excite the expectations of all partisans of 'order' for nothing? We can scarcely dare to hope that prudent counsels will prevail with this obstinate and infatuated Prince. His whole life has been a reliance on the instincts of his own arbitrary mind, or on the narrow teachings of his mother and her priests. Unhappily, in the present case military pride coincides with the desire of repressing national life in Italy, and repaying the supposed insults of the Italians. It is natural, but unfortunate, that the Austrian army should desire another campaign against the Piedmontese, even if it brought the French Emperor to the Mincio.

Married.

On the 11th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. J. M. Maxwell, H. C. GARNHART, Esq., of White Rock, Ill., and Miss OLIVE M. WINCHELL, of Stillwell Prairie.

Notices, &c.

Eld. L. Boutell is expected to preach at Concord, N. H., in the chapel on the corner of Centre and Green St., on Sunday, Nov. 18th;—and Eld. J. Couch is expected to preach at the same place on the first Sabbath in Dec. T. M. PREBLE.

The Lord permitting, I will preach at Loudon Ridge the first Sabbath in Dec., if it does not conflict with any other appointment. T. M. PREBLE.

Protracted Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a protracted meeting held at the Hollister school-house in Barnston, C. E., commencing Friday, Nov. 16th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and hold as long as thought best. Elder Hiram Munger is expected to attend.

WM. A. CRAMER.

Herald, please copy.

English Bibles.

We would call the attention of our friends to the fine assortment of English Bibles which we have imported, ranging in price from $1.00 to $2.50, exclusive of postage. It is a rare chance for those in want of the precious book, to send for them now to this office, where they can have them in Morocco, Roan or colored calf binding, with marginal or reference between the verses.

A Proposition.

To any one who will send us a new subscriber for one year, we will forward, post paid, a copy of our late discussion with Eld. W. W. Clayton, on the conscious state of the spirit after death, and the destruction of the wicked. And for a new subscriber for six months, we will send a copy of the pamphlets on "Soul" and "Spirit." With a little effort, a thousand names may be added to our list. Let every reader try to aid in scattering the light and truth. Now is the time to work.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Eld. P. B. Morgan will preach in
Boston, (Chapman Hall)........Sunday, Nov. 11th

H. B. Sevey appoints to preach in Augusta, Me..........Nov. 18th

Bro. J. V. Himes will preach at Dansville, N. Y..........Nov. 8th to 11th
Rochester..........Nov. 12th
Buffalo..........Nov. 13th

I expect to be with the friends in Exeter, N. H., Nov. 11th. J. S. WHITE.

Geo. L. Teeple will preach in Wells Forge..........Nov. 9th
Sandisfield, (where Bro. Fenn may appoint,) Nov. 10th and 11th
Bakerville..........Nov. 13th and 14th
Bantam..........Nov. 15th and 16th
Pine Swamp..........Nov. 17th and 18th
Pawlings, N. Y..........Nov. 20th

S. W. Bishop will preach in
Vernon, Vt..........Nov. 18th
Worcester, Mass..........Nov. 25th
Blackstone, Mass..........Nov. 27th
Providence, R. I..........Nov. 28th
Pontiac, R. I..........Nov. 29th
Natick, R. I..........Nov. 30th
Warwick Plain..........Dec 2d
Foster, R. I..........Dec. 4th
East Killingly, Ct..........Dec. 5th
Abington, Ct..........Dec. 6th and 7th
Danielsonville, Ct..........Dec. 9th

M. W. Corliss will preach in Woodstock, N. B., Saturday evening and over the Lord's day..........Nov. 10th and 11th
Jacksontown, N. B., (where Bro. Jarvis Easty may appoint)..........Nov. 14th and 15th
Simonds, N. B., (where Bro. Hiram Raymond may appoint)..........Nov. 17th and 18th
Salmon Brook, Aroostook Co., Me..........Nov. 25th
I purpose to labor in this vicinity as the Lord may direct. My P. O. address will be Presque Isle, Aroostook Co., Me.

The Lord will, I will preach at Scitico the 2d Lord's day in Nov. S. S. BREWER.

C. Goodrich appoints to preach in
Warwick Plain, R. I..........Nov. 18th
Foster..........Nov. 21st
Chestnut Hill, Ct..........Nov. 22d
Abington (in Dr. Huntington's church) Nov. 25th
Plymouth Hollow, Ct..........Dec. 2d

Wm. M. Ingham will preach in
Worcester (Warren Hall)..........Nov. 18th
Truro (Cape Cod)..........Dec. 2d
and stop there and in that vicinity some five to eight weeks.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Scitico..........Sunday, Nov. 11th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Charles S. Stevens will preach in
Ascott, C.E., (where B. Kent may arrange) Nov. 11th
Danville, C. E..........Nov. 18th
Barnston, (where Bro. Clark may arrange) Nov. 25th

I will preach in
Lawrence..........Nov. 11th
Albany, (where Bro. T. White may appoint) Nov. 18th. T. W. PIPER.

B. P. Manning will meet with the friends in Danbury..........Nov. 11th
and hold meetings evenings a few days.

J. T. Ongley will preach as follows:—
Root Settlement, Pa..Sunday, Nov. 11th, 10 A. M.
Post Ridge, Pa.....Sunday, Nov. 11th, 3 1-2 P. M.
Anderson's, (near Edenboro,) Nov. 18th, 10 1-2 A.M.
Center Road, Pa..........Nov. 19th, 20th, and 21st
East Plymouth, Ohio......Nov. 22d, 23d, and 24th
Saybrook..........Sunday, Nov. 25th
Unionville..........Nov. 26th, 27th, and 28th
Ravanna, Ohio, (where Bro. H. Tuttle may appoint)..........Nov. 29th and to Dec. 5th
Girard, Pa., (where Bro. Allen may appoint) Sunday..........Dec. 9th
Edenboro, Pa., (near Bro. Whitaker's)...Dec. 10th

I will preach in
Southbridge, Mass., (where Bro. A. Streeter may appoint..........Nov. 11th
South Windsor, Ct., (Pleasant Valley school-house) Nov. 25th. S. P. BABCOCK.

Bro. J. K. Bellows will preach in
Cheshire St..........Nov. 11th

Providence permitting, I will preach at
East Killingly..........Nov. 11th, 18th and 25th
M. E. PHETTEPLACE.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Plymouth Hollow, Ct..........Nov. 11th
L. S. LUDINGTON.

Business Matters.

To Correspondents.

Miss Mary E. Gobble.—All right.
Samuel Butts.—All right.
Chas. L. Deyo.—Postage stamps are just as good as money.
J. P. Babcock.—All right.
Allen Bunnell.—Money credited and paper sent.
Wm. A. Fenn's P. O. address is North Colebrook, Ct.

Cash Receipts.

Tracts for the West.—G. P. Persons, $1.00.
For B. Spaulding, for tracts, $1.00.
L W Pierce 299, $1.50; G L Corliss 266, 68 cts.; J S Kabcock 290, $19.00; B Benner 297, $3.00.
R E Doty 279, W J Greenleaf 273, W A Hicks 215,—50 cts. each.
J K Billington 278, A P Allen 292, C A Patterson 286, C I Deyo 290, D Vining 292, W Allen 267, J Fields 292, P Dow 256, J Spenser 286, S J Burwell 292, D D Haines 291, M L Nichols 300, M L Rich 276, Mrs. S E Miner 292, C H Thompson 286, J Mott 286, Alf. Reed 292, G H Hartson 281, H Hey 292, G Berry 282, T Cutten 262, J P Blaisdell 224, S Weston 286, Mrs. P Rockwood 292, M Ferren 143, Alb. Chandler 293, A J Dow 293, Jas. Dow 293, J T Huntley 293, S Butt 282, M Brown 292, Al. Cole 298, H Pratt 286,—$1.00 each.
J Livermore 266, W I Pierce 298, E Hodgson 299, N Hodgson 318, C Pratt 318, H Wilson 277, J A Lawton 315, C. Wardell 318, D B Tuttle 318, I C Freeman 286, Mrs. N Farber 312, I Grinnell 330, T J Dudley 182,—$2.00 each.

Books and Tracts.

C Pratt 33 cts, G W Gillespie $1.00, S J Burwell 12 cts, D B Tuttle $1.00, Ed. Brown $1.00, W S Olmsted $2.00, Mrs. J M Dudley 48 cts, H A Walton 30 cts, A F Orcott $1 00, T Wheeler $1.00, L W Pierce 50 cts, R R York 40 cts, H Pratt $3 00.

Books and Tracts.

Law requires all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts, must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce, if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for ANY of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

☞ Bro. ISAAC L. ALLEN, 10 Howard Street, Albany, N. Y., has an assortment of our books and tracts, and will fill orders at the same rates that are charged at this office.

The Light Ship, or how the Sailor found out the truth. By J. F. Cotton. Price—single, 10 cts., postage 1 ct. 12 copies, postpaid, for $1.00.

Rich Man and Lazarus, by J. S. White. This Tract also contains The subject of immortality through Christ only. Price, single, 3 cts.; 25 cts. per dozen; $1.50 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

TRACTS FROM THE TRACT FUND.—Friends at the WEST can get bundles of Tracts for distribution free by sending to N. Branch, Jr., Cordova, Ill. Those wishing them should send a dime or two to pay charges on them, that Bro. B. may not be a looser. He has also books and tracts on hand to sell at Eastern prices. Brn. at the West will please send orders to him with the cash.
H. L. HASTINGS.

Discussion of Spiritualism and Immortality; between J. S. Loveland and Miles Grant, in Boston. First Question: "Is man's immortality taught by the Bible, science, and philosophy, or proved by Spiritualism?" Second: "Is immortality a gift of God dependent upon the character of the receiver?" Price 25 cts. single; 1-4th off by the dozen. Postage 1 cent.

The Christian Lyre. Price, single, 60 cts. Gilt $1.00. Six copies, $3.00. 1-4th off per dozen. Postage, 9 cts.

Discussion of the Doctrine of The State of the Dead and Punishment of the Wicked; between W. W. Clayton and M. Grant. Price 25 cts; postage 3 cts. Bound 40 cts; postage 9 cts. 1-4th off per dozen.

Spiritualism Exposed, in the light of Divine Revelation, with an examination of the position of A. J. Davis and Mr. Dods. By M. D. Wellcome. 10 cts. per copy. Postage 1 ct. 1-3d off per dozen.

The Rich Man and Lazarus; Thief on the Cross, and the Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matt. 10: 28, Gen. 2: 17; with other interesting matter. By Miles Grant. Price, single, 5 cents; $3.00 per hundred; 1-4 off per dozen. Postage 1 cent.

THE SOUL—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psukee as employed in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant, Boston. 32 pp.; 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. They weigh about one ounce each. A valuable tract for the times. Get one.

THE SPIRIT—what is it? or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma as found in the Old and New Testaments. By Miles Grant. 32 pp.; price 5 cts. single, 50 cts. per dozen, $3.00 per hundred; postage 1 cent, or 1-2 cent per oz. when over 8 oz. are taken. A valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

The Doctrine of Everlasting Punishment: a discussion of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the doctrine of the eternal conscious suffering of the wicked?" Between Dr. J. Litch and Eld. Miles Grant. Price, single, 25 cts. Postage 3 cts. 1-4 off per dozen.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation. The meaning of soul, spirit, death and hell, by Miles Grant. Price, single copy 5 cts; $3.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

"The Speechless Guest at the Marriage Feast," by John F. Cotton, being a short review of the parable, with statistical remarks of its illustration in the destruction of Jerusalem; and its positive negation of the doctrine of election and reprobation. Price 5 cts. single, postage 1 ct. $3.00 per hundred.

Bible meaning of the word Hell. Price 2 cts. single; postage 1 ct.; $1 per hundred.

Death not Life: or the Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally Established. By J. Blain, Baptist minister. Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cts. single; postage 3 cts. Bound, 40 cts.; postage 8 cts.

Debt and Grace: or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo. pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. By C. F. Hudson. 168 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. In paper covers, 30 cts.

Human Destiny. A Discussion: Do Reason and the Scriptures teach the utter extinction of an unregenerate portion of human beings, instead of the final salvation of all? By C. F. Hudson and Sylvanus Cobb. 478 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00 post paid.

The Nature of Faith, and the Evils of Sect. By the late W. H. Starr. With a Memoir and Notes by C. F. Hudson. 289 pp. 12mo. Price 50 cts. Postage 16 cts.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From the Epilogue to Essays in Ecclesiastical Biography. By the late Sir James Stephen. With notes by C. F. H. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2 00 per hundred.

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus; does it imply eternal future suffering? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. Price, 3 cts. single. $2.00 per hundred.

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? By C. F. Hudson. 24 pp. 12mo. Price 3 cts. $2.00 per hundred.

The seven treatises last named can be also had of the Publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston; G. W. Young, 138 William Street, New York; Geo. S. Blanchard, Cincinnati; and S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance. Every Bible student should have a copy. Price, postpaid, $1.25.

ANTI-ETERNAL TORMENT. By Edwin Burnham. Price 1 cent, single; 75 cts. per hundred. Postage 1 ct.

The Saint's Inheritance, by Wm. Shepherd. A good tract to give your neighbor. Price $3.00.

Treatise on Matt. 24 and 25. Price, 33 cts. Postage 7 cts. By I. C. Wellcome.

Son of God, by H. Grew. 10 cts. single; postage 1 cent.

Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts.—postage 16 cents.

Church Debts. By W. Ramsey, D. D. A rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cts.; postage 9 cts.

Words of Warning. 3 cents single; postage 1 ct.; $1.50 per hundred.

English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed: or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the Scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

200 Stories for Children, compiled by T. M. Preble. An excellent collection of interesting incidents, well calculated to benefit the reader. Price 40 cents; postage 7 cents.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 3 cts., postage 1 ct.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove the destruction of the wicked. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 2 cents single; $1.00 per hundred. Postage 1 cent.

The Great Error Exposed: or Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. In this tract all texts relied on to prove endless misery are explained, and two hundred for destruction quoted. By Eld. Jacob Blain. Price 3 cents single; $2.00 per hundred Postage 1 cent.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 cent.

The Three Kingdoms: or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

☞ The above tracts and books can be obtained of our agent in Portland, Me., J. S. BROOKS, No. 8 Summer street.

☞ The following books and tracts can be had of J. B. Waite, Warwick, R. I.:—

The Harp, by Elder Himes; 200 Stories for Children; Satanic Delusion; Bible Hell; Great Controversy.

We have also on hand the following

PUBLICATIONS

OF

H. L. HASTINGS,

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Voice of the Church on the reign of Christ on Earth, by D. T. Taylor; edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 420 pp.	$1 00
The Great Controversy between God and Man: its Origin, Progress, and End; by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 167 pp.	60
Reasons for My Hope, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 128 pp. Paper, 30 cts. Cloth	50
Forever with the Lord, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. Preparing.	00
Earth's Destiny, as revealed in Scripture, by H. L. Hastings 12mo. Preparing	00
Tracts on Prophecy, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp.	50
Tracts on Immortality, by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 220 pp.,	50
Fables of Infidelity, and Facts of Faith, by Robert Patterson. 12mo. 220 pp,	75
The Infidel's Fate, by a converted Infidel. Cloth gilt,	25
Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, by Wm Ramsey, D.D., edited with a preface by H. L. Hastings. 12mo. 120 pp. Paper, 25 cts. Cloth,	40
Pauline Theology; The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul, by H. L. Hastings. 84 pp. Paper,	15
The Old Paths; or, The Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life, by H. L. Hastings. Paper, 87 pp.	18
Tracts of 24 Pages.—3 cts single; $1 for 1600 pages—by mail 1200 pp. for $1.

The Church not in Darkness,	by H. L. H.	pages.	24
The Three Worlds,	by H. L. H.	"	24
The Last Days,	by H. L. H.	"	24
Plain Truths,	by H. L. H.	"	23
Will all men be saved?	by H. L. H.	"	24
Voice of Warning	by D. T. Taylor	"	24
The New Heavens and Earth,	"	"	24
Ancient Landmarks, 6 Nos.,		"	24
Olive Leaves, 9 Nos. by	H. L. H. &c.	"	24
Important Questions, 9 Nos.	by H. L. H.	"	36
State of the Dead,	by John Milton	"	24
The Intermediate State,	by H. G.	"	24
Destiny of the Wicked	by H. L. H	"	12
Future Punishment,	by H. G.	"	12
The Key of Truth,	by W. S.	"	12
Man's Future State		"	12
Letter on Dress	by Adoniram Judson	"	12
The Day of Judgment,	by St. Cyril	"	12
Outline of the Coast,	by A Voyager	"	8
The Night Cometh,	by John Adey	"	8
Gems, 9 Nos., poetry,	by H. L. H.	"	12
One Thing	"	"	8
The Coming and Kingdom of Christ,		"	4
The Duration of the Earth	by A. Clarke	"	4
Hope and Duty of the Church,	M. Henry	"	4
The Restitution.	by St. Cyril	"	4
A Warning Voice,	by Cotton Mather	"	4
Loving Christ's Appearing,	by Baxter	"	4
Little Children, Love one another		"	4
The One Resting Place,	by H. Bonar	"	4
My Friend,	by H. L. H.	"	4
Abundant Grace	"	"	4
Wondrous Love	"	"	4
Go in Peace	"	"	4
Living Water	"	"	4
The Banner	Anonymous	"	4
The Blood of Christ	"	"	4
Are you a Christian?	by H. L. H.	"	4
Why not Now?	"	"	4
Are you Pardoned?	"	"	4
Are you Safe?	"	"	4
Are you Saved?	"	"	4
Do you Pray?	"	"	4
When Will He Come?	by J. C. Ryle	"	4
Statement of Account	by H. L. H.	"	1
Man in Death	By Bishop Law	"	4
Forty Questions on Immortality		"	4

SCRIPTURE SEARCHERS.

No. 1. The Destiny of the Wicked	"	1
No. 2. The State of the Dead	"	1
No. 3. The Coming of Jesus	"	1
No. 4. The Resurrection	"	1
No. 5. Plain Truths	"	1
No. 6. The Judgment	"	1

POETRY.

Brother, Shall we Meet?	by H. L. H.	"	2
Sister, Shall we Meet?	"	"	2
Stand up for Jesus!	"	"	1
The Harvest is Past	"	"	1
Beyond!	"	"	1
At Rest!	"	"	1
We would see Jesus	by Josephine	"	1
A Little While	by J. C.	"	1

LEAFLETS FOR LETTERS.

Life Insurance, Envelope Size	H. L. H.	"	12
Home	"	"	12
Lost, Lost	"	"	8
Peace in Christ	"	"	4
Worth Knowing	"	"	4
All things are Yours	"	"	4
Now	"	"	4
Assurance	"	"	4
About God	"	"	4

THE foregoing Books and Pamphlets will be sent by mail, postage paid, upon the receipt of the amount of their respective prices. Orders with the cash are solicited. Persons who send $8, with the dollar, shall receive $12 worth of books at the retail prices. TRACTS are sent by mail, 1200 pages, on the receipt of a dollar. When sent by express, or at the expense of the buyer, 1600 pages will be sent for one dollar. Terms cash. Persons who desire to do good can obtain Four hundred tracts, of four pages each, for $1. These may be widely distributed and open the way for religious conversation. Persons may thus be a blessing to those around them. The poor can have any of these tracts sent to them free, by remitting stamps to pay the postage. Ministers can have specimen copies of the tracts and pamphlets sent free. All letters, orders, and remittances should be addressed to the Publisher,

H. L. HASTINGS, 43 Weybosset St., PROVIDENCE, R. I.

January, 1860.

 These publications can be obtained in Boston of Miles Grant, 167 Hanover st.; New York: G. W. Young, 138 William st.; Philadelphia: A. Porter, 725 Erie st., and they can be ordered of the publisher through all Booksellers.

Bibles of the British and Foreign Bible Society. A [illegible] references between the verses, $1.50 to $2. [illegible] marginal references or references between verses, $1.30 to $2.10. Pearl, references between verses, $1.75. Marginal references, $1.38 [illegible]. Diamond, [illegible] $1. Bindings, Roan, Calf and Morocco; there is but [illegible] difference in prices.

For the Crisis.

Babylon's Fall.

What meaneth that whisper, which comes from afar?
'Tis not like the many,—a harbinger star
Is seen dimly burning amid the dark cloud
Of war, that encircles the east with its shroud;
It echoes the story across the blue wave,
That Rome, old and hoary, is ripe for her grave.

The beast, false and faithless, prepares to o'erthrow
Its rider, the mistress of nations; for lo!
Her crimes have come up in remembrance with God,
And soon, as a millstone is sunk in the flood,
She'll go down; the hosts of her martyred will rise,
With loud hallelujahs ascending the skies.

Blood has flowed freely in oceans and streams,
In the bold sunlight, and moonlight's pale beams;
Rosy-cheek'd youth, with the golden-haired child,
Meek, loving mothers, and infants so mild,—
Old men with silver beard, truthful and brave,
'Neath her bright sword have gone down to the grave.

Piedmont's green vallies are kissing their dust,
And snow-covered mountains are keeping their trust;
Dense wreaths of smoke as they curled on the air,
Bore on their bosom the agonized prayer;
Cold dungeons witnessed the last gentle sigh,
Borne by the angel to record on high.

Soon they'll come forth from the deep coral caves,
Forms of bright beauty will sweep through the waves;
Not a gem will be lost, not a martyr forgot,
All with old Daniel will stand in their lot;—
Then will be echoed from shore unto shore,
Blessing and honor, and praise, evermore;
God hath avenged us, the Harlot hath slain,—
Hallelujah forever to God and the Lamb!

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

For the Crisis.

"The Beast that was, and is not, and yet is."—No. 3.

BY M. D. W.

The Austrian government was, in my humble opinion, the sixth head, and this existed at the termination of the wilderness state—the time when John saw the beast in vision. The next was the French, and in tracing the characteristics so clearly given in prophecy, and applied by Mr. Faber, how can we fail to see their fulfillment in the rise, death and resurrection of the French Emperorship? If this be so, the last head exists that shall sustain the harlot, the last Pope in all probability now sits in the Vatican, and the last great battle is soon to be fought, in which the Lamb shall overcome the beast and the false prophet, and consign them to perdition, while He shall take to himself his great power, and reign King of kings and Lord of lords.

In reviewing this subject more critically than heretofore, we arrive at the following conclusions: The ten toes of the metallic image seen in vision by Nebuchadnezzar, and explained by the prophet Daniel, and the ten horns upon the seven heads of the beast, described by John, are synonymous. When seen by him in vision, which was evidently during the Austrian rule, they had "received no kingdom as yet," but they would in the future have power as kings for the brief space of "one hour with the beast," or seventh head, which we believe to be France. These ten independent governments must stand upon the Roman territory, and we believe them to be the kings spoken of in Daniel, in whose days the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom, which shall subdue all others and stand forever. These kings, united in mind with the beast, will give unto it their power and strength, and all united will make war with the Lamb and his army; and then shall come the time when the heathen shall be ruled with a rod of iron, and dashed in pieces as a potter's vessel. The beast will be slain, and his body given to the burning flame; while the false prophet, or man of sin, who rules over an apostate church, will with the beast share the same lake, at the same time. These anti-christian powers, both civil and ecclesiastical, will be utterly extirpated. Then will be heard a great voice of many people in heaven, saying "Alleluia; salvation and glory, and honor and power unto the Lord our God! Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!"

How can we doubt respecting the speedy realization of the gospel hope? If we look over the signs given by the Savior, we may know assuredly that he is nigh at hand. Whether we trace the opening of the seals, the sounding of the trumpets, the symbolic beasts, or the developments in the moral, social, religious or political world, we find them all revolving around this present important period, assuring us with certainty that the "time of the end," with its wonderful increase of knowledge, and rapid hurrying to and fro, has indeed come.

How astonishing it seems to me, with such an array of clear and convincing testimony as is now afforded by the prophetic word, that the ministry are not all convicted and interested. If the Jewish church was condemned because she knew not the time of her visitation, how much more guilty is the Gentile church at the present day; for the former had not half the evidence respecting Christ's first advent, that the latter has concerning his second coming within this generation. And are those to whom light has been given, doing all they ought to communicate it unto others? Alas! how many who have seen the evidences, and embraced them, instead of living in harmony with these truths, are just as eager for worldly gain; just as earnest in regard to laying up treasure for future years, as though they expected to live to the common age of man, and then die, leaving their wealth unto others; while many who feel in their hearts that woe is unto them if they preach not the gospel of the kingdom, with all its unpopular and unwelcome truths, have not only sacrificed all in order to do this, but are obliged to toil hard six days in the week to support their families, and then, with but little preparation by study, and much weariness of body, on the Sabbath give utterance to the word they feel burning in their hearts.

Is not the faith of the church in regard to this "present truth" altogether too theoretical? If they really believed in their hearts that a few years at the furthest would terminate the day of salvation, would they not think less about living in luxury, and laying up money, and more about giving liberally to support, and keep in constant exercise, those gifts given to some, by which they can teach the people in regard to the doctrines of the Bible? Every minister who is called of God to preach this gospel, ought to be so sustained by the contributions of the church, as to enable him to devote all of his time to the work, for even then they are not sufficient to supply all the places where there are open doors for this last solemn message. God will demand an account of stewardship by and by, that very many, I fear, will not be able to give with acceptance.

Can it be that nought but a belief in a "definite time" will open the heart and the purse for the sustaining of the tried, weary, sad-hearted minister, who, in the midst of opposition and cold heartedness, goes forth to utter the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" Could they but have that assistance from the church which would relieve them of their burden of worldly care, and enable them, without fear of duns, to go forth wholly to engage in their Master's work, visiting from house to house, and preaching evenings and on the Sabbath,—how much more useful would be their labors, how many souls would thereby be led to embrace the truth, and follow Christ, who now are left to perish.

May God baptize the membership anew with the power of this "present truth," so that they may with increased devotion and zeal proclaim it by proxy, when not called to do it personally. Those who sustain the watchman at his post, do as much towards the cause as does he, and shall be as faithfully rewarded. Never was there a more open door and attentive ear to listen to these stirring truths than the present, and the deeply interesting and startling events now transpiring in Europe, viewed in the light of prophecy, afford a firm foundation upon which to stand and proclaim with earnestness and confidence the doom of the Beast and the False Prophet, and the reign of the King of kings. It is time we all awake and hie to our respective posts of duty, lest the Master coming suddenly find us sleeping.

For the Crisis.

The Evening and morning Visions of Daniel.—No. 4.

The fact that geography is connected with prophecy, and that the predictions of Daniel and John, especially, have a definite locality, as well as order of time, may have been generally admitted, but hitherto not with sufficient discrimination; especially is this true in reference to the "evening and morning visions" of Daniel. It is vain to look for the fulfillment of such predictions out of their marked limits; equally vain to seek a satisfactory knowledge of the fulfillment of prophecy without duly marking the place as well as the time of fulfillment.

The question then is, where shall we commence this geographical research, in order to arrive at a correct result? Ancient Babylon may be regarded as the great depot, or starting point; for in its history and typical import is involved not only the immediate question under consideration, but has a bearing, vastly important, upon the destiny of the church and the world in all ages. Here, in Babylonica, embracing Assyria, Chaldea, and nearly or quite all of the eastern nations of that day, commenced the long captivity of the Jews and the ten tribes of Israel. Babylon, that proud city, was the type of all opposing power to the church, both of the old and new dispensation. If Babylon is then our starting point, it is important to trace its history back as far as possible. It is said (Dan. 1: 2) to be situated "in the land of Shinar." Whether this was the same plain "in the land of Shinar" (Gen. 10: 1–9) on which were built the great city and tower of Babel, may not at this distant day be certainly known. The coincidence in name and location render it probable. Historians also suppose, from all the facts in the case, that the tower of Belus in Babylon was the remains of the tower of Babel.

Literal Babylon was situated on the river Euphrates, about four hundred miles north east from Jerusalem. Mystical Babylon, which John described, occupied the territory of the fourth and last beast, in its long duration in the divided or ten-kingdom state, symbolized by the ten toes of the image, and ten horns of the beast. This settles the point of the western geography or territorial limits of the four great empires. The first empire extended as far east as civilization was found, and the fourth empire as far west as the civilization of that day or the present, and perhaps north west. The second and third empires occupied the central portion, or the west part of Asia, and east part of Europe. Of the third empire, especially, was this the fact, as I shall have occasion to notice. The second empire absorbed all the territory of the first, while the "star of empire" was rapidly traveling west.

There is among writers on prophecy hardly a shade of difference as to the territorial limits of the four great empires described in the second and seventh chapters of Daniel. On a subject so well understood by the readers of the "Crisis," I need only to allude. My object will be to illustrate the equally well-defined territory of the "morning" vision, by the strikingly plain contrast. Therefore I will again refer to the closing portion of the second and seventh chapters, and leave the further consideration of the evening vision for the present. That portion of the two chapters referred to requires no comment. The events described are being enacted on the "Roman earth;" while the subsequent portions of the book of Daniel have to do with the grand transaction, both civil and ecclesiastical, in the history of the more eastern empires.

Thus have we several times commenced at a period of near six hundred years before Christ, and, conducted by the spirit of prophecy, have traveled down by a continuous chain of providential events to the end of the "times." And yet we have only traced, in period marks, the general outlines. Should any one pursue the subject, in retracing, the lines will so brighten as to enkindle in his soul the flame of devout adoration, as he beholds, in the detail of past and future events, the preliminary work preparatory to the establishment of the kingdom of Christ on the earth.

In perusing the passages above referred to, let the reader pause a moment, and sympathize with Daniel in his grief of spirit as he seeks to know more of the terrible calamities coming on the nominal christian church through the last and nameless beast. "I saw in the night vision," etc., thirteenth verse. Not so at the close of the "morning vision." That terminates on the destruction of the Mohammedan power. The whole of the eighth last vision, from the chapter onward, we shall find relating to the civil commotion of the two middle empires, and the answer to Daniel's prayer, "What shall befall my people in the latter days?"

D. C.

For the Crisis.

"Blessed are the Dead that die in the Lord."

They are the blest in Christ who sleep,
The tired hands folded on the breast;
Laid down in slumbers soft and deep,
To long, unbroken, dreamless rest.

To them, amid the dying strife,
Bent down the listening ear of God;
He heard; and hides above their life,
While guardian angels watch the sod,—

Till, waked by the last trumpet's peal,
Upspringing from their couch of dust,
Jesus shall all his love reveal,
And crown the faithful ones and just!

MARIA T.

For the Crisis.

The New Birth.

WHEN DOES THE NEW BIRTH TAKE PLACE?

I find, by reading articles from different brethren, that all are not agreed on the answer to the above question. Therefore, permit me to offer a few thoughts derived from scripture; not for controversy, but aiming to get the truth on this all-important subject: I say all-important, because Jesus has said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." And as all have been born into this mortal world, constituted with flesh and blood, and, as Paul says, (1 Cor. 15: 50,) "flesh and blood (connected) cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption;" therefore, some change must take place in mortal man to constitute him an inheritor of an incorruptible, immortal world; and Jesus Christ says that change is to "be born again."

Now to the question. When does the new or second birth take place? A very large portion of professors of religion are ready to answer, "when a man is converted." From this decision I should not take an appeal, were it not that I find another birth necessary for an admittance into the immortal inheritance, or new earth. Paul says, (Col. 1: 15,) "Who (Christ) is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature." This could not mean when he was born of Mary, for then he was born into this mortal world, and all its inhabitants for more than four thousand years were born before he was; but it is explained in verse 18, which reads, "And he is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, (of the immortal family) the first born from the dead." By this, we learn that Jesus Christ had a new birth; he was born again; not converted, for he had no sin; he was born from the dead, and came forth with an immortal body, which is exempt from death; hence, we hear him saying to John on Patmos Isle, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore. Amen." Therefore, as Jesus Christ, who is head of the body, the church, was born of the Spirit from the dead, does it not necessarily follow that the church, or all the redeemed, must thus be born? Hear Paul, (1 Cor. 15: 23,) "Christ the first fruits, (from the dead into an immortal state,) afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." (Rom. 8: 11,) "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." (1 Cor. 15: 14,) "It is sown a natural body, it is raised (or born) a spiritual body." As the natural, or mortal body must be begotten before it is born, so it must be with the spiritual or immortal body. Paul says, (1 Cor. 4: 15,) "For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." (James 1: 18,) "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures." Therefore, we find the work of the Spirit of God and the word of truth operating on the hearts of people is called by the apostles a begetting; and, of course, their birth will be at the resurrection, when this mortal shall put on immortality; but if this work of the Spirit of God and the word of truth converting the soul be called by us the new birth, or being born again, I would ask, when was it begotten? It is evident beyond a doubt, in my mind, that the child of God will be born again at the resurrection of the just. If we admit that it is born when it is converted, it gives three births to the child of God, while we find Scripture to justify the belief of but two—the same as the head of the church has had.

If any should read this article who have not experienced a saving hope, who have not been begotten by the Spirit of the Lord, and by the word of truth, let me entreat you not to live in such a dangerous situation any longer, but repent and believe on the Lord Jesus. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not on the Son shall not see (everlasting) life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."—John 3: 36. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." And we cannot be born again except we be begotten. O, then, let us strive to have the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwelling in us, that it may quicken our mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in us.

JOHN GIBSON.

Stoughtonville, Vt.

Selections.

The Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

MUST HAVE IT?

Certainly you must. How can you, how dare you, live and breathe without it,—without a free and full salvation, the baptism of the Holy Spirit? How can you read, write, pray, testify, open your lips at all, without this special, overflowing grace? How can you rejoice evermore, pray without ceasing as God commands, give thanks always, be careful for nothing, glorify your heavenly Father in every relation of life, without this tongue of fire?

Must have it? Unquestionably, brother, why hesitate a single moment?—you do it at your peril. God commands you to present your body, a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto him, which is your reasonable service; "to be steadfast, immoveable, always abounding, to be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might;"—to be filled with the Spirit. It's your duty, your privilege to obey God, have respect unto all his commandments, especially touching a holy, consecrated life. It is as much your duty to put on the whole armor of God, to be wholly and unreservedly given up to his service, as it is for any sinner to repent, turn from his great wickedness and open rebellion against the Most High. How can you, with any degree of consistency, warn impenitent sinners to turn from their wicked ways, flee the wrath to come, while you are living in open disobedience to a plain and positive precept? "Be ye holy for I am holy." The command to be holy now, to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, is just as plain and positive as the command to repent and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Beloved, it is not optional whether you will, or will not, obey God in this holy, consecrated life; you are solemnly bound to do it, as a matter of positive requisition. The voice is louder than seven thunders from high heaven: "wash you, make you clean." "Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts." "Reckon yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ, our Lord."

Your usefulness, your happiness, your safety, your eternal life pend on this obedience. It is God that speaks, not man. Moreover, there are no lions in the way, no giants, the sons of Anak; the pathway is open, the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein. Touching this baptismal fire, the promises are ample. The Spirit is given to profit with all. The Spirit and the bride say come, and whosoever will, let him come. Brother, sister, will you have it? will you accept this offered mercy—this purchased salvation from all sin? Will you comply with the conditions?—lay all upon the altar, give up all for Christ, bring all the tithes into the store-house, take God at his word! Will you do it? will you do it now? Will you?

"Never be ashamed of Jesus—
'Glory ever in his cross,'
Count it most exalted honor
To advance his blessed cause;
Hallowed honors, untold blessings
Cluster round the Savior's cross!

—Ex.

Mourning Dress.

There are really very serious objections to it. It is often a heavy burden upon the bereaved. Mourning garments are more expensive than others, and when the head of the family is cut off, it is a severe tax upon the diminished resources of the household to add to the expenses of sickness and burial an entire outfit of black for the family. With those to whom the expense is not an important consideration, the confusion and incongruity of turning the house of death into a milliner's shop, and breaking up the hours which should be sacred to solace and grief by talk about dress, is exceedingly unpleasant to the bereaved. Besides, what is the significance of a mourning dress? It is worn to express grief; but is it necessary to parade out grief before the world? And is grief the only feeling of the christian over the grave of the departed? Yet we put nothing upon our garments to signify christian faith, hope, and consolation. It is only a dreary waste of black, expressive of unmixed, hopeless, inconsolable sorrow. For this reason it would seem that if we are to wear any peculiar costume to signify we have been bereaved, unmitigated black is most inappropriate, and fails entirely to express the emotions with which the christian contemplates the death of a friend. Custom requires of a man only the wearing of a "weed" of crape about the hat—why should not some similar emblem of sorrow answer every purpose in the dress of woman? A band of crape, perhaps, across the bonnet—a cloud of black lace resting upon and half-covering the more cheerful colors of the trimming? "Deep mourning," as it is called, does not express the christian view of death." It is, in fact, too dismal and hopeless for any form that has ever been taken by the religious element. It is of evil tendency by continually reminding the mourner of his sorrow, and never suggesting hope or consolation. Why then should it be worn? The heart does not need to aggravate its grief by continual mementos of it, and the truly bereaved never desire to make an ostentatious display of their sorrow; on what account then can the wearing of mourning be justified?—Independent.

Stray Thoughts.

Our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ.—PHIL. 3: 20.

"Our absent King the watchword gave—
'Let every lamp be burning.'
We look afar across the wave,
Our distant home discerning;
For now we stand on Jordan's strand—
Our friends are passing over—
And just before, the shining shore
We almost may discover."

"Heaven." Astronomers say that all the systems of the universe revolve round one common centre, this centre proportionally large—a universe itself. For aught we know this may be the throne of God—the seat of Deity. Here, it may be, the Father of Creation dwells, viewing the works of his hands and establishing laws to govern; around Him a halo of glory stretching away beyond his throne, and bringing back rich anthems of praise. "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the glory, and the majesty, for all in heaven and earth is thine, and thou art exalted above all."

"Our conversation is in heaven"—a place we have never seen. The life of Abraham is a symbol of the life of every believer—a pilgrim wandering in a strange land; not mindful whence he came; having no fixed abode, but evermore seeking and desiring "a better country." As followers of Jesus, we can have but little interest or sympathy in common with the world: it seeks gain, and lust, and pleasure; we seek eternal life and immortality; the end of earthly things is death, but our hopes will eventuate in heavenly bliss. "Our conversation is in heaven," whither "the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus." The Father of Glory hath raised him up and set him at his own right hand. Heaven, then, has its attractions. We love to think that Jesus is there. Gazing in at its open portals, though our eyes grow dim, eternal things possess our minds. The world is overshadowed and dwarfed. "Wild, sweet echoes of unearthly melodies" tell us of a place where sin and sorrow never come; where God and the Lamb diffuse holiness and happiness, and there is light and life and joy.

"From whence, also, we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." He, the great and perfect High Priest, having offered up a sacrifice for sin, ascended triumphantly, and now we gaze earnestly after him and long for his return. The attitude of the church is represented as "looking for Jesus." As often as we surround his table, we do so in faith that he will come again. His dear name comforts us now, and is very precious; his kind words dry our tears and remove our sorrows. We glory in his cross; we are not ashamed of his gospel; but the yearnings of our hearts will not be satisfied until "He come the second time without sin unto salvation."

Dear reader! Is yours the pilgrim life, and do you enjoy its bright and holy anticipations? If so, take courage! By and by, the clouds which now darken your path shall flee away. God shall lift up the light of his countenance upon you. Jesus Christ, "whom the heavens must receive till the times of the restitution of all things," shall come with power. You shall dwell with him, and upon his transcendent loveliness gaze and gaze—forever. "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am that they may behold my glory."—JAS. B.

—Can. Evangelist.

Dialogue.

Baptist.—Good morning, neighbor; I have come over this morning for the purpose of investigating the difference that exists between us on the subject of baptism.

Christian.—I am truly glad to see you, and hope that our conversation may be mutually edifying.

Bap.—In the first place, then, it is necessary to know the extent of the difference before we proceed to a regular discussion of said difference. I propose also that we commence the investigation in the first place by examining the office of baptism.

Chr.—Very well. Then, to come to the point, what is the office of baptism in the Christian system?

Bap.—It is a door into the church.

Chr.—You mean that it is a door into the Baptist church?

Bap.—Oh no! we baptize into the Christian church.

Chr.—What do the Methodists, Calvinists, etc., baptize into?

Bap.—They also baptize into the Christian church.

Chr.—If you all baptize into the Christian church, how then do they get into the Methodist and Baptist churches?

Bap.—Why, sir, when we baptize them they are Baptists. When the Methodists baptize persons they are Methodists, etc.

Chr.—It is a Baptist baptism and Methodist baptism then?

Bap.—I tell you that we all baptize into the Christian church. We are branches of the church. We are christians in each branch, and persons baptized into either branch are baptized into the Christian church.

Chr.—Then suppose we baptize them into the body of Christ, how then will they get into the branches?

Bap.—Well, sir, if they are in the branches they are in the tree.

Chr.—Then the branches constitute the tree, or the Church of Christ; and being one in Christ must bear the same fruit.

Bap.—Precisely.

Chr.—Then the Methodist branch bears Methodists, and the Baptist branch precisely the same kind of fruit?

Bap.—Baptists do not produce Methodists.

Chr.—How then can each branch bear the same kind of fruit? But listen! do you hear a disturbance among the branches? Why, the Baptist branch refuses to partake of the root and fat of the tree (Lord's Supper) with any of the other branches. See, it is literally cutting them off, saying that the Pedobaptist branches are covered with excrescences, (infants) and that it can never be a healthy tree until such diseased limbs are lopped off.

Bap.—You run your figures into extremes. It is not at all necessary that every branch of a tree bear the same kind of fruit.

Chr.—It is your own figure. You represented the tree as bearing the same kind of fruit on each and every branch.

Bap.—Now I will change the figure, and take divine authority for the pattern. A tree may have different branches 'grafted' into it, as the olive tree, described in Rom. 11, and each branch bear different fruit from the others. Wild olive branches were there 'grafted' into the tame olive tree.

Chr.—According to the nature of grafting, if a branch of a pear tree was grafted into an apple tree, that branch would still bear pears. But do you not understand that rule to apply to the tree of Christ?

Bap.—Why not, sir?

Chr.—Did not those wild branches, the Gentiles, bear the fruit consisting of fornication, idolatry, covetousness, and other works of the flesh, before they were 'grafted' into the tame olive tree?

Bap.—Yes, Paul tells us that the Gentiles bore such fruit.

Chr.—Then, according to your illustration, and the nature of grafting, they should bear still the same kind of fruit after they were engrafted into Christ.

Bap.—There you are mistaken again; for the wicked branch grafted into the good tree must partake of the nature of the good tree and bear precisely the same kind of fruit that the good tree bears.

Chr.—Then if all the branches must bear precisely the same kind of fruit the conclusion is irresistible that the Methodist branch must bear Methodists, and the Baptist branch precisely the same kind of fruit.

Bap.—I suppose that we have misapprehended each other and overlooked the fact that fruit in Scripture refers to individual conduct, that individuals bear good or evil fruit, according to the state of their hearts.

Chr.—Suppose we turn then to the good olive tree, in Rom. 11, and see what it refers to and what it was composed of.

Bap.—Well, sir; the root was Abraham and the Jews his fleshly children, the natural branches.

Chr.—And the Gentiles the wild branches who became the branches or children of Abram through faith.

Bap.—And each individual branch must bear now good fruit instead of their former evil fruit.

Chr.—And being partakers of the root and fatness of the good olive tree must bear the same fruit.

Bap.—Exactly. But I wish to hear no more about Methodists bearing Methodists, and Baptists bearing the same fruit.

Chr.—By the way, at what time was the Baptist branch grafted into this tree?

Bap.—Why, sir—why, sir, the Baptist is the true church all the way down from Christ; it is the good tree itself.

Chr.—What, are the other orthodox churches branches of them? Recollect that you said they were branches of the true church.

Bap.—Very well, sir.

Chr.—Then, if the Baptist is the true Church, they are branches of the Baptist church. If so, the Baptist tree bears Methodists, Presbyterians, etc., including all of their varieties, together with a great many species of Baptists.

Bap.—There never was a Pedobaptist church a branch of the Baptist church, sir.

Chr.—If they are branches of the true Church, and yet not branches of the Baptist church, how then can the Baptist be the true church?

Bap.—Why, sir, we are compelled to treat those sects with courtesy. But to come right to the point they are only the branches or descendants of the mother of abomination, the Roman church.

Chr.—Then, not being branches, they are not part of the Christian Church, are they?

Bap.—Well, sir, I dislike to say, but they are not, really.

Chr. Their baptism then is not christian, but sectarian?

Bap.—Exactly; their baptism or sprinkling is only a door to sectarianism.

Chr.—To be consistent they should baptize into the names of those whom they call themselves after.

Bap.—It really seems so. As Paul says when the Corinthians called themselves after him, 'Were you baptized in the name of Paul?'

Chr.—Wesley, Calvin, Arminius, and Luther, should have been crucified for them also, should they not?

Bap.—Why, yes, they should have worn their names a little more scripturally, for Paul says to those who say, I am of Paul, and I of Apollos: 'Was Paul crucified for you?'

Chr.—Then it is necessary, according to Scripture, that those whom we call ourselves after should have been crucified for us, and we also baptized in their names. Tell me then if John the Baptist was crucified for you, and you baptized in his name?—Christian Union.

Reading for Youth.

The Yellow Flowers.

"Do you see that field back of the house, how it is quite covered by the little yellow flowers?" asked a mother of her child. "Yes, mamma; I think them very pretty." "So they are, but very destructive. They will soon drive out the grass and all other roots from the plot where they gain entrance; and as they are worthless, they are very much dreaded by farmers."

I well remember the first time one found its way into our beautiful mowing. I was a little girl, not so old as you, when I went to pay a visit to a young friend in a remote part of the town. Near her house some of these flowers were blooming. We both thought them very pretty, and I took pains to dig up a root and bring it home, carefully setting it out in our back yard. I watered it and watched it, and was rejoiced when I found it had taken root and was sending forth new shoots and buds.

The next year innumerable roots were seen springing up in the yard and the lot adjoining. My father expressed great annoyance, and wondered how they could have found their way there. I tried to dig them up with my little garden spade; but their small wiry roots had struck deep into the soil till there was no hope of exterminating them; and they had sent forth on the winds millions of seeds to sow themselves anew in the adjoining grounds. How deeply I grieved over my foolish act; how vainly I wished I had never brought home the noxious root. But regrets and wishes would not undo what I had done. One lesson I learned: that the outward appearance may be fair, where there dwells an evil nature, and that nothing is to be trusted merely because it is beautiful.

I never see that yellow blossom now without thinking how like it is to an evil habit, which comes quietly into the soul with an attractive aspect, and nestles and grows there till it is entwined with all that is fairest and best, polluting and poisoning all it touches; and when we seek to exterminate it, we find we cannot do it without uprooting what we would fain preserve, and causing the soul to bleed at every pore. Oh, do not, my child, bring into your soul any little root of pride, or indolence, or falsehood; so surely as it finds a resting-place there, it will grow and spread, sending forth continually new shoots, which will multiply themselves, and vain will be your efforts to expel it. Nothing but the grace of God and years of conflict carried on with ceaseless vigor, will exterminate from the soul an evil habit.—Child's paper.

Looking Up.

There is a modest little flower,
The Daisy is its common name;
It grows within no lordly bower,
Nor can it boast of worldly fame;

But though it is of simplest kind,
It gives a lesson to the mind;
It ever lifts its head on high,
And gazes upwards to the sky:

Thus teaching us, however low
Our station in this world below,
Always to fix our gaze above,
And never doubt our Father's love:

And though perchance we have to sup
Freely of Sorrow's bitter cup,
Ever to be like this sweet flower,
Which, after each tempestuous shower
Raises its head as it revives,
And ever, ever, till it dies,
Is "Looking Up."

An Intelligent Elephant.

Tell my grand-children, said the late Right Rev. Daniel Wilson, writing home from India, that an elephant here had a disease in his eyes. For three days he had been completely blind. His owner, an engineer officer, asked my dear Dr. Webb if he could do anything to relieve the poor animal. The doctor said he would use nitrate of silver, which was a remedy commonly applied to similar diseases in the human eye. The huge animal was ordered to lie down, and at first, on the application of the remedy, raised a most extraordinary roar at the acute pain which it occasioned. The effect, however, was wonderful. The eye was, in a measure, restored, and the animal could partially see. The next day, when he was brought, and heard the doctor's voice, he laid down of himself, placed his enormous head on one side, curled up his trunk, drew in his breath just like a man about to endure an operation, gave a sigh of relief when it was over, and then, by trunk and gesture, evidently wished to express his gratitude. What sagacity! What a lesson to us of patience!—Independent.

☞ Give a child a chance to love, to play, to exercise his imagination and affections, and he will be happy.

THE CRISIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION,

Payable in Advance.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address, 6 months	15.00
Thirty copies to one address, 6 months	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for three months for 50 cents, which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of brethren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability, when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send as much in addition to their subscriptions as they are willing to give for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

Rules for Correspondents.

Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all communications for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to ELD. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

☞ Canada Subscribers have to PRE-PAY the postage on their papers, 26 cents a year, in addition to the above; i. e., $1 will pay for twenty-three numbers, or $2.26 a year. The same to all the Provinces.

The World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 269. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1860. VOL. XII. NO. 10.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING
AT
No. 167 Hanover Street, Boston.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

MILES GRANT, Editor.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially, the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For Terms, see Fourth Page.

Original Contributions.

For the Crisis.

The Christian's Work.

Thine is an earnest work; 'tis not alone
Thy isolated self, more precious far than gold,
To save; all that can claim a transient home
In this probationary, trial world,
As far as sin has blighted, though it be
The most degraded, there is work for thee.

Thine is a noble work, christian, to seek
Truth from the labyrinths of error, and expose
The baseless fabric; e'en before the feet
Of the unwary, be they friends or foes,
So far may stray, so far from truth shall flee,
Their steps cannot retrace; there's work for thee.

Thine is a patient work, to persevere
When all thy efforts seem but worthless, fruitless deeds,
To mock thee; not a leaf or bud to cheer
Thy weary labor, while the poisonous weeds
Grow strong and green, and thou no fruit can see
Of all thy toil; there's patient work for thee.

Thine is a loving work, christian; thy heart
Pities the wanderer; while the lingering light of life
Beams on his pathway, ere the dark
Night of death o'ertake him, and the strife
Be ended, thou with joy wilt bid him flee
To the bright goal; there's loving work for thee.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

"The Death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ."

A LECTURE BY WM. GLEN MONCRIEFF, LONDON, C. W.

Being a reply to the Westminster Review, No. 135, Article 5.

Delivered before the Young Men's Christian Instruction Society of London, March, 1860.

(Continued.)

So far from Pilate being anxious to have Jesus quickly taken down from the cross, the history informs us that it was the friends of the Nazarene who took the first step for his removal, and that Pilate would not deliver up the body till he was assured that life was extinct. "Pilate marveled if he were already dead," when Joseph craved the body, "and calling the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while (literally, long ago) dead: And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph." Pilate eager for his removal from the accursed tree! No; the Savior might apparently have been left on the cross for a month ere the Deputy would have troubled himself about the matter. He had no doubt his officers would perform their duty, and he took his ease. It is true the Arimathean was a friend, and the Reviewer may hint that even he was filling up his part in the drama: but the whole narration debars a theory so groundless and unprincipled.

Another fact we must not overlook is, that the kind hands which received the body of Jesus for entombment, treated it as dead. They prepared sweet spices to embalm the precious remains, not cordials to reanimate exhausted nature. He was buried after the Jewish custom; a napkin bound his head, and folds of delicate linen were gathered around his entire person: so attired the victim of priestly intolerance and barbarity was laid to rest in the spacious tomb of Joseph, and a huge stone was rolled against the mouth of the sepulchre.

The Reviewer has a fertile imagination; even in the sepulchre its productiveness is not checked. He says "his," that is our Lord's, "body was given over to the friendly hand of Joseph of Arimathea, who laid him in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock"; that is to say, in a rocky vault, where a wounded man might receive surgical treatment and cordials! It is no obstacle to this antagonist that the tomb was not a very sanatary abode for a patient, grievously wounded as even he must admit Jesus was; that wrapped in a winding sheet, the breathing process would not be very comfortably sustained; and with an immense stone at the door of the excavation, it would be hard to find admittance. But these are trifles in his conquering path; and we are only the more stupid in supposing them to be insuperable barriers. The Reviewer omitted this addition, that though the tomb was shut up by a granite block, there was a subterranean passage, prepared for the emergency, from the Deputy's mansion to the sepulchre; and his wife, who had bothered him with her dreams, and the "medicine man" hastened thither along the gloomy tunnel with every appliance, couches, plasters, wine and royal dainties, for the restoration of the sufferer!

The production we are examining does not advert to the fact, that if the body of Jesus when taken down from the cross was intrusted to his friends, his implacable enemies did not consider their last services performed when the earth had been stained by his blood. Our author has a singular felicity in supplying the omissions of the ancient historians, and in ignoring what they have transmitted when their sentences have a manifest tendency to confirm the verities of Christianity. The Redeemer, we must keep in mind, had not merely predicted his death, but also his resurrection on the third day thereafter: his enemies had no objection to the first part of the oracle being fulfilled: but they were determined to hinder any report being circulated that the second had been accomplished. Here is the chronicle of their proceedings:—"Now the next day, that followed the day of the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together to Pilate, saying, Sir, we remember that this deceiver said, while he was yet alive, after three days I will rise again. Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, he is risen from the dead; so the last error shall be worse than the first. Pilate said unto them, ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can, So they went and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone and setting a watch."

Now there are two things we may be satisfied of; 1st. That they would certify themselves that the corpse of Jesus was within the vault; and 2d. That there was no entrance to the tomb except by the door which they protected by the public seal. They would attend to these matters, because they were not imbeciles; and their perception was whetted by enmity and fear. After considering these incidents, the theory that Pilate was in concert with the adherents of Jesus for the recovery of their Master merely from wounds and physical prostration, becomes eminently absurd. The Reviewer makes the Deputy so stupid that were he to revisit "the glimpses of the moon," he would deem the Westminster article a compliment to his heart at the expense of his head.

There is one thing which the Reviewer, in his anxiety to make a case, has entirely overlooked, and it is this: that even in restoring Jesus, the Roman Governor was carrying out a design perilous in the extreme. He had sent him to the cross at the demand of the anointed officials in the temple, and the vulgar populace, who sympathized with them in their exterminating measures. They threatened his position if he refused to yield their demand, and for the sake of power and popularity, he violated the little conscience that he owned. And now, who may not calculate that the Governor's secret policy,—a mixture of piety and deception,—was more likely to entail ruin on his house? The danger was too palpable for him to despise, were he even as senseless as the Reviewer imagines. Let us observe where it lay.

In the first place, this thing he must have known, that Jesus was absolutely uncompromising in his character, and had never been disinclined to expose injustice and oppression. What if on his restoration by the cordials and surgical appliances, the crucified should appear in the streets and denounce the pusilanimous Deputy, who to appease an infuriated rabble had doomed him to scourging, to agony, and death?

Or second, supposing that Jesus should never openly condemn the Governor, what if at any time he were seen alive! What would the elders, and the chief priests, and the Pharisees think of such a discovery? A tiger when the prey is torn from his jaws would be a fitting emblem. How they would rage at the deception palmed on them! how they would brand him as a traitor to his trust! how they would represent him at Rome as a perjured shuffler, in whom no confidence could be placed! Every official act performed by the Deputy had to be reported to Cæsar, and what if he should detail the crucifixion of one Jesus, the Nazarene, and thereafter proof be furnished by the Jews that he had audaciously thwarted the course of justice. There was a third danger, even supposing that our Lord should never be seen, and never be heard; too many were engaged in the plot to guarantee safety. All these were doubtless among the initiated:—Pilate's wife, and the surgical attendant; some of the friends of Jesus, the centurion, and the executioners. The probabilities that the confederacy would be shielded with inviolate care were exceedingly few; and to suppose that a high official would run a fatal risk for such a trifling gain is an outrage on common sense and ordinary prudence. "What," slightly to use the language of a poet:—

"What was the Christ to him, or he to the Christ,
That he should weep for him?"—

The game of mercy was too expensive for the Deputy to play: he was not the man to excavate a pit for his own destruction.

We are justified in winding up this department of our Lecture by saying, that the correct statement of the argument for the death of Jesus is this:—His friends, on the spot, were satisfied that it was real; the soldiers were satisfied, his enemies were satisfied, and Pilate was satisfied; but a Reviewer almost nineteen centuries after it occurred, happens not to be satisfied. We have, from the pens of contemporary historians, a record of what the various parties we have just catalogued beheld: the author of the article in question favors us with his dreams;—the majority of readers will have no difficulty in making a choice betwixt the two. Those who are hostile to Christianity, and those who have no objection to that system of religion, if only Jesus be excluded from it, will side with the Reviewer, and believe in absurdities because the truth is unpalatable.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

My Journal.

Tuesday, July 31. Visited the friends in Brooklyn, N. Y. In the evening I spoke at the house of Mr. Dannatt. Had a few of the faithful out to hear, and a season of interest. I defended the year-day theory, and the position of 1867–8. At the close I was introduced to a Moravian minister, who told me he was much interested in the subject of Christ's coming, and believed it to be near at hand, but did not believe in the year-day theory. Yet he was free to say, that, much as he had examined the subject before, he had received some light from my discourse, and should look into the subject again, with a view to further light. He has already spoken out on the subject to his people, and will continue to do so. What the result will be, I know not. I only know the fate of others, who, though very popular and distinguished as pastors and preachers, in some of our large cities, have been warned by the executive power of their flocks that they must desist from the advocacy of the speedy, premillennial and personal advent of Christ. In this way, some of the most earnest men are put to silence. But the time hastens when bold and true men will not be subjected to the gag. We shall have revolution and reformation, and the truth will yet be proclaimed. For we are under the administration of the angel flying through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, the hour of his judgment is come. Shall the angel's voice be hushed by an unbelieving ministry or membership? Never.

But while at present many believers in the popular and influential branches of the church are restrained or prohibited from proclaiming the truth, God has a noble company, of both ministers and laymen, who will be outspoken on this subject—men who will not be silenced. They fought a battle for God and truth in 1840-'44, and achieved a glorious victory. A writer of that time gives the following as the results of that conflict:

WHAT ADVENTISM HAS ACCOMPLISHED.

1. When this cry first commenced, the prophecies were generally looked upon as a book of mysteries, which it was presumption, if not sacrilege, to attempt to understand or explain. That spell has been broken, and the christian public understand that those deeply interesting portions of the word of God are also a part of his revelation to man. And even the clergy, of all orders, have been constrained to speak out and give some explanation of the prophecies, however crude it might be.

2. The fable of the world's conversion, and the universal triumph of christianity, which almost universally prevailed ten years ago, has been exploded, and the church now understands that the man of sin is to remain in the world until the Lord comes and destroys him by the brightness of his coming. That there is to be no millennium until "the first resurrection," at the coming of the Lord. That idea cannot be made to grow again as it has done.

3. That kindred doctrine, the return of the Jews to Palestine, where they are again to be exalted to peculiar privileges, is exposed, and the old apostolic doctrine, that there is no respect of persons with God, is made to stand out in bold relief, so that the church must see and acknowledge it to be the truth of God.

4. It has produced a very general conviction on the public mind that we are near the end of time, and just ready to appear before the bar of God. The general outlines of prophecy, as exhibited in the four great kingdoms, is seen and acknowledged by very many to be nearly accomplished. And hence the conviction fastens on the mind that the end of all things is at hand.

5. It has developed a vast amount of German rationalism, neology and infidelity in the church, and has demonstrated the fact that nearly, or quite all, our theological schools are under its influence. And it has proved, that if the Lord does not come speedily and end the strife, that the country must soon be flooded with this system of neology.

6. Wherever it has gone, the Advent doctrine has awakened sinners, reclaimed backsliders, quickened believers, and promoted the cause of God generally. Thousands on thousands can witness the truth of this remark in their own experience, and will have cause to bless God eternally for the Advent doctrine and Advent preaching.

7. It has shown professedly orthodox ministers to be so degenerate in their sentiments as to make common cause with infidels and Universalists against the coming of the Lord. And has also shown the church to be so degenerate as to cast out her children for looking for, and speaking of the return of her Lord.

8. It has given to the church and world a simple, plain, common-sense system of interpretation of the sacred canon, so that every man who will take the trouble of reading the Bible, and collating the different portions of it, may understand the word of God without the aid of learned commentaries.—Adv. Shield, pp. 89, 90.

Although Adventists did not realize their hope at that time, their mission and work did not end in their disappointment. Their work was begun, and well begun, and is to be prosecuted to the end. God will have a ministry and membership who will carry on this specific work. And now, with a position clearer and stronger by the fresh light that has been given, Adventists should prosecute their work with more zeal and self-sacrifice than ever. Till Jesus comes, the work of Adventists is a plain one: they are to go through the land and proclaim everywhere, "Behold! the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

There is one voice in the old world,—loud, clear, distinct and commanding,—that will not be silenced. I refer to the celebrated Dr. Cumming. His teachings on this great theme undoubtedly exercise a more potent and extensive influence upon the minds of men than any other living divines. He is one of God's special messengers to give the cry, "Behold, he cometh," in this last hour of the Gentile dispensation. He is a man of the people,—the eagerness with which the hungry multitudes devour his productions showing that he is a good servant, giving meat in due season. He is just getting out a new work, which will be republished in this country in a few months, entitled, Redemption draweth Nigh, to which will be added two sermons recently preached by him in Paris, on the Future of Europe and the Future of England. This may be the work referred to in his preface to the Great Tribulation, which he called a photographic sketch of the millennial state; to which he added a sort of prediction as to the manner in which the former work would be treated. He says:—

"I need not add that, like all my previous volumes on prophecy, this will receive plenty of that style of secular criticism which consists in scoffs, ridicule and caricature. The world cannot endure the truths of prophecy. Its argument is, 'All things continue as they were. Do not disturb our comforts, our gains and industry.' On such, the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night."

I think, with the magnanimous editor of the Due West (S. C.) Telescope, that "it is well there is found at least one sentinel on the watch-tower who slumbers not, nor sleeps; who stands always with open eyes, and with becoming fearlessness is ever ready to give the alarm." I shall give this new work of Dr. C. as wide a circulation as in my power to do. It is true I do not agree with all Dr. C.'s views, and this is not necessary. If I did not work with any till I should agree with them in all things, I might never do anything. And as Dr. Cumming is a man of the people, the people will, as they have done, understand him without any difficulty. And the millions of his readers, enlightened by his expositions and blessed by their deep unction, will continue to read his works, despite of indifference on the part of some, and opposition by others; and their circulation, already so extensive, will increase and widen to the ends of the earth. God speed this earnest, faithful and noble advocate of the doctrine of the advent! I thank God, from my very heart of hearts, for raising up such a man for this great work.

Wednesday, Aug. 1. I called upon a number of friends in New York, and found them generally in good cheer, and looking for speedy redemption. But they live in the great Babylon of America, mid the whirl of business and pleasure, and are, as a church and people, pressed down by outward circumstances. They are still holding on, in the hope of obtaining an available pastor to build them up. May God remember them, and gather his people once more in that great city, and enable them to speak out effectually, as in former time, for God and truth.

Sabbath, Aug. 19, was the anniversary of my thirtieth year of pastoral labor in the city of Boston. I delivered a commemorative discourse on that occasion to a large assembly of my old friends and parishioners. As the discourse will be published, I will not here go into any details. The sketch I gave of my position and labors may be of some interest to old friends, who requested its publication.

I pray for grace to finish my ministry with honor to God and good to mankind.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

For the Crisis.

Thy Will be Done.

Pilgrim to Mount Zion! say,
Why thus faltering by the way?
Is thine heart with sorrow rife?
Art thou weary of thy life?
'Mid the darkness and the gloom,
Does dejection often come?

Pilgrim stranger, pause and say,
Hath the rude blast torn away
All to which thy heart did cling?
Is there left not one loved thing?
And with wretchedness and woe,
Is thy head still bending low?

Answer, sorrow-stricken one,
Faltering ere thy work is done;
Is it right beneath thy load
Thus to sink while on the road,
Loving oft thy griefs to tell,—
Say, thou pilgrim, is it well?

Here is not thy promised rest,
It remains yet for the blest;
Patiently the race still run,
Until all thy work is done;
While it is thy Master's will,
Labor on, and labor still.

And whatever meets thy view,
Endeavor with thy might to do;
Never sinking with despair
In the midst of toil and care,
But until the victory's won,
Ever pray, "Thy will be done!"

M. D. W.

For the Crisis.

The Regeneration.

This doctrine is also like that of the new birth, considered by the modern church as being of an experimental character, and as applying to believers in the present state. The term regeneration, although it signifies to generate anew, to reproduce, or to be born again; yet it comprehends more; it includes the restitution of the earth itself; while the doctrine of the new birth is exclusively confined to the inhabitants of the regenerated earth.

The term regeneration is used but in two instances in the Scriptures. The first passage reads as follows:—"Behold," says the apostle, "we have forsaken all and followed thee, what shall we have therefore? And Jesus answered and said unto them, verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, ("renovation," Emphatic Diaglott) when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or fathers, or mothers, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life."—Matt. 19:27—29. It is evident, therefore, the regeneration in this passage is fixed chronologically by the events which it brings to view, included in such a state. The first of these which I shall notice, is that in it (the regeneration) the Son of Man sits upon the throne of his glory. Now if it be proved from other passages of Scripture that the Lord Jesus Christ does not, in this state of the world, thus sit upon the throne of his glory, then it follows that the regeneration is not yet in existence. As proof of this position, I offer the following testimony. Says Jesus, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."—Rev. 3:21. Hence the position is established, if there were no other evidence; but I am not put to that extremity. The fact being in this case, like all others, that when we strike a truth, it opens up an entire vein, like touching one chord of a well strung instrument, the others all vibrate in unison, and we find ourselves, as it were, immediately surrounded, as in a spacious gallery, by the divine penmen, all anxious to give testimony in confirmation of that truth.

But again. Jesus is represented as being the root and offspring of David, the bright and the morning star. The throne upon which David, the type of Christ, sat as king of Israel, was to be destroyed until a certain period. It was represented thus: God says, "Remove the diadem, and take off the crown, ... overturn, overturn, overturn, and it shall no more be, until he whose right it is shall come, and I will give it to him."—Ezek. 21:26, 27. In relation to this, God says, I will "give unto him, [Jesus] the throne of his father David;" but this is not yet fulfilled, because the throne of David still lies in ruins, under the curse, for Jerusalem was to "be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled," or the Gentile dispensation finished. It shall be overturned by all the nations of the world, from the time the crown was taken off, and the diadem removed, which took place in the days of Zedekiah, the last king of Israel, "and shall no more be," until Jesus, the king of the whole earth, shall vacate his Father's throne, come forth, and establish his own throne on the empire of the world, and this is to be in the regeneration.

But again. The twelve apostles were to sit upon twelve thrones, at the head of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel. The following passage shows that the twelve apostles were also chosen in commemoration of the twelve sons of Jacob; occupying as distinguished a position in the gospel dispensation, as those heads of the twelve tribes did in the Jewish theocracy; they are, therefore, represented as having their names, [the names of the twelve tribes,] inscribed on the gates of the new Jerusalem city, located in the new heaven and earth; and upon the twelve foundations of that golden city were also written the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb, and those who are said to have been redeemed from among men, and not from the grave; and who are evidently the same company Paul represents as being alive on the earth, among men, and not among the dead, and who shall not sleep, but which shall be changed from the life that now is into life eternal, at the last trump. This company are, therefore, the particular antitype of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel, which numbered one hundred, forty and four thousand, twelve thousand redeemed from each tribe; and as the apostles themselves were included in the promise, who were to "sit upon the twelve thrones," judging this company, "the twelve tribes of the children of Israel;" and as this was to be in the regeneration, it necessarily follows that that state must yet be in the future; hence the regeneration is yet to be developed.

Now if there are only two passages in the Bible where this term is used, and one of them, as we have seen, fixes the existence of the regeneration in the world to come, then the rule is, that no inference should be deduced from the one, which only admits of inferential proof, which would contradict that truth already established by the positive text. There are other points included in the passages I have here introduced to prove this to be the proper idea of the regeneration, such as those who, in this world, had forsaken all for the cause of Christ, should then in the regeneration have life eternal, which is not to be conferred until the resurrection of life; and hence, that state cannot exist until eternal life is obtained. But the other text to which I referred is this,—"Not by works of righteousness, which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the working of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us richly, through Jesus Christ our Lord, that being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life."—Tit. 3:5—7. Now nothing can be more clear than that this whole passage also looks to the future for its fulfillment. According to God's plan, the saints are now, as we have seen, made heirs of salvation and eternal life, and hence they now hope for that life and salvation. They are hence said to be saved by grace; that is, they set up no legal claim to the forfeited inheritance, or life; but that they now only expect to be saved by the mere mercy of God, conferring salvation upon them as a free gift through Jesus Christ; and therefore all, who now comply with the offer upon which it is suspended, are considered joint heirs with Christ to the inheritance of the world; and hence they are saved by the washing of regeneration, or renewing of the Holy Ghost, which salvation Peter, says, comes at the end of faith, and the hope also reaches into the resurrection for its reward. This renewing of the Holy Ghost is, therefore, the regenerating or resurrection process, brought to view thus:—"If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you," and hence renewing them again to life; for by his Spirit he is to "change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."

But the term regeneration itself implies a radical change of things, which had once been generated, and hence it opens a vast field of work to be accomplished. All the life of the present world is the result of natural generation. God created the causes, at the commencement of its history, and those causes, or laws, produce all the present productions of living vegetables, animals and men. These are all the work of natural generation. But the seed of decay and death is transfused through the life of the world, resulting from the introduction of evil into her works; therefore Jehovah proposes a regeneration,—all things are to be made new, or regenerated. At present nature's generation of fruits and vegetables are yielded but grudgingly, and even that not without the [illegible] demand of toil and labor beforehand, from the husbandman; and even then they are found suffused with thistles, thorns and briars, or choked with weeds; but the regeneration proposes spontaneous production of vegetables, fruits and flowers, as perfect as her Paradisiacal yield; and not only so, but the whole earth itself is sick, and groans under her elementary derangements, and in her convulsive agonies follows the sad train of pitiless storms, sweeping tornadoes, roaring hurricanes, and the thundering earthquake's frightful shocks;—these are the generation of the primal curse; but the regeneration proposes their utter extermination. In the revelator's description of the new earth, it is said, "And there shall be no more curse."

But again. The present generation of the lower animals have inherited from the corrupt seed a wild and ravenous nature, and by their vast multitude, and scanty production of vegetables and the fruits of the earth, they are compelled to devour each other for food, in order to sustain their own existence; but the remedy for this evil is also found in the great regeneration, when a race of animals precisely like those which first came forth from the Omnific hand for the use of man, are also to be re-created, for all things are to be made new. We have repeated descriptions of their existence in the new creation, where they will be harmless, their ravenous dispositions will have passed away as an item of the curse. One of these descriptions is the following, —"But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked; and righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf, and the young lion, and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox," (this was the food which God provided for those animals at the creation) "and the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain (or earth); for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

We see that the idea of this regeneration does not include all the generations of vegetables, animals and men that have lived in all time, but the race which were created at the foundation of the world; and hence those men who are to share in the regeneration are to possess a faithful character, obtained by complying with the requisition their Maker has imposed upon them. Notwithstanding they have fallen in the ruins of the grave to sleep until the morning of the resurrection, they shall come up in the regeneration. Nothing short of the consummation of these magnificent events can, with the least propriety, be denominated the regeneration.

SAMUEL MASON.

Northfield, Ct.

ROME.—"In the pantheon at Rome, converted into a church now, there are pictures in painting of all the gods." Rome's soil is supposed to be hallowed by the blood of many bishops, of thousands of martyrs, of the apostles Peter and Paul, on account of which pilgrims visit it two hundred thousand at a time; also to see its relics and wonders. Great indulgences are connected with the seven different churches and various stations. The Lateran church is said to have power to grant as many days of indulgence as drops of rain can fall in three days and three nights. Each chapel, altar and relic of the Lateran church has its particular number of indulgences. Here, too, are instructions how to deliver souls from purgatory by Pater, Vesters and Ave Maria's.

WORDS IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.—The number of words defined in Webster's Dictionary is 99,000, exclusive of six or seven thousand which have recently come into use, and about 86,000 geographical, scripture, and proper names, making an aggregate of over 140,000 words. In Worcester's Dictionary there are 100,000 words defined, and 28,000 geographical, scripture, and proper names, making a total of about 132,900 words.

HAPPINESS.—Our life, it is true, has its bright and its dark hours, yet [illegible] wholly obscured, for when the sun of happiness is set, the reflected [illegible] of hope and memory are still around us.

☞ Slight [illegible] insight into the [illegible] character.

For the Crisis.

Evening and Morning.

The evening of sadness of which I am about to speak, is one of the past; and yet it is of the present. The events of the one, transpired over eighteen centuries ago. The events of the other, are transpiring every day and have been since the fall of our first parents in the garden of Eden. Let us look at the one of the past. I love to meditate upon the events of that evening. Go with me to the city of old Jerusalem. There in an upper chamber of one of those Jewish houses gathered around a table is a company of thirteen persons. One of them sits at the head of the table; he is their Lord, Master and Leader. They are gathered there for the purpose of eating the passover, which was a custom among the Jews. As they were eating, and talking of what was passing around them, the Master hinted to them that one of them should betray him. It was then that the sadness commenced. Three years they had been with him and he had said nothing hitherto which had made them so sorrowful. They were sad that one of them should betray their Master; and the inquiry was, "Is it I? is it I? He answering them in turn said, "He that dippeth with me in the dish, the same shall betray me." He pronounced a woe upon the one that should betray him. This made them sadder still.

Let us follow the disciples with their Master from the house to a garden where the Master was wont to resort. A little apart from three, whom he had taken from the rest, we find him stretched upon the ground. The moon shines forth from between the clouds of heaven, and throws her silvery light upon that form whose soul was sorrowful, even unto death. And oh! what agony was there. But hark! a sound proceeds from the beloved one: it is his voice in prayer: "O my Father! if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." After praying the third time he came again to his disciples, telling them to arise and be going, for "he is at hand that doth betray me." Immediately he that betrayed him came, and "with him came a great multitude of people with staves and swords." After he (Judas) had betrayed him they took hold of him, and led him away to the high priest. And it was here that the chief priests and elders, and all of the counsel, tried to find false witness against him to put him to death. But their witnesses agreed not together. And when the morning came they bound him and led him away to Pilate the governor, and there he was condemned to be crucified. Before the evening of sadness closed, they spit upon him, mocked and reviled him, smote him, and put a crown of thorns upon his head. He suffered all without murmuring. And when he was dead, he was taken down by one of his friends and laid in a tomb. This finishes the events of the evening of sadness, of eighteen hundred and twenty-seven years ago.

Let us now look at an evening of sadness which is of the present. We will take for an example a family of eight persons, a father, mother, and six children, the eldest a daughter of sixteen summers. They look upon these jewels which God has given them with delight; but this one seems to be the idol of their heart. They have cherished bright plans for her in the future. But all at once the pale messenger stalks into the family, a disease seizes upon the mortal frame of the eldest, and she is taken away. Another and another are taken till there are but one or two left them. They are left to mourn, but not as those who have no hope; for the dear ones have all died in hope of a better resurrection out from among the dead, and the parents are consoled by thinking that the morning of joy will soon come and restore to them what they have lost by the evening of sadness.

We will look again. I remember when I was a little boy, the pale messenger entered my father's family and removed the idol of my parents' heart. I remember of hearing the neighbors say that the little one was too good to live. It was hard to part with him; but alas! his life was closed up in the evening of sadness. The morning of joy will bring him forth to die no more. This morning of joy is of the future. There is one which is of the past. Let us look at this a moment.

We left the Leader of the twelve disciples lying in a tomb. Now on the first day of the week there came certain women to the tomb to embalm the body which they expected to find lying there. But to their surprise they found he was gone. And while they stood in wonder an angel appeared unto them and said, "He is not here, for he has risen from the dead." O! what joy must have filled their bosoms; for they loved their Lord. And now they go rejoicingly to tell the disciples he had risen. Greater still was their joy when the Master appeared to them and made himself known to them! But one only doubted. After he had told them to go and preach his gospel, he told them what signs should follow them which believed. He also told them what faith would help them to do; that he was going away, but that he would come again; and that coming will be in the future morning of joy. Would they not rejoice while contemplating that in that morning of joy they were to have immortality and eternal life? And while he arose and mounted the skies on his journey to his Father's side, they must have felt to rejoice, knowing that the coming morning of joy would reveal him again. And when then he shall be revealed, all his elect will arise and shout with a shout which will fill the whole heavens. Then all the sleeping ones of earth will awake. What joy will fill the hearts of those who have had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb! His elect will then be gathered from the four quarters of the earth. Then parents and children will meet to part no more. What rejoicing there will be on that morning when all the dear ones of earth are gathered into one family, where sin and the curse will no more annoy! That morning will soon be upon us. Let us be ready.

"Yes, a light is faintly gleaming
Through the clouds that hover o'er,
Soon the radiance of its beaming,
Full upon our land will pour;
'Tis the light that tells the dawning
Of that bright and glorious day,
Heralding its blessed morning,
With its peace-bestowing ray.
God shall spread abroad his banner,
Sign of universal peace;
And the earth shall shout hosannah!
And the reign of sin shall cease."

B. H. STRAIT.

North Kingston, R. I.

For the Crisis.

Brief Sketch of Labors.

BRO. GRANT:—I have thought that a letter to the Crisis, giving some account of my labors and the attendant fruits in this region during the two months and upwards that I have spent in these parts, might be interesting to some. I have labored every Sunday but one or two, and considerable besides on weekday evenings, averaging four or five discourses a week. I have labored here in East Stoneham; at two places in West Stoneham, three in Lovel, one in Stowe and one in Albany, and have an appointment out for Sweden.

I find in some places a bitter prejudice against the truth, generally from those who see that if these things are so their "craft is in danger to be set at nought" They are generally agreed that I may as well preach Universalism—saying virtually that salvation, as they look at it, is no more inviting to the wicked than destruction. I remind them that they ought to be ashamed of themselves to offer to the world a hope which is no more inviting than destruction, and claim that such is the Christian's hope. They start and affect to shiver, almost, at the thought of unconsciousness in the grave till Jesus comes, exclaiming, "how cold!" "I can't bear the thought!" but will argue the next breath and with an air of triumph and self-complacency that destruction (unconsciousness) is no punishment at all to the wicked though to continue eternally. "It is," say they, "just what they desire."

I find that as it was in Paul's day so it is now; those who would preach the truth are accused of bringing "certain strange things to our ears," and they triumphantly inquire, have any of the Pharisees believed on him? They pride themselves in that they may say as was said to Job—"With us are both the greyheaded and very aged men, much elder than thy father." The preachers admonish their hearers against coming to hear me. In one case they have tried to shut the school-house against me. In another, a member has had to answer to his superiors for harboring me. Many have been called to account for coming to hear, while others, fearing perhaps lest they shall be turned out of the synagogue, do not wait to be told. "Some say that he is a good man; others say nay, but he stirreth up the people."

When I came here I was charged with coming to break up the Methodist church, and they are banded together now, agreed that "it is not safe to go and hear him," fearing, as some have hinted to a friend of mine, they shall become persuaded that these things are so. Some three or four, however, love the truth and do not cleave to them in their fear for the Bible. Their preacher has made one attempt to prove the immortality of the soul, but seems satisfied with one failure.

The Christian preachers feel very much alarmed lest they shall lose their church at West S——, and they arranged to attend one of my appointments, though six miles from their homes, to see, as they avowed, if there was preached any thing that was not in the Bible; but something, probably the weather, prevented, and I escaped the jaws of the lions. But still they insist that their church will be all broken up. One of them having, as he thinks, a special ground of fear, says that he once had under his charge "a flourishing church of sixty members, when there came in one of these 'Millerites' and tore it all to pieces."

The most of the arguments that I hear in defence of the prevailing doctrines, are like those which Paul had to encounter—"Great is Diana of the Ephesians." But the truth triumphs while its enemies everywhere show themselves as those "who will not come to the light lest their deeds (or errors) should be discovered." The interest manifest is encouraging.

I. K. LOMBARD.

E. Stoneham, Me.

☞ The precept, know yourself, was not only intended to obviate the pride of mankind, but likewise that we might understand our own worth.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 14, 1860.

Discussion.

We have arranged to hold a discussion with Adin Ballou, at the City Hall, in Worcester, Mass., Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 27th and 28th. We are to have two sessions a day, of 2 1-2 hours each, commencing at 2 P. M., and 6 1-2 in the evening. SUBJECT, Resolved "That immortality is a gift from God dependent upon the character of the receiver."

Rome and Napoleon; or,
AN EXPOSITION OF THE 17TH CHAP. OF REV.

No. 3.

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—AMOS 3: 7.

In previous articles we have considered the first six verses of the 17th of Rev., and found it very clear that "the woman" represents the church of Rome on "the seven hills," which has reigned "over the kings of the earth." We see no room for controversy on this point. We now pass to consider "the beast that carrieth her." Let us attend to the description given by the angel:—"The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition; and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is. And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth. And there are seven kings; five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space. And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eigthth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition. And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast. These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast. These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings; and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful. And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues. And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and thall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire. For God hath put in their hearts to fulfill his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled." Verses 8-17.

The first question that arises is, what is symbolized by the beast? It is well known that when beast is used mechanically in the Scriptures, it represents a dynasty * or body of civil rulers. As recorded in the seventh of Daniel, the prophet saw "four great beasts . . . diverse one from another." In the explanation, he is told, "These great beasts, which are four, are four kings which shall arise out of the earth. . . . Thus he said, the fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth." Here we learn that a wild beast in symbolical language denotes a king or succession of kings with the kingdom ruled. The beast in Rev. 17th, with its seven heads and ten horns, represents the kings who have sustained the woman, or church of Rome, and aided her in carrying out her purposes. It carries, or protects her. When did the beast begin to carry her? At the time of her first marriage to the kings of earth; i. e., when she first united with the civil power to propagate her faith, and suppress those opposed. It should be remembered, that "the kings of the earth have committed fornication" with this woman, or church on the seven hills; i. e., there has been a union between them, contrary to the principles of the christian religion. Christ is the only true king and Bridegroom of the true church; but the one at Rome became weary of his long absence, and courted earthly monarchs, who united with her in suppressing all that would not embrace her doctrines and sustain her system of worship. She could not put the saints to death openly, till she had a husband; or, in other words, till the civil power would assist her. In order to carry forward her work of persecution successfully, it was necessary that she should be associated with the most powerful kings of Europe; otherwise she would not be able to succeed in her work of slaughtering the saints. As no one dynasty in Europe continued to hold the supremacy more than about three hundred years, it was necessary that she should change her husband several times, as denoted by the "seven heads" of the beast. This woman has had "seven husbands," none of which were lawful; and with all these she is represented as committing "fornication." One of these husbands, or dynasties, was to receive a "deadly wound," be healed, and then cause "all the world" to wonder.

It is clear that only one of these seven heads rules at a time; hence they must follow each other successively; for at the time when John saw the woman "drunken with the blood of the saints," he says, "five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet come."

It may be objected that "the seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth," as expressed in verse 9, and therefore that these heads do not represent the kings or dynasties which have been associated with the woman. It appears that these heads are used to denote both the geographical and political position of this church. This is apparent from verse 10, in the translation by Tyndale, Cranmer, Dr. Clark, Bishop's and Geneva, which reads, "And they are also seven kings." That is, these seven heads denote the seat of the woman geographically and politically.

All these heads are associated with the woman or church on the seven hills; consequently we cannot look for any of them in the government of old Pagan Rome. The first political head associated with the woman evidently does not come into the prophecy till we arrive at the point of her union with her first husband; i. e., when this church, for the first time, became permanently united with political power for the purpose of suppressing heretics and establishing her own faith by law. This took place, according to Catholic and Protestant writers, in the first half of the sixth century. It is not our purpose now to endeavor to fix the point definitely, as it will not affect our present argument. It is well known that in the fourth and fifth centuries, the Goths and Vandals and other savage tribes from the north of Europe, overrun and broke up the great Roman Empire, dividing it into ten fragments, leaving only the eastern portion to the Romans, with Constantinople for its capitol. This is sometimes called the Greek kingdom. The Roman church was driven to this section, and here she found her first husband, or supporting head, in the dynasty ruling this kingdom, commencing with the emperor Justin, and continuing under Justinian and others succeeding till A. D. 754; at which time this kingdom became weakened so as to occupy an inferior position; and was unable to carry out her purposes, consequently, the woman must look for another husband, or head. The historian informs us that it has ever been the policy of the Roman Catholic church to unite with the strongest political power in Europe. We have only to look over her history, to see how admirably she has succeeded. It should be observed that her first husband pulled up three of the kingdoms made by the savage tribes of the north, and established her upon the "seven hills" at Rome, where she has remained to this day.

